On Feb. 3, 1917, in Lenwil, near Monroe, La., there died a good and true man. E. T. BRATCHER was born on Jan. 4, 1875, in Blackrock, Ark. He was reared in Arkansas and Illinois. He was married on August 11, 1902, to Mrs. Mollie E. Moore. Three children blessed this union, Leah, Mark, and Mary. He was converted and joined the Church in the summer of 1904 in Onalaska, Ark. Official association with him one year gave me opportunity to observe him under most trying circumstances. I never found him lacking in loyalty to his Lord and Master. Brother Bratcher was deeply fraternal and loved a true man. He was a good official. He was true to duty in office or out. He organlzed and superintended several Sunday schools, and led many to Jesus. He broke up the dance in Lenwil without incurring the enmity of the young. Looking for a man whose serving was free from evil and who was true to his Lord, no one would pass by Brother Bratcher. He was a mill man. He looked after the religious interests, the moral interests, and the needs of the poor and distressed. Without restraint, I pay this tribute to my friend and brother, who was kind and firm in his home and loved and respected. H. W. LEDBETTER.

Mrs. M. A. KERR, the wife of W. L. Kerr, of Cockrum, Miss., was born on Dec. 1, 1836, and died Jan. 9, 1917. When in her fourteenth year she professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, in wbose membership she remained until the end. She was the mother of six children, five sons and one daughter. Her husband, W. L. Kerr, and three sons, W. A., Lee, and Alva Kerr, survive her to mourn their loss—two sons and a daughter having passed on ahead. She was married to W. L. Kerr on Dec. 8, 1858, they having celebrated their fifty-eighth marriage anniversary last December. In all her troubles—and she was a great sufferer—during her long life, she bore berself with resignation, as a humble follower of Christ should. Amid severe trials she was always loving, patient, and kind. As a wife and mother, she was constant and faithful; as a friend, she was loyal and true. Sister Kerr was a remarkable woman in many respects. Her Christian character was worthy of emulation. She was a great blessing to her husband, children, grandchildren, and friends, of whom there were a host that loved her. As her pastor, I learned to love her, and I was never associated with any one that had a brighter Christian experience and who was more ready to testify of Jesus. Many times have I heard her praise the Lord while reading and praying in her home, for she had been confined to her home as an invalid for several years.

I know thou hast gone to the home of thy rest,
Then why should my soul be so sad?
I know thou has gone where the weary are blest,
And the mourner looks up and is glad;

Where love has put off in the land of its birth
The stains it had gathered in this,
And hope, the sweet singer that gladdened the earth,
Lies asleep on the bosom of bliss.

I know thou hast gone where thy forehead is starr'd
With the beauty that dwelt in thy soul,
Where the light of thy loveliness cannot be marr'd,
Nor the heart flung back from its goal.

I know thou hast drunk of the lethe that flows
Through a land where they do not forget,
That sheds over memory only repose,
And takes from it only regret.

Her pastor, F. H. McGEE.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine. Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

From the Field

Hattiesburg Circuit (Miss. Conf.)

Dear Dr. Meek: Our revival meeting closed here last night, March 11, after a campaign of two weeks. The attendance was good throughout and at the closing service additional chairs had to be provided to accommodate the large congregation. The Spirit-filled messages of Brother Jas. V. Bennett, one of our Conference evangelists, were delivered in his usual pleasing, yet fearless, manner. He does not overlook the claims of the Advocate in appealing to the congregation, but stresses the importance of subscribing to the Church paper. He also made a strong and earnest plea in behalf of Whitworth College, which was appreciated. Brother Bennett left this morning for Broad Street, where he will fill, with Brother Terry, a similar engagement. Brother J. S. Duke, who assisted with the singing, and whose work was much appreciated, left for his home at Mendenhall today. We had 18 accessions by profession of faith and the spiritual life of the church has been quickened to renewed effort, and we are yet expecting great results to come from the united forces of the community, as indications point to this end. To God be given the praise and glory for what has been accomplished!—Chas. E. Downer, Pastor.

Alamogordo, New Mexico.

Dear Doctor: We have just closed a great revival, the best ever held at this place. We had 157 conversions and reclamations, and more than 60 joined the different Churches. My goal for this Conference year was 100 new members and a new church, to cost $3000, and all collections in full. Up to this date, I have received 56 members, and we have, in property and good subscriptions, over $6000 on the new church. I have two good Epworth Leagues, a fine Sunday school, and a membership of over 200. My church will pay the pastor $1200 this year. Alamogordo is one of the prettiest towns in New Mexico, with a population of over 3000. It is located in a beautiful valley at the foot of a large mountain range, with another large mountain range looming up towards the sky on the other side of the valley. This is one of the garden spots of New Mexico with an ideal climate and an altitude of about 5000 feet. A great many people come here for their health—many of them get well, and many others would have done so if they had come in time; but alas! many come too late and lose their fight for life. My health is good and I am doing the best work of my life. The Advocate comes each week to bring us the news from home. May God richly bless you and the great work you are doing with the dear old Advocate!—J. J. Golden.

SUFFERING CATS! GIVE THIS MAN THE GOLD MEDAL

Let folks step on your feet hereafter; wear shoes a size smaller if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this Cincinnati authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freezone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out.

This drug is a sticky ether compound, but dries at once and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue.

It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of freezone obtained at any drug store will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Cut this out, especially if you are a woman reader who wears high heels.

AT WATER VALLEY.

Dear Dr. Meek: Dr. Selby, of the Mississippi Conference, has been to see the people at Water Valley, to represent Emory University, at Atlanta, Ga., and to collect funds for the L. Q. C. Lamar law building, a part of that big institution. What the Doctor did at the First Methodist Church at the morning hour I do not know, but at the 7:30 p. m. Main Street Church services his deliverance was eminently proper, and in reality an exceptionally fine address, and was "no more respectfully heard at any place visited," said the Doctor. The money result, I suspect, was small—much as the shot of a cannon to bag a snowbird or the launching of a war vessel to land a minnow. Important seed were sown, however, and such discourses must do a deal of good—and even the "pin-feathers," as said the colored brother, "possess value to help out the wings of the apocalyptic angel in flying through the earth to publish the everlasting gospel." Pin-feathers grow, and enough of them must make wings for the great Methodist school, though many tens of thousands and even millions already have gone in, and Dr. Selby said, "I am getting money"—and the contemplated $50,000 from Mississippi will no doubt be forthcoming. Moreover, speech-making and collecting is fine, healthy work, and refreshing and benefiting to the many congregations addressed. Only the fewest perhaps will do, as did the man of plain finish and noble purposes who was present at a missionary collection sermon: taking his last dollar, he placed it in the collection and said audibly to himself, "Now, old natur', squirm." Most people have quit squirming at collections, but vast sums are being given to the Church, all the same, for many enterprises of planting the Kingdom yet more strongly and for the dissemination of the Gospel truth in heathen countries; and, as Dr. Selby said, "it continues to be the business of the Church to save the world."

LADY TELLS SECRET.

A well known lady gives the following recipe for gray hair: To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.

Doctor Says Crying Need Of The Woman Of Today Is More Iron In Her Blood

TO PUT STRENGTH IN HER NERVES AND COLOR IN HER CHEEKS.

Any Woman Who Tires Easily, is Nervous or Irritable, or Looks Pale, Haggard And Worn Should Have Her Blood Examined for Iron Deficiency.

Administration of Nuxated Iron in Clinical Tests Gives Most Astonishing Youthful Strength and Makes Women Look Years Younger.

"There can be no he thy, beautiful, rosy cheeked women without iron," says Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York physician and author. "In my recent talks to physicians on the grave and serious consequences of iron deficiency in the blood of American women, I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—nuxated iron—for their nervous, run-down, weak, haggard-looking women patients. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of the anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks.

In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked, are responsible for another grave iron loss.

Dr. Ferdinand King, New York physician and author, tells physicians that they should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their patients—Says anaemia—iron deficiency—is the greatest curse to the health, strength, vitality and beauty of the modern American Woman.—Sounds warning against use of metallic iron which may injure the teeth, corrode the stomach and do far more harm than good; advises use of only nuxated iron.

"Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe old age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt.

"As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away habit-forming drugs and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver, heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their disease was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood.

"On account of the peculiar nature of woman, and the great drain placed upon her system at certain periods, she requires iron much more than man to help make up for the loss.

"Iron is also absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks, then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate, or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

"I have used Nuxated Iron widely in my own practice in most severe, aggravated conditions with unfailing results. I have induced many other physicians to give it a trial, all of whom have given me most surprising reports in regard to its great power as a health and strength builder.

"Many an athlete and prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. Howard James, late of the United States Public Health Service, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But so many American women suffer from iron deficiency with its attendant ills—physical weakness, nervous irritability, melancholy, indigestion, flabby, sagging muscles, etc., etc.—and in consequence of their weakened, run-down condition they are so liable to contract serious and even fatal diseases, that I deem it my duty to advise all such to take Nuxated Iron. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they can not take any man or woman under 50 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

NERVOUS SPELLS

And Combination of Troubles Relieve by a Combination of Medicines.

A quotation from one recent letter: "I have been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills as a course of medicine and find this combination has worked like a charm. They told me I had neuralgia, and certainly I was in a very low and discouraging state of health. I suffered extremely with nervousness and had neuralgia pains so I could not sleep nights.

"Those nervous spells were awful!

"I heard about taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills—one before meals the other after—the suggestion struck me favorably so that I have taken the medicines carefully and faithfully with most pleasing results.

"It is a long time now since I have had one of those severe nervous spells. I can do a good day's housework, can work in my garden and walk a mile." Mrs. Fred J. Weekley, Bagdad, Fla.

Your druggist will be pleased to supply you with these good medicines.

Calomel To-Day, Sick To-Morrow

Dose of nasty calomel makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

EPWORTH LEAGUE MEETING.

The New Orleans Epworth League Conference met at Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church on Tuesday, March 13, with 105 in attendance. The reports from all Leagues represented were very encouraging. New Leagues were reported at Parker Memorial Church, McDonoghville, Bogalusa, and Covington.

Rev. A. J. Gearheard, of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church, gave a very comprehensive talk on the subject of the benefits to be derived and the probable financial outlay necessary to put on the Pageant of Methodism, which the Leaguers, with the assistance of all the Methodists in New Orleans, are contemplating.

It was voted to extend our services collectively and individually to the newly appointed District Board of Church Extension in helping open up new missions in the city. Also a resolution was passed that all Leagues be requested to give their best efforts to the "One-to-Win-One" Campaign which will culminate in a union revival in this city.

Mr. Van Carter, General Secretary of the Louisiana Sunday School Association, gave a very interesting and helpful talk on "Inspiration in Doing Things," the keynote of his talk being that nothing was impossible when we had Christ with us.

The home chapter delightfully entertained with games and refreshments after the business meeting. The banner was awarded Louisiana Avenue League.

Cleanliness.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness." We are too prone to think that "cleanliness" refers only to the exterior of our bodies. Bnt unless your bowels are kept open and your liver active, you cannot expect to keep your body clean. The perspiration through skin pores is forced to carry off more than its share of the body's impurities. Do not allow constipation to poison you. Cleanse your entire system with Van Lax, which contains no calomel and no habit-forming drugs. It is pleasant to the taste and produces pleasant results. For sale by the best dealers everywhere. Pain keeps the thoughts of the sufferer continuously on the ailment that is that causing the pain, and in this way it acts to retard recovery.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are their own best advertisers. The wonderful degree of success that they have met with for more than 25 years has been entirely due to their efficiency.

Users are willing to concede that these pills do all that is claimed for them. That is, they promptly relieve headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatic pains, monthly pains, and almost every other kind of ache or pain and do this without any bad aftereffects.

And if the sufferer finds rest from the pain that weakens the mind and harrasses the nerves pending treatment for the cause of the pain he certainly should be satisfied.

Furthermore, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills do not constipate, do not derange the stomach or leave any disagreeable after-effects when taken as directed.

If you suffer from any ache or pain you will not be out any money to try these pills. Go to your druggist and purchase one box of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Use them as directed and if the results are not satisfactory return the empty package to the druggist and he will immediately return you your money. No questions will be asked. You are the judge of the merits of these pills. Could anything be fairer than this?

"He who is ashamed of asking is ashamed of learning."

Strength comes from well digested and thoroughly assimilated food. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the digestive organs, and thus builds up the strength. If you are getting "run down," begin taking Hood's at once. It gives nerve, mental and digestive strength.

The simplest and best way to stop coughs, is to take

Foley's Honey and Tar

You get the curative influence of the pine balsam together with the mollifying effect of the honey, and other healing ingredients. It leaves a soothing coating on the inflamed tickling throat, raises phlegm easily and puts a quick end to hard wearing coughs.

R. F. Hall, Mabe, Va., writes: "One bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar stopped a troublesome bronchial cough and irritation that had bothered me for fifteen years." Your dealer sells it. Try it.

Renwar Relieves Rheumatism.

It is not necessary any longer for you to suffer those intense pains and aches of rheumatism. Renwar is a salts combination scientifically prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood, and thereby cure rheumatism. Don't wait until those rheumatic pains return. Buy a box of Renwar, and forget about that rheumatism. Renwar is an old, well-established remedy. It is prescribed by the best of physicians, and has thousands of friends. President L. A. Bauman, of Varley & Bauman Company, Nashville, says: "Renwar entirely relieved me of my rheumatism." For sale by druggists. Price 50 cents. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. If your druggist doesn't carry Renwar in stock tell him to order it for you from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

SIGN YOUR NAME HERE.

If you suffer with any curable disease that does not seem to be benefited by drugs; such as dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, liver or kidney diseases, or any ailment involving impure blood, you are cordially invited to accept the liberal offer made below. It is a mistake to assume that your case is incurable simply because remedies prepared by human skill have not seemed to benefit you. Put your faith in Nature, accept this offer and you will never have cause to regret it.

I believe this is the most wonderful Mineral Spring that has ever been discovered, for its waters have either restored or benefited tens of thousands who have accepted my offer. Match your faith in this Spring against my pocketbook, and if the water does not relieve your case I will make no charge for it. Clip this notice, sign your name, enclose the amount and let this wonderful water begin its restorative work in you as it has in thousands of others.

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-A, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

PROVISION FOR AGED MINISTERS.

Not only Methodism, but all the great denominations are facing the problem of caring for the aged minister. Endowment funds are being raised in most of the Conferences. These should be regarded as only supplementary. The only reliable plan devised is a legal reserve insurance contract providing for an endowment to mature at 65 or an old age pension to begin at age 65. Such contracts are written on the most favorable terms by the Methodist Ministers Relief Insurance and Trust Association of Boston, Mass. This Association is run solely in the interest of Methodist ministers. —Adv.

Watch the Baby!

If he is fretful, restless and out of sorts, you can trace the cause to his stomach and liver. If the bowels do not act regularly there is a possible danger of serious illness. Constipation, if allowed to continue, may produce self-poisoning or auto-intoxication, and this condition should be promptly rectified. The best general tonic for the baby or for the older folks is Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator, a purely vegetable compound. It contains no Calomel or other injurious drugs. Highly recommended for babies and growing children. It excites and invigorates sluggish livers and puts you on your feet again. Buy a bottle and keep it handy. Price 50c. For sale by the best druggists. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Company, Memphis, Tenn.

To believe that God is loving us tenderly and wisely, and to put ourselves unreservedly in His hands, is eternal life begun in the soul.—Marcus Dods.

TOBACCO HABIT BANISHED

In 48 to 72 hours. No craving for tobacco in any form after completing treatment. Contains no habit-forming drugs. Satisfactory results guaranteed in every case. Write Newell Pharmacal Co., Dept. 90, St. Louis, Mo., for FREE Booklet, "TOBACCO REDEEMER" and positive proof.

He is safe from danger who is on his guard even when safe.—Syrus.

ECZEMA Ringworm, Tetter, and other skin diseases promptly and permanently disappear when Tetterine is used. Tetterine is a fragrant salve; perfectly harmless. It is the best remedy known for cutaneous diseases and itching piles, and is used extensively by the best physicians. 50c a box. Sold by druggists or by mail from

SHUPTRINE COMPANY, SAVANNAH, GA.

"Some men are self-starters; some have to be cranked."

Whenever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's

The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the well known tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver, Drives out Malaria, Enriches the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 50 cents.

To face every opportunity of a lifetime thoughtfully, and ask its meaning bravely and earnestly, is the only way to meet the supreme opportunities when they come, whether open-faced or disguised.—M. D. Babcock.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

GIVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" TO CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little Stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

RHEUMATISM PAIN

The exact cause of rheumatism is unknown, though it is generally believed to be due to an excess of uric acid in the blood. It may be also said with equal truth that no remedy has been found which is a specific in all cases. In fact the literature of rheumatism shows that there are but few drugs which have not been given a trial. In the hands of one observer we find that a certain drug has been used with the utmost satisfaction; others have found the same remedy to be a great disappointment. All physicians however agree that every method of treatment is aided by the administration of some remedy to relieve the pain and quiet the nervous system and Dr. W. S. Schultze expresses the opinion of thousands of practitioners when he says that anti-kamnia tablets should be given preference over all other remedies for the relief of the pain in all forms of rheumatism. These tablets can be purchased in any quantity. They are also unsurpassed for headaches, neuralgias and all pain. Ask for A-K Tablets.

Freckles

To remove freckles the best thing to do is to remove the outer cuticle of the skin, which carries the freckles. This is easily done with Kintho Cream. The Kintho should peel off the old, freckled skin, a little at a time, gradually bringing the under layer of skin to view. The new skin is beautiful, soft, clear, white and youthful looking and, of course, should have no freckles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed. Read carefully special instructions inside of box.

NOTICE.

The sixth annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference will convene at Gulfport, Friday, April 6, 1917.

Names of delegates, and all communications, should be sent to Mrs. Eugene Kelly, Gulfport, Miss.

Mrs. R. E. JOHNSON,
President.
Mrs. H. L. McCLESKEY,
Rec. Secretary.

COUNCIL DAILY.

Subscriptions to the Council Daily should be sent at once to Mrs. S. A. Montgomery, 7926 Elm Street, New Orleans. Price 25 cents. Mrs. E. B. Chappell and Miss Estelle Haskin are to be the editors, and with these two women at the head a fine paper is assured.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The Woman's Missionary Council convenes at First Church, New Orleans, April 12-20. Great preparations are being made for the success of this meeting. Mrs. J. B. Parker, 1520 Audubon Street, is chairman of the Committee on Hotels.

Among the noted speakers will be our own Bishop Lambuth, Misses Bennett and Head, Dr. Harry F. Ward, and Miss Julia Lathrop, Secretary of the Children's Bureau, Washington.

DAYS OF SPECIAL PRAYER.

Friday, April 6, is to be observed as a day of special prayer for the Council meeting. Let all of our women remember this date and may earnest prayer ascend to the throne of grace for a gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

A MESSAGE FOR THE YOUNG PEOPLE AND FIRST VICE PRESIDENTS OF MISSISSIPPI CONF.

On April 6, 1917, our annual conference will convene in Gulfport. Realizing the importance of attendance upon these meetings, we have striven all through the year to keep the subject ever before you. As the Council will meet a few days later in New Orleans, several of our best Council workers and most inspirational speakers are expected to stop over and be with us in Gulfport. What a rare opportunity for us!

We want to meet there every first vice president in our Conference, together with one or more delegates from among the young people of her church, even though they are not yet organized. Of course, we are expecting delegates from every Y. P. M. S.

Not only will we have this chance of a lifetime of hearing these Council officers, but there are many other good things in store for you, among them a pageant Saturday night by the Y. P. M. S. of Gulfport, a trip to our Wesley House, and the meeting with returned missionaries. We feel sure you will never regret making the sacrifice to go; so, if you have not elected your delegates, do so at once and send names to the adult chairman, or to our young people's hostess, Miss Carley Blakeslee, Gulfport, Miss.

Yours in our great work,
Mrs. H. O. MIDDLETON.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The fifth annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference convened Feb. 27 to March 2 in West Point's historic First Methodist Church. The word hospitable doesn't seem sufficiently ample to express the cordiality of the welcome extended the delegates and visitors by the West Point people. Too much praise cannot be spoken of Rev. W. W. Woollard, presiding elder of the hostess district; Rev. L. P. Wasson, pastor of the hostess church; Mrs. Ralph Bryant, president of the local auxiliary, and Mrs. Moses Williams, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, for their untiring efforts to make pleasant our stay in their midst. The dainty, sumptuous lunches served each day, the beautiful cut flowers, the splendid musical numbers, were all evidence of West Point's happy welcome. We knew not only their homes but their hearts were open to us, and we felt it was a joy to be there.

The conference was opened by the administration of the Lord's Supper, presided over by Rev. W. W. Woollard. The President's message followed, in which she gave a masterful review of the year's work, pointing out in a forceful manner our weak and strong points as evidenced by results, and closing with an earnest appeal for the preservation and growth of this, our missionary tree.

To Bishop McCoy we are indebted for a stirring sermon on the opening evening. Mrs. H. R. Steele, Educational Secretary of the Council, was with us and proved a continuous source of help and inspiration. We were so glad to have Miss Estelle Haskin, editor of the Young Christian Worker; Miss Adeline Peoples, deaconess of the Corinth Co-operative Home; Miss Ella Leverett, of Chang Chow, China, and our own Miss Falla Richardson, a native of Corinth, Miss., but now connected with the Houston (Texas) Co-operative Home. Each of these faithful servants brought to us an informing and appropriate message concerning her work.

In every point—attendance, enthusiasm, and spiritual uplift, this conference may be summarized as the best in our history. The keynote of the entire session was sounded in the President's address, "Rejoice," and from beginning to end the meeting was a series of good things that found its climax in the closing consecration service, one of those rare mountain-top experiences to the Christian worker, where the soul seemed lifted above all petty trivialities and we could sing in truth on bended knees, "I can hear my Savior calling; I'll go with him, with him all the way."

The first cause for our rejoicing was found in the matter of our new auxiliaries. 101 having been added during the year, with the Sardis District far in the lead. A second point of rejoicing was found in our finances. Mrs. Wilburn reported for this year a grand total of $27,924.33, with an increase above last year of $5,756.36.

A great well of gratitude surged up in our hearts when we heard that our conference pledge of $4500 had been met and overpaid for the first time in its history, and when, by unanimous vote, the pledge was increased for 1917 to $5000. we felt we could "praise God from whom all blessings flow."

A third point of joy was occasioned by the report of our conference officers, each department having shown a steady advance. The reports from our first and second vice presidents demonstrated that our work along this line is going forward, although the general cry in these departments remains the same—a lack of leaders. The discussion given to the question of Social Service demonstrated that the outlook of our women is rapidly broadening. Mrs. Steele led the round-table, speaking of the great blanket of ignorance which lies like a pall over our United States. Miss Corinne Rogers spoke on the subject of "Community Clubs," followed by Mrs. E. T. Clark, with a splendid paper on "Community Betterment." Next came Mrs. Geo. Bryan in a discussion of "Conditions of Health and Sanitation," while Miss Haskin closed with a stirring appeal for better legislation.

The Superintendent of Supplies reported by far the best year's work of her regime of long-standing, and the report of our Conference deaconess showed our Co-operative Home to be on a firmer foundation than ever since its establishment. The report from the department of Study and Publicity showed that, while the work of this branch had not gone forward in leaps and bounds, still there had been a steady, true growth, which reveals that our women are awakening to the possibilities contained in this most important office.

Last, but by no means least, our hearts were gladdened by the great spirit of interest displayed by our visiting ministers, quite a number—about 30 in all—being present.

Our hearts were saddened when, amid the rush of business, we were called to stop and pay tribute to those of our number who, during the year, had been called to their higher reward. This memorial service was presided over by Mrs. T. W. Woodward, and in her own inimitable way she found, it seemed, just the choice expressions which seemed to characterize each of the eighteen to whom "it was granted that they should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white; for the fine linen is the righteousness of the saints." Again, our hearts were made sad when it came to the election of officers and we received the resignations of several of our most faithful and efficient officers, who, on account of ill health and home duties, were retiring from the work. The following officers make up the roster for 1917:

President, Mrs. J. W. Conger, Vaiden; 1st Vice President, Mrs. T. W. Baker, Aberdeen; 2d Vice President, Mrs. J. M. Bradley, Aberdeen; Cor. Secretary, Miss Louise Dunstan, Winona; Rec. Secretary, Mrs. G. C. Jones, Belen; Treasurer, Mrs. W. W. Wilburn, Lexington; Auditor, Mrs. Larramare, Lexington; Supt. of Study, Mrs. S. F. Riley, Corinth; Supt. of Social Service, Miss Etta Murry, Ripley; Supt. of Supplies, Mrs. Susie Thomas, Starkville; Rep. of Hospital Board, Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, Booneville; Rep. Orphans' Home Board, Mrs. W. W. Scales, Jr., Starkville. District Secretaries: Aberdeen Dist., Mrs. J. H. Haughton, Aberdeen; Columbus Dist., Mrs. Kemp Williams, West Point; Corinth Dist., Miss Corinne Rogers, New Albany; Durant Dist., Mrs. Elma King, Durant; Greenville Dist., Mrs. E. T. Clark, Cleveland; Holly Springs Dist., Mrs. F. B. Patton, Oxford; Sardis Dist., Mrs. R. M. Short, Como; Winona Dist., Mrs. C. A. Neal, Carrollton.

Mrs. S. F. RILEY.

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which, if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter-pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drugstore but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Salts Fine For Aching Kidneys

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

MANALIN Steadies Your Nerves

Most of the nervousness that makes people "high strung" and sleepless comes from a digestive disturbance. Food fails to digest and cumbers the system with a fermenting load. Gases are generated and fluids thrown off. These disturb the delicate balance of the body, and as they are absorbed into the blood irritate the nerve centers, which manifest this irritation, and you are "nervous."

The remedy for this condition is to arouse the liver and bowel action gently, empty the fermenting food out, and start the digestive process into right action. Violent cathartics will do this by further irritating the bowels, to be followed by a worse reaction.

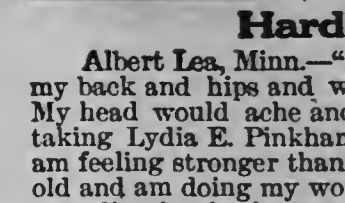
will do it better, because it is a laxative, not a purge. Its action is mild, but effective. It gives a gentle stimulation to the liver, and it does not form a habit.



A package of candy Manalin Tablets will cost you but ten cents, and it may give you more comfort than you anticipate. Next time you are nervous, try a Manalin tablet. 10 and 25 cents at druggists, or from the manufacturer.

Women Once Invalids

Now in Good Health Through Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Say it is Household Necessity. Doctor Called it a Miracle.

All women ought to know the wonderful effects of taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound even on those who seem hopelessly ill. Here are three actual cases:

Harrisburg, Penn.—"When I was single I suffered a great deal from female weakness because my work compelled me to stand all day. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for that and was made stronger by its use. After I was married I took the Compound again for a female trouble and after three months I passed what the doctor called a growth. He said it was a miracle that it came away as one generally goes under the knife to have them removed. I never want to be without your Compound in the house."—Mrs. FRANK KNOBL, 1642 Fulton St., Harrisburg, Penn.

Hardly Able to Move.

Albert Lea, Minn.—"For about a year I had sharp pains across my back and hips and was hardly able to move around the house. My head would ache and I was dizzy and had no appetite. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, I am feeling stronger than for years. I have a little boy eight months old and am doing my work all alone. I would not be without your remedies in the house as there are none like them."—Mrs. F. E. YOST, 611 Water St., Albert Lea, Minn.

Three Doctors Gave Her Up.

Pittsburg, Penn.—"Your medicine has helped me wonderfully. When I was a girl 18 years old I was always sickly and delicate and suffered from irregularities. Three doctors gave me up and said I would go into consumption. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and with the third bottle began to feel better. I soon became regular and I got strong and shortly after I was married. Now I have two nice stout healthy children and am able to work hard every day."—Mrs. CLEMENTINA DUERRING, 34 Gardner St., Troy Hill, Pittsburg, Penn.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential

"Inside" Information About Eczema

Washing the skin, rubbing salves and lotions on it, will not cure your Eczema. You may temporarily relieve the constant itching, but if you want to get at the seat of the trouble, you must purify your blood.

Infected blood is dangerous, and when the watery sores and pimples appear, you should lose no time in procuring a bottle of S. S. S.

This great remedy, which was discovered over fifty years ago, will wash out and strengthen your blood, and the annoying and disfiguring eruptions of the skin will disappear, and you will soon feel healthy and vigorous again.

S. S. S. being purely vegetable, is entirely free from all "dope" and drugs; get it at your druggist's and insist upon the genuine. For free, expert advice, write to our Medical Department, Swift Specific Co., 807 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga.

Sudden Death

Before an insurance company will take a risk on your life the examining physician will test your water and report whether you are a good risk. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you suffer from backache, sick-headache, dizzy spells, or twinges and pains of lumbago, rheumatism and gout, or sleep is disturbed two or three times a night—take heed, before too late!

You can readily overcome such conditions and prolong life by taking the advice of a famous physician, which is: "Keep the kidneys in good order, avoid too much meat, salt, alcohol or tea. Drink plenty of pure water and drive the uric acid out of the system by taking Anuric, in tablet form." You can obtain Anuric at drug stores, the discovery of Dr. Pierce of Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo.

THE VERY BEST TIME to take Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is now, if you feel that your blood is out of order. Don't wait until you have to cure disease; it's easier and better to prevent it.

With the first blotches or eruption, or the dullness, weariness, and depression that are some of the symptoms, you need this medicine. It will rouse every organ into healthy action, thoroughly cleanse and repair your system, and build up needed flesh, health, and strength. It's the only reliable blood remedy. In the most stubborn Skin or Scalp affections; in the worst forms of Scrofula; in every disease caused by a torpid liver or impure blood—it never fails to benefit or cure.

The machinery of the body needs to be well oiled, kept in good condition just as the automobile, steam engine or bicycle. Most people neglect themselves. To clean the system take a pleasant laxative, such as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. For sale by druggists—25 cents a vial.

NEW ORLEANS
CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 64—No. 13. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3188.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, MARCH 29, 1917. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

TWO NOTABLE UTTERANCES.

A VOICE FROM THE SOUTH.

[In the Nashville Christian Advocate of March 9, under the caption, "Unity and Unification," Rev. B. W. Bond, D.D., of Alexandria, Va., who is a distinguish Southern Methodist minister and a well known author, had published the following article, which, it should be noted, comes from the border, the writer being a member of the Baltimore Conference.]

The meeting of the Joint Commission in Baltimore in December inevitably prompts the inquiry: What prospects for the unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, did that meeting present? It is not to be considered to be in disparagement of the Commission that after two days of debate and earnest prayer, with months of discussion preceding it, the Commission was able only to appoint committees on the most essential matters. They set forth in a message to the Churches the following: "It was agreed that the fundamental and vital issues between us were as follows: First, the General Conference and its powers. Second, the Jurisdictional Conferences, their number, and their powers. Third, the status of the colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the reorganized Church."

The first of these issues is the same that arose in the controversy of 1844, and was then a main cause of the separation. The second arises out of the first in the consideration of unification. The third is the Negro question that is with us still. So, the issues that now tend to prevent reunion are substantially the same that divided us before. The Southern Church has always stood for a General Conference of limited power; the Northern for one of well-nigh supreme power. The South has maintained also that for the best interests of both races the whites and the negroes should be in separate Church organizations; while the North has incorporated the negroes into her system on an entire equality with the whites, having representation in their General Conference equally with the whites and participating in all legislation for the whole Church. These radically opposed views on such "fundamental and vital issues," so fixed and enduring as they are, seem to have their roots in the permanent different conditions of each section—in their views, thoughts, associations, history, etc.—so as not to be changed easily by any mere legal ecclesiastical enactment.

Obviously the first essential is to secure the unity of the Churches, not their unification. These two are not by any means the same, nor does one necessarily imply the other. Unification is a thing of outward organic union; unity is an inward harmony of thought and feeling. Unification can be effected by legislation; unity never can be brought about hy the enactment of a law. Nor does the attainment of the one imperatively require the possession of the other. Unity may exist between Christians whether separated by seas and continents, or hy creeds and ecclesiastical organizations. It is such a unity that Christ prayed for. Unification indeed can and often does coexist with inward strife and discord. Unity of spirit between Christians without any outward ecclesiastical union can accomplish great things for God and has often done it. Outward union without inward unity, as with the Corinthians in the apostles' time, produces the more "envyings, strife, and division." (1 Cor. iii. 3.) Two families that differ greatly on fundamental issues pertaining to their mutual housekeeping had better not live together in the same house. A man and woman having conflicting views, habits, and temperament in vital matters, and each very much set in his and her ways, had better not marry each other. The famous story of the Kilkenny cats that were tied together and thrown over a clothesline, where they fought till there was nothing left of each other but their tails, is a standing illustration of the dangers of an outward union without an inward harmony of soul.

Take the fundamental and vital issue of the relation of the three hundred and fifty thousand Negroes now members of the Methodist Episcopal Church to the Unified Church. On this point the two Churches seem radically opposed. The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, adopted a plan for unification which provided, among other things, that the Negroes should be organized into a separate Church, having fraternal relations and cared for by the Unified Church, but having no representation in the Unified General Conference. The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1912 utterly ignored this plan presented to them, but in 1916 approved a plan providing that the Negroes be formed into a Jurisdictional Conference equal in every way to the proposed white Jurisdictional Conferences, and having representation equally with them in a supreme General Conference. At the meeting of the Commission these two proposals were considered, but no agreement could be reached. It is safe to say that no compromise on this point will ever be acceptable to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It is well known that the incorporation of their Negro members into the Methodist Episcopal Church has brought them great embarrassment and perplexing difficulties, and that most thoughtful white members of that Church believe that a mistake was made when they adopted the policy of bringing both Negroes and whites together in the same General Conference. If this is true in the North, how much more will it be in the South. We sympathize with the Methodist Episcopal Church in their difficulty, but we cannot afford to be united with them in an organization comprising the Negroes, entailing upon ourselves all the contentions in a tenfold degree in the South that have perplexed them. We are free from these contentions now and cannot abandon our policy in this matter which has proved so satisfactory to both the whites and the Negroes. Practically all of our Annual Conferences that have passed resolutions of approval of the movement for unification have taken care to specify that form of unification that provides for the segregation of the Negroes into a separate Church. On the other hand, if the Methodist Episcopal Church should now endeavor to set off their Negro members in a separate Church, she would probably cause great dissension, and rightly so, among her white members in the North, as well as among the Negroes in the South; and only in a less degree, if any, should she attempt to assign to the Negroes an inferior place in the Unified Church. But even should this be done, what sort of unification would that bring about?

Further, from their past persistent attitude can we expect that any compromise that prevents their full equality with the whites will be acceptable to the Negroes? Again, the Methodist Episcopal Church has no legal power to segregate the Negroes into another Church, if even they had a mind to do it, and no moral right, if they had the power. The Negroes have been invited into their Church, and they have come. What can the Methodist Episcopal Church do but keep them? A writer in Zion's Herald, one of the chief papers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, recognizing the difficulty amounting to almost an impossibility in the way of a unification that includes Negroes on a parity with the whites, modestly suggests that the colored members be given only a limited representation in the General Conference, similar to that which their missions enjoy; but suggests that, better still, the Negroes themselves ask to be organized so as to have representation upon the Connectional Boards and Societies, thus remaining a part of the Unified Church, but without any represetation in the General Conference. He opposes the organization of an independent Colored Church, first, "because our membership is as much a part of the Methodist Episcopal Church as any group of our membership, and possesses the same rights and privileges;" secondly, "because under such an arrangement they would be entitled to their full share of all our connectional funds, amounting to $600,000, as their share in the Book Concern alone, saying nothing of other large sums." Who that knows the Negro or remembers for a moment their persistent efforts to have equal representation with the whites in the Methodist Episcopal Church, can imagine for a moment that they would surrender these rights and other rights flowing therefrom, which they already possess in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and still remain members of that Church.

There are other difficulties in the way that might be mentioned, but this will suffice. If these differences cannot be overcome without risk to the continued prosperity of either or both Churches, as is apparent now, why not "let well enough alone?" Both Churches have done and are doing well, separately. God has greatly blessed both of them as they are. The history of Methodism is a history of growth leading to division, as is the rule in the processes of nature. Separation after separation has occurred in Methodism and to her advantage, in meeting local conditions, for purposes of better administration, etc. The Wesleyan Church would never have existed except by separation from the Established Church. American Methodism was organized by Mr. Wesley into a separate Church from that of England. The Church in the United States separated from that of Canada; and so of North from South. Only a few years ago Japan was separated from the Methodisms of Europe and America, and a separate Church established there. Why should not our separation of North and South be continued so long as it continues to work so well. Great numbers in one organization has its own dangers, as witness the one Church of the Middle Ages. Denominationalism has not been ruinous to Christianity, but the contrary, and has evidently been blessed of God. The spirit of Protestantism is a liberty to differ, and it is very probable that different organizations holding different views appeal to a greater number of men upon the whole and more strongly than only one organization. So it is probable that our two Churches separately will reach more men and more effectually than one great Unified Methodist Church.

So far as "friction" between the two Churches is concerned, we have already entered into solemn agreements with each other, which in the main are working very well and will work better, if not violated. If they are liable to be violated, then how can we feel safe from violations of agreements made in unification? And as to "waste," what saving would there be under unification if many members, if not whole Churches, should refuse to be transferred to the Unified Church? We may legislate members out of a Church, but we cannot therefore legislate them into another. It is plain that there will inevitably he much debate and possibly alienation from continued agitation of this subject. It is easily possible to "dig up more snakes than we can kill." At the best, there will be years before any unification can be reached. If even the Commission should arrive at an agreement, it must then he referred for approval to each General Conference and there receive at least a two-thirds vote, and then go to the Annual Conferences and receive a three-fourths vote before it can go into operation. Probably a vote of the whole membership must then be taken. All this will occasion a long and possibly acrimonions discussion throughout the whole extent of both Churches. Even then the vote should be practically unanimous; otherwise, instead of unification, there will probably be division. No one will want that. It seems prohably best to abandon the whole attempt, "to innocuous desuetude," at least for the present, and content ourselves rather with the development of genuine unity first, not seeking a forced unification of outward organic union without the inward spirit and harmony. It is very plain that general unity does not now exist in some fundamental and vital matters, and it is not probable that it can be induced by agitating a unification bringing to light, as it inevitably must, our vital differences. It is sure that at the hest unification will not hring in the millennium, nor will continued separation land us in moral or spiritual perdition. The one all-important means to hasten the one and to avoid the other is not to relax our work in our own field of labor. Whether we have unification or continued separation, there will he none the less demand from all of our utmost exertion in our Lord's vineyard.

A VOICE FROM THE CHURCH, NORTH.

[Under the heading, "The Unification of Methodism," Rev. Charles S. Buchanan, a delegate, from Maylasia, to the 1916 General Conference of the Northern Methodist Church, spoke as follows in the Western Christian Advocate of March 7, a paper issued in Cincinnati.]

I have read, not only with interest but also with astonishment, the report of Dr. Blake's Boston speech on Methodist Unification, and note the apparent agreement of the editorial in the "Western," page 170, of February 21. I have high regard for Dr. Blake and agree that, as was often shown in the last General Conference, he has "a genius for speaking out at the psychological moment" with the solution of the difficulty.

All the more do I deplore his mistake at this time. If the proposition, "and we will not ask to sit in your General Conference to legislate for you" (the italics are mine, because the phrase is so unnecessary; for how could they legislate for Methodism, seeing that they are comparatively few?) must be made by the Negro that unification may be effected, then the time has not come for unification.

Let us not run faster than the Holy Spirit has been able to prepare the way. If such a move be necessary for the Negro now, how soon will the the Chinese, the Indians, and others he expected to withdraw because their presence is an embarrassment to some delegates in the General Conference? The Chinese are not acceptable socially any more than are the Negroes. Similar conditions will breed similar feelings. But some day many, many more Chinese will need to sit as delegates in the General Conference of this "World-wide Methodism." And what becomes of our boasted world-wide Methodism?

This time Dr. Blake is in error; he has spoken for division and not for unity, of which evidently there must be more, before we are ready for unification. This, too, is a matter of sorrow to me, for I had hoped that this quadrennium would see the much desired unification.

Were Dr. Blake speaking for the majority of the leaders of our beloved Methodist Episcopal Church, and were I a self-respecting Negro, I would at once begin agitation for withdrawal and setting up a United Negro Methodist Church. I hope that the Commissioners for the Methodist Episcopal Church will look before they leap.

The Regional Conference idea is all right, hut in the General Conference of a "World-wide Methodism" should sit alike representatives of all races—Caucasian, Mongolian, Malay, and Negro—to legislate with us for a commou Methodism. Yes, Mr. Editor, the "movement" should fail, if it cannot move along the highway of genuine Christian fellowship and true solidarity.

Now for some reflections on that speech as reported on page 184 of the same "Western." I agree with the "three serious objections" to settling "the colored membership apart into an independent church."

"First, they are a part of the Methodist Episcopal Church and have the same rights and privileges as we." If no wedding is to take place because of the strain of colored blood in the veins of our beloved church, then let us continue in single blessedness. Some may object that the two Methodisms are not living as brotherly as they should—there is much friction. I reply that that is hecause we have fallen from grace; we need "to get religion" agaln. It is apparently unity that we must work for and leave union until we are ready for it.

The Doctor says, "The color line is more closely drawn in churches of our own denomination in the South than in the churches of our sister denomination." (1) The shame of it! But it does not surprise me. (2) If this is so, how can this other be true: "With such a declaration the greatest ohstacle to union would vanish at once!"

That "the largest dry goods store in Chicago" will not sell to a Negro is a matter of pure business only. There are so many American non-Christians still who will not trade where Negroes go, that, as a matter of self-protection, they must refuse the Negro's money. Such is the condition in at least one restaurant in Columbus, Ohio. There are people who will not eat at the same table with a Negro. But what has all this to do with the question? It simply beclouds the issue.

What the Doctor says of "racial maturity" is true. This is not the first time that point has been made. I had to make it with an ambitious native brother in Java to show him that his people were not ready for the recognition that he coveted for himself at least. But what has this matter to do with the question of unification? The Negro has the recognition. It may have been a mistake to give him this recognition, hut we gave it to him, and most of us are not mean enough to take it away from him, and I hope that no one else will ask him to renounce it.

In the Doctor's proposition, is their Regional Conference to have the sole right to legislate for the Negro, or does Dr. Blake suppose that their legislation be reviewed for approval or veto by the Caucasian General Conference? If the difficulty rests in any sense on "racial maturity" or immaturity, that they should not sit in the General Conference, are they sufficiently mature to legislate for themselves? With them at our side it will he much easier for "us" to legislate for them. Let us leave "well enough" alone, for two wrongs never make a right. Our plain duty is to stand hy the Negro in the Church, and prepare him for the position and the leadership in Christian propaganda that he ought to take, whether unification is effected at this time or not—indeed, whether affected one way or the otber. They are with us, drive them not out.

Second—I agree with the proposition, "if the colored membership could be set apart into an independent church, it is very douhtful if it would be expedient to do so." But were that to be done, they should have every cent that would belong to them as their share "in connectional interests."

Third—"The Church needs a nexus between it and the colored people." But that nexus would not be any stronger under the relation proposed by Dr. Blake than by the present, except that now prejudice has heen stirred hy this unwarranted utterance. Now there will he those who will say, "I am done with the Freedmen's Aid Society, why didn't the Negro accept the proposal to withdraw from the General Conference? He wants everything; he will get nothing from me any longer." A most mischievous pronouncement was that speech! Now, if unification is not attained, the Negro will be the scapegoat. I. Garland Penn is correct in his reply when he writes: "Every one must regret that the possible failure of unification has been suggested at this juncture in the attempt to fix responsibility upon the Negro for such anticipated failure;" for that is just what it amounts to, whether the good Doctor had such in mind or not.

The Doctor says, "Eventually all Methodism must be one." Let us hope and pray that some time all Methodism will he one, hut there is no necessity that they so be.

What does Dr. Blake mean by "If, therefore, we give our colored membership the same representation in the General Conference that we give to our missionary jurisdictions, it would seem," etc., and by "a limited representation?" I confess that I do not understand the reference. I have yet to learn that the delegates from Annual Conferences of foreign countries do not have every right, privilege, and prerogative that have the delegates from Annual Conferences of the United States. If so, why give them what they have? Or, is this a movement on the part of our commissioners to disfranchise, for the sake of unification, the foreign Conferences—another compromise?

Finally. What does it matter whether my brother will not sell to a Negro, or sit in the same restaurant with him, or, as has been suggested, in the General Conference? We have sat with him (I should say "you have sat with him") in the General Conference, and have not been hurt, but the Negro has been helped. Let us maintain our old sentiment for the Negro, and not go chasing a new one, howsoever good and desirable it may he, if we must prove disloyal to our first. Unification will come; don't let us try to hurry it, and by all means "do not rock the boat."

I agree with Bishop Anderson. "It would be a strange sort of courtesy, as well as a blundering type of Christian statesmanship, that would consider the suggestion that our colored membership be asked to step aside. It would he monstrous for any man to assume to speak thus for the Church. 'The Negro belongs to the play.'" It is to be deplored that so soon one has been found with the temerity to ask the Negro to do such a thing.

WHAT THESE UTTERANCES SUGGEST.

[By the Editor]

These two articles—one by a distinguished Southern Methodist minister, and the other by a Northern Methodist preacher of wide observation and experience—are quite suggestive. To the thoughtful reader of these utterances several things are clearly indicated:

1. It is apparent from their statements that there are obstacles in the way of the unification movement which, in view of the existing conditions in the two Churches, are practically insuperable. For instance, Dr. Buchanan insists that the rights of the Negro in the suggested new Church cannot be taken from him without his consent, and that, heing in a sense the representative of all the non-white peoples of the world, he cannot afford to step aside. All who are informed as to the existing sentiment in the Church, North, and among the Negroes know that Dr. Buchanan has not misrepresented the situation as it relates to his denomination.....Over against this stands the statement of Dr. Bond that the Church, South, will not, for various reasons, go into an organization which accords equal rights to the colored contingent of the Northern Church. Did he rightly represent the Southern Methodists in this affirmation? Of this there can he no questiou, for on this point our General Conference itself has spoken, and there is not the least doubt as to what the attiude of the great body of our people is concerning it.....But cannot some compromise be effected concerning this great issue? This has already been attempted, hut the efforts made could scarcely have fallen any flatter. We have felt really sorry for those making them. True, there are yet some who continue to affirm that a satisfactory plan can be found, but, if so, why do they not unfold it to the perplexed Commissioners and to the public? The truth is, there is a complete deadlock as to the status of the colored Methodists in the proposed unified Church, which does not show the faintest prospect of yielding. The following words of Dr. Bond seem to be fully justified: "We * * * cannot abandon our policy in this matter, which has proven so satisfactory to both the whites and the Negroes. * * * It is safe to say that no compromise on this point will ever prove acceptable to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." And, in this connection, the following statement by Dr. Buchanan is also well worth noting: "If the proposition, 'and we will not ask to sit in your General Conference to legislate for you,' must be made hy the Negro that unification may be effected, then the time has not come for unification. * * * Yes, Mr. Editor, the movement should fail, if it cannot move along the way of genuine Christian fellowship and true solidarity." The alternatives here are perfectly plain: the Negro must be in the General Conference, or there can be no union.

But, though it is the most outstanding obstruction to unification (perhaps this is true because it has been the most discussed phase of the problem,) the Negro question is by no means the only unsolved obstacle in the way of this movement. The composition of the General Conference and the powers that it would exercise are yet wide-open and most perplexing questions. Even if the extended conversations at Baltimore had shown a definite agreement that a court should be established to guard the constitution of the Church (a position previously taken by three Northern Gen-

ONE WAY TO HELP THE PASTOR.

The strength and inspiration that comes to a pastor from a praying people no one but a pastor can know. He cannot put into words what he feels, but his soul rejoices. One need not be in the pulpit, even a strange pulpit, more than five minutes to feel the thrill of the congregation's consecrated devotion or the chill of its prayerless apathy. The editor of the "Ram's Horn," once wrote: "If your pastor preaches too long for you, it is probably because your prayers for him are too short." It was aptly put. If you would have an ideal pastor, pray for him in your homes, in your closets, and especially with all fervency and love when he stands before you to preach the glorious gospel.—Southern Churchman.

FOUND THE SERVICES A BLESSING.

A Christian mother recently told in conversation how very much she depended on the Sunday services of the church for help and inspiration for the week. If obliged to be absent occasionally, she experienced a great sense of loss. She went on to tell how very much the sermons of her pastor meant to her. It was a delight to hear her testimony and to note with what a vigorous appetite she went to church on Sunday. Surely there are many such who visit God's house with eager expectancy and whose expectation is not disappointed. Pastors usually know who they are and are constantly inspired to be and to do their best by the thought of the eager receptivity and responsiveness of these choice spirits. Needless to say, this good woman never forgets to pray for her pastor and we do not wonder that his ministry extending over twenty years in the same church gathers power from year to year. Many Christians get nothing from their church because they expect nothing. The promise is to those who hunger and thirst.—Christian Intelligencer.

A PREACHER'S LAST MESSAGE.

Rev. Dr. Robert F. Coyle, on December 31, 1916, preached in his own pulpit of the Westlake Presbyterian Church, Los Angeles, California, on the text, "Now my days are swifter than a post: they flee away, they see no good, they are passed away as the swift ships: as the eagle that hasteth to prey."—Job. 9:25, 26. On the next Friday evening Dr. Coyle had excused himself from his family circle, as he felt ill. At a little after 11 p. m., his spirit had taken its flight.

The beauty and appropriateness of his last sermon to the close of his own life so impressed his people that they have published the sermon, and have favored us with a copy. We would gladly publish the whole sermon, but space prohibits. We give the closing paragraph:

"And now a final word about the pilotage. If ever a ship needed a competent helmsman, it is this swift ship of our human life. Without guidance, the rocks. Surely the wrecks that float about us should be enough to enforce that lesson. Some hardly get out of port before they go to pieces. Some founder in mid-ocean because they think they know the sea and can manage the wheel for themselves. Some imagine that they can get their own boat ashore in the wild storm, and the end is disaster. Oh, we need guidance, some stronger, wiser hand upon the wheel than our own. There are clouds, there are storms, there are dangerous places in the sea, and if we are to escape shipwreck and ruin we must have a thoroughly competent pilot. That is the trouble with the nations to-day. They are pitching and tossing and floundering about and flinging out 'S. O. S.' signals because their captains are incompetent. What they need is the infinitely competent One to step aboard and take charge, as He took charge of the laboring boat on the stormy Galilee. And if this is true of the nations, it is true of us as individuals. In view of the immortal make-up of the ship, in view of the mysterious tossing sea through which it must sail; in view of our ignorance of soul-navigation and our utter inability to make the voyage in safety, we need guidance, and hence I ask you if the prayer of the following lines should not be the prayer for this hour:

"'Jesus, Savior, pilot me
Over life's tempestuous sea;
Unknown waves before me roll,
Hiding rock and treacherous shoal;
Chart and compass came from Thee:
Jesus, Savior, pilot me.'"

THE QUESTION ANSWERED.

The question asked in the February 22 issue of the Advocate, "Why So Much Moving?" is a timely one. I feel sure that Brother "Itinerant" could answer this question very well, but possibly he fears that he might move next Conference if he did so. However, I am going to give some reasons, as I see them, and sign my name to what I write.

1. In our practice we have graded our preachers according to what is paid on the charges they serve, and not according to their ability to do the work of the Master. The leading men of the Conference are those who get the best paying appointments, whether they do the best work or not. Since this in our custom, the preachers are restless to get a better paying job. This causes many moves. I feel sure that if our salaries were more nearly equal we would have fewer moves. As it is, a man must get as good a salary, or better one, when he moves or he feels hurt. If when a man serves a good-salaried appointment for several years, he would be willing to exchange places with his brother who is just as able, but who does not use as much POLICY, it would not be necessary to move eight or ten men to get an appointment that would pay as much as the one he had. It seems to me that selfishness is the indirect cause of many moves.

2. Ambition for personal success causes moves. Each presiding elder wants the best preachers in his district, so as to be able to "make good" as an elder; though, at the same time, this may not be best for the whole Church. So few of us are willing to fail for Christ's sake. It sometimes happens that an elder will be moved from one district to another, and a large per cent of his favorite preachers are moved to the same district. Of course, the elder did not know that he was going to be appointed to that particular district, but he was sure if the plans carried he would. This leads me to say that too many of our appointments are practically made before Conference convenes, for we have men who spend much time in making plans and pride themselves in so doing; but what are they planning for? Is it for the advancement of God's cause or for the advancement of a certain set of men who are special friends? This practice has brought about flunkeyism and wire pulling in our Conferences. I have known a preacher to go to a district steward's meeting and introduce a resolution to increase the salary of the presiding elder and get it done, and get a better appointment himself at the next Conference. We preachers are the cause of the presiding elder's salary being so out of proportion with that of the preachers. Then, notice how many of our preachers vote for their Elder, and let him know it, to go to General Conference. Why is this? Is it because our most able men are out of the pastorate, or is it just policy? Some preachers, to show their appreciation of their Elder, collect money and get their Elder a present, and at the same time neglect the poor in their charge or let a young preacher remain out of school for want of help. Are we not putting the emphasis at the wrong place?

3. Undue attention to minor complaints. If our presiding elders would have those persons who have complaints against their preacher to put them into writing, they would not have so many, or if they would have them made in the presence of the preachers, they would not hear so many. Our Elders always have an excuse for moving a man, for a man is sure to have some one to complain if he preaches the gospel as it is in God's Word. I fear that the itinerant preacher does not get a square deal when the Elder gives so much heed to an influential layman, and never lets the preacher know about the complaint until after he is moved. Any complaint that is grave enough to move a man, is important enough to be made known to the preacher. In fact, a preacher has as much right to seek complaints to have the Elder moved as the Elder has to pick up complaints to move the preacher. The complaints should be used as means to help the preacher and not as a means to get him moved. Too much attention to small complaints has encouraged some of our people until to complain has become a habit with them. However, we should not allow some charges to select their preachers and not allow the others to do so. There is not as much difference in the needs of our people as you might think. They all sin and need grace; all need the same great Physician. To get the wrong out of our Conferences we must first get it out of ourselves. We need more of Christ and less of self. So mote it be.

Yours, with love,

Ellisville, Miss. J. S. PURCELL.

SPREAD OF DRUG HABIT.

More than 2000 persons in New York City are victims of the drug habit. This is a serious condition indeed. If there were 2000, or even 200 persons in New York known to be suffering with smallpox or yellow fever all of us would be greatly concerned. Yet here are makers and peddlers of narcotic drugs spreading a disease which kills the body and soul—and nobody gives their dreadful work more than a passing notice.—N. Y. American

DOERS, NOT DREAMERS, WANTED.

Christians are not called in this world of sin and of need to sit and sing themselves away to everlasting bliss." From the mountain top of Transfiguration they must go to the foot of the hill, where the father cries for his demon-possessed boy. From the contemplation of the soul-thrilling visions of Calvary, they must turn to look upon the needs of a lost world and must stretch forth their hands in practical helpfulness.—Bryan Collier.

A VOICE FROM THE PEOPLE.

To the New Orleans Advocate:

We the undersigned officials and members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Kosciusko, Miss., having a desire to promote the glory of God and advance the interests of his Kingdom, desire to express our regret that some of the men named to represent the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on the Unification Commission seem, from their public utterances, disposed to accept compromise measures and thrust upon us unification with the Methodist Episcopal Church upon terms and conditions which would, in our opinion, disrupt our Church and be of incalculable injury to her interests; and we desire further to declare that we are unwilling to enter into a union with the Church, North, under any agreement which would interfere with the autonomy of our Church, or admit the Methodist Negro contingent to membership in the proposed united Church. We also wish to state that we heartily approve the policy and editorial utterances of the New Orleans Christian Advocate touching this matter, and to express to Dr. Meek our thanks for his able defense of our sacred interests. We are decidedly of the opinion that our Church has suffered from this movement and will continue to suffer as long as this peril hangs over us; and we pray that it may soon be dispelled; and if any recommendation looking toward effecting union is agreed upon, we ask that it be submitted to a vote of the entire membership of the Church.

Signed by: S. A. Brown, pastor; Dr. C. F. Carnes, Chairman of the Board of Stewards; S. M. Collins, Sunday School Superintendent; practically all the church officials, and many others.

WHAT THESE UTTERANCES SUGGEST.

eral Conferences, but defeated by the Annual Conferences), the mere outward rim of this phase of the union problem would thereby have been touched. The crux is HOW to constitute this court, and HOW to fix the powers of the General Conference so as to satisfy the larger body and adequately protect the smaller body entering into the proposed union. Every scheme for the accomplishment of these ends that has come to light has been lamentably deficient and unsatisfactory, and many of the ablest men in Methodism do not believe that the present conditions are such as to give any reasonable hope of the formulation of a plan that the two Churches would accept. But is there not a Committee at work on this matter? To be sure, there is; but a Committee from the two Churches, perhaps quite as able as the one now wrestling with this problem, worked on it for months before the plan of the former Commission was submitted—a plan into which we were told had gone the best thought of many of the foremost minds of American Methodism—but, so far as this feature of it, at least, is concerned, it has been weighed in the balance and found wanting; and Commissioners are now going over the same ground that was traversed by their predecessors to see if they can contrive some other expedient that will answer.

The number, powers, and boundaries of the Regional Conferences are also matters that present grave, and, thus far, baffling difficulties. The Oklahoma plan of three white Regional Jurisdictions, with Methodism in the South proper kept in one of these and made largely autonomous (which was also the plan of the former Joint Commission, and hence as much the plan of the Church, North, as of the Church, South), obviously has not the remotest chance of being adopted. So true is this, that it is a waste of time to talk about it—the Southern Commissioners know this and have practically ceased to do so. What of the substitutes for the Regional Conference arrangement suggested in that now-abandoned plan? Dr. Blake's scheme to have six such Jurisdictions would cut Southern Methodism into five segments, and, as we showed some weeks ago, instead of giving the Methodism of the South adequate and stable protection, would completely shatter its solidarity and ultimately lead to its complete absorption. Nor do any of the other arrangements that have been suggested promise results that would be much better.

The following extract from Dr. Buchanan's article bears most pertinently upon the Regional Conference question: "What does Dr. Blake mean by 'If, therefore, we give our colored membership the same representation in the General Conference that we give to our Missionary jurisdictions, it would seem,' etc., and 'by a limited representation?' I confess that I do not understand the reference. I have yet to learn that the delegates from the Annual Conferences of foreign countries do not have every right, privilege, and prerogative that have the delegates from the Annual Conferences of the United States. If so, why give them what they have? Or is this a movement on the part of our Commissioners to disfranchise, for the sake of unification, the foreign Conferences—another compromise?"

There is much food for thought in this earnest inquiry of this distinguished missionary. Would the Church, South, with her delicate and overshadowing race problem, be willing to go into a polychrome and polyglot General Conference with delegates from all over the world? What would become of Dr. Blake's chimerical scheme for equal representation in the face of such a mixed-up arrangement? Or, if the partial disfranchisement of the foreign Annual Conferences should be attempted, would they submit to it? Is the work in all the mission fields of the two Churches to be disturbed and discriminated against in order to try to effect a union in the homeland? Manifestly there are many angles to this complicated undertaking, and the adjustment of the Regional Conferences is a titanic task—a barrier which has not yet been surmounted, and which may never be overcome—at least not in this generation.

So much for the obstacles that are blocking the way to union, and which bid fair to continue to do so. The Negro question is by no means the only unyielding obstruction, and it is an injustice to the colored Methodists to make such a representation. Even if they were to consent to go into an independent organization, it is extremely doubtful whether the two Churches could come together. It may have seemed to some brethren in the "conversations" had at Baltimore that agreement could be reached concerning the other matters at issue, but impressions thus inferentially gained are far from being correct in all cases. Men who are resolved to oppose pending measures, especially if there is a possibility of their being in a minority, seldom take a decided stand until matters are being definitely disposed of. We do not hesitate to hazard the opinion that no plans have yet been suggested for the constitution of the General Conference or for the creation of the Regional Jurisdictions that would unite anything like all the Commissioners in their support. But, after all, the attitude of the general membership of the Churches is a thing more to be reckoned with that of the members of the Commission. Dr. W. F. Tillett, of Vanderbilt University, spoke wisely at the famous Evanston (Ill.) Conference on Methodist union in February, 1916, when he said: "There is no need of our talking about union, and keeping up a happy feeling, and picking our men that are to come here, and thinking it is all going to be smooth sailing. * * * We who live in Nashville have had an object lesson there that is worth something for us Methodists, and that was that great movement for the Cumberland Presbyterian Church to unite with the Northern Presbyterians. The leaders rushed things through, but there followed lawsuit after lawsuit by a remnant, as it was at first said, that stayed behind; but it turned out to be not a remnant but a majority that stayed behind in the Church and did not go into it, though 90 per cent of all that were doing the voting in the assemblies were rushing the thing through." (Italics ours.)

2. Both Dr. Bond and Dr. Buchanan express the view that it is more important to have UNITY than "organic union" between the two Methodisms, and that it is not necessary to large usefulness that the two bodies should outwardly be blended into one. The latter says: "It is apparently unity that we must work for and leave union until we are ready for it." The former calls attention to the fact that it was for "unity" that our Lord prayed, and that it cannot be produced by legislation or a mere rearrangement of organic forms. God has conditioned many blessings upon unity, but none upon the getting together of his followers in one visible ecclesiastical organization. But it may be asked, What of the friction along the border and in the West? Must that continue? We answer that organic union is not the only method of doing away with that. Read what Dr. Bond says on that subject. He is correct in the statement that provision for stopping that has already been made. Note the following deliverance of our last General Conference:

"We rejoice that, after twenty years of faithful, sympathetic and honorable service by able representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Episcopal Church in a Commission on the Federation of Methodism, the Federal Council of Methodism has been fully established with well defined powers, conferred by the General Conferences, to hear and finally determine all cases of conflict or misunderstanding between the two branches of Methodism. We endorse the principles of agreement which were enunciated and the rules of procedure which were adopted by the Federal Council at its meeting held January 21, 1914, in Nashville, Tenn."

This interdenominational court, duly empowered and sanctioned, stands ready to-day to obviate needless competition and conflicts between the working forces of the two Churches. But it may be said this plan of procedure will not accomplish the end in view. Why not? This Council has not yet been tried. It was scarcely more than established before it was overtaken by the union movement, the outcome of which it has been awaiting. And, as Dr. Bond has suggested, if we are not sufficiently brotherly in spirit to work this method, it would be extremely hazardous for us to undertake to operate as members of one Church.

It has been suggested that a separated Methodism can not deliver itself effectively in carrying forward the Master's work. It is easy to make such an affirmation, but no one has yet adduced an argument to sustain it. Operating through different bodies, Methodism has become perhaps the most influential Protestant Church in the world. The declaration that it would achieve much more if merged into one huge ecclesiasticism is a very uncertain conjecture. In estimating the strength of a religious denomination men and money are not the only factors to be considered; spiritually, doctrinal soundness, and harmony count for much. Co-operation is what is needed, and that is increasing among all the evangelical denominations. The two Methodisms are dividing the territory in foreign fields and working in unison in many respects. There is no reason why this concert of effort should not be continued and perhaps enlarged in yet other directions. To start the fires of discord to blazing throughout the home base would hardly help American Methodism to address herself more efficiently to the great tasks that are before her in other lands.

3. Another thing indicated by these two communications is that the union movement has reached a stage where it is stirring up dissension rather than promoting unity. It is having this effect to a very noticeable extent in the Church, North. Mark the following expressions used by Dr. Buchanan: "He (Dr. Blake) has spoken for division, and not for unity.....Now, prejudice has been stirred up by this unwarranted utterance.... A most mischievous pronouncement was that speech. The Negro has the recognition * * * and most of us are not mean enough to take it away from him." Note also the following deliverance by a writer in the New York Christian Advocate of March 15: "What, a high official in our world-wide Methodist Episcopal Church, a leader of its youth, a member of the Joint Commission on Unification, an honored name on the roll of a New England Conference, to propose in cold blood and send out to the world in black and white, a measure so astonishing, so insulting to a large portion of our Church, so utterly opposed to the genius of Methodism and the whole spirit of the Gospel of Christ! Can it be possible? Shades of Wendell Phillips and Charles Sumner and John Wesley and the Apostle Paul! * * * Dr. Blake says that slavery is dead. * * * Granted. But, as any one knows, who knows anything at all of the situation, though the serpent's head was crushed by the mighty heel of war, his tail is very much alive, and, as was the case with the locusts in the Apocalypse, the sting is in the tail."

The Negroes are also being disturbed by efforts to effect union. Particularly is this true of the Northern Church Negroes, some of whom have spoken with much vehemence in the public prints. They naturally have been profoundly aroused by the talk of having them to go from their Church home, and had not calmer heads prevailed, they would have had a great demonstration in Washington as a protest against such a proposal. And we dare say that the Negroes in other Churches are not being helped by the threshing over again of the race problem, which the union agitation has inevitably brought to the fore.

Our own Church, furthermore, is being hurt by the controversy precipitated by the union issue. Divisive influences are at work. The people in many localities are being made apprehensive and are having their attention diverted from the goals that their eyes should be fixed upon. See the statement from Methodists at Kosciusko, Miss., which appears in this issue of the Advocate. We are now receiving from laymen more expressions adverse to union than at any time since the movement began. These are likely but a few mutterings of the storm that may be expected to break upon our Church if an attempt is made to force a consolidation of the two denominations along the lines that have lately been indicated. Indeed, the probabilities are that pressure in that direction, if it should succeed at all, would result in the creation of three Churches instead of one—one composed of the Negro contingent of the Methodist Episcopal Church and their white sympathizers, another of the ardent unionists in the two denominations, and a third, formed of the Southern Methodists unwilling to fall in with the merger.

In view of all the foregoing considerations, we earnestly hope that the union movement will soon come to be viewed as unwise at this time and called off. We are firmly convinced, in the light of the developments that have taken place, that such a denouement would be decidedly best for all the interests concerned. The obstructions in the way are not of a kind that can be removed immediately by human ingenuity—they are such as only time and the providence of God can overcome. It has been said that the extreme unionists will not let this agitation stop; that they have declared that unification shall come to pass and that they will continue to battle for it, regardless of consequences. We cannot bring ourself to believe that this is true. It is not to a man's discredit if he conscientiously thought that the two Churches could be united to advantage and has sought in a proper manner to bring about that result; but it would be to his discredit to persist in seeking to accomplish union when it has become evident that disaster would follow in the wake of such a course. The wisest of men sometimes err in judgment, and in this case no one could know for a certainty what the result would be until an actual effort had been made to accomplish the great object in view. There is no room for pride of opinion or elation upon any one's part because of what has taken place in connection with this vast undertaking. For our part, we should like to see all elements in our Church, whatever may have been their attitude toward the unification issue, recognize the wisdom of letting it alone during the lifetime of the present generation, each extend the other a general amnesty for anything displeasing that may have been done during the controversy that has been raging, and all set their hands unitedly to the work of building up the Southern Methodist Church and of extending through it the Kingdom of God. Nor would we have overlooked the privilege of cultivating unity and the spirit of co-operation with our Northern Methodist brethren and all other disciples of Jesus, including the colored Christians. Shall we not pray that out of the present stress and conflict our beloved Church may be divinely led into such a state of harmony and good-will?

A SINGER WANTED.

Dear Brother Meek: Please state in the Advocate that I am in need of a singer. I want a young man who is religious and not afraid to work.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT NOTES.

In spite of the continuous bad Sunday weather during the past four months, the work has moved on fairly well and some progress has been made. Every man has been at his post and every appointment has been met.

The first, is generally the hardest quarter in the year for some things. Preachers are just moving in, and, for the most part, are strangers to the work and the people. Having to form new acquaintances, is a bit of a job for some people. However, with all these initial difficulties, there has been a good report sent in. There have been 111 conversions reported—100 in the revival held at Jena, and 39 accessions to the Church at that place. Sixty-eight accesions have been reported in all and $4998 has been reported raised by the works, mostly for ministerial support. There has been some readjustment of lines with two or three of the works since Conference, due to several causes.

As is known by all the members of the Conference, Brother W. B. Perritt withdrew from our ministry. He has the small congregation that was formerly ours at Elizabeth, the officials there having elected to keep him as their preacher. We have lost that place. Fullerton remains with us, and the work formerly known as the De Ridder Mission has passed out for this year, being absorbed in the readjustment. Rapides Circuit has also been absorbed—some going to Pollock and some to other points. All the preaching places are being taken care of. The outlook for a good year's work is flattering.

The Bible Class Federation which met in Alexandria was a success, 130 delegates having registered. Bishop Atkins and George Stuart failed to appear as per program, but good substitutes were secured, and, as far as could be seen, the program did not suffer. A permanent organization was affected with H. H. White, of Alexandria, as President, and the usual corps of officers. The next session will be held in Mansfield, which, by the way, had the largest number of delegates of any place outside of Alexandria. Steel and Foote made fine impresions upon the audiences—Steel appearing for himself and Foote as a substitute for George Stuart, and Stuart need not feel bad about how his vacancy was filled.

So far, only one revival has been held—that at Jena; but the preachers are getting ready for the campaign in June. We are working for and expecting great things as its result. Our Sunday school work is moving up. We are going to push this important feature of the Church's work all over the district. With the co-operation of the preachers that are in the district this year and that of some of the best laymen that I know, I see no prospect but for the best year in our memory. For the prosperity of Zion we shall earnestly pray and work.

The District Conference will meet in Natchitoches the night of May 1, and continue in session until its business is finished. Come up, Mr. Editor, and we will show you some rare old things in that place. BRISCOE CARTER.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

To the Preachers and brethren of the Mississippi Conference:

Please, without delay, take the collection for the Conference Claimants, and remit to W. E. Morse, Treasurer, Jackson, Miss. We cannot pay these worthy claims without money. A report from the Treasurer will be published not later than April 10. J. M. MORSE, President Joint Board of Finance.

JUNALUSKA, AUGUST 12-19.

Get ready, everybody, for Junaluska and the Missionary Conference, August 12-19. You had better put it in your book right now and plan to be there without fail.

That was a great conference we had in 1916, despite floods, strikes, and many other obstacles. It was worth while to the hundreds who braved the perils and finally got there—1916 was Junaluska's best season, so far, as will be agreed by all who were present through those wonderful days of vision and uplift. But we are expecting 1917 at Junaluska to be better yet.

August 12 concludes the Bible and Workers' Conference and opens the Missionary Conference, so those who care to attend both conferences can easily do so. We are expecting the 12th, this combination date of the two conferences, to be a red-letter day. We are not yet authorized to announce the name of the speaker for the day, but we are planning for and expecting the best.

Through the week we mean to have such a conference as only the presentation of extraordinary world situations can make. The best speakers available will be used throughout. Their names will be announced in a few weeks.

We shall have classes in the new mission study text books for the training of those who are planning to conduct classes in their churches next season.

There will be institute and conference work for various groups—special conferences and discussions for laymen, and the same for members of the Woman's Missionary Society. Missionaries will bring burning messages right from the field. Both home and foreign work will be presented. The result will be not only a great inspirational conference, but also a school of missionary methods.

There need be no sort of apprehension about entertainment. That will be all that could be desired. The great hotel is about finished and will be ready for occupancy, accommodating 250 guests, and affording entertainment of the highest order. There are many less expensive hostelries, boarding houses, and tents, and entertainment can be secured at almost any rate desired. If you want a trip this summer that shall be profitable as well as pleasant, go to the Missionary Conference at Junaluska.

Junaluska is our Southern Methodist Mecca, our Chautauqua, our Atlantic City, our great meeting place for recreation, highest social intercourse, religious inspiration, and all-round improvement.

Other bulletins will follow from time to time. Write us or the management for information, and be sure to come. E. H. RAWLINGS.

A LOUISIANA LAYMAN'S VIEW.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have all along intended not to take any part in the discussion of the unification of the Methodist Churches, but as the proponents of unification at any price seem to create sentiment by putting themselves numerously on record, I have determined to write myself against the movement.

I am against it, and, I think, for good reasons: but I appreciate why many people are for it. I suppose they favor it largely on the grounds, as they think: First, two separate organizations hamper the Churches because it evinces that there is a lack of that Christian love that binds in unity: second, because if the two bodies were merged into one organization, there would be a large body, efficient and abler financially, and a consequent saving of power by concentration, and that therefore the Master's work would advance more speedily, more completely and at less cost, to greater success. I ask myself, would the union of the two Churches produce the results so fondly anticipated? Would there be that union that springs from love? I think not. If there is not love enough to prevent the two Churches from invading each other's territory, would a mechanical union imposed by a majority vote bring about the spirit of love in which the big body would regard always the rights of the minority? I think not. If there was not love enough in the past in the majority to prevent the invasion of the rights of the minority, what guarantee have we in the future? It may be said the casus belli—the Negro—has been removed. I think not; for, like Banquo's ghost, he will not down. (See Dr. Blake's able article in Zion's Herald.) But say it is so; the spirit that used the Negro as the basis of action and justification—has that been changed? The immediate past answers, No. And if not the Negro, some other casus belli will arise. You ask me: Do you not think the Northern Methodists are Christians? I unhesitatingly answer, Yes. But I think there is no occasion for union with them. Was it not Mr. Wesley who said, when one of his young preachers determined to get married: "Do not?" "Why? is she not a good Christian?" was the query. "Yes, my brother, but the Lord can get along with a good many people that you and I cannot," responded Mr. Wesley.

I am far from believing that it is essential in order for Christian love to exist that both bodies should merge into one. Is it not a fact that two kindred families generally love each other better when they do not live under the same roof? There was a church of Nymphas' household and a church of the Laodiceans; Paul did not suggest that they be merged. Will a large Church do more efficiently the Master's work? Big things are attractive per se; but has not the possession of power, numbers, led to the tyrannous exercise of the giant's strength too often to make a big Church desirable? What both Churches need right now is not members, but spirituality. Frankly, I am afraid of a big Methodist body; I am afraid that the temptation to enter into politics would grow, etc.

Thirdly, if the argument is that we ought to unify so that we shall be one in Christ, this is obtainable without physical organization. If it means one in name, we should send out missionaries to all Protestants, Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Baptists, etc., and urge them all in the name of Christ to come in and operate under some name to be chosen, and then, the Roman Catholic Church will say: Come, my children, into my fold; for Scripture saith, "One Lord, one Church, one Baptism."

No; union is not necessary from any point of view, for the Church of God does not consist in the outward visible organization, but the spiritual union of souls in Christ Jesus, here and beyond. God has blessed us and them; His power has been made manifest by using each in its sphere along the line of its temperament, heredity, and environment, to the accomplishment of His glory. He uses men as they are; men try to put everything to the Procrustean test. They want big corporations; God only asks for men. He used Paul for the heathen, and Peter and James for the Jews. Each did the work of the Lord in his own way; each in his own territory—Paul with the Gentiles and Peter with the Jews. Though they had sharp differences of opinion, yet they loved each other and God blessed their separate efforts.

I therefore see no reason, in the present status of things, for any organized union between the Northern and Southern Methodisms.

Yours very truly,

IMPORTANT FACTS ABOUT CUBA.

By Rev. Inman W. Cooper, D.D.

The island is approximately 760 miles long.

Area 45,881 square miles, a trifle larger than Pennsylvania.

Placed on map of the United States, it would reach from City of New York to Indianapolis with an average width equal to that of New Jersey.

Cuba's seacoast is approximately 2000 miles long, with more fine deep water harbors than any other country in the Western Hemisphere.

More merchandise enters and leaves the harbor of Havana than any in the United States except New York.

In climate and healthfulness, Cuba can not be surpassed by any country in the world.

Delightful scenery—courteous and friendly people.

A homeseeker's paradise, with investment opportunities unlimited.

Refreshing breezes by day—nights always cool and pleasant.

Imports for fiscal year 1915-1916, $155,448,000.

Exports for fiscal year 1915-1916, $254,292,000.

Balance of trade in favor of Cuba, $98,844,000.

Cuba has 1246 miles of magnificent shaded auto roads or driveways.

Range of temperature (mean) 12 degrees, Fahrenheit; January average, 70.3; July, 82.4 degrees; extremes—60 to 92.

Average rainfall 54 inches. Dry in winter; showers in summer.

Population 2,500,000. Yearly increase about 75,000.

Excess of births over deaths 40,000.

Average yearly immigration 37,000; 70 per cent of population white; 30 per cent colored.

Permanent schools 4011; teachers 4111.

There are 2360 miles of railroad in Cuba with 200 miles of electric railways.

There are 22 steamers a week to the United States.

There are no poisonous snakes or reptiles in the Island.

The soil is superlatively productive; if properly worked it gives marvelous returns.

Sugar cane on virgin land may be cut for fifty years without replanting.

Tobacco is planted, grown and gathered in 90 days. Cattle, horses, and stock of all kinds thrive with little care. Price of land depends on location, quality and size of tract. These prices vary from $5 to $500 per acre.

Without irrigation, either tobacco or vegetables may prove a loss. Oranges, according to maturity, yield from $50 to $500 per acre.

Cuba ranks as the second healthiest country in the world, the rating of Australia being better.

Cuba has but 53 persons to the square mile, while the Bermuda Islands have 1000; Belgium, 600; Java, 595; Rhode Island, 500; Holland, 454; England, 425; Porto Rico, 330; Japan, 317; German Empire, 315, and Italy, 310. With its natural richness, this Island can easily sustain more inhabitants per square mile than any of the above-mentioned countries.

Agriculture.

CANE. Commercially speaking, cane is king in Cuba. The value of the sugar crop of 1914 is in dollars and cents approximately $240,000,000; this in spite of the fact that only about 4 per cent of available sugar cane soil is under cultivation. With an area of 47,000 square miles, a large percentage of which is excellent sugar cane land, it can readily be seen that this Republic has sufficient territory to furnish the world with all the sugar it needs, and since the money value of sugar is more than five times that of all her exports taken together, the commercial importance attached to this one product is easily understood.

The ingenios, or sugar estates of the Island, are, as a rule, equipped with modern and up-to-date machinery. The bagazo, or waste product of the cane, combined with wood, furnishes the fuel for power, although oil in the near future will probably substitute wood.

There are, all told, 127 sugar estates growing and grinding cane at the present time, with several more in process of construction. Many of these are of an enormous capacity; that of Chaparra, located at Puerto Padre, produced over 600,000 bags of sugar this year, which, with that of Las Delicias, a sister mill, some seven miles distant, yielded a total of over a million sacks of 325 pounds each, the value of which product at an average of $12 per sack, amounted to $12,000,000.

The climate of Cuba, with its freedom from frost, which permits grinding throughout the year, and the abundance of rain falling during the summer months, is especially favorable to the production of this crop, rendering it absolutely certain in its results.

Most of the sugar of this Island is produced on the "colono" or share system, the grower receiving an average of 6 per cent, or about one-half of the crystallized sugar yield from a given weight of cane. To farmers of established standing, the mill usually advances a credit with which to secure the necessary oxen, farming implements, food supplies, etc., equal to three or four times the amount of the cash capital contributed by the colono, which enables the latter to become, in a way, a partner or associate in the enterprise.

In spite of the fact that labor is much higher in Cuba than in other cane sugar producing countries, such is the fertility of her soil and so great are the natural advantages of location, deep water harbors, rainfall, and climate conditions, that Cuba can undoubtedly produce a higher grade of cane sugar at less cost than any other country in the world.

TOBACCO. Next in importance commercially to the production of cane, ranks that of tobacco, the annual value of the crop being about $32,000,000. The best crops and the greatest quantity come from Pinar del Rio, to which industry more capital is dedicated than any other in that province. Tobacco, unlike sugar, seems to be dependent for its quality largely on some peculiar chemical characteristic of soil, not easily determined; hence it is that the production is localized, certain sections being given over entirely to tobacco, and yielding a product many times more valuable than that grown only a few miles distant. These patches or small fields of tobacco are known as "vegas," and the men who tend them as "vegueros."

The tobacco par excellence in flavor, aroma, etc., is grown within a comparatively short radius of the city of Pinar del Rio, located in the central western section of the province. This tobacco is known as Vuelta Abajo, which is celebrated throughout the world and brings, together with the wrapper tobacco of the Tumbadero and Guayabal districts, the highest prices per acre secured for any crop grown in the Republic. Five hundred dollars as the value of the product of an acre is quite common; $1000 is not unusual.

Tobacco known as semi-vuelta and under other various local names is grown profitably throughout the province, especially on the Guana plains, in the Valley of Vinales, and in "sumideros" or basins scattered throughout the mountains, as well as in the level country that lies south of the range and east of the celebrated Vuelta Abajo. This crop, unlike cane, is heavily fertilized, and owing to the value of the product, is grown under cheese cloth; hence it is not at all unusual to spend $400 or $500 upon an acre of land before the seed is put in the ground, which takes place during the tall months, the crop being cut at the expiration of 90 days, after which follows the process of curing, selecting and marketing.

Brookhaven, Miss.

"THE COMING STATE CONVENTION."

Under the above caption in the Advocate of March 15, Rev. H. B. Watkins, in the tone and style of an old-fashion Methodist exhorter, appeals to our people to attend the Interdenominational Sunday School Convention soon to convene in Jackson, and then proceeds to advocate the interdenominational work. The strangest thing about the whole matter is that an effusion of this sort should come from the pen of an intelligent man like Brother Watkins who ought to know better. Is it possible that he is lacking in appreciation of the splendid work of our own Sunday school field agent, or is the product of his pen an indication of skim-milk loyalty? He says that even Methodists may become selfish. No doubt; but they may also drift into latitudinarianism, which Brother Watkins seems to be in danger of doing. While he exhorts our people to so-called broadness, let me plead for denominational loyalty. Why should our people who, if they are loyal to their own Church and her institutions, support their own denominational Sunday school work, be exhorted by a Methodist pastor to maintain a nondescript Sunday School Association which belongs to everybody and therefore belongs to nobody? I rise to my feet to enter my most emphatic protest against such leadership. Between ten and twelve thousand dollars are contributed annually for the support of the Interdenominational Association, 75 per cent of which comes out of the pockets of Methodist people, scores of whom give of their money to this work, believing that it is a part of the Methodist Church; and the attitude of a few of our preachers, such as Brother Watkins, whose numbers, I am glad to believe, are decreasing every year, tends to strengthen this false impression. Our people should be informed that the interdenominational work constitutes no part of our Church's activities, and that a large part, if not the larger part, of the large sum mentioned above is expended in paying the fine salaries of interdenominational workers and their enthusiasm generators.

I want to express the sincere hope that the time is drawing nigh when Methodist Sunday schools will cease to make pledges of money for the maintenance of the Interdenominational Association, and put their money into the treasury of their own Church. As said Martin Luther, "Here I stand, so help me God." My candid opinion is that the Interdenominational Sunday School Association of Mississippi is a parasite upon the body ecclesiastic of the State. I say this because, as Brother Watkins states, nearly every denomination has a man in the field who is receiving a good salary, and I believe they are abundantly able to take care of all the Sunday school work of the State. If they are, let's stand by them; if they are not, then let's dismiss them and put other men in their places, or turn the work over to the Interdenominational Association, which, as Brother Watkins seems to think, is so diligent in taking care of the "waste places." However, I have yet to see their field workers going into waste places. I have never seen them except along the railroads where collections are possible. When I see them getting away from the railroads, going out into the country and actually organizing Sunday schools in sure enough waste places, I may become a "convert" and, in company with Brother Watkins, "hit the sawdust trail;" but as long as I see them following the railroads, taking collections with which to pay large salaries, Brother Watkins will please excuse me if I do not follow his bugle call.

The platform upon which I stand is loyalty to my own Church and her institutions, and a refusal to dissipate my energies and money in other directions. When Moses came down from the mount, he burnt the golden calf which Aaron had made, ground it to powder, scattered it on the water, and made the Israelites drink of it. "Then Moses stood in the gate of the camp and said, "Who is on the Lord's side? Let him come unto me." So I would say to all, Who is on the Church's side? Let him put the stamp of his approval upon the principles of the platform enunciated above. I trust that Brother Watkins will understand that this invitation includes him, and I assure him that this platform does not have in it a single plank of selfishness, but is broad enough for any loyal Methodist to plant upon it both feet with a feeling of confidence that it will stand the strain, and weather all storms.

THE TRUE STORY OF MR. CAN'T, MR. WON'T, MR. WILL AND MR. TRY.

Two little men stood looking at a hill;
One was named Can't and one was named Will.
Can't said, "I never in the world can climb this hill."
So there he is at the bottom of it still!
Will said, "I'll get to the top because I will."
And there he is now at the top of the hill!
Two little men are living by the hill;
At the bottom is Can't, at the top is Will.

Can't has a cross little brother called I Won't. I Won't simply means I Don't Want To. Once in a while I Won't is ashamed to say, I don't want to, so he imitates his big brother, and says, I can't.

But Can't isn't as big as he seems. Sometimes he's all bluff and bluster, and bluff and bluster aren't really very much when you get right down to it. Sometimes he's just afraid, and being afraid is generally very foolish, because generally there isn't much of anything to be afraid of. And sometimes Can't is just plain lazy; he thinks he can't because he's too lazy to try.

Try is a little brother to I Will. "I don't know as I can, but at least I'll try." Try isn't as big and sure of himself as Will—but at least he makes a beginning. He starts—and after you've started it's a good deal easier to keep on than if you hadn't started at all.

Try gets to be Will when he grows up. Will does it because he says he will. He says he will because he knows he can. He knows he can because he says he will.

Will always finds a way. It may not be exactly his way. But if his way doesn't work he finds a way that will.

And sooner or later he climbs that hill;
You won't find him at the bottom of it still!
His way isn't can't and won't; his way is will.
And there he is way up the hill!

Now just you don't
Have anything to do with can't or won't.
Stick to little brother Try,
And by and by,
If you stick to him still
You'll get to be his big brother Will.
And live way up on the top of the hill.

MABEL'S NEW NURSE.

Out on the piazza the block forts were going up beautifully, while just inside, where the breath of the flowers and all the pleasant summer sounds could come, mother was reading to Mabel.

It was not "a-very-sick," but a "sick-enough-to-have-to-stay-in-bed" that was the matter with her, Mabel said. It was rather nice when it came time for cream toast, and while mother read to her; but it was hard to lie still when mother had to go away and when Mabel could hear the other children playing without her. By and by Bridget looked in at the door.

"The washerwoman's little boy has hurt his foot, ma'am, and she wants to know will you come down a bit?"

"Oh! dear," said Mabel. "Everybody wants you. Who'll take care of me while you're gone?"

Mother thought a minute. "I know some one who can help you to be the best kind of a little invalid, if she will," she said. "I'll write her name on this slip of paper, and you can open it after I'm gone, and see if you want her."

Mabel waited only long enough to hear mother's steps pass out of the hall before she opened the paper and read "Mabel Gray."

"Why, that's just me!" she said. "I thought it was going to be somebody."

At first her lips pouted, but then at the thought of being her own nurse, funny little dimples and smiles began to come. She told herself to be good. "Lie still, my dear, and try to sleep now." And soon she laughed outright. Then she began to tell herself stories, and by and by she was sound asleep. She did not hear when mother came in, but when she awoke the dear face was smiling down at her.

"Well, how did the new nurse get along?" mother asked.

"Pretty well," answered Mabel. "She asked me wasn't I 'shamed of myself to be so selfish, when I had you all the time and that poor boy only wanted you a little while. And then she said I must be good and keep still; she didn't just tell me to; she made me do it."

"I thought she would," laughed mother. "Little girlie, I am glad you have learned that, for it is true when you are well just the same as when you are sick."—Southern Churchman.

BEAUTIFUL.

One day a little girl in a white frock, and with a great bunch of flowers, passed by a boy who was playing in the dusty street. Somehow the sight of that dainty figure stirred the spirit of mischief in the boy's heart, and suddenly a handful of dirt struck the edge of the white dress and fell in a shower upon the kid shoes.

The girl stood still. Her face flushed pink. Her lips trembled as if she would cry. But instead a smile broke over her face, and, taking a flower from her bunch, she tossed it to the boy, who stood waiting to see what she was going to do.

A more surprised boy no one ever saw, nor one more heartily ashamed. He hung his head, and his cheeks reddened under their tan and freckles. His unkind fun was quite spoiled, just because in return for a handful of dirt some one had thrown him a flower.

What a changed world this would be if everybody, big and little, were as wise as this six-year-old maid! How quarrels would go out of fashion, if for angry words we threw back gentle answers. —Christian Intelligencer.

HER CHRISTMAS PRESENT.

By Rev. A. C. Gayle, of the Southwest Missouri Conference.

Mrs. Mason was worried. Any one could see that. It was December 1st and she had not decided on a Christmas present for Susie, although in all the twenty years of her daughter's life she had not failed to select a Christmas present by that date. Hours had been spent in the shops and in looking over catalogues for something suitable, but it seemed that the world had no gift that would meet her approval.

After dinner she sat down in the parlor to go over the list again and was interrupted by the ringing of the door bell. She found her pastor, the Rev. Mr. Jones, of the Woodlawn Church, at the door. A few moments after being seated he said: "Sister Mason, you are worried; what is the trouble?" She explained the cause of her worry and asked for his advice. He replied without hesitation, "I believe that I know something that would be a perfect gift, not only for this Christmas, but for every Christmas of that young lady's life." "What can it be?" asked Mrs. Mason. He replied that what he had in mind was a LIFE ANNUITY BOND from the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and, continuing, said: "For example, you could send $250 to the Board of Church Extension and the Executive Officer would send an annuity bond to Susie, which would reach her before Christmas day, and on the twentieth day of December of each and every year of her life an annuity draft for $12.50 would be mailed to her from the office of the Board at Louisville, Ky., and this would be a real Christmas present, not only during her mother's life, but after you have gone to your reward. The amount of your investment in the bond, $250, would be loaned by the Board to churches in need of assistance in building suitable houses of worship."

Mrs. Mason was delighted with the suggestion, and on the following day, after reading carefully some literature upon the subject of annuities, which her pastor had placed in her hands, sent to Rev. W. F. McMurry, Corresponding Secretary of the Board, $250 and requested an annuity bond with her daughter, Susie Mason, named therein as beneficiary. * * * * * * *

On Christmas morning Susie found a large envelope by her plate containing the annuity bond. At first she did not understand the meaning of it all, but after her mother had explained that she had invested $250 with the Board of Church Extension, that her daughter might not be without a Christmas remembrance during all her life from the mother who loved her so dearly, and that the $250 would be at work continually building churches, Susie was very much delighted indeed.

Mrs. Mason has been called to her reward and Susie is often lonely without her mother, but continues to receive from that mother a Christmas remembrance on every return of that glad season, in the form of an ANNUITY DRAFT for $12.50.

THE APPRAISEMENT THAT WILL COUNT.

It is not the appraisement of the world or of the Church that should count for most with the Christian minister, but the appraisement of the Master. It is to be feared that most workers, both clerical and lay, are too much concerned about the former. So to live as ever to see "Him who is invisible" and command His approval should be the earnest endeavor of every one who has been born into the Kingdom. If a man can do this, he need not worry about how others may class him. What a reversal of human estimates as to worth and greatness there will be on the Judgment Day!

A NEEDFUL CONVICTION.

A conviction as to the incalculable value of the human soul is necessary to fit one for a large service to God and humanity. It was because he "knew what was in man"—what he was capable of becoming, what he was worth—that Jesus was willing to die on the Cross to redeem him. Any human being is well worth all the effort that we may be able to make to rescue and save him. There are no common people with God; they are all his offspring—all wear his "image and likeness"—all may become joint-heirs with Christ and reign with him in glory. Oh, that this truth might become so fastened in our hearts that we should be fired with a passion to help all the needy to lift up the lowliest! How dare we neglect any of the suffering ones for whom our Lord laid down his life? How those weighty words that fell from his divine lips should ring in our ears: "In as much as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not unto me."

A GREAT GATHERING.

The Southern Presbyterian Laymen's Convention which recently met in New Orleans was a great gathering. The principal sessions were held in the First Presbyterian Church, a noble structure that was made famous by the brilliant ministry from its pulpit of the gifted Dr. B. M. Palmer. Many of the addresses were of a very high order. Governor M. R. Patterson spoke with stirring power and pathos of the Nation's liquor problem, and Dr. Dunbar H. Ogden, of Atlanta, and Dr. James I. Vance, of Nashville, made deliverances that were eloquent and moving. The Presbyterian Journal speaks of the attendance as not measuring up to expectation, the total number of registrations being 789. The Convention, however, seemed to make a considerable impression upon the city, and we do not doubt that its influence will have a far-reaching effect for good. The Southern Presbyterian Church is giving a good account of itself in these opening years of the twentieth century. It is standing up nobly for orthodox, evangelical Christianity, and is mobilizing its forces that it may make the most of the expanding opportunities that the passing years are bringing to the disciples of Jesus of every name.

REP. A. P. LEECH DEAD.

We are in receipt of the following telegram:

"Columbus, Miss., March 26.—Brother A. P. Leech died triumphantly this afternoon, aged 89 years. The funeral will take place Wednesday morning.

"W. W. WOOLLARD,
"W. L. DUREN."

This announcement will bring sorrow to many hearts in North Mississippi. Brother Leech had been on the honor roll of the North Mississippi Conference for a number of years, but had made himself largely useful in the work of the Church in Columbus where he resided. He possessed much native ability and was a most helpful and effective preacher. One could not bear him without being impressed that he kept daily company with the Master. His character was sound and robust and his faith firm and unshakable. He wrought well for his Lord, and we doubt not that he has entered upon a glorious reward. We extend sympathy to the bereaved loved ones, and pray that the precious hopes of the Gospel may be their stay in this time of heartache and sadness.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. W. Tucker is beginning to get things well in hand at Crowley, La., and the indications point to a fruitful year.

The work at Louisville, Miss., where Rev. W. C. Carlisle is the faithful pastor, is progressing harmoniously. Brother Carlisle's letter brought us two subscriptions to the Advocate.

Dr. E. C. Moore, pastor of Court Street Church, of Montgomery, Ala., is assisting Rev. R. M. Brown in a meeting at Felicity Street M. E. Church, South, this city. The attendance and interest have been good.

Rev. A. F. Vaughan began a revival meeting in the Carrollton Avenue Church of this city last Sunday, which will continue until April 6. Brother Vaughan (the pastor) is himself doing the preaching.

Dr. John M. Moore, of Nashville, Tenn., was in New Orleans Tuesday of this week and was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office. Dr. Moore was en route to Texas, where he has a number of engagements.

Rev. C. A. Massey, from Port Gibson, Miss., has been appointed to the Angie-Talisheek charge, New Orleans District. The presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Holmes, states that he comes to this field well recommended.

The dates of connectional meetings thus far announced are: Board of Education, Nashville, April 25; College of Bishops, Nashville, April 27; Board of Missions, Nashville, May 1; Board of Church Extension, Louisville, May 5.

Colonel I. D. Wall, of Baton Rouge, La., who this week writes most interestingly in the Advocate on the unification of Methodism, is a grandson of the renowned Dr. William Winans. He is an able lawyer and a speaker of unusual gifts.

Ex-Chief Justice A. H. Whitfield, of Jackson, Miss., who for several years has been a professor in the Millsaps College Law School, has been elected to a law professorship in the University of Mississippi, and has signified his acceptance of the position.

Rev. W. W. Nelson says: "Things are moving along nicely on the Scotland (Miss.) charge, and we are looking for a successful year. Our first quarterly conference will be held on March 24." Brother Nelson will press the claims of the Advocate in his field.

The Commencement sermon of the High School at Siloam Creek will be preached on Sunday, April 1, by Rev. John W. Chisholm, B.D., of Silver Creek, Miss., and the address to the graduating class will be delivered by Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D., President of Whitworth College.

After giving us two names for our mailing files, Rev. W. G. Burks, our efficient pastor at Dumas, Miss., says: "These two subscribers are sisters. They are leading members of our New Hope Church, and both regard the New Orleans Christian Advocate as indispensable in their homes."

Rev. Adolf Hoffman, of El Paso, Texas, who is a member of the Southwest Kansas Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, accompanied by his wife, passed through New Orleans last week, en route to Cuba. Brother and Sister Hoffman paid the Advocate office an appreciated call.

The program of the Greenville (Miss.) District Conference, which is in session at Lula, Miss., this week, is before us. The capable presiding elder, Rev. V. C. Curtis, has obviously arranged well for this occasion. Dr. H. C. Morrison, of Kentucky, is expected to be present and deliver three or four discourses.

We are informed that Bishop Hoss is seriously ill, and that Bishop Murrah will preside over the Baltimore Conference in his place.

Bishop W. T. Capers, of the West Texas Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church, will preach the Commencement sermon of the Louisiana State University, at Baton Rouge, on June 3.

Rev. A. R. Beasley, of Poplar Creek, Miss., gives us some subscriptions to the Advocate, and thus refers to his charge: "Our congregations have been small for the past two months, on account of a prevailing epidemic of measles. However, things are moving on pretty well, and we are encouraged and hopeful of a good year."

Rev. O. L. Savage, of Webb, Miss., continues to bring us under obligations to him for good work in behalf of the Advocate. This good preacher and energetic pastor does not believe in overlooking any interest of the Church in his labors. In one of his business letters to our office, Brother Savage says: "We are building a modern new church at Webb."

Rev. W. D. Bennett, of the Sardis (Miss.) Circuit, is convalescing from an attack of measles. The prevalence of that malady and the inclement weather have considerably hindered the work in his field, but, notwithstanding, things are moving on fairly well. Brother Bennett's letter brought us some subscriptions to the Advocate, for which he has our thanks.

From a letter from Rev. S. A. Brown, bearing date of March 20, we take the following: "Our Sunday school and that of the Lexington Church are engaged in a friendly contest. We are 268 ahead in point of attendance, but they are leading to the amount of about $12 in the contributions. Our attendance last Sunday was 176. We are hoping to win ont on both counts."

Rev. H. T. Young, the Louisiana Conference evangelist, has for some days been helping Rev. W. A. Mangum in a series of revival services in McDonoghville. Brother Young was an appreciated caller at the Advocate office last Saturday. We are pleased to know that the Master is graciously blessing him in the important work which he has been commissioned to do.

Rev. C. H. Strait, of Johns, Miss., reports good congregations and a good interest at every appointment in his charge. He is kept quite busy, as he is serving six churches, having added two preaching places, and has on hand to be taken care of the Fourth Year's Course of Study. He is presenting the claims of the Advocate on his pastoral rounds, with some success.

Miss Mary Brown, in a note written on March 24, stated that her father, Rev. S. A. Brown, our pastor at Kosciusko, Miss., was quite ill, though his condition was not thought to be serious. We trust that ere this Brother Brown is very much better. Miss Mary further stated that our pulpit at Kosciusko would be filled last Sunday by Rev. W. W. Mitchell, presiding elder of the Durant District.

Rev. W. C. Lester, our pastor at Tutwiler, Miss., and his family will have the sympathy of a host of friends in the bereavement which has come to them in the death of Mrs. Wilma Carr, of Crawford, Miss., Brother Lester's third daughter, an announcement of whose demise, from the pen of Rev. D. W. Babb, appears in this issue of the Advocate. May the Heavenly Father graciously sustain these stricken ones, as only He can!

Mrs. Sallie Hartwell, of Water Valley, Miss., writes: "Please discontinue sending your paper to my mother, Mrs. M. C. Wiggins, of this city. She died on March 13, in her 93d year. She was the relict of the Rev. David M. Wiggins, of the Mississippi Conference, and had been from her girlhood a reader of the Advocate." We regret to be apprised of the death of this faithful servant of the Master, and we extend sympathy to the bereaved.

The Methodists of Brookhaven, Miss., recently conducted a campaign to raise $10,000 to complete their new church, now in process of construction. Their efforts resulted in bringing in more than $11,000. Dr. I. W. Cooper was the captain of one of the teams that secured this money. This new structure will cost between $40,000 and $50,000, and it is said that it will be built without incurring any debt. Rev. C. W. Crisler is the popular pastor of this congregation.

The following friends, to whom we have elsewhere made no reference, have within the past few days brought us under obligations to them for two or more subscriptions to the Advocate: Rev. S. A. Brown, Kosciusko, Miss., 2; Rev. W. M. Young, Pontotoc, Miss., 2; Rev. G. D. Purcell, Duhach, La., 6; Rev. T. H. Porter, Lamar, Miss., 2; Rev. J. A. Wells, Oak Ridge, Miss., 5; Rev. H. P. Lewis, Madison, Miss., 2; Rev. W. L. Doss, Homer, La., 6.

In our editorial on "The Fall of the Russian Throne" last week, we erroneously referred to the Grand Duke Nicholas, the great soldier, as a brother of the deposed Czar of Russia. The Grand Duke is a son of a grand-uncle of the Czar, and therefore a somewhat-removed cousin. In the interest of accuracy, we make this correction.

Gilbert, La., was recently blessed with a sweeping revival, in which the pastor, Rev. J. L. Roy, was assisted by Rev. H. T. Young, who did the preaching, and Mr. Jack Brokaw, who led the singing. There were 45 accessions to our Church, and several joined the Baptist Church. Since this gracious season of spiritual refreshing, there is talk of constructing a new house of worship to cost about $15,000. Brother Roy will tell more of this fine meeting in the next issue of the Advocate.

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the Winona (Miss.) District, writes us as follows: "Dr. H. C. Morrison, of Wilmore, Ky., President of Asbury College and Editor of the Pentecostal Herald, is assisting Rev. W. N. Duncan in a meeting in Winona. Dr. Morrison is a man of unusual intellect and preaching power. His sermons are great, being fervent, strong, and convincing. The meeting bids fair to be the greatest in the way of leading the people into a deeper spiritual life that has been held in Winona in a long time."

Under date of March 26, Dr. George S. Sexton sends us the following telegram: "This was a great day for our Methodism in Washington City. With singing and cheering, dirt was broken for our new representative Church. The work of construction has actually begun, having been made possible by the help of the loyal Methodists throughout the South. Dr. Sam Steel made a great address. We will soon assume our rightful place in the Capital of the Nation." This structure will be largely built of Georgia marble and will cost over $400,000.

Dr. Henry Beach Carre, who is well known in New Orleans and Louisiana, has been elected Superintendent of Platform and Schools of the Monteagle Assembly, at Monteagle, Tenn. Referring to Dr. Carre, who holds a chair in the Vanderbilt School of Religion, the Nashville Banner says: "He brings to this task all the elements needed to assure success. By birth and training he is the product of the very best family and social ideals, and he is an A.B. graduate of Tulane University, a B.D. graduate of Vanderbilt and a Ph.D. graduate of Chicago." Dr. Carre is a son of Mrs. W. W. Carre, of this city, who is widely known for her Christian fidelity and good works.

A Monroe (La.) correspondent says: "The First Methodist Church here is prospering and the outlook is bright for a fine year. Brother Means, our new pastor, seems to fit this charge admirably. He has been very active in visiting and the people already are fond of him. March 11 was his 39th birthday, and our board of stewards on the 12th inst., which was the time for their regular monthly meeting, gave a nice supper at the Monroe Hotel in his honor. Sixteen of the eighteen stewards were present, and, besides Brother Means, Brother Lutz, the presiding elder of the district, and Brother Neill, the West Monroe pastor, were in attendance. Some good speeches were made on that occasion."

Colonel James William Nicholson, who for forty years had been connected with the Louisiana State University in various capacities, died at his home in Baton Rouge at 5:15 o'clock a.m. on March 23, following an illness of nearly four weeks. He was born at Tuskegee, Ala., June 16, 1844; was distinguished as a Confederate soldier, and was a brilliant mathematician, having done considerable original work. He was filling the Chair of Mathematics in the State University when stricken with the malady that terminated his life. He was a member of the M. E. Church, South, and was a man of sterling character and high ideals. The obsequies were conducted in Garig Hall, being in charge of Rev. C. A. Battle and Rev. H. W. Bowman. Among the honorary pallbearers were Governor Pleasant; Colonel Boyd, President of the University; Mr. T. H. Harris, State Superintendent of Education, and Colonel I. D. Wall. Colonel Nicholson is survived by three sons and two daughters: Gordon, Malcolm, and Wilbur Fennell Nicholson, all of Houston, Texas; Mrs. Luther Stovall, of Dodson, La., and Mrs. Armand Daspit, of Baton Rouge. Mrs. Nicholson died some years ago.

MR. DANIEL PARKER PASSES AWAY.

Mr. Daniel Parker, of this city, died at his residence, No. 1817 Fourth Street, last Sunday, March 25, about midnight, aged 83 years. He was a Confederate Veteran, having served in the Forty-second Alabama Regiment of the Army of Tennessee. His wife, who departed this life several years ago, was Miss Margaret O'Neal, of New Orleans. Mr. Parker was the father of Rev. George D. Parker, one of our missionaries to Brazil, and Miss Ada Parker, who is well known in Church circles. The other children of the deceased are two sons—Charles and Joseph Parker—and two daughters—Mrs. Fuller and Miss Eva Parker. The obsequies were held Tuesday morning, being conducted by Dr. J. T. Sawyer, Rev. W. W. Holmes, and Rev. R. M. Brown. We extend sympathy to the sorrowing ones, and pray that they may be consciously comforted and sustained by the Holy Spirit.

NOTES FROM THE JACKSON DISTRICT.

Dear Editor: I am handing you a report of the work in the Jackson District during the first quarter. I found the district well organized and splendidly manned, thanks to Rev. P. D. Hardin, the preceding "elder." I entered upon my work on the last Sunday in December, and have not missed a quarterly conference or an appointment. The preachers are all hard at work—some have had sickness, but all are now busy. The official members have planned well for the preachers. There has been an advancement in salaries at some places, and a reduction nowhere. We are now in the midst of our evangelistic campaign and our slogan is, A revival in every charge, and full collections. Rev. W. J. Ferguson is in a meeting with Rev. W. H. Lane in the Rankin Street Church, Jackson. Rev. D. E. Kelly will begin a revival at the Capitol Street Church, Jackson, of which Rev. W. H. Lewis is pastor, next Sunday, March 25; the Lewis quartet will lead the singing.

Dr. W. H. Huntley, with his noble people, is planning to pay the debt on our church at Yazoo City. Lewis, at Canton, is talking about a new church. Ferguson, at Camden, has bought the old Baptist Church and we hope to be housed there soon. Applewhite is delighted at Sharon and Ellis is happy in his work at Lintonia. Campbell is doing well at Benton; Oliver has had some serious sickness, but he also is doing well. Adams, at Flora, is wide awake to the interests of his charge, and McKeown, the Edwards pastor, says that the outlook in his field is fine. Dawson is systematically pushing his work at Bolton; Duke is in much demand as a singer—his work prospers; Herring at Hesterville is doing his best; King at Terry and King at Florence have been hindered by sickness—the people have stood by them.

Fikes, at Brandon, and Yeager, at Fannin, are hard at work, with a view to securing revivals in their charges. Dr. Henry, at Galloway Memorial, is kept busy with his large charge—he serves an appreciative people. Johnson, at Millsaps Memorial, is in great favor with his flock; Lewis, at Madison, is much loved by his people, and is planning for the district conference, soon to meet with him. Young serves a fine people at Satartia, and had made a good start when the "elder" visited him. Vaughan, with Rutledge for pastor, has made the best report for the quarter. We enter the second quarter with confidence, believing that He who watches over us will give us victory.

J. M. MORSE, P. E.

CONCERNING THE MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

On Sunday afternoon during the session of the Woman's Missionary Council, which will convene at First Methodist Church April 12 to 20, there will be a children's rally which will include all children through the second year Intermediate Department of the Sunday schools of the city.

The leading feature of the rally will be a Children's pageant, entitled "God's Pansy Thought for the World."

The various committees for the Council met on Monday, March 19, and gave reports. On Thursday, April 5, the final meeting for preparation will be held at First Church and it will be an all-day meeting. Homes and money are needed for the entertainment of delegates.

The program will be in the hands of the publisher this week and promised to be one of exceeding interest.

One of the most unique and interesting things is to be the exhibit. There are to be eleven rooms where costumes, posters, maps, pictures, work of schools, etc., will be displayed. There will be something from each foreign nation, something from settlement houses, mountain work, etc., and about 150 ladies and young girls from the various churches will assist the missionaries and deaconesses in the display.

MRS. GEORGE S. BROWN.

New Orleans, La.

MRS. JAMES J. SMYLIE.

Dear Brother Meek: Sister Sarah E. Smylie, widow of the late Rev. James J. Smylie, of the Mississippi Conference, died at her home here Tuesday morning, March 20, at 7:50 o'clock. Sister Smylie had just passed her 85th birthday. Brother Smylie died in 1881. Her funeral was held here on Wednesday morning, March 21, the following ministers being associated with the pastor in the service: George H. Thompson, J. T. Leggett, E. C. Gunn, Hilary Westbrook, A. M. Broadfoot, I. L. Peebles, and D. H. Scanlon, pastor First Presbyterian Church. A suitable memorial sketch will doubtless be furnished you later.

LOUISIANA STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

This meeting will be held in Monroe, La., beginning April 16 and ending April 19. A choice program, which includes specialists, has been arranged. The singing will be under the direction of Prof. E. O. Excell. Among the speakers are Prof. Thomas Carter, of Vanderbilt University; Rev. C. G. Murphy, Secretary Congregational Board, Oklahoma City; Mr. W. A. Brown, of the International Sunday School Association. Reduced railroad rates have been secured, and Monroe will entertain free all delegates who register and pay the registration fee of $1. The President of the State Association is Mr. Fritz Salmen, of Slidell; the State Treasurer is Mr. James R. Meyers, and the State Secretary is Mr. Van Carter. One interesting feature of the Convention will he the various exhibits from over the State, material for which should be sent to Mrs. J. B. Mitchell, Monroe, La.

VALUABLE GIFT TO THE LAMAR LAW SCHOOL.

My Dear Dr. Meek: I am glad to inform you that one of the very finest contributions I have received to Emory University is the law library of the late Hon. J. B. Reynolds, consisting of about one thousand volumes. This most excellent contribution was made by the daughters, Misses Mary and Mattie, who expressed much interest in the welfare of this greatest institution of our great Church.

It is very becoming that our people make such contributions as this to the University, and I would like for this worthy example to be emulated by many such gifts. It is stimuating to me to find here and there those who are contributing of their means to Mississippi's memorial to Justice Lamar, and it is gratifying to me to say that I am receiving every courtesy from the preachers and people of Mississippi. I have not missed a single Sunday this Conference year, and the work is growing with those who hear about Emory.

Yours very sincerely,

Jackson, Miss. ROB'T SELBY.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Mississippi Conference Epworth Leagues:

This is to remind you that our Conference is drawing near, and to urge all who have not done so to collect and send to me at the earliest date possible your subscription to the "African Special" Fund. Only a small number have sent in on this fund. Also to remit to me your Conference assessment and your Chapter Membership Fee. The program for the conference at Columbia, June 7-10, has been prepared. It will be great, and we must have funds to finance the work. Let every member begin now to talk up the Conference and make plans to go.

L. F. ALFORD,
Treas. Miss. Conf. Epworth League.

CHANGE IN QUARTERLY CONFERENCE DATES.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, has announced the following changes in his quarterly conference appointments: Merryville, April 23, instead of April 17; Oakdale, April 24, instead of April 22 and 23; Glenmora and McNary, at McNary, April 25, instead of April 24; Lecompte and Cheneyville, at Lecompte, May 22, instead of May 15.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slighest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles as the prescription othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. Otherwise the obituaries will, without correspondence about them, be edited down to 200 words. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

On March 15, 1917, the death angel came into the home of Brother and Sister L. A. Tate and summoned their only son, KLYCE, to his home above. The death was indeed a shock to the community. Klyce had had the measles and it was thought that he was well, when he took sick and very suddenly passed away. Klyce was a member of the Methodist Church at Union Hill, and he was indeed a Christian. He was a regular attendant of the Sunday school and took a marked interest in Church work for one of his strength. He was always afflicted. To know him was to love him. He was 18 years and 3 days old. He leaves his father, mother, and three sisters to mourn his death. My mesage to the bereaved family is, Weep not; Klyce is not afflicted in yonder world, but he has on the robes of Christ's righteousness.

C. A. NORTHINGTON.

Mrs. SALLIE RICHEY HERON was born near Carpenter, Miss., on Jan. 10, 1879, and departed this life on Feb. 12, 1917. She joined the Methodist Church, South, at Burtonton, Miss., when she was but ten years old, and lived a consistent member until she was transferred to the Church above. She was not only a consistent church member, but she was an active church worker, being one of the leading spirits in the Methodist Church at Carpenter, Miss., at the time of her demise. Mrs. Heron was married to Mr. K. B. Heron, on December 23, 1897. To her and her husband were born four sons and one daughter, all of whom, with their father, still live. These with three brothers, and three sisters of the deceased, and a host of other relatives and friends mourn the loss of a devoted wife, loving mother, faithful friend, and devout Christian. About three o'clock in the afternoon of February 13, assisted by Rev. B. W. Lewis, pastor of the Utica Methodist Church, we laid the body to rest, while a host of friends attended the funeral services. Heaven is made richer, but earth much poorer, by her going.

Her pastor, J. W. O'NEIL.

Mrs. MARY SUSAN LEDYARD was born on Dec. 21, 1857. When but two years of age, she moved with her parents to Shubuta, where she lived till the day of her death on Nov. 23, 1916. She was converted in early life and united with the Methodist Church at the age of twelve. On October 28, 1886, she was united in marriage to Thomas A. Ledyard. For thirty years they shared life together—loved and helped each other. Their devotion to each other was ideal and beautiful to see. Three children blessed their union, and no children ever had a better mother. She was equally devoted to Brother Ledyard's children by a former marriage. All the old-time chivalry, tender affection, and loving regard for each other that characterize an ideal family life blossomed in this happy home. Mrs. Ledyard was a devoted Christian who loved the hour and place of worship, and gladly welcomed the visits of her pastor. During her long illness she was patient and resigned, ever appreciative of every act of kindness and word of sympathy. Her frail body was laid to rest in Shubuta Cemetery, but she, herself, lives with Christ, for "of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

OSMOND S. LEWIS.

WILLIAM THOMAS GLATHARY was born at Lake Providence, La., on April 4, 1849. He came to the Avon community, Washington County, Mississippi, as a small child, where he resided until his death on March 12, 1917. He was twice married: first to Miss Ella McElroy, of Jackson Parish, La.; second to Miss Ida Kidd (also of Jackson Parish), who survives him. There was one child by the first marriage, Nannie Glathary Jochem, who also survives the deceased. There were no children by the second marriage. The deceased came from one of the old and highly respected families of Washington County. He was reared by a consecrated Methodist mother; and, while he did not join the Church in early life, he learned to love and respect his mother's Church and religion. He was a friend to Methodist preachers, and his home was the preacher's home. It was the writer's privilege to receive him into the Church last summer, and he was serving as steward at the time of his death. He was a kind and thoughtful husband and enjoyed a large circle of loyal friends. Funeral services were conducted at the home, and the remains shipped to Greenville, Miss., for interment.

A. T. McILWAIN, Pastor.

J. W. CALDWELL was born in Clay County, Alabama, on Sept. 15, 1861. His father having passed away during the Civil War, leaving a wife and two small boys to provide for, it was necessary for Brother Caldwell at an early age to help support the family. On Sunday morning, Feb. 18, 1917, the Heavenly Father saw fit to summon our brother and friend from this world of sorrow and care to the Celestial City. In the death of Brother Caldwell the church to which he belonged has lost one of its best officers and members, and the community one of its best citizens. He was a steward in the M. E. Church, South, at Bernice, La., where he lived the last two years of his life; in that office of the Church he proved faithful, not only in the business work of the church, but by his liberality, his regular attendance at the church services, and his cheerfulness, he did much to commend religion to our town and community. The deceased leaves a mother, brother, wife, and six children. Our heart goes out in sympathy to those loved ones who are left to mourn his departure; but, thanks be unto God, through Jesus Christ, we can all meet him in the beautiful beyond.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

From the Field

Winona Ct., N. Miss. Conf.

We are getting on nicely with our work in Winona Circuit. The people, as well as the preacher, seem to have a greater determination to bring things to pass than ever before. We have as fine people to serve here as any man ever served. We were struck hard here last year by the wet weather and boll weevils, but our people are loyal to the Church and we are expecting 1917 to be a great year along all lines. Pray for us, that the Lord may use us in the salvation of many souls this year.—W. J. Wood, P. C.

Hesterville Circuit, N. Miss. Conf.

The good people of this circuit have started this year with a determination to do better in every way than they have ever done. We have held our first quarterly conference and the finances are about double what they were at this time last year. Brother W. W. Mitchell was with us, and, in spite of the fact that he got his Bible and sermons wet, preached a true Methodist sermon. In crossing a creek he left his buggy in the creek and came out on horseback. He will now know how to sympathize with his circuit riders. We have four new prayer meetings, which meet weekly. As the newness has not yet worn off, there is a good attendance and interest. We also have a new Epworth League that promises to be a great aid to our church. Everything here seems in advance of last year except the preacher and the roads, but both may improve with the coming of spring.—S. F. Harkey, P. C.

Oak Ridge, Miss.

Dear Advocate: On March 17 our first quarterly conference convened at Oak Ridge and it was a success. Brother Sharbrough gave us a great sermon in the forenoon from 1 Cor. 2:9 and 10. it was, indeed, a great sermon, so reeognized by all who heard it. The women of Oak Ridge and vicinity did themselves credit in feeding those present bountifully—a characteristic of theirs—and we thank them heartily. The conference, in the afternoon, was well attended, all things considered, and we had good spiritual and financial reports, for which we devoutly thank God. Brother Sharbrough preached three more good sermons the following Sunday, which were conducive to the coming revival. All of them had the evangelistic note and made it much easier for the pastor to do "the work of an evangelist."

Not long since there came to me in my secret devotions a goal for our charge, viz.: "A revival in every church and all the assessments in full." It came suddenly and has grown on me ever since. I know in order to see this goal realized it means hard work and "kneeology," and I know also that it will mean the harmonious adjustment of all other phases of church work and general progress along all lines. Who will pray for me and the work every day—for the realization of this goal? I have only 15 appointments a month, so I MUST have help. When Wilson was inaugurated the second time, he kissed the following Scripture: "God is our refuge and strength and a very present help in the time of trouble." This incident indicates where our President expects to receive help in national trouble. The same God that President Wilson looks to for help in the present world-struggle will send a revival to every church in Oak Ridge charge and put it into the hearts of the people to pay the assessments in full—if—Oh, that the conditions may be met!

In prayer and faith.

MOUNT PLEASANT CHARGE BEREAVED.

Dear Dr. Meek: It is with sadness that we chronicle the deaths of three of the oldest and most revered members of the Mt. Pleasant charge within the last few days.

Brother D. E. CURL, who died on the morning of March 3, 1917, was born on June 6, 1820, and so when he passed away he was 96 years, 8 months, and 27 days old. He joined the Church a number of years ago, and will be greatly missed in the Mt. Pleasant church, as well as in his home and among his many friends. He leaves a devoted wife, seven children, quite a number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren, together with a host of friends, to mourn his decease. When the last sad rites of the Church were said to his memory, his Masonic brethren took charge of the remains, and, after the regular ritualistic service, they were laid away to await the summons of the Grand Master of the Universe.

Brother M. P. BALLARD was born on January 5, 1836, and died March 5, 1917. He was a member of the Church for more than 40 years, and during a greater part of the time he was a steward. While he has gone to his reward, truly, as was said of one of old, "his works do follow him." He, too, leaves a devoted wife, a number of children and grandchildren, together with a great many warm, personal friends, to mourn their loss. Surely, when one has been taken who has served his God, his Church, and his generation as faithfully as Brother Ballard had, it must be true that thereby "Heaven is made a great deal richer and earth much poorer." The community has lost a good citizen, the Church a devout worshiper, and the family a faithful loved one. We laid the body in the New Salem Cemetery to await the resurrection of the just.

Sister SALLIE JONES, who for a little more than 78 years lived in the community, a true friend, a devout mother, and a consecrated Christian, was called to her reward on the evening of March 5, and was buried the following day in the New Salem graveyard, where a host of loving friends congregated to pay the last sad rites to Aunt Sallie's memory. She will be greatly missed by her friends and loved ones, though they all have the assurance of meeting her again in the sweet by-and-by, if they are only as faithful in service as she was.

We commend all these sorrowing loved ones to the compassionate Heavenly Father, praying that he may grant them his sustaining grace.

M. A. BURNS, Pastor.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush kidneys if bladder bothers you.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness and bladder irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Ford Car FREE For Your Pastor

Give your Pastor a Ford Car without a cent of cost to you or him.

This offer is open to your Church or any other Church, big or little. Churches, Bible Classes, Sunday Schools, and Ladies' Societies all over the South are taking advantage of our liberal plan to get a Ford for their Pastor, to aid him in his work. Some that started only two or three months ago already have their car, and are finding it a great aid and stimulus to church work.

We Will Help You

That is another generous part of our offer. Read what the committee from one of the Richmond, Va., churches wrote us:

"We hardly know how to thank you for making possible free automobiles for the churches. We realize that our pastor would hardly have had his Ford today, if it hadn't been for you and your most liberal concessions."

Write Today For Details.

Don't wait for someone else to write. You be the first to write for your church. Simply fill in the coupon or send a post card. You, and all you speak to, will be delighted to see how easily and quickly you can get the car for your church without costing you a cent. If you answer this at once, you will get the additional benefit of our Special Concession which we are offering for a short time only.

A GREAT REVIVAL AT LELAND, MISS.

Dear Advocate: Rev. Robert A. Clark, of Covington, Tenn., and Miss Juliet Featherstun, of Port Gibson, have been with us two weeks in what has been pronounced by some to be the most sweeping revival held in this section of the delta for twenty-five years.

"Our Bob" did the preaching in that effective way in which he is so capable, earnest and powerful. Miss Featherstun is the accomplished daughter of Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, of the Mississippi Conference, and as director of the choir and congregational singing, rendered valuable assistance, in addition to her splendid solo work.

The City Attorney, an influential lawyer, the ex-City Marshal (61 years of age), with about eighteen others, most of whom are strong men and women, joined the Methodist Church during the meeting, and the entire citizenship of the town and community was reached and strengthened most gratifyingly. The other church people attended every service and co-operated in the meeting, and are loud in their expressions of appreciation of such a revival and what it means to the community.

Bob Clark is a preacher of whom Mississippi is justly proud. He preached a bottomless hell, a glorious heaven, and emphasized the importance of consecrated living. Every department of the church is stronger than before, and the pastor and people helped. The meeting closed to-day.

Don't let any one tell you that the Gospel has lost its dynamic power and that a great revival can't be held in the Delta. Our meeting is a mighty evidence that the Gospel is still effective in saving men, and that people in the Delta are just as responsive and appreciative of the "old, old story" as are the people elsewhere. Our people had been praying for such a meeting, and God was with us.

E. H. CUNNINGHAM.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

Wash away all the stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside; no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day a glass of hot water with a tablespoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter-pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment and above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

MISS RUSH'S RECITAL.

(From the Brookhaven Leader.)

Miss Leslie Vaughan Rush, pupil in piano of Miss Lois Cooper of Whitworth College, gave her graduating recital Saturday evening before an audience larger than those which usually greet the first senior recital of the year.

Miss Rush's performance gave evidence of good musical taste, fine application and excellent training. Her talent showed to best advantage, perhaps, in the group of compositions by modern composers, and in Godard's Introduction and Allegro, Opus 49, with its rich orchestral accompaniment on second piano by Miss Cooper. The program was well chosen and ambitious.

She received numerous lovely floral tributes of hot-house roses and carnations.

Miss Rush graduated last year in the literary department of Whitworth, and with the completion this session of the music course, she will rank as one of Whitworth's best equipped graduates.

The achievements of Whitworth's young senior students in music should be an inspiration to every music pupil and music lover of our community, and those who fail to attend the recitals miss the best opportunity offered the public to increase their musical appreciation.

Whitworth's music department is doing a splendid service to the State in sending out each session several splendidly trained young pianists, and no better musical advantages are to be had in Mississippi.

Second and Third Application of Fertilizers.

According to Dr. R. J. H. DeLoach, former director of the Georgia Experiment Station, whose ability is recognized throughout the South, second and third applications of commercial fertilizer pays in almost every case and should generally be recommended. Almost every Agricultural Experiment Station where commercial fertilizers have played any part in the experimental work, recommends the second application. The great success with which the Boys Corn Clubs have met in their club work proves very clearly the importance of making the second and even the third application of fertilizers.

Since the second application of fertilizers comes about the time when there is not very much farm work to do, it costs very little extra labor to make it. All the mid-summer planting is over, and the heaviest of the cultivating is past.

Farmers who have made a practice of intensive farming always favor the second and third applications, the idea being to feed the plant throughout its growing period.

FROM BROTHER NORSWORTHY.

My Dear Mr. Editor: Here I am away down in "The Land of Flowers and Sunshine." We are nearing the end of a very successful revival campaign here in Haines City. The good Lord has been with us most graciously. At the close of this campaign, I will return to Mississippi to meet engagements there. Please allow me to say to the brethren in the territory reached by the Advocate that I have some open dates in the early part of the year which I would be very glad to give to places where my services may be needed. My time is unoccupied until the third Sunday in April. My address is still Yazoo City, Miss.

With love for all the brethren and best wishes for the Advocate, I am,

THOS. J. NORSWORTHY.

Haines City, Fla.

IT STOPS CROUP

The safest thing for a scared mother to have on hand for croup is a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar. It stops croup by cutting the thick choking membrane and raising the phlegm; by easing the hoarse, tight breathing, by leaving a soothing coating on the inflamed lining of the throat and stopping the hoarse cough. Mrs. T. Neureurer, Eau Claire, Wis., says: "Foley's Honey and Tar cured my boy of a very severe attack of croup after other remedies had failed. I recommend it as we know from our own experience that it is a wonderful remedy for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough." Your dealer sells it. Try it.

ALUMNI COMMENCEMENT AT MERIDIAN COLLEGE.

The student and faculty of Meridian College, Meridian, Miss., are planning for a great reunion of its former students at Commencement, May 27 to 29. It is urged that all former students of both the male College and Woman's College make their plans to attend this reunion. Free entertainment is being sought for all who come and a great time is expected. Both the Commencement Sermon and Baccalaureate Address will be delivered by alumni of the College and some programs will be given by graduates and former students. Every former student is requested to remember the date and come if possible. Names should be sent in advance so that free entertainment can be arranged.

This has been the most prosperous session the College has had for many years, and a great reunion is earnestly desired. Send names to C. V. McKee, President Alumni Association, or J. W. Beeson, President of College, Meridian, Miss.

Dry, Hoarse or Painful Coughs Quickly Ended

Home-Made Remedy that Saves You $2—Does the Work Thoroughly.

The prompt and positive action of this simple, inexpensive home-made remedy in quickly healing the inflamed or swollen membranes of the throat, chest or bronchial tubes and breaking up tight coughs, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. You then have a full pint—a family supply—of a much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is known the world over for its promptness, ease and certainty in overcoming stubborn coughs and chest colds.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., 235 Main St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

It is claimed that at a small cost one can get a quarter of an ounce of freezone at any drug store, which is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This new drug is an ether compound, and while sticky, dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue.

This announcement will interest many women here, for it is said that the present high-heel footwear is putting corns on practically every woman's feet.

ENTHUSIASTIC PRAISE FOR WELL KNOWN MEDICINE

My customers tell me that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is all right and if my patrons are satisfied with the benefits derived from its use I am confident that it is a preparation of merit. In liver trouble it has proven to be a very valuable medicine according to reports received. It has been in my store ever since it came to New Orleans and I have never had any reason to feel that it was not a valuable article on my shelves.

Very truly yours,
ADOLPH BERENDSOHN,
Druggist,
736 S. Rampart Street,
Sept. 29, 1916. New Orleans, La.

Letter to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Prove What Swamp-Root Will Do For You.

Send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample size bottle. It will convince anyone. You will also receive a booklet of valuable information, telling about the kidneys and bladder. When writing, be sure and mention the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles for sale at all drug stores.

WHAT IS

LAX-FOS

LAX-FOS IS AN IMPROVED CASCARA

A DIGESTIVE LAXATIVE

CATHARTIC AND LIVER TONIC

LAX-FOS is not a Secret or Patent Medicine but is composed of the following old-fashioned roots and herbs:

CASCARA BARK
BLUE FLAG ROOT
RHUBARB ROOT
BLACK ROOT
MAY APPLE ROOT
SENNA LEAVES
AND PEPSIN

In LAX-FOS the CASCARA is improved by the addition of these digestive ingredients making it better than ordinary CASCARA, and thus the combination acts not only as a stimulating laxative and cathartic but also as a digestive and liver tonic. Syrup laxatives are weak, but LAX-FOS combines strength with palatable, aromatic taste and does not gripe or disturb the stomach. One bottle will prove LAX-FOS is invaluable for Constipation, Indigestion or Torpid Liver. Price 50c.

HEADACHES

Thousands of men and women suffer from headaches every day, other thousands have headaches every week or every month, and still others have headaches occasionally, but not at regular intervals. The best Doctor is often unable to find the cause of many of these headaches, and in most other cases, knowing the cause, he does not know what will remove it, so as to give a permanent cure. All he can do is to prescribe the usual pain relievers, which give temporary relief, but the headache returns as usual, and treatment is again necessary. If you suffer from headaches and have been unable to remove the cause, take anti-kamnia tablets, and obtain the greatest possible relief. You can obtain them at all druggists in any quantity, 10c worth, 25c worth or more. Ask for A-K Tablets.

SICK-HEADACHES

Sick headache, the most miserable of all sickness, loses its terrors when A-K Tablets are taken. When you feel an attack coming on take two tablets, and in many cases, the attack will be warded off. During an attack take one A-K Tablet every two hours. The rest and comfort which follow, can be obtained in no other way.

Freckles

To remove freckles the best thing to do is to remove the outer cuticle of the skin, which carries the freckles. This is easily done with Kintho Cream. The Kintho should peel off the old, freckled skin, a little at a time, gradually bringing the under layer of skin to view. The new skin is beautiful, soft, clear, white and youthful looking and, of course, should have no freckles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed. Read carefully special instructions inside of box.

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 6403 Reefer Building, Kansas City, Mo., is giving away free a valuable book entitled, "White Diarrhoea and How to Cure It." This book contains scientific facts on white diarrhoea and tells how to prepare a simple home solution that cures this terrible disease over night and actually raises 98 per cent of every hatch. All poultry raisers should certainly write Mr. Reefer for one of these valuable FREE books.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The Woman's Missionary Council convenes at First Church, New Orleans, April 12-20. Great preparations are being made for this meeting, and not only will a royal reception be accorded all visitors, hut a wonderful inspiration will be gained from attendance upon the deliberations of the women as well as from the stirring addresses which will be delivered at the evening sessions. Our Council officers are gifted in the art of public speaking, and each officer will come with a message full of enthusiasm and information about her special line of work. Deaconesses, missionaries, our Bishop Lambuth, and some national speakers will all be gathered there. Truly, it is the opportunity of a lifetime; so do not miss it.

COUNCIL DAILY.

As usual, this little paper will be published during the Council meeting and no missionary worker can afford to be without it. It contains the choicest gleanings from each day's sessions, and the price is only twenty-five cents. Send your subscriptions to Mrs. S. A. Montgomery, 7926 Elm Street, New Orleans.

REPORT OF THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL MEETING AT CROWLEY.

The seventh annual meeting of the Louisiana Conference Woman's Missionary Society, held in the First Methodist Church in Crowley, was a marked success—a time long to be remembered, for this year, as never before, the eyes of the whole Southern Church are on Louisiana. All good things were ours—beautiful weather, neither cold nor rainy, a cordial welcome, and a wise management that had prepared for every wish and need. Crowley means much to Methodism, and, from the way Crowley welcomed the Conference, we believe Methodism and the Woman's work mean much to Crowley.

The session began on Monday night, with a partaking of the Sacrament, and it was a fitting way to begin this time of holy communion and active service for the Master for the next three days. Rev. N. E. Joyner, a returned missionary from Mexico, spoke of the work there. His pleas for that bleeding country are always stirring and earnest.

Tuesday morning the regular business of the meeting was taken up and the reports of officers were given. It was a noticeable thing how happy and hopeful these reports were. There have been losses, but there have also been great gains. As you listened to these reports, you could see how much stronger each officer's faith had grown in this work for Him during this year, and each one had an aggressive plan for further growth. The Bible half-hour was conducted by Deaconess Mary Deizendorf, from Detroit, Mich.

On Tuesday afternoon the superintendents of mission study, social service, and supplies made their reports. Many of our auxiliaries have active mission study classes, but are not reporting, and this failure to report was discussed and brought out in Mrs. Ledbetter's report. Deaconess Gatewood spoke on "The Missionary Society as an Evangelistic Agency," showing how through this channel the women are becoming a strong arm of evangelism in the Church to-day.

On Tuesday evening the French mission work was presented by Deaconess Walker. She told why this was such an important time to enlarge and develop this wonderful field. This work lies very close to every Louisiana woman's heart and we long to go in and possess this fair land. Miss Janie Watkins, from Soochow, China, in such an interesting way told us of her life and labors as a teacher for twelve years in the Laura Haygood School in Soochow. She wished that she could make us understand the change that has come to China in those twelve years—from Monarchy to Republic, from three thousand years of sleep in darkness and death to light and life. The door to the Chinese heart is wide open, from the coolie to the cultured government officials. Now is our opportunity to make China positively Christian.

Wednesday morning was given over to the reports of the District Secretaries. There is always something thrilling in these reports. The District Secretary's report shows whether we shall go on to conquer or remain in camp. Every district reported the pledge paid in full, except one. Many times these women's voices would tremble as they closed their reports, knowing, as they did, the sacrifice and loving service of many unknown women who had made their final reports possible.

Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb spoke on the unfinished task. She said the work in our local auxiliaries would never be finished until every woman and child in the Church was a member of the Missionary Society. They should be asked to join the missionary society, not because it needs them, but because they cannot afford to miss it. Mrs. Lipscomb gave the devotional Bible lessons, which were most helpful and inspirational. She told of how Christ had trusted us so as to admit us to his friendship and into all his secrets. These Bible lessons drew us up close to the great loving heart of God. In the last one, Mrs. Lipscomb made the women present realize how much it cost Christ to win us and how we ought to suffer with him in bringing many souls to know of the fullness of his love.

Wednesday afternoon was given over to the Young People's and children's Institutes. The young people of Crowley had a nice program, and Miss Janie Watkins of China spoke to them of her work for young girls in Soochow. The Juveniles met in separate session and Mrs. Lipscomb told them of how she treasured the letters written her by them. Miss Watkins sang for them in Chinese, and Miss Gibson and Mrs. Herr told them of the little children in New Orleans and how the Juveniles in Crowley could help them. At the close of this session the friends in Crowley came in their cars and took all of the delegates for an auto ride. Here many of them saw their first rice plantations.

On Wednesday evening Deaconess Helen Gibson spoke of the work at St. Mark's, New Orleans. Our opportunity for helping is limited only by our lack of workers and adequate buildings; for instance, the deaconesses use one room for the office in the morning; it is a meeting place for the clinic in the afternoon and a boys' play room at night. They need a separate church building so that the first floor of the present building could be open to the public for parlors and social rooms. Mr. Stockwell, for three years in our mission in Africa, gave a stereopticon lecture on the work there. These pictures taken by Mr. Stockwell, give a view that we never could have had if he had simply told us—"they spoke for themselves" of the need of the African for the Gospel.

On Thursday morning Mrs. E. W. Herr gave a report of the work being done for "the other half" by Mary Werlein Mission. Then came the pledge hour. There is always a sacred hush before this time. It is an impressive sight to see the District Secretary stand and the delegates of her district with her, and all together make their pledge. In each district there was a definite plan for the extension of the work. Each district pledged seven new missionary societies, seven boxes of supplies, one hundred new members, 75 per cent of the auxiliaries observing the week of prayer, seven new mission study classes, and seven auxiliaries doing definite social service work. The Executive Committee had hoped to have the Conference pledge amount to $5000 this year, and when all the pledges by districts were in they found the total was $5450, and the women sang "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, New Orleans; First Vice President, Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, Natchitoches; Second Vice President, Mrs. R. H. Harper, New Orleans; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. A. P. Holt, Crowley; Recording Secretary, Mrs. W. A. Bell, Lake Charles; Treasurer, Mrs. J. J. Holmes, Minden; Superintendent of Study and Publicity, Mrs. Wiltz Ledbetter, Shreveport; Superintendent of Social Service, Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, Lafayette; Sperintendent of Supplies, Mrs. H. L. Baker, Plattenville.

The following are the District Secretaries: Alexandria District, Mrs. R. W. Winstead, Natchitoches; Baton Rouge District, Mrs. J. E. Walter, Wilson; Lafayette District, Mrs. W. M. Buchanan, Lake Arthur; Monroe District, Mrs. J. C. Calhoun, Rayville; New Orleans District, open as yet; Ruston District, Mrs. Jos. Miller, Minden; Shreveport District, Mrs. Ben Johnson, Mansfield.

There was some real excitement over the next place of meeting. The contest lay between Baton Rouge and First Church, Shreveport, but by a majority vote the body decided for Shreveport in 1918.

The meeting throughout was marked by a serious, conscientious sense of responsibility, and a hopeful, earnest desire to meet this duty in Christ's name and for his honor and glory.

Mrs. W. T. Cunningham and Mrs. R. H. Harper are alternates to the Council Meeting. GRACE GATEWOOD.

IF YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups.

HOW MRS. BEAN MET THE CRISIS

Carried Safely Through Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Nashville, Tenn.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I had a tumor as large as a child's head. The doctor said it was three years coming and gave me medicine for it until I was called away from the city for some time. Of course I could not go to him then, so my sister-in-law told me that she thought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure it. ● It helped both the Change of Life and the tumor and when I got home I did not need the doctor. I took the Pinkham remedies until the tumor was gone, the doctor said, and I have not felt it since. I tell every one how I was cured. If this letter will help others you are welcome to use it." —Mrs. E. H. Bean, 525 Joseph Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a pure remedy containing the extractive properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, meets the needs of woman's system at this critical period of her life. Try it.

If there is any symptom in your case which puzzles you, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Died of Premature Old Age!

(BY V. M. PIERCE, M. D.)

How many times we hear of comparatively young persons passing away when they should have lived to be 70 or 80 years of age. This fatal work is usually attributed to the kidneys, as, when the kidneys degenerate, it causes auto-intoxication. The more injurious the poisons passing thru the kidneys, the quicker will those noble organs be degenerated, and the sooner they decay.

To prevent premature old age and promote long life, lighten the work of the kidneys by drinking plenty of pure water all day long, and occasionally taking a little Anuric before meals. This can be obtained at almost any drug store. Anuric will overcome such conditions as rheumatism, dropsical swellings, cold extremities, scalding and burning urine and sleeplessness due to constant arising.

YOU GET STRONG, if you're a tired-out or "run-down" woman, with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. And, if you suffer from any "female complaint" or disorder, you get well. For these two things—to build up women's strength, and to cure women's ailments—this is the best medicine to benefit or cure.

The "Prescription" regulates and promotes all the natural functions, never conflicts with them, and is perfectly harmless in any condition of the female system. It brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor.

If you eat the right foods, and not too much of them, the poisons in your system can be kept down and thrown out by taking a natural laxative, such as that composed of May-apple, juice of aloes, root of jalap, sugar-coated, and long sold by all druggists as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Get them to-day.

To Drive Out Malaria And Build Up The System

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS chill TONIC. You know what you are taking, as the formula is printed on every label, showing it is Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form. The Quinine drives out malaria, the Iron builds up the system. 50c.

What a great thing it would be if, after losing our tempers, some of us couldn't find them again.—Columbia State.

A clear brain and healthy body are needful for success. Thinness, pimples, constipation, sick headaches, nervousness, dizziness, biliousness, and other disorders are ill-will, dissipation, drives them appetite and strength, and makes their work seem easy. It overcomes that tired feeling.

The spirit of delight comes often on small wings.—R. L. Stevenson.

CALOMEL SELDOM SOLD HERE NOW

Nasty drug salivates, makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling-off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and to-morrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Executive Committee of the Sunday School Board, at a recent meeting, selected Durant as the place to hold the first Conference Federation of Wesley Bible Classes. September 4, 5, 6, will probably be the time. Now is the time for the District Superintendents of the Wesley Bible Class and other organized classes to get busy and organize in every school within fifty miles of Durant, that we may have at least three hundred to attend this first meeting.

Another piece of good news! The Executive Committee expects to have a Conference Elementary Superintendent in the field within the next two months to give her entire time to this important work. Every Conference in the Gulf Division now has such a worker.

TEACHER-TRAINING ENROLLMENT.

The enrollment of classes and students in the teacher-training course of our Church for the period from January 20 to February 20 for the Conferences of the Gulf Division was as follows:

Alabama Conference—one class, at Abbeville, with 12 students; two individual students.

Little Rock Conference—three classes, at Cato, Malvern and Pine Bluff, with 49 students.

Louisiana Conference—one class, at Baton Rouge, with 13 students.

Mississippi Conference—one class, at Lorena, with 11 students; one individual student.

North Alabama Conference—nine classes, at Birmingham (3), Henagar, Oxford, Ohatchee, Cullman (2), and Haleyville, with 162 students; two individual students.

North Arkansas Conference—one class, at Marion, with 10 students.

North Mississippi Conference—four classes, at Carrollton, Courtland, Mineral Wells, and Sardis, with 36 students.

The total for the Division—20 classes and 298 students.

Aggregate for the whole Church—67 classes and 842 students.

Thus almost one-third of the classes and more than one-third of the students were enrolled from the Gulf Division.

The Conference having the largest number of classes enrolled was the Texas Conference with 11 classes; the one with the largest number of students was the North Alabama Conference with 164.

Diplomas were granted in the Gulf Division as follows: one First Course each at Cortelyou in the Alabama Conference and at Buckner in the Louisiana Conference.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Cure Sick Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath—Candy Cathartic.

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels—you always get relief with Cascarets. They immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet and head clear for months. They work while you sleep.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, the angel of death has visited our community and called from our midst, our true friend, our Sunday school superintendent and steward, Mr. L. P. BELL; and

Whereas in his taking away, we feel that the community, and especially the Methodist Church and Sunday school, have suffered a great loss; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, the officers, teachers and members of the Methodist Church and Sunday school at West, Miss., will cherish his memory and endeavor faithfully to carry forward the work that he loved so well.

2. That we bow submissively to the Master's will, believing that "He doeth all things well." Our hearts are saddened by his going, but we rejoice in the hope of meeting him again in that home where there is no parting.

3. That we extend to his bereaved family our sincere sympathy, and pray that God's grace may be sufficient and that his Spirit may comfort them in this sad hour.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of our Church and Sunday school, and that copies be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Lexington Advertiser for publication.

A NOTE FROM HATTIESBURG.

Dear Brother Meek: I write you these few lines to let you know that I am still confined to my bed. I have been here in bed between six and seven months. I have been afflicted with malarial fever and kidney and bladder trouble. If you remember, I wrote you at Conference time about my condition. I still see my way clear, if God should see fit to take me. I think I am holding my own, but am improving very slowly.

I wish to say that Rev. W. B. Jones, our presiding elder, has made a fine beginning on the Hattiesburg District, and that Brother Paul D. Hardin has captured his people here at Main Street Church. He is doing good work, and every one likes him. Rev. P. H. Howse, the Hattiesburg District evangelist, is making as good a beginning as the weather will permit in the rural sections. The people are delighted with his preaching. Rev. W. A. Terry is holding a protracted meeting here at the Broad Street Church. Brother Bennett, one of our Conference evangelists, is doing the preaching. The people speak as though they are having a grand meeting, and the best of preaching. Brother Adams, at Court Street, is getting on nicely, and is doing a great work. He has an excellent people.

Please announce that my address is 307 Mabel street, Hattiesburg, Miss. May God bless you in your great work. I am always glad to get our Advocate and read it. It does me good.

Your brother in Christ,
L. J. JONES.

PALPITATION AND OTHER DISORDERS OF THE HEART.

Weak hearts are exceedingly common. Directly you are conscious of the fact that you have a heart, it means that your heart is not acting normally and that it needs attention.

Every time your heart misses a beat its efficiency is lessened.

Heart trouble, taken in its early stages, may not be difficult to relieve; but the more the treatment is delayed the harder it is to obtain permanent relief. If there is the slightest symptom to show that your heart is weak or diseased you should not delay taking treatment.

Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment has been the popular choice for more than twenty years. It has stood the test of time in a manner that forbids any doubt as to its efficiency. People who praised this remedy twenty years ago still believe in it and are only too glad to state that the trouble has never returned.

Any of these symptoms may indicate heart trouble: Shortness of Breath, Fluttering or Palpitation; Choking Sensation; Irregular Pulse; Weak or Hungry Spells, Swelling of Feet or Ankles, Pain under the Left Shoulder Blade.

If you notice any of these symptoms get a bottle of Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment. You risk nothing, for if the first bottle fails to benefit you, you have only to return the empty bottle to your druggist and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

The quickest and surest way to deprive the hair of its original luster is to leave it alone to look out for itself. Each separate hair is an individual delicate structure in itself and every hair on your head, in order to contribute its share of beauty should be perfectly fed with the natural hair oil, which comprises its food. Starve your hair and, like anything else, it will die. Feed your hair with nature's hair food, "La Creole." This excellent hair food, first discovered by the Creoles of Louisiana fifty years ago and preserved by them, proved a treatment from which sprang their reputation for beautiful hair. It has since been offered the public and has served to beautify the hair of thousands of the tasteful and fastidious.

"Christ is risen! Cross and tomb
Sink behind in passing gloom;
From these shadows, drear and dim,
We must rise and live with him."

For a Christian, every week should be "a holy week."

There is a humanitarian philanthropy which in its ministrations sees only the physical man. Christian philanthropy in its work has in view both the body and the soul.

We do not take to the suggestion of having the conversions that occur in revival meetings reported under the designation, "Decisions." When the Holy Spirit regenerates a human soul it is something more than a "decision" for Christ. We trust that Southern preachers of every class will adhere to our historic revival nomenclature. We know of no good reason for abandoning it.

THE LIVING CHRIST.

The largest asset of the Church has ever been the living Christ. The death of Jesus was a necessity in the great work of saving fallen mankind, but it was not any more so than his resurrection. The cross and the tomb were but stepping stones toward the mighty achievement that the eternal Son of God had in view. Having become incarnate, having taught and suffered in the flesh, having died, and having risen from the dead, he had laid broad and deep the foundation of the stupendous scheme of human redemption and stood ready to lead in carrying it forward to a grand consummation. What would have been the use of all this antecedent preparation, made at infinite cost and sacrifice, if the movement had stopped short of actual execution? It would have been like the unfinished tower of which the Master told in one of his great discourses. The LIVING Lord was needed to impart life to men spiritually dead and to lead the infant Church in the fulfillment of the superhuman tasks that lay before it.

To us, it is no wonder that when they saw Jesus hanging dead upon the cross hope died in the hearts of the early disciples. An obscure, hated, and persecuted little band, what could they expect to do without him? Their reliance had been in his wisdom and power, and with that gone, what dependable resource had they left? So far as they could see, all was lost. But the resurrection brought back to them their leader. He was still to be their captain and their coworker. He tarried with them for forty days to give them full assurance of this, and just before he left them upon the slopes of Olivet to ascend on high, he made to them that wonderful utterance, which contains alike the Church's great commission and richest promise: "All power is given to me in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost—teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo! I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

But not only did Christ give the disciples convincing proof that he had risen, but he also gave them a Helper who was to abide with them. In his last utterances before he went to Calvary, he repeatedly referred to the coming of the Comforter, the Holy Ghost, whom he would send, and who would co-operate in the further execution of the work that he had made possible. And after his resurrection, as St. Luke expresses it, he "commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but should wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me." That promise was gloriously fulfilled on the day of Pentecost when the Holy Spirit descended upon them. In explaining the meaning of what took place upon that memorable occasion, St. Peter said: "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we are witnesses. Therefore, being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear." Taken in connection with what had gone before, this coming of the Spirit was Heaven's attestation to the great truth that Jesus had risen and was again in the lofty habitation of Deity, from which he had descended to earth. This was the power that flowed forth from his resurrection and ascension, and, strengthened and enlightened by it, the first Christians rejoiced, and went forth in his name "conquering, and to conquer." When asked the secret of the mighty works that they wrought among men, they invariably connected them with the risen Messiah. He it was who was achieving through them the things that were startling and transforming the world.

Thus it was the LIVING LORD that set the hearts of the Apostles on fire, and it was upon his resurrection, rather than upon his crucifixion, that they put the chief emphasis in their preaching. And it is upon the living Christ that the attention of the Church needs to be most centered in this day. Not because the atonement was not a thing of vast significance—there could have been no deliverance of mankind from sin without it—but because the atonement itself found fruition only in a risen Savior, carrying forward the work for which it was designed to open the way. The cross is the symbol of salvation only because he who died upon it still lives. Joseph's tomb became the cradle of the world's hope not because the body of the dead Christ reposed in it, but because it arose therefrom. He who was dead is alive, and will live for evermore, and the keys of death and hades are in his keeping. Such was the declaration of our glorified Lord himself to St. John upon the barren isle of Patmos.

Nor has Jesus at all laid aside the work for which he became incarnate, for which he lived his earthly life, and for which he died upon "the accursed tree." Toward its accomplishment he is still directing his divine energies. He is humanity's high priest and advocate in the courts of glory, and he is preparing for the redeemed a place in the heavenly world, to which he will finally bring them. And he is head over all things to his Church, and in his leadership is to be found the guarantee of the Church's invincibility. If obedient to his commandments, the Church will be clothed with the power of the Holy Spirit, and nothing can prevail against it. In this day when there is so much confusion, and so many devices are being paraded as possessing well-nigh indispensable merit, the Church needs nothing so much as to lift her eyes to the hills from which has ever come her help and to hearken more faithfully to the voice of her ascended Lord. If we labor in his strength, we shall not toil in vain; if we sacrifice for his cause, rich will be our reward; if we fall asleep in him, sweet will be our awakening, when he shall come again to receive us to himself, that we may share the glories of his everlasting Kingdom.

"I know that my Redeemer lives;
What joy the blest assurance gives!
He lives, he lives, who once was dead;
He lives, my everlasting Head!

"He lives, to bless me with his love;
He lives, to plead for me above;
He lives, my hungry soul to feed;
He lives, to help in time of need.

"He lives, and grants me daily breath;
He lives, and I shall conquer death;
He lives, my mansion to prepare;
He lives, to bring me safely there."

"WAR SUNDAY" IN NEW YORK CHURCHES.

According to The Literary Digest, many of the Protestant Churches in New York were on Sunday, March 11, decorated with United States flags and the services in them were given up to matters pertaining to war with Germany. A referendum vote on a statement endorsing our Government and condemning the course of the German authorities was taken in more than 200 congregations. In Dr. Hillis's Brooklyn church, it was said, a reference to Colonel Theodore Roosevelt brought the congregation to their feet cheering. In the same issue of the Digest it was stated that the Governor of Connecticut had enlisted the churches in that commonwealth "to gather a census of the State's war material in men."

We trust that we scarcely need to say that we consider such proceedings very much out of place for Christian churches. It seems to us if there is any time when ministers should preach searchingly upon themes that relate to the spiritual life, it is on the eve of war, when possibly in a few days or weeks or months some of the persons before them may be dying upon bloody battlefields. Patriotism is not, in our opinion, at so low an ebb in the United States that the Gospel needs to be sidetracked in our pulpits to give it a boost. As citizens, we have six week-days and various avenues through which we may speak for our country—should not the messages in the house of God on the holy Sabbath be for Christ and in the eternal interest of deathless souls?

We write these words being in no sense what is commonly termed a pacifist, and being thoroughly loyal to the present policies of President Wilson.

EASTER OMENS.

By Miss Grace Wilson.

A star swoons in the golden East!
Day dawns fair for the Easter feast.

And once again, out of the gloom,
Life, all lustre, bursts into bloom,

And beaming radiant, reappears
Re-miracled through the ancient years:

Across the world flames a flash of red—
As red as the suffering Christ-blood shed—

And vibrant earth's heart warms to hold
The golden glow of the blossoming mold.

* * * * *

To-day all things that bloom and breathe
With sweet perfumes and flower-colors wreathe.

The pale, shrinking lily, with shimmering rim.
Meekly looks love in remembrance of Him.

Sweet, modest violets, a-pearl with the dew,
Give gladly their incense, though hiding their blue.

Silken-shirred poppies flame crimson and gold—
Passionate pilgrims, that have and will hold

In their rich, flaming beauty at flood
The colors that stained the dark Cross with His blood.

Afar is the attar of flushed roses shed—
Oh, thorns! They bound them so close on his head!—

And thoughtful-eyed pansies to-day are first seen,
As if reverently keeping His memory green;

While sprangled rosemary tells well of the peace
Bought by the Cross, and of sorrow's surcease.

* * * * *

The Easter flowers that in their fragrant beauty blow,
Bring to mind the Easter of the long ago;
And human sonls, weary and sick with loss,
Behold in the flowers' blooming, the symbol of the Cross.

A POET'S FAITH.

Edwin Markham, the poet, once said: "I have grown able to believe in God, and to know in my heart that we are but tools for His using, and that He will not throw us aside in the dust unless we break in His hands and prove useless His purpose."

THE GLORIFIED BODY.

By Dr. Thomas Guthrie.

Who saw the rolling waves stand up a rocky wall; who saw the water of Cana flow out rich purple wine; who saw Lazarus's festering corpse, with health glowing on its cheeks, and its arms enfolding sisters ready to faint with joy, saw nothing to match the change the grave shall work on these smouldering bones. Sown in corruption, they shall rise in incorruption, mortal putting on immortality. How beautiful they shall be! Nevermore shall hoary time write age on a wrinkled brow. The whole terrible troop of diseases cast with sin into hell, the saints shall possess unfading beauty, and enjoy a perpetual youth; a pure soul shall be mated with a worthy partner—a perfect body.

A RESURRECTION CALL.

By Dr. J. H. Jowett.

"The Lord is risen." "Your labor is not in vain in the Lord." Settle down, therefore, tenaciously to the labor of sweetening and beautifying your own life; set to work as you would at an unkempt garden; weed your life; get hold of some weed of hard prejudice and hang on to it steadfastly and immovably until by the power of the living Christ you have got out of the last fiber of the last rootlet and it is cast away to devouring flames. Get hold of some ungainly growth in your life, some mighty unchristian habit, and by the power of the living Christ have it out. March up to some pool of bitterness souring your life like a rancid and unclean pool in the garden of the soul, and by the grace of the risen Lord never rest until that pool is as pure as the "river of the water of life, clear as crystal." But especially go up to that thing in your life, that ugly thing which has mastered you so often that you have begun to think it can never be dislodged. "The Lord is risen." That ugly thing is not the master; have it out, and by the power of the living Lord fling it to the flames of Gehenna, where the fire is never quenched. Inspect every corner of the ruined or disordered garden in your soul and with a tenacity fiercer even than that of death itself resolve that by the power of the risen Lord the garden shall become fair and sweet and beautiful as the paradise of God.

THE CROWNING DAY.

By Bishop E. M. Marvin.

The day will come when the Heavenly Bridegroom will bring his Bride to the Father's house; he is there even now making ready—preparing a place for her before he comes to bring her away. That will be the day of days even in heaven; it has been looked to from the dawn of creation: angel-ministers have been engaged in its preparation; God the Father looks upon the Bride with approval; the last earth-stain has been washed from her garments by the blood of the Lamb; a vast concourse of the sons of Immortality is coming to join in the procession; the frame of nature throughout the universe is to be taken down and built anew, in more perfect forms of beauty and grandeur, in honor of the event; "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God." Then shall he return with the risen and glorified Church; the gates of the celestial city are in sight; they are thrown open; the family of heaven are grouped and waiting; a new feeling of tenderness and interest deepens the sensibilities even of that world; the Church, redeemed with blood, is coming home with her Redeemer, radiant with his glory; nearest his person, and most fully in his likeness of all created things, she is the center of interest and in the place of honor; she was created from his side, and the glory of his nature is upon her brow; she enters, leaning on her Beloved; angels, quivering with delight and eager to do her service, hover about her way; they will bear messages to and fro, swift as lightning; they will sweep the invisible dust of the gold pavement with their wings, before her white-shod feet shall pass; the celestial glory is heightened by the glow of her countenance, as she looks into the face of her Lord; her passing form is mirrored in the sea of glass; the princes and potentates of glory await her coming with their homage; she passes into the palace of the Great King, still leaning on her Lord: the Father smiles; she is at home; the Son takes the throne with the Father; the Bride is with him, throned at his side; all the harps and voices of heaven break forth with a new song, and the music deepens, swells, and vibrates, till the very thrones tremble to the melody; the crown is brought forth—the crown of life; the triumphant hand of her Lord places it on her head: it is gemmed with diamonds, cut at ten thousand angles, every facet flashing back and augmenting the celestial radiance: at the right hand of her king she sits, regnant in beauty, with the port of an empress and the heart of a bride, to reign with him forever; in the Father's house, like a child at home, she shall go in and out, diffusing beauty, and love, and blessedness.

The purposes of God are consummated; created being has reached its highest expression through the agony of the God-man; the Creator sees himself mirrored in the creature, and the glorified Church is the crown and joy of heaven. Even the angels come to a higher destiny in the household of the Bride; they find a deeper joy in her transcendent destiny, and through her find places nearer to the Lord.

Shall we be there, blood-washed, to sin no more? we, so weak, so polluted, now?

Yes, even WE may have hope! But only the power of God can keep us against that day.

THE PEOPLE NOT FOR UNION.

By Rev. W. W. Mitchell,
Presiding Elder of the Durant (Miss.) District.

With Dr. S. A. Steel, I feel we have great reason to rejoice that the Joint Commission on the unification of American Methodism adjourned its first session without making any formal recommendations. I cannot conceive of a wiser ending of the meeting—unless, perchance, they had found it possible to agree to disagree and had adjourned sine die, leaving our perturbed Church to pursue her peaceful course with her usual quiet and confidence.

The hasty adoption and issuance, by the General Conference of Southern Methodism in 1914, of a definite proposition of union with the Northern Methodist Church, the hurried and ardent advocacy of that and other propositions by a few men conspicuous in the administration of the Church's affairs, and the seeming endorsement of the project by some of the Annual Conferences, was in my humble judgment a grievous mistake, extremely hurtful to Southern Methodism. Not only has it filled the minds of a great many of her people with a spirit of unrest, of grave apprehension, and awakened in them serious distrust of many to whom they have been accustomed to look for safe and sane leadership; but it has misled the Northern Church, given her to believe that Southern Methodism is not only ready for union, but really waiting at her door to rush in whenever her supposed wishes are met in the elimination of the Negro from the organic body. That this is at present a prevalent opinion of the Northern Church, no one can deny who reads her periodicals and listens to the utterances of her public speakers. That such an impression is erroneous, no unbiased mind, familiar with the real sentiment of the people of our Church, will deny. With the great majority of our membership, it is not a question of choice between plans proposed or in prospect—they do not want union with the Northern Church on any basis. Hence the strenuous efforts being put forth by certain ultra-spirits in our own and the Northern Church to harmonize the differences and bridge the yawning chasm separating the two bodies find in them no sympathetic response. A representative layman, of education and influence, said to the writer some weeks ago: "If it were possible to eliminate the Negro from the organic body, adjust the constitutional differences, safeguard our autonomy, and arrange satisfactorily the Regional Conferences, there would yet remain one difference unsettled quite sufficient to keep the two bodies apart: Incompatibility of temperament—difference in ideas and ideals."

All thinking men know the two sections have never agreed politically, ecclesiastically, or socially. Hence we are at a loss to understand how any one can think it wise to bring together into one organic body two elements so radically and vitally dissimilar. We know that the elimination of the Negro from the body of the Church would contribute little or nothing toward eradicating the difference of sentiment existing between the two sections on the race question. It would not prevent the Northern people, who always have seemed to operate upon the unqualified assumption that whatever they want is right, from seeking to inculcate Northern sentiment into Southern minds—introducing Northern habits and customs into Southern life. It is universally understood in the South that the only guarantee of white supremacy and sure protection against the amalgamation of the white and black races is the rigid observance of a definite line of social distinction. Hence, our people look with jealous eye upon any measure or movement which threatens to dim or efface that line, to tear down the walls separating white and black station waiting-rooms, to dispense with separate coaches on the railroads, and put black children into white schools. They know, too, that whatever promises the Northern Church might make us as to the observance of the Constitution or preservation of our autonomy, would have to be taken cum grano saltis, as they are now living and operating in open violation of sacred promises made us in the separation of 1844. The people recognize no moral or religious obligation binding them to union with the Northern Methodist Church that is not equally binding upon all Christian denominations, and, so long as the Church is composed of human material and forced to deal with human conditions, no sound-thinking man would want to see it formulated into one vast body, operating under one ecclesiastical head. For he must know, if the light of history teaches anything, it would be an unspiritual and corrupt Church that we would have. They recognize that Christ everywhere enjoins unity of the Spirit, but nowhere uniformity: that he established no definite system for the Church's government, imposed no ritual for her worship. These He left to be adjusted to varied and varying conditions by consecrated men, guided by the Holy Spirit. Nor are they caught by the frequent appeals to denominational pride by parading numbers and magnitude. They are not convinced that the unified Church would be more effective in bringing in the Kingdom of Christ than would the smaller bodies operating separately; nor do they accord to any man, or set of men, the wisdom to determine in advance that such would be the result. They are rather convinced it would be "flying to evils they know not of"—encountering dangers at too great a cost. Neither are they disposed to respond blindly to the vociferous admonition, "Follow your leaders." The people want to be loyal and reasonably obedient to constituted authorities, but they know there are leaders, and leaders. The deplorable incident is of too recent date for them to have forgotten, that following too loyally and too long some constituted leaders occasioned the loss to the Church of the ownership and control of Vanderbilt University.

Hitherto, Mr. Editor, I have spoken only of the laity of the Church; now, I do not hesitate to give it, as my deliberate opinion, that the rank and file of the ministry of Southern Methodism are opposed to organic union. While it is true the North Mississippi Conference, in its last session, passed, by a small majority of those voting, a resolution endorsing the "Oklahoma proposition;" in view of the many reasons assigned then and since by those voting for it and those not voting at all, I am confident it was not a test of the real sentiment of the body on the question of union. Many in the body were led to believe that certain of the Church's leaders, whose position was supposed to give them a broader and clearer view of the situation, favored the passage of the resolution because it would uphold the action of the General Conference, and at the same time protect us from any probability of union, as it was not believed the Northern Church would ever accept its terms. They voted for it only because they believed it to be innocent. Had it been thought that to pass that resolution would decide favorably and finally the question of the unification of the two bodies of Methodism, it is my humble opinion that it would have been supported by very few.

The people do not want organic union, nor will they be forced into it; and if this agitation is to continue till such a consummation is imminent, it will rend Southern Methodism in twain and demolish the most beautiful ecclesiastical temple that has ever graced the earth. As some one has wisely said: "If the time ever comes in the providence of God when the two wings of Methodism should be united in one ecclesiastical household, it will come so easily that neither side will object to it." It is evident that that time has not come.

An ex-Judge of the Circuit Court, one of the best informed and most versatile men in the State of Mississippi, was recently heard to say: "I do not like this continued agitation of the unification question; it makes me apprehensive. I have been a lifetime Methodist, but I can never go with the Church into the Northern branch of Methodism. There seems to be nothing left for me to do but join the Church to which my wife belongs."

A prominent physician, one of the best and most influential men in his county, the stay of the Church in the community in which he resides, not long since, said: "I could never be a member of a Church formed of the two branches of Methodism. I know of no other communion to which I could go; but, thank God, I believe I can serve Him and my generation and get to heaven outside of a church."

Another prominent physician, chairman of the Board of Stewards in one of our large town churches, a lifetime Methodist, said: "I can never be a party to any coalition with the Northern Church; nor will I be dragged into it. My wife and I have already agreed that, if unification is effected, we are going to the Presbyterian Church."

Another prominent citizen and churchman said to the writer: "I have no sort of sympathy with this movement for the union of the two branches of Methodism; nor do I know of a man in my county who has. Surely the friends of this movement would be warned of the danger confronting us if they know the true sentiment of the people."

These are but some of the utterances to which the writer is listening almost daily—types of the great body of the Church as he is constantly meeting them.

OUR COLLEGES AND SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS.

Were one asked to designate the period in which we now live, it would be a question whether to say it is the era of education or the era of the Sunday school. Both in Church and State, the child is now receiving the profoundest thought, the difference being that the State gives emphasis to mental and technical training, while the Church, working upon both these lines, puts stress upon the religious side of the child, as paramount. If this be not the end of Church schools, then there is no valid reason for the existence of these institutions. This, I believe, is the accepted view of the people at large, and accounts for the various denominational schools, which appeal to the Churches which they represent for support and patronage. This was forcibly illustrated by an appeal made to the writer, while on the Jackson District, by a mother in language something like this: "I am writing you to get your opinion as to the moral and religious surroundings at Millsaps before deciding where to send my son, now ready for college. I want my boy in a Christian college, and, being a Methodist, I prefer an institution of my own Church." I assured her, upon my best judgment, that she would run no risk in committing her son to the Millsaps authorities, which she did. I have noted his name among the graduates of the institution, and another who, I am told, is a younger brother, who finished a few years later. Whether the schoolmen of the State recognize it or not, I am convinced that there is a growing demand among the parents of the land for a decidedly moral atmosphere around the college boy. While the Church stands above every other consideration for religion and high morals, there is being recognized even that these must have emphasis in the young life of the Church; hence, the great stress which is being placed upon properly constructed church buildings, with a view to better Sunday school work, and a more efficient training of teachers. Our two universities, in view of this necessity, are preparing to endow chairs in those institutions to be known as "the Department of Sunday School Pedagogy." Most of our colleges are looking in the same direction (as early as 1910 the Board of Education of the Mississippi Conference passed a resolution suggesting such work in Millsaps College); and through the teacher-training classes, the Sunday schools themselves are trying to solve the problem of more efficient teachers. Being among the older members of the Church, and an attendant upon the Sunday school almost from my infancy, I am forced to recognize the marvelous strides that have been made, both in the literature and in the teaching force of the schools; yet I am convinced, from a continuous close touch with the Sunday school work, that we are suffering more for efficient teachers than at any other point. Our universities cannot supply the demand, and I do not believe that our teacher-training classes in the Sunday schools are prepared to do the work successfully. This is the era of the Sunday school in the life of the Church, and the special opportunity of the Sunday school teacher. It is a fact deplored by all denominations that the children are not attending church as they ought, and the pastors are finding it almost impossible to impress the young life of the Church. The responsibility of the Sunday school teacher is not a light one, though it is one to be coveted by any one wishing to do a great service for the Church, the Master, and the child. I sometimes wish that I might live life over, that I might give my life to this great work—the higher training of the young.

While the threo departments referred to above can all do work in this field, I am convinced that the best opportunity to do it effectively is within the colleges of the Church, by establishing chairs of Bible study and Sunday school pedagogy, with like time as that given to other branches.

There pass my front door five mornings in every week something like a score of teachers, and several hundred children, going to the city schools; and, while each carries an armful of boooks, not a one bears upon the Bible or the religious training of the child. The pastors of the city are given a welcome as visitors to these schools, but not with a message from the Book of books. Less than 50 per cent of the Methodist teachers in these schools have classes in the Sunday school (and Crawford Street has a larger percentage of that class of teachers than any school with which I have been connected for years)—teachers whose very training in the secular schools give them training for efficiency. Again, with a teaching force of eighteen or twenty, less than one-fourth are men, with a training at college for Sunday school work. I must believe that this great discrepancy should not exist. With our colleges turning out classes every year, there would be larger returns to the Sunday school in efficient workers and a great saving of children to the Church.

Just across the street from me is a school presided over by the Catholic Sisters, who give daily instruction in Church catechisms, and who conduct the children en masse to all the special saint and fast days of the Church. Is it any wonder that those children grow up thoroughly grounded in the tenets of the Catholic Church, so much so that there is seldom a withdrawal from that denomination to others?

This, Mr. Editor, is a great big question, and one which deserves the best thought of our great Church, in my opinion. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

HOW INDIAN STUDENTS ARE CARED FOR.

When the story of how the Indian Bureau handles the feeding of the grown students at the Carlisle Indian School, which is producing notable athletes, is told, all experimental feeding clubs and university dietetic councils are expected here to take a back seat.

In the year of high food prices just ended the Carlisle Indian School has given good, wholesome food at the rate for the individual of 16 2-3 cents a day, or $1.17 a week, or a little more than $5 a month. The certified and itemized record for a regular day of three meals shows that 527 students used 500 pounds of bread, 380 pounds of beef, eighteen pounds of butter, eighty pounds of flour, thirty-five pounds of oatmeal, twenty-five gallons of milk, four bushels of sugar, eight quarts of syrup, ten pounds of onions, twelve pounds of cornstarch, ten pounds of raisins, 112 pounds of cornbread and six pounds of tomatoes. No Oliver Twist requests for "more" are on record.

Computations on the sum to be spent for food are based on the amount appropriated by Congress, and there is no guessing about it. The actual annual cost of subsistence for each pupil is $60.63. The officials of the school explain "that this result can only be obtained by careful and exact calculation and the absolute elimination of waste."

The clothing of the Indian youth costs the government but $28.43 annually. This covers all clothes—shoes, uniforms, underclothes, socks, overcoats, hats, caps, and shop overalls.

For $210 annually the Indian gets bed and board, all medical, dental and hospital attention, both academic and vocational training properly correlated, musical, dramatic, and the best physical training, amusements (including movies, entertaining and educational lectures, concerts and picnics), specific military training, and transportation to and from their distant homes in the West, North, East and South. No complaints are ever heard.

While the fine limestone farm of 288 acres, belonging to the school is scientifically cultivated and much of the material used is got from it, this production is calculated at the same value as though purchased at market prices. Neither middleman nor cold storage enter into the cost of material and it must accord with specifications of contracts given on bid, else it is condemned.—New York Times.

TO LOUISIANA PASTORS.

The State Epworth League Cabinet requests all pastors to circulate as widely and to best advantage as possible the "Louisiana Epworthian," a monthly State League paper recently begun. The paper is being printed at their personal expense, and can only serve the needs of the league chapters by widespread circulation. The object of the paper is to boost the Annual League Conference, which will meet in Lake Charles, June 14-17, and all other League activities of interest. The pastors and all Leagues that have furnished addresses are at present on the mailing list. An effort is being made to make the paper permanent and self-sustaining. H. LEROY JOHNS.

THE SOUL.

By Grace Wilson.

In the high palace of the brow
The soul doth reign majestic now;

The windows looking to the skies
Are the clear, lucent, asking eyes;

Out o'er the garden of the earth
The soul doth gaze with pain or mirth;

Rank envy's weeds or fragrant bloom
May deck the altar and the tomb;

The soul hath mighty dwelling place,
Beaming from man's immortal face.

If that thy thought be pure and sweet,
Lo, look, the light, the love complete!

If hate or malice thee possess,
Then cometh dark of wretchedness.

O ever let thy thought be fair,
Mounting upon the morning air;

Or at the dusk of even-tide,
Let meditation by thy side,

Sit softly, while the stars above
Shower from God the light of love.

THAT CONVENTION.

I thank Brother Ramsey for the only really sensible remark in his article of last week, in the words "An intelligent man like Brother Watkins." I hope he is not as mistaken in that as in his general position on the work of the Mississippi Sunday School Association.

With reference to my loyalty to our own Church enterprises, I am willing to compare my record with his by any test he may name. For instance, in 1914, when our Sunday School Board was struggling to maintain Brother Maddox in the field mainly by Children's Day Funds, Brother Ramsey, while doing a good deal of writing much in the same vein as his last article, did not on the Mendenhall charge have a single Children's Day. What kind of loyalty was that?

Take the records of Table No. 3 in our Conference Journals for the past ten years, and they will show that only twice out of ten has Brother Ramsey even paid out the minimum assessment on Conference Collections. If he is so very loyal to our Church enterprises, it isn't written in the statistics, and I fear Moses would not appreciate the comparison instituted between him and Brother Ramsey in the latter's article. If my record, year by year, by practical test doesn't show as much loyalty as his, I will yield the question. And I have served as weak charges as he has.

I don't know whether the Mississippi Sunday School Association has organized any schools or not (that would seem to me to be more nearly the work of denominational workers); but I do know they have preached the gospel of better Sunday schools all over the State, and that we owe them much. Ask Goza of Magnolia, Crisler of Port Gibson, Reed of Natchez, Ellis, of Fayette, Wood of Brookhaven, and a host of others where they got their greatest help in Sunday school work, and they will tell you from men like Brown and Pierce, and Marion Lawrance, brought to this State by the State Convention.

Brother Ramsey, and those like him, proceed on the supposition that a dollar given the State work means a dollar less for denominational work. That is not true. I have known some preachers who were afraid to press the mission claims for fear they would detract from their own salaries. That also is a mistake. Generosity begets generosity. Our people are not over-giving. If Mr. L. L. Lampton, for the State work, paid the salary of Miss Edwards for a year, did he for that reason give less to Church enterprises? Let the beautiful Mary Jane Lampton auditorium, a princely gift, answer. If Mr. P. H. Enochs gave the Mississippi Sunday School Association a Ford car last spring, was he for that reason less generous to his own Church? Let a hundred generous gifts answer. My own charges have given all too little to the State work; but that little has hurt no other cause. Moreover, I have never had Brother Long in my own charge that definite good did not follow. I know no more persistent personal soul-winner than this same Brother Fred.

I am a member of the Board of Missions that shares the expense of keeping Brother Nelll in the field. He will testify that I have earnestly stood for his work. No one knows better than I the monumental sacrifice he is making and the work he is doing. But St. Paul touched here when he said, "Look not every man on his own things, hut every man also on the things of others." Surely one ought to be big enough to love two big good movements, especially when they move the same way.

Brother Ramsey's statement about Methodists paying 75 per cent of the Sunday School Association's budget is erroneous. The actual figures show that our people paid 48 per cent. No more is that than our share. That seven employees and expenses are paid out of a budget of $10,800 doesn't indicate large salaries. What is that to a great State like Mississippi? I know several individual churches in the State that carry a budget of $12,000.

The statement that Brother Long and his workers do not go into the country will be refuted by thousands who read Brother Ramsey's article, and who know and love these workers. As for their taking collections, "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone."

If the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has no official relation to this work, why did the last General Conference elect Dr. E. B. Chappell to represent us, along with the other denominations, on the Lesson Committee of this work? And why does Brother Ramsey let his school study the uniform lessons selected by this Committee? Dr. E. H. Rawlings' name on the World Committee doesn't look like it is "nondescript." Dr. Chappell, when the State Convention meets, will be in Cincinnati meeting with this Lesson Committee. Otherwise he would be there. Last year Bishop Atkins delivered the principal addresses to great throngs at Hattlesburg. I am satisfied with my company, Brother Ramsey, if you are.

The Convention will meet this year in our Galloway Memorial Church at Jackson on April 10, 11, 12. The chief attractions will be Dr. W. A. Brown of Chicago. Our Mr. Van Carter, of Louisiana, will talk every day. To hear Mr. E. O. Excell lead the great chorus will be worth the trip.

We are resigned to missing Brother Ramsey, but gentle reader, come.

Meridian, Miss. H. B. WATKINS.

EASTER SUNDAY AND THE ORPHANAGE.

Dear Brother Meek: I am writing you a word in the interest of the orphan children of our Church in Mississippi, more than two hundred in number, who are dependent absolutely upon the free-will offerings of friends of orphan children for food, shelter, clothing, education and Christian training. We have had a deficit each month since the first of January, the greatest this month of all—$847.19 being the amount that our expenses exceeded our receipts for the month of March. Will you please remind the brethren—the pastors throughout the State of Mississippi that the two Annual Conferences at their recent sessions authorized the taking of a free-will offering on Easter Sunday for the Orphanage? Will not each brother please do this? We have had so many bad Sundays and so many of our regular contributors have failed to observe a Sunday for the Orphanage that it is working a hardship. Please rally to our support on April 8, which is Easter Sunday, by giving the people an opportunity for making a free-will offering for our more than two hundred orphan children in our Orphanage at Jackson.

Yours for the fatherless children,
J. B. RANDOLPH,
Superintendent.

SEASHORE GLEANINGS.

A number of interesting and encouraging things have come to my ears since I last reported for the district. I regret that I have not heard from all of the pastors and their charges, for I am sure there would be many other interesting things if I could hear from all.

The first thing I will mention is that our presiding elder is riding in a new car. Prosperity has at last struck the Seashore District and is being manifested in the most up-to-date and approved fashion. This car is a thing of beauty and we hope will be a joy forever.

Brother C. C. Evans speaks in the highest terms of the thoughtfulness as well as helpfulness of his good people at Bay St. Louis. Already the women of the Missionary Society have expended $75 on the parsonage, adding greatly to its looks and comfort. The Board of Stewards have advanced the pastor's salary $200. Congregations are growing; the Sunday school is improving each Sunday. They have begun the observance of Missionary Sunday with a program and collection and find it interesting and helpful. They are already planning for Children's Day. The outlook for the year's work is very encouraging indeed.

Rev. J. Early Gray, of Logtown, says he has plenty to do. In addition to his regular pastoral work, he has placed a new fence around the parsonage property and has made some repairs on the parsonage. Brother Gray has some excellent people to work with.

Brother Sells, at Wiggins, has recently closed two very fine metings—one at Wiggins, and the other at Stillmore. Brother D. E. Kelly did the preaching. Forty-six were added to the Church at Wiggins, and 18 at Stillmore. Prayer meetings and Sunday schools are well attended and growing in influence in the community. The stewards are at work and report the pastor's salary in full to date.

Brother B. E. Meigs had Brother Keily also, using him at Lyman. He reports the best meeting ever held in that place; 23 were added to the Church, the most of them on profession of faith. Their Sunday school has increased one-fourth in attendance; they have painted their church—splendid start on a new year's work.

The Brookiyn people believe that if you spare the rod you spoil the child; so they have in dead earnest and with great zeal given their preacher two "poundings" since Conference; but, differing from my boyhood experiences, he said he greatly enjoyed them both. Brother Ulmer says their Sunday schools are growing. Brother Neill has recently been with them and was of great help to them. Ulmer's salary has been increased over last year's assessment. He is happy in his work.

Brother P. H. Grice was also given a royal "pounding" for being so presumptuous as to come back on the Mentorum work for the second year. No threats followed the "pounding," however, so he stayed. He has painted one church and the parsonage and is building a new church. This will be the second since the July storm that he has built. He is planning for revivals all over his work and praying that they may be seasons of great refreshing and ingathering.

Brother Sullivan, at Columbia, holds the record in some things. He has raised his full assessment for missions and conference claimants for the year and sent them on. That is fine. His Epworth League has taken a $75 special for Africa, and his Sunday school has taken a special. Brother Neill was recently with him and he says helped them wonderfully. He is a good man in a good place and great good will come from his labors there.

More later on. "ELLOT."

A NOTE FROM BROTHER YOUNG.

Dear Dr. Meek: Having just closed a meeting at Gilbert, I thought it meet and proper to say a word or two about the country, people, and pastor.

This is one of the most fertile and prosperous sections of the State—rich, level land, but above high water. Good roads, schools, and churches.

The people are cultured and we feel that now they are religious. It is inspiring to see rich and poor, old and young, banker, planter, merchant, mechanics, store clerks, farmers, laborers, all worshiping the same Lord, with the same spirit of reverence and humility. The people of Gilbert, and Franklin Parish, so far as I was able to discern, are great.

Now about the preacher. Brother Roy is a true brother and minister of the gospel. He has the respect and confidence of all. He had one of the best foundations laid for a genuine revival that I have ever found. He preaches a full gospel—preaches it in the spirit of love, and when he deals with sin, he does so without gloves. May the Lord increase his kind! Fraternally,

Jena, La. HENRY T. YOUNG.

EASTER, 1917.

James F. Dorrogh.

From Europe's soil the crimson bud
Of war's red rose to flower hath burst;
Its hues are dyed in human blood,
Its perfume death—a thing accursed.

And here, where men with anxious eyes
Have viewed the conflict from afar,
Ere Easter morning, may arise
The blood-red star—the star of war.

But ere the fatal edict flies,
Flashed o'er the quick, electric wires,
And promptly at the summons rise
Our patriotic sons and sires—

We pause, and eyes still hopeful lift,
From Heaven seeking for a sign,
And pray that through some cloudland rift
HIS Star, the star of peace, shall shine.

That war's red rose no more shall bloom,
And strife and warfare soon shall cease,
And from the mould of hatred's tomb
Shall spring the lilies of HIS peace.

IN THE INTEREST OF THE PEOPLE.

[The author of this article is President of the Public School Board at Slaughter, La., where he has led in a movement to construct a handsome brick school building. He taught school in Louisiana for a number of years, and was at one time the School Superintendent of Richland Parish. His father was the late Rev. Thomas J. Upton, an honored and influential member of the Louisiana Conference.—Editor of Advocate.]

Dear Dr. Meek: Forasmuch as many of the clergy have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of some of those things pertaining to the unification of Methodisms, North and South, and have prescribed regional boundaries, along with other directions of what and how, it seems good to me, a layman, to say some things. Having had a more or less perfect understanding of those things involved in said unification, I write unto you, most excellent Doctor, in order that it may be well understood that the great mass of the Methodists who are of the M. E. Church, South, propose, or, at least, most earnestly desire, to be considered. I speak my own sentiment, and I believe I voice the sentiment of a large majority of Southern Methodists, when I say that we neither need nor want unification; and more especially do we not want, nor will we have, unless dishonorably forced upon us, a unification such as has been suggested and dictated.

You, Dr. Meek, have very clearly shown the injustice of Dr. Blake's regional plan, and have shown that in such a regional proposition Southern Methodism would necessarily have little show of equality. The fact is, I have yet to see any proposition to us that would in any adequate manner safeguard the interests, the rights, or even the autonomy, of the Southern Methodist Church.

When the minister pronounced the bride and groom to be "one," "And which ONE, your riverence?" said Pat. Now, under all propositions that I have seen, it requires no great astuteness to understand "which ONE" it was intended to be, and which it will be. I am fully convinced, Doctor, that the great mass of Southern Methodists respectfully decline to be a party to, or in any way to participate in the celebration of unequal or despotic nuptials.

I wish, Doctor, that you would tell me candidly, if you know, what is back of all this unification talk. I have heard only two suggestions: One is that a lot of money is spent to do missionary and other Church work where the two Methodisms are in the same field, when only one ought and could do the work. May I again ask, "Which one" ought it to be or is it likely to be, under the aforementioned propositions? The other reason given is that it is so unchristian—a shame on religion—for brethren not to dwell together in unity. If this dwelling together in unity has been tried, and it failed, then it is well to be absolutely sure that there has been a fundamental change in the characteristics that produced the failure.

Let me ask, what has there been in the spirit and conduct of the M. E. Church toward the Church, South, to justify those hopes of brotherly love, unity, and fairness, with which our brethren are pleased to solace themselves? Mr. Patrick Henry said: "Trust it not, sir; it will prove a snare to your feet."

But, Doctor, I do not believe these two reasons are the real reasons. Could the real reason be a desire to break up what is termed the solid South? Is it an effort to accomplish through the Church that which has failed in politics? If so, it would fail of its purpose, for the Church and State are separate in the South.

There may not be a cold-blooded intention to disrupt or to disintegrate Southern Methodism, but if such were the intention, I can conceive of no more effectual means to that end than to have forced upon us the propositions offered. If any man thinks that the Southern Methodist people are willing to surrender those things that are dear to them, that man is reckoning without his hosts. I have the utmost confidence that our General Conference will take no step that will not be approved by the Church at large. If the M. E. Church wants unification on the Oklahoma basis, with all our interests and rights iron-bound, safe-guarded, then we will consider the matter. Safe there again, for the M. E. Church will never agree to any arrangement that does not mean dominancy for her. Be ashamed, Upton, to think such a thing! Well, I'm not. Show me proof otherwise.

Suppose the General Conference and the Annual Conferences should conclude to say we hold titles to all property, and with a minority lay membership we are able to hand it over in this unification farce. Well, they do hold the people's property, but in trust, remember. Surely, the late Vanderbilt episode was enough to disgust all business integrity and to nauseate all sense of morals!

If unification be deemed advisable and desirable, then submit a fair and square proposition to a vote, where every Methodist of the Southern Church is a qualified elector, and let the whole Church approve or reject. That is democracy—a government of, for, and by the people. Then will I submit, or take to the timber.

I wish to say, Doctor, that I have made no effort to enter into anything like a discussion of the question, but have just given some of the laity's views on the subject. Should it prove possible to just run these submitted unification programmes over the people, my word for it, there will be a day of reckoning.

Yours for all good,
L. L. UPTON.

"GOD'S COMMONPLACES."

My Dear Dr. Meek: The above was the heading of an article quoted in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of March 8 from the Southern Churchman. In that article the following words are used:

"And another has pointed out that it is indeed the commonplace thing for God to take care of us; just as commonplace as it is for a mother to take care of her helpless babe."

As far as I am able to judge, neither the Scriptures, nor a truly Christian experience, nor history sustain such a sentiment. Just such sentiment is why we have so many babyish pets in our churches. The one who fancies that God is caring for him as a mother does her helpless babe, if he will just criticise himself justly for a trice will most likely discover that his surroundings have favored a life of luxury and ease for him, and he therefore has availed himself of them to that end, rather than the harships of a decided warfare against all sins.

Instead of being thus engaged and toiling without remissions for lost souls to be saved, he is at perfect ease with the belief that our Holy Father has made a mother's baby of him and has him in His fatherly arms, swinging him up and down, and, then drawing him close to his breast, plants kisses on his babyish cheeks and caresses him and sees rigidly to it that his motheriess babe does not stump his little delicate babyish toes, nor get a single bump of its darling little head, nor a single jolt of its very precious self by a tumble out of doors, although he can sport to his heart's content along danger lines.

If God is in the "mother-baby-care" business, why did he allow those godless men to stone Stephen to death? Why did he allow that vile Herod to kill the saintly James with a sword? Why could Paul write, under inspiration, of God's people: "They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented; they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth?" (Heb. 11:37, 38.)

What mother would allow all that, or any of it, on her helpless babe? Yet God allowed it. Paul wrote of his own case: "We both hunger, and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwelling-place." (1 Cor. 4:11.)

And again he wrote: "Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, and a night and a day I have been in the deep. In journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils of mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in cold and nakedness." (2 Cor. 11:25, 26, 27.) What mother would allow any of that? And yet God allowed it.

I wonder what Paul would think of some of the "easy-job" preachers of this period, talking about God's-motherly-baby-care of his people, although Paul's faith in God swept him through the first and second heavens, right into the third one; yet his experience was that of hunger, thirst, beatings, perils, nakedness, shipwrecks, mistreatments by members of the Church, etc.? Any one can see that Paul received no sentimental "baby-care." God did not make a baby of him. He also wrote: "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecutions." (2 Tim. 3:12.)

Every true Christian is a racer, a worker, a soldier, and hence had no time for baby treatment. He is in a struggle, a sacrifice, a warfare, and therefore his all is required, which may mean the loss of all comfort, friends, and even the death of his body. We hope to write an article on God's Providence soon. ISAAC LOCKHART PEEBLES.

STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Fortieth Annual Convention of the Mississippi State Sunday School Workers meets in the Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., April 10, 11, and 12. Professors Excell and Erwin will lead the music and Rev. William A. Brown, of Chicago, Rev. W. J. Moore, Hon. Alfred D. Mason of Memphis, and Mr. Van Carter, of New Orleans, are visiting speakers. Seven conferences; nine sessions; over 40 local speakers. Everybody invited. W. FRED LONG.

Jackson, Miss.

Dr. J. W. Beeson, of Meridian, Miss., writes: "There are several choice young preachers now attending Meridian College, Meridian, Miss., who would be pleased to assist in meetings during the summer vacation. Some of these will graduate at Commencement and others are in advanced classes. Among both are some excellent preachers and good singers. Any one desiring their services may communicate with them through me."

THE RESURRECTION.

By Rev. Ulysses Grant Foote, D.D.

Day after darkness dawns!
But the Cross still stands,
With outstretched hands,

The good is born of pain;
The harvest follows rain;
Men rise but by the Cross;
Man gains his brother's loss.

The ages have their council halls,
Where justice or injustice calls—
All innocent of the crimes they've housed.
Anon free men have as one aroused
And curst them, blackened them with shame,
And called them "Infamous!" Be that their name.
These, all profaned by counciled crimes,
Have had their day and used their times
While Calphas, weak Pilate, with Herod stood.
Then Hohenzollern, Romanoff, Hapsburg hrood,
Suitans unspeakable! These give the world a word
Interpreted anew; and "crime" 's that word.
Crime from the innocent sky overhead;
Crime from the sea's grey curtained hed;
Crime from hlltop and trench resounds
With shriek of hate and death, o'er grounds
Profane and holy. Hastening to Calvary,
Hate spits its froth and mockery
Into the faces of peace-loving men,
And climbs Golgotha's crest again.

The Cross! and then the peaceful vales
Of death. Above the tomb the Cross prevails
Where blooms the garden of the dead;
Where every flower with hlood is red.
Yet death holds on with constancy
And digs its graves for innocency.
The Slav, the Pole, the Serb, the Frank,
The Teuton, Turk, and Briton lie with rank
By rank in their valley tombs.
No hand with alahaster hox or balm
Can ministrate where incessant booms
The tools of death. The only calm
Is harmony of guns tuned dull hy death;
While hades crammed is foul of breath.

Yet see an arc spanned o'er the dark!
The East is fleeced; the dawn released
Runs free. Day breaks! A nation wakes
With murmurings. Then Freedom sings
And shonts the tidings that she hrings!
The veil full length is rent;
The dawn with noon is hlent.
Go, heralds, haste. Speed on and say:
"A nation's born within the day."
The womh of morning gave the Muscovite
The sweet child, Liberty, within a night.
The prison graves are opened; great souls go free,
And Tolstoy's ken becomes reality.

Siheria's brown-stretching desert blooms
With rosy life. The patriotic soul consumes
Its pain with joys of victory. The king
Becomes a citizen; the citizen a king
In his large right to think and live.
Thus freedom filters through the sieve
Of prison bars. The silent now can speak.
New strength makes bold the erstwhile meek
To act. The monarch's hand of stealth
Is limp. The sepulchered gain hreath,
Arise, walk out into the open fields
Of God's new earth. Each day its issue yields;
For all the world throbs hig with power
The resurrection holds, as hour by hour
Humanity awakes to man's demands.
Lo! In our midst the Christ arisen stands.

FROM A LAYMAN.

I have seen but little from our laymen on the subject of unification, and for fear that our leaders may take "silence for consent," and draw the wrong deduction—that is, hecause the laymen are slow to speak their minds upon this subject, all is peace and acquiescence in anything that may be done—this little squib is sent.

It may not be generally known that there is at the present time a spirit of apprehension, of unrest, and uneasiness in the minds of Methodist people in this part of the moral vineyard over the solution of this vexatious question.

It is my opinion, that many of us are justified in viewing the future of our Church with trepidation, and in confirmation your attention is called to the following extracts from resolutions presented at the last Annual Conference at Winona, Miss., signed by three presiding elders, a college president, an editor of a religious publication, and an assistant editor of our Sunday school literature: "And hereby declares itself in favor of unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Protestant Church, and the M. E. Church South, in accordance with this general plan of reorganization; * * * the colored membership of the various bodies to be formed into an independent organization, * * * and from the council of these Joint Commissions have grown a sincere fraternity, a cooperation and fraternity, which, now appears, is ripening into a unification of all our forces for the spread of Scriptural holiness, free from the rivalry of conflicting altars."

In other words, we say to the North, the time is propitious, the Negro is all there is between us; you get rid of him, we will let you swallow us, (or some one must repudiate what they have done and said), and then we will not have this rivalry of conflicting altars. It may not be known, and some people may not care to learn, hut the truth is, the laymen of our Church in this section are unalterably opposed, now and forever, to unification, organic union, or anything and everything that smacks of a federation, or closer union with the Northern Methodist Church. They want it at no cost, at no compromise, under no conditions or circumstances, and, what may be a greater surprise, if it comes, they will withdraw from the Church. Why so many of our so-called leaders are intent upon pursuing a course that would actually drive so many from our Church, is difficult to comprehend. To be sure, this may not he the primary object, and likely is not, but it will surely and inevitably be the result, if unification comes. If any are displeased with our Church, its doctrines, its polity, its "conflicting altars," its glorious past, and promising future, unhampered with unification with another Church, greater in number than our own, let them get out, and not endeavor to sell our Church bodily to the Northern Church.

It is strange, passing strange, that we always, eternally have something to stir up our people. A few years ago it was a re-statement of our creed, and now it is a bid for the big Northern fish to swallow the Southern minnow—institution, customs and all.

We thank God that we have at least one man in the Durant District who knows the question at issue thoroughly, stands for the Southern Church, Southern customs, methods, ideas, and ideals, and we emphatically and unreservedly endorse the position taken by him in a speech on the "Resolutions Concerning Unification" at the last Annual Conference at Winona.

In a recent editorial, the editor has seen a new light, and states his position so potently, that we reproduce his words. "It is becoming increasingly evident to us from the utterances of Commissioners, and the little light that has reached us from other sources, that the Oklahoma City plan of unification has no chance of being adopted, and that an effort is being made to lead us straight toward a practically obliterating form of organic union. It is time that Southern Methodism were waking up to what is going on.

"With such a scheme for the regional conferences as we have discussed in this issue of the Advocate, and with Negroes in the General Conference, and on our General Boards, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, would be in a pitiable plight. And apparently it is in contemplation to have all our church property to pass into the hands of a Church thus constituted and governed."

But just listen to Dr. Ivey in the Nashville Christian Advocate of Sept. 22, 1916:

"It would he naturally possible to start a propaganda for creating the impression among Southern Methodists that the Northern Methodists are preparing to swallow the Southern Church, that social equality will he established, that Negroes will become our lawmakers, etc.—all in the name of unification. Such talk, while it might have an unfortunate influence on our Northern Commisioners, fortunately could not influence that minority of our Church who read the Church papers and keep up with what is going on. They would not believe such stuff. They know better."

That this is not stuff, and that some people of intelligence know it is not stuff, let me quote from the same paper, under the same date, an extract from an article by T. T. Fishhurn: "While the two Churches are one in the fundamental doctrines of the gospel, they differ radically in ideals and customs, and these are not of a surface nature, but are inbred and cannot he brushed aside lightly. We hold to the time limit, while our Northern brethren have removed the time limit. Then, again, as a Church they often take an active part in politics (italics mine), while our Church has been always opposed to taking any action, as a Church, on purely political questions."

I have not heard a single member of our Church in this section express himself for unification (and some of them have read, too); but every one whom I have heard speak, without a single, solitary exception, has said that he would leave the Church if this unification movement succeeds.

Don't let any one fool you, for it means vastly more than the elimination of the Negro, and any man who has spent any time north of the Ohio river knows, if unification should come, it would be the preparation, as the editor has expressed it, the entering wedge, for the propagation in the South, through the reorganized Church in this section, of ideas, customs, methods, sentiments, and ideals that are foreign and repulsive to Southern chivalry and Southern manhood. It would he a dangerous experiment, and I verily believe that it would bring about the disruption of our Church.

Go it, leaders—even those "can't-you-trust leaders"—bring on your unification, turn our Church over to the North, and out will walk thousands of members, just as they did from the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

Would to God that some of our leaders could make those memorable words of Solomon, as recorded in 1 Kings 3:9, their own: "Give therefore thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and bad; for who is able to judge this thy so great a people?"

We may have been in the "wilderness for forty years, and may have hean miserahle sinners," but there are some Methodist laymen who don't want unification, and, what is more, they won't have it. If any one doubts my loyalty to our Church in the past, I reply that I will ahide the decision of any presiding elder ever on our district, or any preacher who was ever in charge of our circuit.

We are grateful that a few men have seen clearly and unmistakahly the trend of things, and have stood as firm as the rock of Gibraltar for our Church, and, recognizing the great differences in the two sections upon social and political questions, bave been able to discern that unification or organic union would mean the loss of thousands of members, constant friction, and the complete domination of the Southern by the Northern Church.

We pray God that it may never come.

MRS. M. E. WIGGINS.

In the early hours of Monday, March 12, Mrs. Melissa Ellis Wiggins, wife of Rev. David Wiggins, formerly a member of the Mississippi Annual Conference, quietly passed to her reward at the age of ninety-three, having been born in Franklinton, Washington Parish, Louisiana, July 18, 1824. She was laid to rest in the quiet cemetery at Sharon, Miss., by the side of her husband, who had preceded her to the better land by fifty years, and among several children and grandchildren who also had gone before.

In 1840 David Wiggins was appointed to serve the St. Helena Circuit, then of the Mississippi Conference, and on the 8th of October following was united in marriage to Miss Melissa Ellis. For twenty-two years they labored together, and, after his death until her own going away, the faithful wife and devoted mother did well her part. Of several children with which this union was blessed, only one survives, Mrs. S. W. Hartwell, now of Winona, Miss.

Early in life, Mrs. Wiggins gave her heart to God, and in the devotion of her life to His cause she never faltered. The larger part of her life, and nearly all her widowhood, Mrs. Wiggins spent in Canton and Madison County. During the past few years she has made her home in Water Valley, where she had two daughters, and from this latter city we brought her to the little village of Sharon for burial. There were present at this funeral one daughter, several grandchildren, some great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild—four living generations.

Mrs. Wiggins' sweetness of spirit, gentleness of nature, unswerving devotion to the right, hroad catholicity yet intense loyalty to her own convictions, made her quiet life one of far-reaching influence. None ever came within its radius without being drawn to her. She loved her people. She loved her country. She loved her Church. Her going away was not so much a death, as an entering into rest.

POT AND KETTLE.

There is a proverb much heard nowadays that we never could see the sense of: "The pot can't call the kettle black." Why not, we should like to know? The kettle is black. It ought to be called black. Who has a better right to speak with confidence about the faults of the kettle than the pot, which has for years hung on the same crane and inhaled the same smoke? Truthfulness is a virtue if smuttiness is a vice. If there is anything that would make the pot seem less sooty in our eyes it is giving us a clear reflection of the image of the kettle. Shall no one point out hlackness anywhere unless he knows himself to be speckless? Would the pot rise in our estimation if it followed the custom of its critics and said, "The kettle is white, as white as I am?"—The Independent.

AN EASTER CARD.

By Miss Grace Wilson.

"Ladies," said the polite clerk of a popular downtown bookstore a week before Easter, arresting a party of fashionable shoppers, "have you seen the most admired Easter card of the season?"

The party paused to look at the card, a few making remarks and exclamations concerning it.

"It is pretty!" said one, casually. "And symbolic, too, I dare say," joined in another; "symbolism is permeating everything to-day, the picture as well as the poem." "Symbolism already is the flower of the living poem," oracularly declared a third, who looked the highbrow as she looked at the card through dark glasses worn gracefully above a high nose. "The symbolism I have not time for," remarked another, hurriedly making a purchase of a card and then addressing it, "but I shall send one to Harold and Marie." "What! overtake that couple with an Easter card? It would be just like them to honeymoon in the wilderness, after marrying so suddenly," spoke up another of the party with sudden interest. "And they did not even tell the direction of their bridal tour," retorted somebody else. "True," replied a tender-spoken young sister of Marie, "but they have stopped in Colorado, and a hotel envelope tells where they are staying."

And thus speaking they passed out.

* * * * *

The Easter card shown was symbolic, a cleverly portrayed conception of the artist who painted it. In the right upper corner of the card, against a rose-flushed sky in which was discerned the sunrise, there glinted a gold cross, the spire of a cathedral. So cleverly and artistically was the idea painted that the sun appeared to rise, and the cross to flicker glinting lights, flashing the sunlight afar, around, below, one glorious ray being flung diagonally down across the stone parapet of a mansion, whereon lay a soiled, crushed rose. The parapet was of gray stone and dimly outlined against the gray gloom of the morning, and the rose a dim, red spot upon the parapet. But the rose appeared to open and gradually grow fresh while turning its red heart to the lifting sunlight —that ray flashed from the cross—so idealistically and realistically did the artist paint it. Below the pictured symbolism was painted in letters of gold:

"I am the Resurrection,
And the Life!"

* * * * *

Occupying Suite 14 of a private sanatorium in a Colorado resort, where the air is pure and the mountain scenery grand, a charming young couple were honeymooning: a detour they called it from the bridal tour planned, evading the fact that it was according to the advice of their home physician. Harold had not been well or strong all winter, and Marie loved the mountains, so the two gayly consented to break the force of their bridal tour by recuperating and painting in a health resort.

As the bridal couple looked without the window of their beautiful suite over the mountains, Marie declared that souls do find themselves given the high, calm spaces that uplift them, and Harold added that he felt nearer Heaven in that high spot, —that is, if he could feel nearer Heaven than when with her.

But more often the groom reclined upon his lounge, all the while tenderly watched by his devoted bride, for she enjoyed playing nurse. When he dozed she covered him carefully with the heavy crimson coverlet, but none too heavy, although it was spring. Then she placed her easel at the foot of his lounge and painted.

It was Marie's fancy to preserve among the souvenirs of their bridal tour a picture of the great mountain, clad in its spring verdure, that loomed through opaline mists to the kiss of the sky-blue heavens, just outside the window of their bridal chamber—it was so close that she and Harold could reach out and pluck the wild violets and forget-me-nots that grew on its sides.

Thus they had been in the sanatorium ten days, honeymooning in truth, days of uninterrupted bliss save for the daily visit of the house physician, which was a perfunctory duty on his part, they were led to infer. But they were always glad to see him, for he was interesting, being a celebrated specialist, and more, he seemed fond of them. So when the house physician's step was heard without, the young couple, although bride and groom, always made ready to receive him with real pleasure.

* * * * *

That late afternoon the house physician entered Suite 14, to be greeted most cordially by the honeymooning couple, who turned their attention from the mountain without, and the picture of it, and forgot themselves in the enjoyment of his visit, which was almost a social function.

During that particular visit, the specialist regarded the young couple almost tenderly, then watched the young man furtively while taking his temperature, the young wife all interest and solicitude. Perfunctorily the specialist felt his patient's pulse, then tested his heart, sententiously remarking, "Your heart is all right," when the bridegroom retorted, "I am Strong-Heart himself, Doctor, a very Love-Hero with the strength of thirty men, for I am on my bridal tour. Speed us on our journey!" The charming bride interposed, "When can we go, Doctor?" "You should not go just now," the doctor answered evasively. His gravity was not noted by the bride and groom.

The professional interview ended, the good doctor must go. He was accompanied to the door by the young wife, who remarked lightly, while holding the door open for him: "Doctor, you must not allow us to spend all of our honeymoon in the sanatorium. Already we have been here ten days —quite a detour! Our bridal tour is arrested, you see. But call again."

Then Marie returned upon soft footsteps. Harold was dozing. So she painted until he awoke, which was very soon, for he slept fitfully. Then she showed him the picture, and both agreed that it needed a brown-green touch on the side where the mountain did not catch the sun, and a greenish-blue finish where its top met the skies. The picture was then put aside, for the patient was wide awake, feverishly bright, with an interest in everything, and must be amused; so his bride, his tender nurse, insisted that he see more of the beautiful scenery from the many windows of their suite, and the glorious sunset from the western window.

Leaning upon Marie's arm, Harold looked out over the mountains, and lingered at the western window to watch the sunset. As the red ball sank behind the mountains, the wife all unconsciously clutched her husband, and he clung to her. Thus fondly they lingered, looking without into the gathering gloom. But soon he tired, and she led him to his lounge where he reclined, attended by her. Then they conversed fitfully, tenderly planning their future, read a little together and to each other, but the mountain early shutting off the light of the world without, they laid aside the book and dreamed in the soft silence while the day became gloom and the sanatorium quiet as themselves—"alone together."

* * * * *

But tender thoughts were directed to Suite 14 that late afternoon. For a brief bit of conversation was overheard between the friendly proprietor of the sanatorium and the house physician below stairs, when the latter stopped to warm his hands at the radiator:

"Doctor, how about the young man in Suite 14? He was better yesterday?"

"Yes, yes, but hardly so well to-day," was the evasive answer. "He may be gone before another twenty-four hours."

"Ah?" in tones of pity, was the rejoinder of the proprietor. "A charming young couple, and easily identified as a bridal couple, although they keep so quiet. Just from the East!"

"It was foolish to start on this journey. It means an arrested bridal tour. A charming young couple, yes, yes, * * * " the doctor said with feeling.

Indeed, his words were more than tender, although the tragedy blooming in the idyll of Suite 14 was to him hardly more than an episode in his life as house physician of a sanitarium. But even a busy and celebrated specialist can love young lovers, and the human heart beat more humanely when witnessing an arrested bridal. * * *

The next morning when the house physician entered the sanatorium, he met sad faces below, and heard a suppressed excitement above, followed by sounds of agony and woe, when suddenly he bethought himself. Without waiting for the elevator, he started up the staircase to encounter the proprietor, who was hastening to send telegrams after personal attention to his guests in Suite 14. The proprietor paused a moment in passing to lay a hand upon the doctor's arm, and said with feeling, "Doctor, how could you deceive them? The young man in Suite 14 has just died—a hemorrhage!"

"I feared that it would be suddenly thus," the doctor answered, "but did not deceive them—I did not tell them. I could not."

Then with alacrity he ascended the staircase, and without knocking entered Suite 14. Therein sympathetic strangers and attendants had gathered, and were bending over the widowed bride, who, bespattered by the consumptive's blood, was upon her knees beside the dead bridegroom, and, holding his head to her heart, was speaking directly to his upturned face in accents so personal that it was appalling to the listeners. "Beloved, will you come back to me? Will you not come back to me, Beloved, Beloved?—my Beloved!"

But when she noted the house physician—their kind doctor—the stricken woman arose, and, like one suddenly deranged, she turned upon him in an agony of reproach.

"Doctor, Doctor, how could you deceive us? Why did you keep it from us? Why did you not tell me last evening? Why did you not let me know that I should have him but a little while? To think that he did not know he had to leave me so soon, and forever, forever! He did not know that he had consumption. He was deceived into coming here. And you, you deceived us worst of all, Doctor!"

The grave medical man stood unmoved, and still the agonized woman hurled those reckless reproaches at God and man which mark the ebullition of a first wild grief. "To think that we did not know, did not know that we should be together but a little while, that our bridal tour was arrested, and a tragic thing!"

She bowed her head in woe, repulsing all comfort, and was moving toward the corpse with words of anguish, "Come back to me, Beloved, come back to me, or I shall go to you," when there was heard the postman's call below. In a few moments the liveried bellboy sprang up the steps bringing a letter—a single scented envelope upon a silver salver—and presented it at the door of Suite 14. The letter was received by a sympathetic bystander, to whom the house physician said: "This cannot concern the bereavement: it may help to break the spell. Taking the letter himself, and arresting the raving woman's attention, he placed it in her hands; then looking into her distracted eyes with the hypnotic command of physician over patient, he said composedly, "Open your letter."

The stricken creature obeyed the doctor, tearing open the envelope. There was an Easter card.

The artist's conception and the painted symbolism of the card meant nothing to the dazed woman who looked at it, and mechanically she read aloud:

"I am the Resurrection,
And the Life!"

Then she was mute a moment. With a curious, questioning glance she looked around, while to the stupefied soul, the staggering brain, there seemed to come a gleam of intelligence, a flash of understanding upflung, when with weird ecstasy the widow threw herself upon the corpse and cried to it, "Oh, Beloved, I shall find you again!"

The house physician, with finger on his lip, left the room, and the bystanders one by one followed him.

Editorial

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS.

This is the most favorable time of the year to look after the interests of the Advocate, and we request our pastors to do their best to secure the renewals of the subscriptions in their charges. For a number of reasons, this is a matter of much importance. With the cost of paper and other printing materials so high, we must have the active assistance of our preachers, if we are to keep the Conference organ up to its present size and standard. So far, our paper has in its make-up yielded about as little to the adverse conditions existing as any in the connection; but if our circulation should fail off, like so many other periodicals have had to do, we would have to yield to the inevitable and perhaps issne a fewer nnmber of pages. The Publisher has been forced to place the Advocate upon practicaliy a cash basis; many snbscriptions are now expiring, and unless attention is promptly given to the matter of renewing them, hundreds of names will soon have to be stricken from our mailing files. This would be hurtful to the interests of both the paper and the Church. Will you not help AT ONCE in your field, dear brother? Write the office for a list of our subscribers in your charge, giving the names of all the post-offices embraced in it. You will then be in a position to see what can be done to keep the paper coming into the homes of your people.

THE LAMAR SCHOOL OF LAW.

This institution is one of the schools of Emory University, at Atlanta, Ga. It was named for Hon. L. Q. C. Lamar, the famous orator, statesman, and jurist. It is domiciled in a beautiful new building on the University campus, constructed of concrete and Georgia marble, which furnishes every needed facility for the best work—a handsome library containing upwards of 6000 volumes, a fine room for practice courts, five large classrooms, and twelve offices and rooms for group meetings. The course of study covers a period of three years; the carefully selected Faculty is composed of eight professors, and the highest standards and ideals are maintained. The present is the first session, which has been a most gratifying one in every respect. The number of matriculates is 27. The dormitories on the University campus, in which single rooms may be secured at $7 per month, or rooms shared with other students at $5 or $6 per month, is open to law students, as is also the University dining-hall, at which meals may be had at $18 per month. The tuition fee is $125 a year. There is no better law school than this in the South. Write for a catalogue.

SEES LITTLE HOPE OF UNION.

In the Northwestern Christian Advocate (Chicago) of March 28, the Editor discusses at some length the question of Methodist union. He comes out squarely against having the Negroes placed in any subordinate relation in the suggested new Church, or limiting their representation in the General Conference. We quote the following from this emphatic utterance:

"Any suggestions savoring of a compromise would hardly be worthy of the great Church that we represent. * * * As it occurs to many whose opinion we have sought, there is only one thing for the Methodist Episcopal Church to do with relation to the colored man within her fold—and that is to do nothing. We cannot afford to stultify ourselves by attempting to sidle into this union. It must be a straight, ont-and-out union. Our Southern brethren must take us just as we are or not at all. Any other position than this would react upon the Church that has been a friend of the Negro for a half century or more. * * * How will all this affect the cause of union? There seems to be little hope for that desired consummation within the immediate future."

The foregoing is in harmony with our editoriai utterance of last week, and is confirmatory of our position that the time has about come for the termination of the nnion negotiations, since they are costing thousands of dollars and there is practicaliy no prospect of any real progress being made.

A HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR MANSFIELD.

Dear Mr. Editor: We have begun a campaign for $100,000 for Mansfield Female College. The first $50,000 is to be nsed for buildings and equipment, and the other for endowment. The town of Mansfield and De Soto Parish have agreed to raise as their share of the sum to be secured $25,000. A Building and Finance Committee has been named, and organized with a Chairman, Secretary-Treasurer, etc. The latter official will be under bond. Two Soliciting Committees have been appointed—one of men, and the other of women—and they are getting ready for active work. Their work is to be confined to the town and parish. As yet we have not begun the campaign for the State, but we wiii start it soon. Our present capacity is being taxed to the limit, and we must have more room if we are to grow.

R. E. BOBBITT, President.

Mansfield, La.

We are pleased to learn of this forward movement in behalf of Mansfield College, which has long wrought so well for the young womanhood of Louisiana. We feel a deep interest in this undertaking, which, by every token, deserves to succeed. Let our preachers and people rally to the assistance of President Bobbitt and his coworkers. The proper strengthening of this worthy institution would mean much for Metbodism in this State in the coming years.

AN EXPLANATORY WORD.

As we are the editor referred to as having signed the Conference resolutions adopted at Winona, Miss., last fall, in Brother Arnold's article, which appears on another page, perhaps we should speak an explanatory word. We attached our signature to those resolutions and supported them, with the knowledge that we could explain our position more definitely to the Conference while they were pending, which we did; and when we published them, we made at the same time in the Advocate a somewhat extended statement, in which we plainly affirmed that we did not agree with them in their seemingly hopeful view as to the outiook for the consummation of the unification movement—that we shared the opinion of Bishop Hoss and Bishop Denny that the two great Episcopal Methodisms were not any nearer together then than they had been five years before. (This is shown in the New Orleans Advocate of December 7, 1916.)

The Editor of the Advocate after the General Conference of the Northern Church in Minneapolis, in 1912, had ignored the original plan of the Joint Commission on Unification (which was practically the same as the Oklahoma scheme except that it was more favorable to the Negroes from the Northern standpoint) at no time believed that there was the least chance for it to be adopted. It was his conviction that in standing for that plan at Winona nothing of any consequence was being sacrificed or would thereby be seriously imperiied, and time has proven that this view was correct. He felt, moreover, since he could not keep the matter from coming up at the Conference, that it was perhaps wisest to avoid dividing that body, if possible, as to the position of our General Conference, which there was, in his opinion, iittie reason to think would eventuate in anything. He never regarded the CHURCH as committed to anything except to negotiate further, and he insisted from the beginning that if anything in the way of union was agreed upon it should be submitted to a vote of our entire Church membership. The Editor has seen "no new light," nor has he changed his position, though, as a matter of course, fuller developments have brought things nearer to a conclusion, and some new maneuvers have been made by some of the ultra-unionists.

We make these observations without the least disposition to find fauit with Brother Arnold or any others who held the view that the whole union movement should be directly and openly combated, in the outset, regardiess of the action of the Oklahoma General Conference. For their opinions we have great respect. There have been many angles to this great issue, and the situation along the border and in not a few localities has been such as to cali for prudence and tact, as weli as courage and aggressiveness.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Remember our Orphanages next Sunday. We cannot afford to let them want for the lack of means.

The work in the Vancleave (Miss.) charge is going forward encouragingly. So writes Rev. W. L. Blackweil, the pastor.

Rev. T. L. Bryson reports favorably concerning his work at Haughton, La. His letter brought us some subscriptions to the Advocate, for which we extend to him our thanks.

There were some typographical errors in the editorials on the Eighth Page of the Advocate last week, but we will not take time to correct them in this issue. In spite of our efforts to avoid them, such mistakes will occasionaliy occur.

Mrs. L. Clisby, of West Point, Miss., has spent the past few days in New Orieans, having come here for medical treatment. As a Sunday school teacher, Sister Clisby ranks with the best. She has in her home city one of the finest adult Bible ciasses in Mississippi.

A telegram from Mr. Embree Hoss, received last Saturday morning, was to the effect that Bishop Hoss was still seriously iii, but that the famiiy were hopeful of his recovery. Let prayer be made that the valuable life of this great leader may be spared to bless the Church for years yet.

Dr. J. M. Henry, the able presiding elder of the Ruston (La.) District, writes as follows: "I am forwarding my second round of quarterly conferences. The work in this district was left in a splendid condition by the former presiding elder, Rev. Briscoe Carter, and we are profiting thereby. The outlook is good. The men are all working faithfully, and we are looking for large returns."

Rev. John A. Rice, D.D., pastor of St. John's Church of St. Louis, recently gave two lectures at Washington University, located in that city—one on "The Modern Man's Bible," and the other on "The Book of Job." Dr. Rice will preach the baccalaureate sermon at Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., on May 27, and will preach at the University of Chicago on July 29.

From a business letter from Rev. B. F. Bullard, of Duck Hill, Miss., which brings us several subscriptions, we take the following: "My second year on this charge has opened well. The people have been very kind to us; they gave us a "pounding on my return from Conference, which was encouraging, as well as a great help. We are expecting a successful year."

Rev. Thos. H. Miils, of Eupora, Miss., writes: "Everything is still moving on nicely in this charge. Bishop J. H. McCoy will dedicate our church at Eupora, Miss., on May 13. We extend a cordiai invitation to aii former pastors and presiding elders to be present on this occasion, which we expect to be a memorable one. We feel that we are most fortunate in having been able to secure the services of Bishop McCoy." A great treat is in store for Brother Mills and his worthy flock.

Dr. I. L. Peebles requests us to state that his two recent pamphlets, "Is there a Hell?" and "Is Woman Suffrage Right?" may be had at the Princess Book Store, Meridian, Miss. The price of each of these publications is 10 cents.

There is yet time to subscribe for The Council Daily. Send at once 25 cents to Mrs. S. A. Montgomery, 7926 Elm Street, New Orleans, La., and have this bright little paper come to you for ten days. It will tell you much about our woman's work.

Brother W. L. Tucker, of Tucker, La., sends us a subscription to the Advocate, accompanied by cordial greetings and an expression of hearty good wishes. Brother Tucker is a layman who puts the spiritual first in everything. Blessings on him!

We are in receipt, from Dr. James Cannon; Jr., of an invitation to the 23d Annual Concert of the Blackstone (Va.) College for Girls, which was announced to take place on Friday evening, March 30. This well known institution is reported to be having a most prosperous session.

The Bulletin of Centenary Church, McComb, Miss., is before us. Rev. J. Loyd Decell, the gifted young pastor of that congregation, is systematizing his work and seeking to sound a general note of progress. He continues to do good work for the Advocate, for which he has our hearty thanks.

President R. E. Bobbitt, of Mansfield College, Mansfield, La., writes as follows: "We are happy to announce that Dr. James Thomas. of Little Rock, Ark., will preach our Commencement sermon on May 27, and that Mr. O. A. Wright, of Shreveport, La., will deliver our annual literary address on Tuesday evening, May 29."

In a letter renewing his subscription to the Advocate, Brother E. W. Flowers, of Smithdale, Miss., says: "I do not believe I could get along without our Conference organ. I enjoy every page of it. I am 85 years old, and have been reading it ever since it began to be published. I am with you on the union issue. In my opinion, you are on tho right track."

In a business letter bringing to our office several subscriptions, Rev. G. W. Gordon, of Noxapater, Miss., says: "Things are moving along very well with us. We are managing to keep something to eat and wear, and find plenty of work to do." We are pleased to have this cheery message from our long-time friend, who excels both in pastoral and pulpit service.

From a personal note from Rev. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder of the Greenville (Miss.) District, we take the following: "All the preachers were present at our district conference, lately held at Lula, and the reports were splendid. The outlook is indeed encouraging in our territory. The presence and ministry of Dr. H. C. Morrison, of Kentucky, were greatly enjoyed."

Mrs. H. G. Henderson, wife of the late Dr. Harry G. Henderson, instructs us to change the address of her Advocate from Sardis, Miss., to South Hamilton Street, Georgetown, Ky., to which place she is going to visit her mother for awhile. Sister Henderson adds the following note of interest: "I have sent the larger part of Dr. Henderson's splendid library to Millsaps College as a gift."

Rev. H. T. Young, the Louisiana Conference evangelist, left New Orleans last Monday for Kentwood, La., where he is now assisting Rev. John Sholars in a series of revival services. The meeting in McDonoghville, in which for some days Brother Young had been doing the preaching, closed last Sunday night. It was a helpful season of spiritual quickening, much good being accomplished.

We have in hand a wedding invitation, which reads as follows: "Rev. and Mrs. Stephen A. Brown request the pleasure of your company at the marriage of their daughter, Mary Hopkins, to Mr. Robert Rex Winter on Wednesday morning, April 18, 1917, at 9:30 o'clock, at their residence, Kosciusko, Miss. The couple will reside at Houston, Miss. We extend congratulations and all good wishes.

We make grateful acknowledgment to the following friends, to whose kindness we have not made reference elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions, lately received: Rev. C. W. Crisler, Brookhaven, Miss., 2; Rev. J. A. Moore, Lumberton, Miss., 3; Brother F. A. Howell, Durant, Miss., 7; Rev. J. W. Bell, Okolona, Miss., 3; Rev. P. D. Hardin, Hattiesburg, Miss., 2; Rev. J. F. Dring, Ringgold, La., 3; Rev. O. L. Savage, Webb, Miss., 5.

Through the courtesy of the author, Dr. I. L. Peebles, we have on our table a copy of his recently issued booklet, "Is There a Hell?" It is neatly printed, Smith & Lamar being the publishers, and it numbers 32 pages. It is an able and interesting discussion, sound. Scriptural, and thought-provoking. Its timeliness in this period, when there is so much theological "mushiness," is beyond question. The price is 10 cents. Send for a copy.

We regret to learn that the health of Mrs. Kate Kretschmar, of Greenville, Miss., the mother of Mr. W. P. Kretschmar, President of the Commercial Savings Bank of that city lacks much of being good at this time. Mrs. Kretschmar has for many years been a choice member of our Church in Greenville, and is also well known at Monteagle, Tenn., where she has frequently spent her summers. We hope to hear ere long that she has gained in physical strength and vigor.

In a letter, written some days ago, Rev. R. P. Neblett, of Como, Miss., says: "We are to begin our meeting on Sunday, March. 25. Rev. J. A. Bowen is to come on Wednesday and remain with us through Easter Sunday. Our work is moving along nicely." Brother Neblett's letter brought us 5 subscriptions to the Advocate. He has a lay committee to take care of the interests of the Conference organ in his field. Brother and Sister Neblett make a fine team, and we are not surprised to hear that the church at Como is prospering under their leadership.

Rev. J. D. Simpson, of Guntown, Miss., sends us some subscriptions, and in his business letter adds the following note: "Things are progressing well with us. On a recent Wednesday night a show was due to come to Guntown, and I was somewhat dubious about the attendance upon our prayer meeting on that occasion; but, as matters turned out, we had 69 at the prayer service, and there were about 24 or 25 at the show. If any brother can beat this, I should like to hear from him." We are inclined to think that Brother Simpson's flock will keep the banner for some time on this record.

Miss Grace Wilson, of Chattanooga, Tenn., who contributes two poems and an Easter story to this issue of the Advocate, is an ex-Mississippian and a former student in Whitworth College. She has achieved considerable distinction in the field of literature and is a member of the League of Southern writers. She is soon to have a volume of fiction issued by a New York publishing company, and has lately been engaged to write an article on Natchez, Miss., for the Southern Woman's Magazine. We count ourself fortunate to be able to furnish our readers with these first-hand products of her gifted pen.

Rev. W. W. Mitchell, presiding elder of the Durant (Miss.) District, has given us this week a strong article on the subject of Methodist Unification, which we dare say will be read with much interest. Brother Mitchell has given this matter close attention ever since the issue was raised, and, serving a large district, he is perhaps as well informed as to the sentiment of the people as any man in North Mississippi. He ably championed the views set forth in his present communication at the last session of the North Mississippi Conference. In much the same tenor as Brother Mitchell's article is that of Brother Arnold, a worthy layman in his district.

From a letter from that capable itinerant, Rev. C. M. Chapman, of Waynesboro, Miss., we extract the following references to his work: "I am in high oats. The work is starting off well. A good prayer meting, good Sunday school, a good choir, and a faithful and attentive people who have a high regard for the holy calling of the Christian ministry are but a few noticeable things to encourage the pastor here. We have put out of town an accursed street carnival and arranged for a chautauqua, to be held soon. We are planning to have in the early summer an old-time singing school in which the music and books of our Church will be used. We will begin a training school for the young people and children of our Church and community the first of April. It is our purpose to give them training in doctrine, discipline, and worship in prayer and song."

A NOTABLE ACHIEVEMENT.

Dear Dr. Meek: May I have a little space in this week's issue of the Advocate to announce that our new Methodist Church in Brookhaven will be completed free of debt? The splendid success of the campaign put on by the pastor, Rev. C. W. Crisler, and the Methodist laymen of Brookhaven to raise $10,000 to finish the new Methodist Church in our city merits public mention.

The construction of the new church was begun under the pastorate of Rev. J. M. Morse, and about three-fourths of the money necessary to build was provided for, by a thorough canvass of the community. To undertake to raise $10,000, the amount necessary to complete the building, from the same community, seemed a Herculean task; but Brother Crisler organized his laymen, set the teams in order, infused the spirit of optimism, and started the drive for the goal. Never did men work more determinately than did this body of splendid Methodist laymen. At the end of one week $11,440 had been added to the building fund, and the campaign closed with the spirit of good fellowship and general rejoicing at high tide. The new church is a thing of beauty. Unless the workmen are delayed by unforeseen causes, we will occupy it some time in May. Brother Crisler is in high favor with his people, and is doing a splendid work.

THE UNDERGRADUATES OF THE FOUR CLASSES IN THE ANNUAL CONFERENCES WILL GIVE ATTENTION.

Professor Andrew Sledd has found it impossible to get ready his Handbook to the New Testament in time for use during the Conference year. Professor Frank Seay's Handbook to the Old Testament will appear in two volumes. The first volume is now ready and may be ordered of Smith & Lamar.

For the present Conference year, therefore, undergraduates of all the four classes will study the historical part of the Old Testament, that is, from Genesis to Esther, and will use Professor Seay's first volume.

My attention has been called to an error of the printer in publishing the list of books in the New Course of Study. As published, the study of the Bible is separated from the study of the Handbook to the Bible. The printer should have had it thus:

"Genesis to Esther, with aid of a Handbook to the Study of the Old Testament by Frank Seay. (Examination to be on the Scripture text.)"

The two go together. The Handbook is not to be studied apart from the Scripture itself, but to be used as an aid and guide to the contents of the Holy Bible.

All applicants for local deacon's and local elder's orders will also study the Old Testament this year, and make use of Professor Seay's Handbook.

The above announcement is authorized by the College of Bishops.

SPRING HAS COME AGAIN.

Willie Conger Page.

Did you know that spring has come again? that the world, to-day, is more beautiful and interesting, than it has ever been before? Far away, the mistic tints enshroud the woodland, while in its rocky bed the brook sings and gurgles, whispering things that cannot be re-told. The soft, sweet cadence of its murmuring waters fills the heart with enchantment. Gleaming white, purple, and golden starry blossoms cover the brown meadowlands. In the wild solitudes of the forests, birds fly and twitter softly. The air is sweet with the fragrance of the hyacinth, violet, and redbud. The hum of the bees can be heard, as they hover over the blossom-ladened apple and cherry trees.

Come out of doors, where the earth is green, and the sunshine is pure gold. Come and hear the scarlet-breasted robin, as he opens up his happy song, so full of ecstasy. Do not stay indoors when there are so many mysteries to be solved. Come watch the little people of the earth, just awakened from their long winter's sleep. They go to and fro, busy doing the labor appointed to each—the ant, providing its winter store; the bee, culling the sweets from the open flowers—teaching us a lesson in industry and frugality. Hear the lark's triumphant song, as he soars ever upward, singing of hope and undaunted courage. Shall we be less brave, knowing that the All-Wise Hand will guide our faltering steps aright?

Listen! Spring has come, and set up housekeeping.

Sage Tea Dandy To Darken Hair

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and eveniy that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive foiks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Mrs. MARY CATHARINE MORGAN (nee Wilson) was born on August 29, 1845, in Lafayette County, Miss. She was converted and joined the Church at Old Union Hill in early life under the ministry of Brother A. A. Houston. She was married to Brother R. S. Morgan on Dec. 10, 1861, and went home to heaven on Feb. 16, 1917. Thus closes the life of one who loved all whom she knew, and all who knew her loved her. Thus a great life, for it was a great life, has been gathered up into the heavenly garner. Everybody had good things, and only good things, to say about Aunt Mary. It was my privilege to visit her home a short time before she died, and while there I read some Scriptures and we talked about the precious promises of our Lord, and I shall never forget the rich glow that came over her face. I pray that the blessings of our Father may rest upon the grief-stricken husband and children. Her pastor,

R. S. LAWSON.

Mrs. MARTHA E. DIXON (nee Hogan) was born in Montgomery County, Alabama, on April 24, 1838, and died at the home of her son, Geo. C. Dixon, in Grand Cane, La., Feb. 26, 1917. She came to Louisiana with her parents when about five years of age, where the remainder of her life was spent—in the following Parishes: Jackson, Union, Winn, Vernon, Calcasieu, Rapides, and De Soto. In 1854, she was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in Union Parish, under the ministry of the Rev. Mr. Mooreland, and she remained true to her Lord and the Church to the close of her life. She was active in church work and faithful in attendance upon public worship until age and feebleness of body prevented, and when no longer able to go to the house of God she was diligent in the use of her Bible, church paper, prayer, and such other means of grace as were at her command. For more than fifty years she enjoyed the weekly visits of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and always manifested a deep interest in the welfare of the Church, both at home and abroad. In 1853 she was happily married to John A. Dixon, and of this union twelve children were born, four of whom, with her husband, preceded her over the river. Three sons and five daughters remain, together with fifty-two grandchildren and several great-grandchildren. May they all meet her in heaven! We laid her body to rest in the Longstreet Cemetery, the funeral service being conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. H. J. Boitz, a former pastor.

L. C. WILSON, Pastor.

AUGUSTUS LAFAYETTE PARKER, son of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Hatley Parker, was born in Hancock County, Ga., October 9, 1840, and died at his home in Shelby County, Texas, Jan. 25, 1917, aged 76 years, 3 months, and 16 days. In boyhood he moved with his father from Georgia to Alabama, and settled in Coffee County. In the early days of the Civil War he volunteered his services and joined the Tennessee Army, in which he served until the surrender. Soon after the war he was married to Miss Mary Elizabeth Hamner, which happy union lasted until his death, covering a period of fifty years, 11 months, and 21 days. Of this union were born seven children—one girl and six boys. The mother and seven children are all living. All the children were present to witness his transiation to a life beyond except the oldest son who lives in Alabama. He professed religion and joined the Methodist Church when a boy, and lived a faithful and consistent member of the same till death, serving in the capacity of steward, Sunday schooi superintendent, and class leader. The thoughts which occupied his mind were of God, his Church, country, and family. His children, while little, he led to Christ and often spoke to them of the Savior and his Kingdom. He never failed to keep before them the highest ideals of life. He warned them of the danger to which they might be subjected. He loved music and during his last years he often sung hymn No. 894 of the Hym Book:

"My latest sun is sinking fast,
My race is nearly run,
My strongest trials now are past,
My triumph is begun."

When semi-delirious he spoke of hearing the sweetest of music. His was a long, painful illness but he died in the triumph of a living faith.

His son, A. H. PARKER.

SARAH GATLIN, the wife of the late N. W. Gatlin, of Johnston Station, Miss., was born on Feb. 22, 1845, near Adam's Campground, Amite County, and departed this life on Feb. 24, 1917, in McComb City, Miss. She joined the M. E. Church, South, when eleven years old. It may truly be said of her, that she adorned the doctrine of her Lord. A noble life ended in this world and was translated to the heavenly clime above, when Sister Gatlin left us. She and Brother Gatlin were separated but a short time, he preceding her to heaven only two months ago. I imagine theirs was a happy meeting. It was my privilege to be a guest in Sister Gatlin's home often as I was her pastor for three years, and she knew well how to make a preacher feel at home. Many happy hours have I spent in her home, and a more consecrated hristian I have never known — a woman who loved the Church where she had worshiped for the past forty years. The writer was assisted in conducting the funeral service by Rev. J. Loyd Decell, of McComb City, Miss. We laid her to rest beside her devoted husband in the Johnston Cemetery. May the relatives follow the beautiful example of Sister Gatlin, and some happy day they will all meet at the Golden Gate, where parting is no more. Her pastor, Auburn, Miss. R. H. BARR.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father in his infinite wisdom has called from our midst Mrs. Callie Fowler Caldwell, our oldest and most beloved member, be it resolved:

1. That we, as members of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Courtland, Miss., are in profound sorrow because of the departure of our sister and fellow-laborer. In her death our society has lost a faithful member and each of us a strong, personal friend. At the close of her long, useful, godly life of eighty-five years—a life of many sorrows—she was still active, bright, and happy and eager to minister to those around her.

2. That we, as members of this society, bow in humble submission to the Master's will, knowing that "precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

3. That, while our sister loved life and was deeply interested in the affairs of the present world, we feel confident that she had long ago "set her house in order" and was prepared for the summons when it came.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one spread upon our minutes, and one sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed: Miss Ila Hardy, Mrs. R. I. Collins.

BEST INSURANCE RISKS.

The cost of insurance is largely determined by the quality of the risks. One company has a special section for total abstainers. The cost of insurance in that section is about 30 per cent less than in the General Section. It is a well-recognized fact that ministers are the best class of risks. By limiting its insurance to ministers, the Methodist Ministers Relief Insurance and Trust Association of Boston, Mass., is able to offer insurance at premium rates much lower than those charged by companies insuring all classes of people. This Association makes a specialty of Endowments and Old Age Pensions. It grants the privilege of monthly payments, if desired.—Adv.

From the Field

Webb, Miss.

I am pleased with the outlook in my charge. We hope to finish our new church at Webb, Miss., by Sept. 1. We have all the brick on the ground and paid for and also all the lumber and roofing paid for. The lot was donated, the concrete, gravel and lime that we will use have been ordered, and the money is ready to pay for the work on the building, which will cost, when completed, $12,000 or $15,000. Our people at Sumner are also working to secure funds to build a church at that place. We have a good lot paid for near the center of the town. We have a faithful, loyal congregation there. We have some money in hand, but not quite enough for us to begin work on the church. Our success at Webb has been due to our efficient Building Committee of which Brother E. V. Catoe is the chairman. We are pleasantly situated at Webb. My people have done all that could be expected for our comfort. The pastor's salary was fixed at $1500.—O. L. Savage, P. C.

Raceland, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: Please spare me a little space in the Advocate to say a few words about the French Mission on Bayou Lafourche and Terrebonne. We have eleven preaching places, not including Houma, where Brother Morgan is doing a splendid work. It should be understood that this is a real mission here among these French people, who were reared in the Roman Catholic Church, and some of whom believe in all kinds of superstition. Some believe that the priest can bless and impart virtue to any kind of object. Last week I was in a home 40 miles below Raceland, on Bayou Lafourche, in which they had numerous things that the priest had blessed—holy water, holy candlesticks, and some kind of holy grass which they think will save them from fire, thunder, or drowning. Some of the men had been living with women 40 years and had reared families without being married. They did not know it was wrong until they heard a French Methodist preacher. This is a very difficult field, but God is calling some one to teach these people the Bible. Rev. M. Hebert and Rev. C. V. Breithaupt can tell how needy this section is. May God help us all in our hard work. It is hard, but is fairly encouraging.—Rev. A. D. Martin.

Gilbert, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: As I have not written the Advocate about my work—the Gilbert charge—I will give some facts about it. This is my third year at Gilbert. The latter part of my first year we began at Wisner a church building to cost about $2300, and completed it. It was dedicated in March, 1916. We had a revival there at that time which resulted in 15 conversions and accessions to the Church.....On February 21 of this year I began a revival meeting at Gilbert, with Rev. H. T. Young to do the preaching, and Brother Jack Brokaw to lead the singing. This series of services closed on March 18, with over 100 conversions and reclamations, and 49 persons united with the Church—45 joined the Methodist Church (by profession of faith) and 4 went to the Baptist Church. To say that it was a great meeting, is scarcely an adequate characterization of it. Eternity alone will reveal the good that was done. There are others who are expected to connect themselves with the Church soon. Brother Young is a plain, practical, gospel preacher. His messages reach the hearts of the people. Brother Brokaw is a splendid choir director and gospel singer. He is also an excellent worker with young people. Young and Brokaw make a fine team in a revival. No pastor will make a mistake to secure their services. One result of the late meeting is the prospect of a new church at Gilbert. We will also get two preachers, one missionary, and one gospel singer from this season of spiritual refreshing. The most of our accessions were grown people. Our finances are 50 per cent stronger than they were two years ago. So, we are growing in grace. Pray for us.—J. L. Roy, P. C.

DEATH OF MRS. J. W. GOODMAN.

On Thursday afternoon, January 25, 1917, at 5 o'clock, at the Meridian Sanitarium, in Meridian, Mississippi, the spirit of Mrs. Ida Lou Goodman, wife of Mr. J. W. Goodman, quietly passed into that sleep that only awakes around the great white throne.

Mrs. Goodman's maiden name was Ida Lou Harben. She was born near Waynesboro, on February 18, 1857, and was 59 years, 11 months and 7 days of age at the time of her death.

She was married to Mr. J. W. Goodman on November 10, 1875, and to their union two children were born—Mr. W. Chester Goodman and a little sister who passed away in infancy.

Mrs. Goodman had been a faithful and consistent member of the Methodist Church since early girlhood, and although prevented for many years because of the condition of her health from taking an active part in the work of her church, she was a member of the societies of the Church and always took a deep interest in everything that was for the upbuilding of the Master's work.

Her remains were brought here Friday morning and the funeral services were held at the Methodist Church that afternoon at one o'clock, Rev. C. M. Chapman, pastor of the church, officiating, at the obsequies, being assisted by Rev. W. J. Walters, pastor of the Waynesboro Circuit. The burial services took place at Hebron Cemetery that afternoon at five o'clock.

Many beautiful designs of flowers, attesting the great love and esteem of her friends, were sent by sorrowing relatives and friends, to be placed on her last resting place in the city of the dead.

Mr. Goodman and his son, Mr. W. Chester Goodman, have the sympathy of our entire people because of the death of their beloved relative.

Laugh When People Step On Your Feet

Try this yourself then pass it along to others. It works!

Ouch! ? ! ? ? ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn stops soreness at once, and soon the corn dries up and lifts right out without pain.

He says freezone is an ether compound which dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding tissue or skin. A quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callous from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels.

Nuxated Iron Should Be Used in Every Hospital and Prescribed by Every Physician, Says Dr. Howard James.

It quickly enriches the blood, strengthens the nerves and puts most astonishing youthful power and vigor into the veins of both men and women. It often increases the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous, run-down folks 100 per cent. in two weeks time.

Opinions of Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author, Dr. T. Alphonsus Wallace and other physicians who have tested Nuxated Iron in their own private practice.

In a very interesting and instructive discourse on the great value of plenty of iron in the blood, Dr. Howard James, said:

"A patient of mine remarked to me (after having been on a six week's course of Nuxated iron),

"'Say, Doctor, that there stuff is like magic.'

"Previous to using Nuxated Iron, I had been prescribing the various mineral salts of iron for years, only to meet complaints of discolored teeth, disturbed digestion, tied up, hardened secretions, etc., when I came across Nuxated Iron, an elegant, ingenious preparation containing organic iron, which has no destructive action on the teeth—no corrosive effect on the stomach, and which is readily assimilated into the blood and quickly makes its presence felt by increased vigor, snap and staying power.

"Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron.

"As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak or rundown, instead of dosing themselves with habit forming drugs, stimulants and alcoholic beverages I am convinced that in this way they could ward off disease, preventing it becoming organic in thousands of cases and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous maladies. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood.

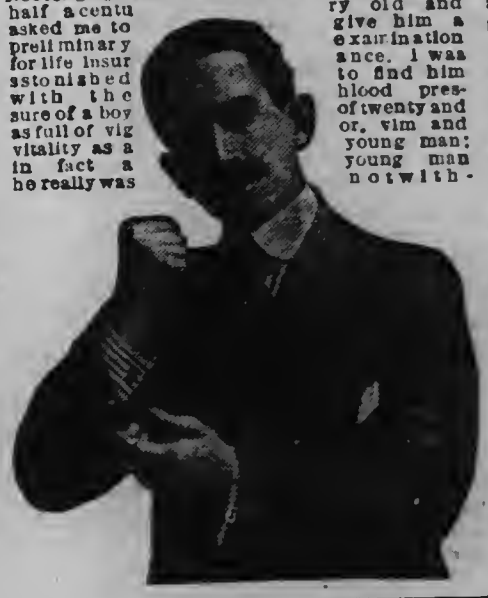
If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks, then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. From my own experience with Nuxated Iron I feel it is such a valuable remedy that it should be kept in every hospital and prescribed by every physician in this country."

Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston Physician, who has studied both in this country and great European medical institutions, was asked what he thought of Dr. James' remarks. In reply, he said: "I fully agree with Dr. James. People need more iron. There can be no strong, vigorous iron men and beautiful, healthy women without iron. Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a twenty and vim and vigor, young man; young man as full of vitality as a boy in fact a notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was he really was taking iron—Nuxated Iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30, he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50, after taking Nuxated Iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth."



Dr. Howard James tells physicians he believes that more Nuxated Iron should be prescribed to meet the great problem of iron deficiency, with its attendent symptoms of weakness, nervousness, lack of vitality, paleness, and generally rundown conditions.

WARNS AGAINST USE OF ORDINARY METALIC IRON so commonly taken by most people.

Dr. A. J. Newman, formerly House Surgeon Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, in commenting on the value of Nuxated Iron said: "This remedy has proven through my own test of it to excel any preparation I have ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders. The manufacturers are to be congratulated in having given to the public a long felt want, a true tonic supplying iron in an easily digested and assimilated form. A true health builder in every sense of the word."

Dr. T. Alphonsus Wallace, a physician of many years' experience in this country and who has been given many honorary titles in England, was next asked to give an opinion on Nuxated Iron. Dr. Wallace said:

"I do not make a practice of recommending advertised medicinal products, but I have found Nuxated Iron so potent in nervous, rundown conditions, that I believe all should know of it. The men and women of today need more iron in their blood than was the case twenty or thirty years ago. This because of the demineralized diet which now is served daily in thousands of homes and also because of the demand for greater resistance necessary to offset the greater number of health hazards to be met at every turn."

The next to be consulted was Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York physician and medical author, who said:

"I heartily concur in all that Dr. James has said, only in some respects I would go further. Dr. James forgot to mention how foods lose their iron value by improper methods of cookery. In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated corn meal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste-pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked is responsible for another grave iron loss. Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron—Nuxated Iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they can not take any man or woman under 50 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

THE YOUNG PREACHERS AT MILLSAPS.

Dear Dr. Meek: I wish the brethren of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences realized what a wonderful treasure is stored away at Millsaps College in the way of young preachers. Never before in the history of the college has a more consecrated, earnest, and self-denying set of young preachers been in attendance. Please allow me space enough in the Advocate to tell something about them and what they are doing.

Several of the young men stay at the dormitory and some at private residences, but the majority have rooms in the campus cottages, jokingly referred to as the "shacks." The majority are already members of some district conference, some are yet to be licensed, and several are members of an Annual Conference, having regular work to attend to.

Every one of these boys seems in earnest as to the choice of his lifework. They, as did Paul, believe in doing one thing, and are exerting their energies in one direction and preparing for one work. That these boys have the right spirit no one can deny. Some are attending this session at a great sacrifice, but they will be more than repaid in the future. They are perfecting themselves for the greatest calling known to man, and no sacrifice on their part will be made without being speedily repaid.

God's Spirit seems to be with every one of these fine young men, and they are being blessed with good health, happiness, and the joy that only the Christian who looks for a cross before a crown has experienced.

I hope to be numbered among the regular students for the ministry at Millsaps College next year, and I feel that if God will bless me as He has blessed these boys, I shall rejoice in the greatness of my calling.

Very truly yours,
HILTON BUTLER.

CALOMEL MAKES YOU SICK, UGH!

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Better Than Calomel and Can Not Salivate.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for 50 cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the net day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

Druggist's Experience with Kidney Medicine

I have handled and sold Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root for some time and have heard customers claim that it had produced very satisfactory results in different ailments of the kidneys, liver and bladder. I have nothing but favorable reports at hand and my personal opinion is that there is not anything on the market that will equal Swamp-Root for disease of the kidneys, liver and bladder and I know of a physician who is a very strong believer in the merits of Swamp-Root.

Very truly yours,
THE J. M. WATTS MERC. STORE,
J. M. WATTS.

The Root of Skin Troubles

Skin diseases are caused by parasitic germs, and unless these germs are killed your skin trouble will last indefinitely, growing worse each day. These parasitic germs may be killed and without any injurious effect by simply applying Tetterine, a fragrant salve. It is commended highly by the best physicians. Sold by druggists. 50c a box, or by mail from

CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS, AND LIVER DISORDERS.

Cleanliness is the first law of health and it means more than keeping the hands and body clean. It demands that the inside of the body shall be kept clear of impurities. It demands that the waste products be not allowed to stay any longer in the body than Nature normally provides.

The importance of keeping your bowels normal is seen when it is remembered that there is not a solitary disease in the entire list that does not demand as one of the first requisites in its treatment the thorough elimination of waste matter from the bowels.

Two of the commonest causes of constipation are wrong diet and irregularity in going to stool. The liver failing to secrete enough bile is another potent reason.

Dr. Miles' Liver Pills are an ideal remedy for such a condition. They gently stimulate the action of the liver and the bowels, and with careful attention to habits of stool and diet, insure their proper and regular action.

The following are some of the reasons why we so strongly advocate the use of Dr. Miles' Liver Pills in cases of torpid liver, biliousness, constipation and indigestion: Because they do not cause griping or other unpleasant sensations like ordinary pills. Because their use does not derange the stomach, liver or bowels. Because they are a very gentle laxative and if properly used cause natural movements of the bowels. Because they are small, mild and sure.

A HEALTHY BODY.

Do you suffer from constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, heartburn, or other forms of liver trouble? A healthy liver means a healthy body. When constipated don't poison yourself by failing to take the proper treatment. Don't force your perspiration to carry off through your skin pores more than its share of the impurities of your body by failing to keep your bowels clean and healthy. Take Van Lax for your liver. It is harmless, contains no calomel or habit-forming drugs, is pleasant in taste and results. It promotes a healthy condition in your entire digestive system. Take Van Lax and keep your body healthy. Sold by all reliable dealers. In bottles 50c. Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

Invigorating to the Pale and Sickly

The Old Standard general strengthening tonic, GROVE'S TASTELESS chill TONIC, drives out Malaria, enriches the blood, and builds up the system. A true Tonic. For adults and children. 50c.

The problem of doing good and the problem of being good are not two problems, but one problem.—Dr. W. C. Bell.

The Kidneys and the Skin. If the kidneys are weak or torpid, the skin will be pimply or blotchy. Hood's Sarsaparilla strengthens and stimulates the kidneys, and clears the complexion. By thoroughly purifying the blood it makes good health.

"What does Christ think of you? Not what you think of yourself, not the estimate of the world. You need to 'get right with God.'" such as Eczema, Ringworm, Tetter, Itch, Acne, etc., are caused by parasites. To properly treat these diseases, you must kill the parasites. Tetterine is extensively prescribed by the best physicians because it kills these parasitic germs, thereby putting an end to skin troubles. It is a fragrant salve and is absolutely harmless. Ask your druggist for it. 50c a box. By mail from SHUPTRINE COMPANY, SAVANNAH, GA.

Everlasting life dates from regeneration, not from death; we cannot have the life immortal if we be not born again.—A. J. Morris.

TWO GOOD REMEDIES

WORKING TOGETHER, PRODUCE MARVELLOUS RESULTS.

For instance, Hood's Sarsaparilla, the standard blood purifier, is recommended for conditions that are scrofulous or dependent on impure blood.

Peptiron Pills, the new iron tonic, are especially recommended for conditions that are radically or characteristically anemic and nervous.

Many persons suffer from a combination of these conditions. They are afflicted with swellings of the glands, bunches in the neck, cutaneous eruptions, and sores on different parts of the body, limbs and face, and are besides pale and nervous.

If these patients take both Hood's Sarsaparilla (before meals) and Peptiron Pills (after meals) they are reasonably sure to derive fourfold benefit. These two great medicines supplement each other, and the use of both, even in cases where only one may appear to be indicated, is of great advantage. Get them from your druggist.

Work we do in stone will crumble, but when we teach a great lesson to a child its influence will last forever.—J. R. Miller.

In every sorrow is a blessing of comfort, in every burden is rolled up a gift of God. In all life Christ is with us if we are true to Him.—J. R. Miller.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE COUNCIL.

Again we call attention to the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council which will be held at First Church, New Orleans, April 12-20. It is a rare opportunity, and perhaps one that will not soon come again to those in our three Conferences, so we urge our women to make every sacrifice possible to attend this wonderful gathering. Those who attend will receive a great spiritual blessing, will enjoy a season of inspiration, and have a deep and lasting impression made upon their lives.

Pray for God's guidance upon the sessions of the Council, for wisdom and clearness of perception are needed by those who have the direction of affairs. May this be the greatest meeting the Council has ever had! Great because of God's presence and nearness to every one in attendance.

THE COUNCIL DAILY.

This paper will be issued as usual during the sessions of the Council. If you cannot attend the meeting, be sure to subscribe for the "Daily," for it will bring the Council happenings to you in a concise attractive form.

It is only 25 cents for the entire set of papers, and they are worth many times that amount. If you have not already sent in your subscription, do so now. Send to Mrs. S. A. Montgomery, 7926 Elm Street, New Orleans, La.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON SUPPLIES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Realizing that the work is often hindered by a lack of equipment and that the needs of our institutional homes are similar to the needs of our own homes, we recommend:

1. That the presidents of the various auxiliaries call especial attention to the good that may be accomplished through this department of the work.
2. That each auxiliary shall endeavor to send at least one box of supplies either to one of our institutions or to our French Mission, and, in order to avoid overlapping, we suggest that our donations be apportioned by districts as follows:

New Orleans and Shreveport—St. Mark's Hall.

Baton Rouge and Lafayette—Mary Werlein.

Ruston, Monroe, and Alexandria—Scarritt Training School and French Mission.

3. That our auxiliaries lay on their hearts the need of these missions when replenishing their own households, and when preserving the fruits which our Father bountifully gives us, to tithe with these missions.

Mrs. C. B. CARTER,
Chairman.

REPORT OF CHILDRENS' WORK.

We recommend:

1. That we accept the Year Book from the exquisite cover to the last page, as a real helper, furnishing such splendid material, and guidance for uniform and unfailing program work for the year.
2. That we especially take note of the suggestion that a scrap-book called "Our Specials" be made, with Soochow, Holding Institute, Mines and Kindergarten work as subject matter, with a cover design to add to the attractiveness and dignity of such a scrap-book. We suggest that this be done at this season of the year, and that during the fall months, when our attention is turned to our homeland for study, that a scrap-book of our home life, customs, and holidays (Thanksgiving and Christmas) be made and sent as the books were this year to China.
3. That wherever possible, Mothers' Clubs be formed, and interesting information be given on the children's work and "The Specials" for which our children are enlisted; in fact, using every worthy method to educate the mothers along with the children in the great fundamentals of the child's part in financing the Kingdom of God.
4. That we give the Missionary Catechism a cordial welcome, and place it in the hands of the children, mothers, and Sunday school teachers, and that it be used as a text book throughout the year. Price, 5 cents.
5. That we insist upon giving the Pledge Cards a fair trial; that the mothers and children prayerfully make this pledge together; that we set as our share in the Council Pledge of $30,000 for children's work, $500.
6. That we keep continually before us the goal—a children's society in every church (Junior and Baby Division); a "Young Christian Worker" in every home. With this before us, enter into the campaign, which shall be projected by this Conference for membership, subscribers to The Young Christian Worker, and Mission Study in October.
7. That the Standard of Excellence be kept before the children, and that Executive Committee meetings be held quarterly, at which time the young officers be instructed with regard to their work and programs discussed.
8. That the children have representatives at the Annual Conference and district meetings—the auxiliary second vice president being this representative; and
9. That the adult auxiliaries show interest in the Children's work by frequently visiting their meetings, and that at the regular monthly meeting a prayer be offered for the children of the church.

Standing Rules for Junior Societies.

1. That a Children's Missionary Society be organized in every church in our Conference, if possible.
2. That a strong effort be made to place "The Young Christian Worker" in the homes of all the children of the church.
3. That one day of the Week of Prayer be given to the children, and a special program be prepared for them.
4. That at each District and Annual Meeting, an hour be given to the work of the children's department, and
5. That the children be kept in touch with the Specials assigned them by the Council.

Mrs. R. H. HARPER,
Chairman.

REPORT OF SOCIAL SERVICE COMMITTEE.

We recommend:

1. Co-operation with all agencies in one's own community that stand for social and civic betterment.
2. That we seek to secure observance of the fourth commandment regarding the Sabbath Day and earnestly request the influence of our Christian people in the enforcement of its observance.
3. We urge that the auxiliary superintendents of social service and her committees keep in close touch with the pastor concerning any movement tending to be a hindrance to the progress of the Kingdom of God, and aid him in every way possible to better community conditions.
4. Believing that many moving pictures are harmful and degrading in their influence, especially upon our young people, we recommend a local censorship committee to create public sentiment and public authority against them.
5. That we learn the needs of the colored people and by sympathy and help strive to create higher ideals and better living conditions among them through the organization of Colored Women's Community Clubs.
6. That we use our influence to the utmost against street carnivals and immoral shows, and discourage with all our power the opening of these shows on the Lord's Day.
7. That, as the curse of the liquor traffic is the greatest evil in our country to-day; that we endorse every agency seeking to accomplish its downfall, and urge every member of the Woman's Missionary Society to use her influence for national prohibition; and
8. That we have a conference committee on legislation whose duty shall be to influence legislation, and a sub committee in each auxiliary to study local laws and report to the Conference committee.

Mrs. E. R. KENNEDY,
Chairman.

CLEAN WHITE TEETH

with hard and healthy gums means general good health. Animal and vegetable parasites upon the teeth and gums cause decay of the teeth and very often cause serious illness. Too much care cannot be taken in keeping the teeth perfectly clean and free from parasites. Microscopical examinations show that only those who use saponaceous dentrifice are free from animal and vegetable parasites.

BROWN'S CAMPHORATED SAPONACEOUS DENTRIFICE removes all parasites and tartar, strengthens and relieves soreness of the gums and teeth, makes gums hard and healthy, preservos the teeth, keeping them clean and white, and sweetens the breath. It is highly commended by dentists, and is absolutely safe.

Coughs Worse at Night

The simplest and quickest way to get rid of a wearing, racking night cough, tickling throat, hoarse, wheezy breathing is to take

Foley's Honey and Tar.

In it, you get the curative influence of the pine tar and other healing ingredients, together with the mollifying and laxative action of honey.

Editor C. T. Miller, Canneltoo, Ind. (Enquirer) writes: "I was troubled with bronchial affection and coughed constantly day and night. I took Foley's Honey and Tar and got relief. It is great for bronchial colds and coughs." La grippe and bronchial coughs, croup, hoarseness, tickling throat, are all quickly relieved.

ELDERLY WOMEN SAFEGUARDED

Tell Others How They Were Carried Safely Through Change of Life.

Durand, Wis.—"I am the mother of fourteen children and I owe my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I was 45 and had the Change of Life, a friend recommended it and it gave me such relief from my bad feelings that I took several bottles. I am now well and healthy and recommend your Compound to other ladies." —Mrs. MARY RIDGWAY, Durand, Wis.

A Massachusetts Woman Writes:

Blackstone, Mass. — "My troubles were from my age, and I felt awfully sick for three years. I had hot flashes often and frequently suffered from pains. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now am well." —Mrs. PIERRE COURNOYER, Box 239, Blackstone, Mass.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and dizziness, should be heeded by middle-aged women Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has carried many women safely through this crisis.

Healthy Skin

DEPENDS ON KIDNEYS.

The skin and the intestines, which work together with the kidneys to throw out the poisons of the body, do a part of the work, but a clean body and a healthy one depends on the kidneys. If the kidneys are clogged with toxic poisons you suffer from stiffness in the knees in the morning on arising, your joints seem "rusty," you may have rheumatic pains, pain in the back, stiff neck, headaches, sometimes swollen feet, or neuralgic pains—all due to the uric acid or toxic poisons in the blood. This is the time to go to the nearest drug store and simply obtain a 50c. package of Anuric, the discovery of Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y. Then drink a cup of hot water before meals, with an Anuric Tablet, and notice the gratifying results. You will find Anuric more active than lithia. Dissolves uric acid as water does sugar.

AFTER "THE GRIP," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, or other debilitating diseases, your quickest way to get flesh and strength is with Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. That gives purity to your blood, plumpness to your body, and puts every function into perfect working order. It makes thoroughly effective every natural means of repairing and nourishing your system. For pale, puny, scrofulous children, nothing approaches it. It builds up completely their flesh, their strength, and their health.

In the most stubborn Scrofulous, Skin or Scalp Diseases, Eczema, Salt-rheum, and every kindred ailment, it effects wonderful cures. Contains no alcohol or harmful drugs. In tablet or liquid form.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not elimnated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter-pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiastic on inside-bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, sallow complexion, others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach or constipation are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

Scientific Treatment For Rheumatism.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a salt combination scientifically prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says: "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." Sold by druggists; price 50 cents, or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

To remove freckles the best thing to do is to remove the outer cuticle of the skin, which carries the freckles. This is easily done with Kintho Cream. The Kintho should peel off the old, freckled skin, a little at a time, gradually bringing the under layer of skin to view. The new skin is beautiful, soft, clear, white and youthful looking and, of course, should have no freckles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed. Read carefully special instructions inside of box.

THE PERFECT GIN OUTFIT

is composed of the right kinds of gins for the cotton grown in that locality, backed up by other tested machinery and a flawless system of drying and cleaning cotton and handling it expeditiously from the farmer's wagon to the delivery platform. Here is the combination that DOES MOST for the ginner and for his customers:

CONTINENTAL MUNGER SYSTEM CLEANING

Continental Ginning Machinery and the Munger System give the ginner an outfit that enables him to gin MORE COTTON at a less cost per bale than any other outfit and gives the customer the largest turnout possible for his seed cotton, with a sample which enhances the value of his bale materially over the same cotton ginned by less scientific methods.

Therefore, it is just as natural for a ginner to be prosperous and his customers to be satisfied when he operates a Continental-Munger-System Outfit as it is for the sun to rise every morning.

Let us supply you with this perfect outfit, INDIVIDUALIZED for your special needs with Munger, Pratt, Eagle or Winship gins as desired. Ginning time will be here before you know it. Write at once to Continental Sales Office nearest and we'll get busy for you.

Sunday School

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Put more thinking, working, and praying behind Children's Day exercises and many of the difficulties will vanish. This prescription is good for anything we have to do. Our aim is to have every charge in the Conference observe the day this year. We are testing this above-mentioned plan. Watch how it works.

Como, under the tactful management of Neblett, his wife, and workers, is on the Sunday school map. They are in sight of a "Standard" school.

Brother Shipman has a big job at Itta Bena. His school is doing some real work. Two of his teachers agreed to take the Teacher-training Course as individual students.

Mrs. L. E. Claiborne is the teacher of a fine class of men at Sunflower. This class has a neat bungalow where it meets for class work and social gatherings.

Collins is putting in full time on the Courtland Circuit. He has organized and is leading Teacher-training Classes in two of his churches. He observes Children's Day in every church, and always takes a respectable offering.

Jonestown is preparing to build a new house of worship adapted to the needs of the children of the congregation. The preacher, superintendent, and teachers are doing work that will tell on the life of the community.

Coahoma and Lyon, under the leadership of Stephens and his excellent workers, are doing as high-class work as if they were city churches. Both these congregations need new buildings for their schools.

Isola has agreed to undertake the full program of a first-class school. Shaw is a leader that leads, a teacher that teaches his teachers. This congregation needs a modern church building.

The work done by Rev. Marvin Langley in his school at Pickens ranks with the best. This school is taking every point in the Standard of Efficiency. Likewise the school at Durant is maintaining the same high standard under the leadership of McCafferty, Lanfair & Co. Lexington has fallen into line with the best schools, under the care of Brother Jaco and his fine band of workers. The Durant District is going to contend with the Sardis District this year for first place in the Conference, in giving the people a religious education.

Merigold is building a parsonage, and in a short time will be forced to plan a new church to accommodate their growing school. Brother Lott takes hold of the work like a veteran. This school has agreed to come up to the "Standard," and has ordered 22 books and other helps for this purpose. Mrs. H. R. Park gave $5 to supply the teachers of our orphanage with a dozen copies of the Teacher-training book. Great is Merigold. A standard man will make a standard school.

CHILDEN'S DAY STATISTICS.

As the time for Children's Day observance for 1917 is near it may be interesting to readers in the different Conferences of the Gulf Division to know the relative standing of the seven Conferences of the Division for the year 1916 as to the offerings reported in the Minutes for that year.

Worked out so as to show the average contribution per Sunday school member, the relative standing of the Conferences is as follows:

1—North Mississippi Conference	$3.86
2—Mississippi Conference	3.10
3—Litle Rock Conference	2.51
4—Loulsiana Conference	2.15
5—North Arkansas Conference	1.64
6—Alabama Conference	1.18
7—North Alabama Conference	.93

It is hoped—and believed—that every Conference is going to surpass that record this year, and I am glad to know that in some at least very active campaigns have been started with that end in view. Children's Day affords an especially opportune time for the strengthening of denominational loyalty and the connectional spirit in our Sunday schools, both of which are very much needed. All Conference Sunday School Boards are furnishing the programs free to all schools. Make application to the field secretary or chairman of your Board. Let every superintendent make an honest effort to have his school surpass its last year's record.

A. L. DIETRICH.

Enrollment of Classes in the Teacher-Training Course, February 20 to March 20, 1917.

During the period stated above the enrollment from the Gulf Division was as follows, by Conferences:

Alabama Conference—six classes and two individual students, at Clanton, DeFuniak Springs, Greenville (2), Prichard, Pine Hill, Pushmataha, and Whistler; 77 students in all.

Little Rock Conference—six classes, at Center Point, Emmett, Hot Springs, Kingsland, Little Rock, and Thornton; 76 students.

Louisiana Conference—four classes, at Alexandria (2), Many, and Ruston; 64 students.

Mississippi Conference—four classes, at Hattiesburg, Jackson, Meridian, and Petal; 50 students.

North Alabama Conference—six classes and two individual students, at Alexander City, Birmingham, Ensley, Henagar, Munford, Sheffield, and Stevenson; 77 students in all.

North Arkansas Conference—three classes and one individual student, at Crawfordville, Earl, Piggott, and Springdale; 26 students in all.

North Mississippi Conference—one individual student, at Brooksville.

The totals for the Division are, 29 classes, six individual students; aggregate, 371 students.

For the whole Church the enrollment was 83 classes, 1027 students, 12 of the students being individuals not in classes.

Diplomas were granted in the Gulf Division as follows: One Standard diploma at Eufala in the Alabama Conference; one First Course diploma at Prairie Grove in the North Arkansas Conference.

DEATH OF MRS. A. P. McCASKILL.

The friends and acquaintances of Mrs. A. P. McCaskill were both shocked and pained to hear of her death, which occurred at 7:30 o'clock this morning. She had been ill for several weeks with something similar to neuralgia of the heart, but few, if any of her friends realized that her condition was so critical, and the call of death was unexpected. The community is richer and better for having had this bright Christian character, and her place will long remain a vacancy for those who were fortunate enough to live lives in touch with one as consecrated as was hers. As a Christian she walked bravely and boldly among the world's snares and hardships. As a home-maker, a wife and a mother, she was above reproach.

Her friendship was a valuable jewel to those who won it. She lived her almost four-score years peacefully, and responded to the last call in the full consciousness that she bore the ill-will of no one. Little more than a year ago she was bereft of her life partner, and though she was brave and uncomplaining in her loneliness, she seemed to feel the separation more and more keenly, her strength gradually succumbing to her grief, until her wearied spirit made little resistence when the call to eternal rest sounded. She was a devout and devoted member of the Methodist Church, one of long standing and faithful conformity to all its rules and requirements, and her vacant pew will be a solemn reminder of the richness of her devotion to her faith, as well as of the loss that the church and congregation sustained when she was removed from their midst. Mrs. McCaskill leaves two sons and two daughters, J. E. McCaskill of Memphis, T. A. McCaskill of Meridian, and Misses Mary and Annie, both of Macon.—From Macon Beacon of March 23.

The Composition of Coca-Cola and its Relation to Tea

Prompted by the desire that the public shall be thoroughly informed as to the composition and dietetic character of Coca-Cola, the Company has issued a booklet giving a detailed analysis of its recipe which is as follows:

Water, sterilized by boiling (carbonated); sugar, granulated, first quality; fruit flavoring extracts with caramel; acid flavorings, citric (lemon) and phosphoric; essence of tea—the refreshing principle.

The following analysis, by the late Dr. John W. Mallet, Fellow of the Royal Society and for nearly forty years Professor of Chemistry in the University of Virginia, shows the comparative stimulating or refreshing strength of tea and Coca-Cola, measured in terms of the refreshing principle:

Black tea (hot)—1 cupful (5 fl. oz.)	1.54
Green tea (cold)—1 glassful (8 fl. oz. exclusive of ice)	2.02
Coca-Cola (fountain)—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.21
Coca-Cola (bottlers)—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.12

From the above recipe and analysis, which are confirmed by all chemists who have analyzed these beverages, it is apparent that Coca-Cola is a carbonated, fruit-flavored modification of tea of a little more than one-half its stimulating strength.

A copy of the booklet referred to above will be mailed free on request, and The Coca-Cola Company especially invites inquiry from those who are interested in pure food and public health propaganda. Address

THE COUNCIL HYMN.

(No. 197 In The Methodist Hymnal.)

Spirit of God, descend upon my heart;
Wean it from earth, through all its pulses move;
Stoop to my weakness, mighty as thou art,
And make me love thee as I ought to love.

I ask no dream, no prophet ecstasies,
No sudden rending of the veil of clay,
No angel visitant, no opening skies:
But take the dimness of my soul away.

Hast thou not bid us love thee, God and King?
All, all thine own, soul, heart, and strength, and mind;
I see thy cross—there teach my heart to cling:
O let me seek thee, and O let me find!

Teach me to feel that thou are always nigh;
Teach me the struggles of the soul to bear,
To check the rising doubt, the rebel sigh;
Teach me the patience of unanswered prayer.

Teach me to love thee as thine angels love—
One holy passion filling all my frame;
The kindling of the heaven-descended Dove,
My heart an altar, and thy love the flame.

—George Croly.

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

By the time that this issue of the Advocate is in the hands of our readers, the Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be in session in New Orleans. This is the great administrative body that directs our woman's work—a department of our Church's activity which has grown to large proportions. The Auxiliaries of the Woman's Missionary Society raised during the fiscal year lately ended $318,731 for foreign missions, and $295,172 for home missions. The institutions that these workers have established, and which they maintain, include churches, schools, hospitals, Wesley Houses, and rescue homes, and the sphere of their operations has extended to many foreign lands.

A few words as to the composition of the Council may possibly be informing to some. Paragraph 424 of the Discipline of 1914 reads as follows:

"There shall be a delegated body to be known as the Woman's Missionary Council. It shall be composed of a President, two Vice Presidents, two or more Secretaries, a Treasurer, Superintendents of Bureaus, the Corresponding Secretary or alternate, and the President or alternate of the Woman's Missionary Society of each Annual Conference. The Secretaries of the Board of Missions, both men and women, the Assistant Treasurer, and the women who are members of the Board of Missions, shall be ex officio members of the Woman's Missionary Council.

"The Council shall hold annual meetings to hear reports from the fields, home and foreign, and from the societies; to consider the fields, lines of work, the various enterprises and the amount needed for the same, and make recommendations to the Board of Missions through the Committee on Estimates to be considered with other estimates of the Board for final determination, and to consecrate the women who have been accepted for service."

One of the duties of the Council at its meeting immediately preceding the assembling of the General Conference of the Church is to nominate, by ballot, the ten women on the General Board of Missions, to which body the Council is organically related.

During the seven years that it has been in existence the Woman's Missionary Council has made a notable record. In an article in the Daily Advocate issued by our Last General Conference, Dr. W. W. Pinson, the General Secretary of the Board of Missions, thus referred to its achievements: "All that has been said of the progress in the other lines of work, can be said of the noble work being done by the women of the Church in the field of missions. Through the Missionary Council they have been able to maintain the fine enthusiasm of the Conference and Auxiliary Societies, and to carry on very efficient methods of organization, education, and inspiration." No body of women in any other denomination has outstripped those of Southern Methodism.

We heartily welcome the Woman's Missionary Council and all the visitors that it has brought among us to the city of New Orleans, and we pray that their stay here may in every respect be pleasant and that the business sessions and public meetings that shall be held may contribute to the strengthening of their great work and to the extension of the Kingdom of Christ.

MISS BELLE H. BENNETT,
President.

Miss Belle H. Bennett, of Richmond, Kentucky, who, as President, will preside over the Woman's Missionary Council, of the Methodist Church, South, to meet in New Orleans, April 12-20, is one of the most distinguished women in the country. She relates her Church work to public life, and illustrates the value of woman's co-operation in every movement for the good of the community. She is broad-minded and tolerant, and her presence in any assembly is an inspiration.

In a recent appeal before the Woman's Missionary Council, Miss Bennett brought out the interesting facts that Southern Methodism has approximately 2,000,000 communicants, grouped in 19,780 congregations and worshiping in 16,973 church buildings. The Woman's Missionary Society of Southern Methodism has approximately 10,000 auxiliaries—adult, young people and juniors. These 10,000 auxiliaries are massed about in 7000 churches.

THE FIRST WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY IN LOUISIANA.

The Rayne Memorial Auxiliary has the honor of being the oldest Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in the Louisiana Conference, and in a short time will celebrate its Fortieth Anniversary.

The birth of the Society is thus described by Mrs. (Bishop) Linus Parker:

"One bright spring morning, April 26, 1877 (shortly after the organization of the Central Mexican Mission by Bishop Keener), a small company of the women of Rayne Memorial Church were called together by Mrs. (Bishop) J. C. Keener, who, after some introductory words, with the gentle wisdom, and great love for the Master's work, which had always been the ruling principles of her life, explained to the listening friends the great necessity which then semed to have arisen for the women of the Church to begin to take an active part in furthering the cause of missions; this new field, Mexico, lay open, white unto the harvest, and needy beyond description."

Organization was then effected, and among the officers elected was Mrs. R. W. Rayne, President; Mrs. Linus Parker, Secretary; Mrs. J. P. Harrison, Jr., Treasurer. "The Mexican mission was then adopted as the child of its love and care, and the Society never at any time regretted their choice of a Mission Field."

In May, 1893, the Rayne Memorial Society became an auxiliary to the Woman's Board of Missions. Of the little band of women who met on that fair April morning in 1877, Mrs. John G. Rowland alone remains with us, and will be the guest of honor at the anniversary celebration. Mrs. John B. Parker, the gifted President of our City Board of Missions, has had good training, being the daughter of Mrs. Rowland, and the daughter-in-law of Mrs. Linus Parker.

MRS. BELLE O'PRY.

OUR GREAT EXEMPLAR.

Jesus had a definite and fixed purpose. When but a youth, he said, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" And later in life he exclaimed, "I must work the works of Him that sent me." No dabbler in all sorts of doings was he. He recognized his mission as too great to be abandoned or neglected for the ephemeral movements of the day which excited and commanded the attention of the superficial multitude. To be an efficient representative of Christ in the world now is a task quite large enough for the average Christian minister. If God has called us to this high service, let us not forsake it to hearken to the numerous calls that come to us to scatter our energies in other directions. Concentration is one of the secrets of power and success.

SOME DISTINGUISHED VISITORS

BISHOP W. R. LAMBUTH, M.D., D.D.

Bishop Lambuth comes of missionary parentage. His father was Rev. J. W. Lambuth, of the Mississippi Conference; and his mother was of Scotch ancestry, her maiden name being Mary Isabella McClellan, who was a descendant of the Gordons of Edinburgh. The Bishop was born in Shanghai, China, in 1854. In 1868, he came to the United States and entered Emory and Henry College (Virginia), and was graduated from that institution. In 1877 he was graduated from the Medical Department of Vanderoilt University, and was married to a daughter of Dr. D. C. Kelley, of the Tennessee Conference. He then spent nine years in China establishing the Soochow Hospital, and acting for a year as Superintendent of the Mission. In 1882 he took a second degree in Medicine, receiving it from the Bellevue Medical College of New York, and later took a special course in surgery at Edinburgh, Scotland. In 1887 he was made Superintendent of the Japan Mission, continuing in that position until 1891, when, upon returning to the United States, he was elected General Missionary Secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and served in that capacity for 18 years. He was elected to the office of Bishop by the General Conference at Asheville, N. C., in May, 1910. Bishop Lambuth is recognized as one of the best informed men concerning missionary work in the United States, and has been honored in many ways by interdenominational missionary gatherings, both in the United States and abroad. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of England, a most unusual distinction, in the year 1909. Bishop Lambuth will have charge of the devotional hour each day while the Council is in session and will consecrate the missionaries and deaconesses that are to be set apart to their chosen work.

MRS. R. W. MacDONELL,

Administrative Secretary, Woman's Work, Home Department.

Mrs. MacDonell was the only daughter of W. D. Williams, who, with Samuel G. Howe, of Boston, and Dr. Huntoon, of Kentucky, was a pioneer in the education of the blind. For more than forty years he was Principal of the State School for the Blind, of Georgia. Mrs. MacDonell is the widow of Rev. Robert W. MacDonell, a missionary to Mexico, who died many years ago.

As Administrative Secretary, she has the supervision of the schools among mountain people, foreigners, delinquents, dependents, and Negroes. She also has supervision of the Wesley House work, the deaconesses and Home Mission workers, and the immigrant work.

For more than sixteen years, she has filled this office, during which time the values of the properties have increased from $50,000 to $540,000; the Wesley House work has been created, and the work among dependent girls and Negroes has been opened.

MISS MABEL HEAD, M.A. Ph.B.,

Secretary of Foreign Department.

Miss Head is of Virginia ancestry. She was educated at Cornell University, Vassar College, and New York State Teachers' College, and received shortly after her graduation some special training for missionary work, expecting to go to India. Providential hindrances making that impossible, she gave herself to Christian education. She taught three years in one of the New York State Academies and was a member of the State force of Institute Conductors. Later she accepted the Presidency of the Dalton Female College, a Methodist school at Dalton, Ga. After six years there she spent three years at LaGrange Female College, LaGrange, Ga., where she organized the department of Pedagogy. She left there to become Associate Secretary of the Woman's Home Missionary Society and later became Educational Secretary of the Board of Missions, and in 1914 was made Secretary of the Foreign Work.

MRS. F. H. E. ROSS,

Treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Council.

Among the officers of the Council of Missionary Workers of the Southern Methodist Church, now in session in New Orleans, is Mrs. F. H. E. Ross, Treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Council, who, during 1916, received and disbursed for that body more than a half-million dollars.

At the time of her election to the office of Treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Council, in 1910, Mrs. Ross lived in Greensboro, N. C. Having lost her husband while her children were quite small, she reared her two sons to manhood, educating them in the medical profession.

She spent seventeen years as head bookkeeper for a large insurance company in Greensboro, N. C., during which time she was treasurer of the Woman's Temperance Union of North Carolina for a number of years, and also served the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Western North Carolina Conference. She was serving the Conference as Corresponding Secretary at the time of her election to her present office.

MRS. W. A. ALBRIGHT,

First Vice President.

Mrs. W. A. Albright has had many years of experience in all lines of Church work, and has unusual gifts for the specific work of her department. Bright and sunny of disposition, cheerful and optimistic always, children turn to her as naturally as the flower to light.

While she has been President of the Foreign Missionary Society and Corresponding Secretary of the Home Mission Society of her loved church for years, and also at one time District Secretary of the Atlanta District Foreign Society, and Corresponding Secretary of the Home Department of the North Georgia Conference Society—yet her greatest work has perhaps been as Superintendent of the Primary Department of the Sunday School in Grace Church, Atlanta. For many years she has poured out her life for the enlargement of the child-life of the Church.

So great and so faithful has been her work that her pastor has said he would like to erect a great children's building in the center of Atlanta where she might put her touch upon the whole child life of the Methodism of that city.

Fortunate indeed is the Woman's Missionary Council in having such a woman for the department of its children's work.

MISS SARA ESTELLE HASKIN.

In early life God took her mother home, and as a girl she lived in a Methodist parsonage with a preacher-uncle and aunt and an older cousin. After her school days were over, she became a teacher in the Howard-Payne College, one of the old and well-established Methodist schools for girls in Missouri. It was there that God spoke to her, calling her to prepare for a special work that he wanted done for some of his poor, neglected children. She gave up her place at Howard-Payne and went to the Scarritt Bible and Training School and spent a year in systematic study of the Bible and the best methods of reaching and helping the poor and needy in the slums of the big city.

When her year of study was at an end, she was appointed by the Woman's Board of Home Missions to work in Dallas, Texas. After getting the work there well established, it was thought best to send her throughout the Church to speak to the people about the needs in our great cities. After a year, she was sent to organize the Wesley House in Louisville, Ky., which has become one of our largest settlements.

When the Methodist Training School was opened in Nashville, Tenn., Miss Haskin was selected to be the Bible teacher, and also to supervise the field of work of the young men and women attending there.

She is still working in Nashville, in the Bethlehem House, where God's children with dark skins are learning to live better lives. Perhaps, she is best known as Editor of The Young Christian Worker, in which month after month she writes to the children of our Church, shaping their lives for more definite service by so vividly portraying the needs of God's world and how to meet those needs.

MRS. E. B. CHAPPELL,

One of the Editors of the "Council Daily."

A distinguished visitor to the Council of Methodist Missionary Workers in New Orleans, April 12-20, will be Mrs. E. B. Chappell, of Nashville, Tenn., who is one of the officers of the Council.

Mrs. Chappell is the wife of Dr. E. B. Chappell, who for ten years or more has been the General Secretary of all the Sunday school work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as well as the Editor of the Sunday school literature.

Mrs. Chappell is no less distinguished than her honored husband, as she is one of the ten women elected by the General Conference to membership in the Board of Missions. She is also one of the editors of the Missionary Voice, the official organ of the Board of Missions, and, together with Miss Etelle Haskin, will edit the paper to be issued daily during the Council Meeting.

MISS MARIA LAYNG GIBSON.

A distinguished officer in the Council Meeting of the missionary workers of the Methodist Chuch, South, now gathered here, is Miss Maria Layng Gibson, first and only Principal of the Scarritt Bible and Training School, at Kansas City, Mo. Miss Gibson has stood with Miss Bennett as one of the great leaders of the women of Methodism, both being natives of Kentucky, and both being indissolubiy connected with our great training school from the day of its birth until the present time.

Nearly all the missionaries and deaconesses of the Woman's Work have received their training under Miss Gibson and the influence of her strong, gentle life is felt around the globe to-day, as "her children," as she lovingly calls her girls, are serving everywhere. She is one of the rare spirits of the day, with the courage and enterprise of the new age, but with the gentleness and womanliness of the old.

Miss Gibson was one of the charter members of the first body of women organized in the Church at the First Methodist Church in Atlanta, in May, 1878. She is one of the ten women members of the General Board of Missions.

SKETCH OF MRS. B. W. LIPSCOMB,

Home Base Secretary of Woman's Missionary Council.

Mrs. Lipscomb is the widow of Rev. George H. Lipscomb, of the North Mississippi Conference. At the time of her election to her present office she was Dean of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., a position she had held for a number of years.

MRS. B. W. LIPSCOMB.

The office of the Home Base Secretary was created at the Council meeting held in Birmingham, Ala., in 1913, by reason of the heavy pressure of work in the offices of the Administrative Secretaries. Mrs. Lipscomb's election to this important place was regarded as a fortunate one because of her fine qualifications. Her office in Nashville, Tenn., conducts an immense amount of business. From it go all the leaflet literature, Yearbooks, bulletins, helps for Mission Study books, Council reports, pins and pennants for Children's and Young People's Societies. Besides this volume of supplies, she provides auxiliaries with literature from other Boards and gives helpful suggestions for special meetings. In addition to the work of receiving and filling orders for literature and supplies, Mrs. Lipscomb promotes the work of Christian Stewardship under the Council and renders valuable service in representing our Church in summer schools, chautauquas, and other religious assemblies.

Mrs. Lipscomb's missionary spirit, maintained and nurtured through her whole life of service, has had beautiful expression in the life purpose and work of a lovely daughter, Miss Olive Lipscomb, who is now serving as a missionary in Soochow, China.

SKETCH OF MRS. H. R. STEELE,

Educational Secretary of Woman's Missionary Council.

Mrs. Steele is a native of the State of Tennessee. She has served in the ranks of the Missionary Society, first as Auxiliary President, then as District Secretary, and afterward as Conference President of the Tennessee Conference. Her intelligent and faithful service in all these offices was most commendable, and so successful was she that results were soon apparent. At the General Conference in Asheville, at which time the Woman's Home and Foreign Mission Boards and the Board of Missions were merged into one organization, Mrs. Steele was elected one of the ten women members of the Board and assigned by the Woman's Missionary Council as a manager of the Central Division. At the quadrennial meeting held in Fort Worth, Texas, in 1914, she was elected to the office of Educational Secretary and as such has served most efficiently. Her department comprises a large range of interests. She edits and publishes the leaflet literature authorized by the Council, conducts the departments of Mission Study and Publicity and has supervision of the Student work. The latter brings her in touch with the Federation of Foreign Mission Boards of North America, of which she is a member, and chairman of the Student Committee.

GREETINGS FROM THE SCARRITT BIBLE AND TRAINING SCHOOL, KANSAS CITY, MO.

Miss M. L. Gibson, Principal.

It is a beautiful coincidence that when the Woman's Missionary Council holds its annual session in New Orleans the Scarritt Bible and Training School is celebrating its silver anniversary year. Its record shows its value to the M. E. Church, South, and to the world: 387 graduates have received diplomas and 406 trained workers have gone into service for Christ and the world. Of these, 58 are graduate nurses, 162 are foreign missionaries in ten mission fields, and 176 are deaconesses and home missionaries. Besides these, many who entered for a year or for even shorter courses have been made more efficient and are rendering fine service in their own churches and communities. "Many daughters have risen up to call her blessed."

The Class of 1917 comprises thirteen students—an unusually small number. They represent seven States. Seven have been trained for home mission work and six for the foreign field. Four foreign missionaries will be consecrated in New Orleans: Miss Grace E. McCubbins, of Salisbury, N. C.; Miss Sallie Lou McKinnon, of Maxton, N. C.; Miss Marie Raffo, of Tampa, Fla., and Miss Sara Van Dyke Stout, of Clarksville, Tenn. Miss McCubbins is a trained nurse and Miss Raffo a trained kindergartner. Miss McKinnon is prepared to enter educational work and Miss Stout's specialty is music. Two graduates will be consecrated to the office of deaconess during the session—Miss Josephine Berglund, of Springfield, Mo., and Miss Minnie Lee Edison, of Jonesboro, Ark. Miss Mabel Whitehead, of Birmingham, Ala., of the Class of 1915, and Miss Katharine Hatcher, of Harlem, Ga., of the Class of 1916, will also be consecrated as foreign misionaries at this session of the Council.

The papers of nine home mission candidates have been approved, but they will not attend the Council this year.

The Woman's Missionary Council has supplemented the financial receipts this year so wisely and liberally that the school has gone on without interruption and the work has not suffered. Friends are showing their love for the school and confidence in its worth to the Church by gifts for the linen room and store-room. Many must have tithed their preserves and pickles for our benefit, and have thus added delicacies that we could not afford to buy.

Three members of the Woman's Missionary Council have been elected managers this year—Mrs. L. P. Smith, of Dallas, Texas; Mrs. F. F. Stephens, of Columbia, Mo., and Mrs. Luke G. Johnson, of Atlanta, Ga., are now members of the Board.

A quarter of a century of service has been recorded on high. The trained, consecrated women that form its Alumnae are blessing this country and many distant lands. Nineteen students have been enrolled from Louisiana, and the Sam Hunter Scholarship has for years enabled the Louisiana Conference to provide for the expenses of a student while in training. Deaconess Mary Daniel, now in Mary Elizabeth Inn, San Francisco, Cal.; Deaconess Eliza Iles at St. Mark's Hall, New Orleans, and Miss Helen Johnston in Brazil, S. A., are types of the representatives from Louisiana now serving under the Woman's Missionary Council and blessing the world through their ministry.

May the Holy Spirit call many young women during the session of the Council to dedicate their lives to the service of Christ and to seek preparation in the Scarritt Bible and Training School!

MRS. W. W. CARRE.

Mrs. W. W. Carré was born in Lockland, Ohio, and is the daughter of the late Dr. E. B. Beach, who settled in New Orleans when his little daughter was six years of age. Mrs. Carré was educated in the public schools and high school, and graduated at a female seminary of which Madame Bigot was principal.

Mrs. Carré is of medium height, and has dark eyes that are full of intelligence and kindliness. She is essentially feminine in appearance and manner, and one would never imagine that beneath that gentle face and quiet manner was the strength of will and intellect of a remarkably forceful woman. Always devoted to her home life, she never, in her busiest years, relinquished the management of her domestic affairs.

When the great Methodist Missionary Conference was held in New Orleans in April, 1901, it was to Mrs. Carré that we instinctively turned, and through her guidance and wise planning the work assigned to the women was most successfully carried out.

As the time drew near to arrange for the entertainment of this present session of the Woman's Missionary Council, to whom should we again turn except to Mrs. Carré? As General Chairman of the local committees, Mrs. Carre has carefully planned for the entertainment of this notable gathering, and to the smallest detail she has been most earnest and untiring in her efforts.

Mrs. Carré was president of the Foreign Missionary Society, Carondelet Street Church (later First Methodist) for 26 years; President City Board of Missions, New Orleans, 18 years; President Foreign Missionary Society, Louisiana Conference for 1 year; President Monteagle Woman's Association, Monteagle, Tenn., 9 years; President Christian Woman's Exchange, several years, and the first President Young Woman's Christian Association of New Orleans, in which capacity she served two years.

Mrs. Carré was President of six organizations at one time, and is now an Honorary Life President of five organizations. She was one of the lady delegates to the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago, and Treasurer of the Woman's Division for the State of Louisiana.

She has been a tower of strength to Methodism in Louisiana, and is universally esteemed and honored.

SOME WORDS OF GREETING.

By Dr. S. H. Werlein.

On Thursday, the 12th instant, the First Methodist Church will be greatly honored in having been selected as the host of the Woman's Missionary Council. Seldom in the history of American Methodism has New Orleans been chosen for any of the great gatherings of Southern Methodism. In the year 1860 the General Conference was held in Carondelet Street Church, now First Church, and in the year 1901 a great missionary convention was held in this city, at which more than $150,000 was given to missions.

Many doubtless do not know what the Woman's Missionary Council is. It is composed of women specially elected to represent the missionary activities of the women of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. They direct the entire woman's missionary work of the Church. Under their general supervision, local church missionary organizations are created and the funds contributed by the societies are received and disbursed. The Council is intensely aggressive in its work. It is a powerful propagandist of the Gospel of Christ. It has missions at home and abroad and is untiring in its zeal and labor of love. These leaders have displayed unusual ability in the management of their finances, never having gone in debt, and always being supplied with funds to meet the expenses incident to the work. They have imparted great stimulus to the missionary work of the Church and have carried it where in the nature of the case only women can go. When it is known that they have hundreds of missionaries, deaconesses and teachers in their employ, and that their field is world-wide, it will be at once recognized that this is one of the greatest forces for righteousness in the Church of God.

The women composing the Council are wide awake to all the great interests that confront the Church. Many of them are eloquent platform speakers, gifted writer, and capable of administering affairs of great import. They have in this city enterprised work among the Italians and are devoting thousands of dollars toward its expansion.

New Orleans is a field which greatly needs special attention and assistance, and we are much gratified that the members of the Woman's Missionary Council will be here in person to study the peculiar needs of this growing metropolis. More cosmopolitan than any city of the South, with a more complex population; with difficulties and obstacles in the way of aggressive Christianity more abundant and stubborn than in any city of the Union, it would be hard to find a spot on this planet more in need of the service which the Council is so qualified to render. We are satisfied that only lack of funds will limit the efforts of the Council in doing great things for New Orleans. Not only do the Italians call for their help, but there is a large contingent of French people in this city whose eyes might be opened to the reality of things spiritual. And then there is a vast population of English-speaking people in this city who, while nominally under the influence of Romanism, could be reached by some organized Christian work that would mean their social betterment, as well as Christian indoctrination.

To the Woman's Missionary Council we extend heartiest welcome, and wish for them a most pleasant and profitable sojourn in our midst.

MISSISSIONARY WORK IN LOUISIANA.

Looking backward, the writer remembers the first Missionary Societies of our State, confined to the Sunday schools, when, on the first Sunday of the month, teachers and scholars brought contributions for foreign work, the adults giving toward the Church assessment for that object. The spirit of Methodism is missionary, and elect women of the Church met at the session of the Louisiana Conference, in Baton Rouge, in December, 1879, and organized a Conference Society as an auxiliary to the M. E. Church, South, with Mrs. Mary Read as President. During the first year eight auxiliaries were formed with 196 members; in ten years, eighty auxiliaries with 1102 adult and 1615 juvenile names enrolled. Many of these grew weary, but the prayer and zeal of the faithful projected a work that is now a strong arm of Louisiana Methodism.

In 1894, the name was changed to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and Miss Sallie Phillips was sent as a foreign missionary. Antedating the State auxiliary, societies were organized in local churches having a specific work. The earliest of these of which we have knowledge was in Felicity Church, known in ante-bellum days for its missionary spirit, working as an independent society, and later joining the W. F. M. Society.

Bishop Keener and his saintly wife organized in New Orleans societies in Rayne Memorial, Carondelet and Louisiana Avenue Churches. These united in support of the Mexican Mission planted by the Bishop in 1873, which was sustained chiefly by native converts for a few years, and which through the generosity of Mr. R. M. Walmsley became established and the nucleus of the Mary Keener Institute, in 1880. Miss Charlotte Halloran was equipped and sent to assist the Rev. Mr. Patterson and wife in the work. Realizing the bond of Christian fellowship, these societies at intervals joined the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

The Home Department began as an adjunct of the Church Extension Board, but Miss Lucinda Helm and other godly women had a prophetic vision of a broader work, and through their influence the General Conference, held in St. Louis in 1890, changed the title to the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. The Rev. E. M. Beard, Mrs. Linus Parker, and Mrs. S. S. King were appointed to organize in this State and through their efforts, eighteen societies were formed, and in December, 1891, at a meeting in the Carondelet Street Church, a Conference Society was organized, with Mrs. F. A. Lyons as President. At the third annual meeting held in New Orleans, Dr. Walter Lambuth addressed the Conference on City Evangelization, and so awakened the churches that more aggressive work was determined upon; and in January, 1894, an industrial school was started at the Tchoupitoulas Mission, a point opened through the influence of Dr. J. T. Sawyer. Miss Susie Burbank was engaged for two years as the first missionary by the New Orleans auxiliaries, and so effective was the work of Miss Burbank and the pastors that better organization and a mission home became necessary. The Home Mission women then organized the City Mission Board with Mrs. W. W. Carre at its head. Purchase money had to be raised, and Dr. Black, then editor, offered an issue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate as a help. The auxiliaries throughout the State rallied to the support of this movement and the building of what is now Mary Werlein Mission was the result of that effort. Mrs. Lily Meekins, the "Angel of Irish Channel," served as city missionary in that field for nineteen years, lifting the neighborhood from the utmost degradation. A missionary and preacher are continuing the mission work in that part of the city.

St. Mark's Hall in 1909 became a connectional work, and has exerted a wonderful influence in the section of New Orleans in which it is located. It has been meeting the needs of the people, spiritual and physical, through the love of Christ.

At the memorable annual meeting in Monroe, the Foreign and Home Missions united as the Missionary Society, realizing that the work was one, whether at home or across the sea. In the united effort there has been a growth in spiritual life as well as in a material increase. Missionaries have been sent to foreign lands; Bible women have been supported; deaconesses commissioned to aid in social service; study classes have been organized, and a deeper interest has been taken in all branches of the work.

At the recent Conference in Crowley the records show 101 adult societies, and 85 Young People's and Junior organizations. To this end faithful women have labored and God has given the increase.

Women of the Church, time is our opportunity, the goal for the year has been fixed for us, and we must labor for it, for,

"We have no time to dream, to drift,
We have hard work to do, and loads to lift."

New Orleans, La. Mrs. A. A. BARTELS.

REV. W. W. HOLMES,
Presiding Elder of the New Orleans District.

NEW ORLEANS AND SOME OF ITS MISSIONARY NEEDS.

By Rev. W. E. Thomas,
Pastor Mary Werlein Mission and St. Mark's Hall.

Besides being the largest city in our Southland, New Orleans has other features that conspire to make it one of the neediest and most difficult fields in Southern Methodism.

It has a population of approximately four hundred thousand people, and the membership of all the Protestant Churches number only thirty thousand. Religious superstition is hardly worse in the Latin American countries. It is pathetic in the extreme to see the poorer classes bowing down and worshiping before the picture of one of the saints which has been torn from a daily paper, or magazine.

There are more than 2000 saloons in the city and a vice district, which it is said has not an equal in the United States. A recent examination of the records showed 1363 registered prostitutes, and the number is increasing, and must increase so long as licensed vice is allowed. Another thing that broadens the scope for missionary activities in New Orleans is its location, it being the second seaport in the United States, and a terminus for many railroads. Having a balmy climate and being the gateway for the Latin-American trade, it naturally attracts men from all over the nation and from all classes of life.

With all these opportunities for work, there is not an open-door mission in the city. Mary Werlein Mission comes nearer filling this place than perhaps any other, and it is not half meeting the opportunities that are thrust upon it, because of a lack of funds and equipment. There is not a place for a Juvenile Court child except in Catholic institutions. A foundling can only find a place at St. Vincent's Asylum. The wayward girl must be consigned to the House of the Good Shepherd; and thus it is, year in and year out. The Christian worker's spirit is made to grieve, because he cannot meet these, the greatest opportunities that are afforded him to do a constructive work in building character.

Mary Werlein Mission should be an emergency station with the force and equipment to meet any worthy need. Its opportunity is only limited by its capacity. However, in spite of its inadequate facilities, scores of lives are being touched and some are led to lead better lives.

St. Mark's Hall is on the border of the old French Quarter, which has an estimated population of 40,000, and in and adjacent to this block, which reaches from Canal Street to Esplanade and from the River to Rampart, there are nine Roman Catholic Churches and institutions. The opportunity for teaching the Gospel in this field cannot be overestimated, and the response is encouraging. There are many dissatisfied lives that are not conscious of their needs.

Of the different activities in this work, the Clinic has been the greatest feeder to the Church. Naturally so, perhaps, since as people's physical needs are relieved it offers an opportunity for the Gospel's seed. I think we have an Italian constituency of 125, a Spanish contingent of 25, an Assyrian group of 20, with some French, Germans, Poles and representatives of other nationalities. Our English constituency averages from 50 to 75 per cent of our people in the different departments, except in the Church organization—the Italian predominates there.

We are handicapped and hindered because we have no house of worship. The little room, 15 x 30 feet, in which we hold services, does not appeal either to our own people or the foreigners. Especially is this true of the foreigners, in whose countries the massive cathedrals have been the great centers of worship.

I am convinced, after five years' work in this field, that the Gospel appeals to the heart-need of the foreigner as it does to the American. The opportunity is increasing all the while; many Mexicans are coming here and settling in this section. When the war is over the immigration work will be resumed. We need a church, and some one who has a knowledge of the Spanish tongue; and I believe that we could in six months' build up a Spanish congregation that would be encouraging.

"To-day is a day of glad tidings. If we hold our peace, mischief will come."

"Oh, for a passion for souls,
Oh, for a pity that yearns,
Oh, for a heart that will love until death,
Oh, for the fire that burns.
Oh, for the pure prayer power that prevails,
That pours out itself for the lost—
Victorious prayer in our Conqueror's name;
Oh, for a Pentecost."

WHY HAVE FRENCH MISSIONARIES IN LOUISIANA?

Because there are fully a quarter of a million French-speaking people in the Southern part of the State, who live not in a few scattered communities, but actually constitute a majority of the population in nearly a score of parishes. It is also worth while to notice that this is not only the most thickly settled section of the State, but that in the fertility of its soil and its numerous natural resources it is probably the equal of any section in the world. In traveling over the wide field which we cover as a Church, I have often been struck by the variety of industries in it and the different classes of people to whom we are privileged to minister. For instance, to-day we are preaching in a little schoolhouse, just beneath which is one of the largest salt-mines in the world; to-morrow we are mingling with the laborers on a vast cane plantation, who every day struggle, not only with the work they have to do but with the problem of supporting a family on a daily wage ranging from 50 cents to $1. The next week we are traveling and preaching up and down some of the bayous, for which Louisiana is famous, whose banks on either side are literally lined with people who are hungry for the Word of God. Here we are entertained in every variety of home, from the great plantation house to the poor fisherman's hut, covered with palmetto leaves. The limit of space allowed, forbids me to tell of our experiences with the workmen of the great cypress sawmills, the oil fields, the vast rice plantations, the sulphur mines, the live stock, farming and trucking industries. Unfortuately, these rich material blessings and resources of South Louisiana are very largely offset by the very poor religious conditions that prevail.

The prevailing religion in this part of the country is that of the Roman Catholic Church as it is in Cuba, and in the other Latin American countries where we have our missionaries. While it is true that Romanism here has been benefited somewhat by American institutions and her contact with Protestantism, it is nevertheless true that wherever Romanism is found dominant there is also found those weaknesses and glaring abuses that made the Reformation necessary. With the exception of the few Bibles sold by the colporteurs and other Protestant agencies, our French people are practically without the Bible. As regards the moral standard of her priesthood, of the parish church, her methods of raising church finances, her image worship, and superstition, it is the same Romanism anywhere you find it.

Nominally, the great majority of our French people are Roman Catholics, but in reality a very large per cent of them are at heart thoroughly Protestant, and are glad to be informed that the Bible does not sanction the errors held by Rome, against which in their hearts they have always protested. Great numbers of these are only held in the Catholic fold through fear of social ostracism or the threat of business boycotts.

To tabulate the results of our French work to date is impossible, as it is with any religious movement; but the fact that there are at least ten churches within the bounds of the Lafayette District that have been organized by our French workers, and that during the last five years we have averaged one church building a year, will show that we have not been standing still. We probably have in the district as many as 500 French-speaking members and probably as many more English-speaking members who have been brought into the Church through our missionary efforts. Within the last year three of our most promising young men have entered the ministry and are now off at school preparing for their life work. One of our charges is already manned by a native worker, a very efficient man, in the person of our Brother A. D. Martin; another, Brother R. E. Martin, is giving a great deal of time to the work.

Our work for this year is very promising, as we have already had over twenty additions to the Church, and Sunday schools have been organized in four new communities. Of the many difficulties which we have to overcome, one of the most serious is to find some one capable of teaching in these newly organized Sunday schools. Just here, a kind of traveling or district deaconess could be of untold help to us, for she could go to these needy places and spend sufficient time with the people to get them started; but we need so much that we hardly dare speak of the things that we ought to have. At least a half dozen more workers could be utilized. We are yet short of a man at Lockport, a very needy and I think a very promising field.

Brother Morgan (at Houma) is very much handicapped for the need of a church. The Church Extension and the Mission Boards ought both to get behind this proposition and help the people of Houma to build a church which would in some sense be a credit to our denomination.

We very much appreciate all the Women's Board has done for us and we will be still more thankful to them if they can see their way clear to give us a district deaconess.

Yours for my own people,

MARTIN HEBERT,
French Mission Supt.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CO-OPERATIVE HOME.

Miss Falla Richardson.

I. There is a three-fold Need for Co-operative Homes:
   1. To provide comfortable, Christian homes for girls who work away from their own homes, at cost.
   2. To furnish these young women wholesome social life.
   3. To meet the spiritual needs of the young women.

II. How the Young Women's Co-operative Home of Corinth, Miss., is Meeting these Needs.

As long as the average wage paid to working girls is below a living wage, the need for co-operative homes will be imperative. Our deaconess in this Home is not only seking to secure a living wage for the girls, but she is also encouraging the young women to qualify themselves to earn better wages. This Home furnishes good, wholesome food and as many comforts as possible in the building occupied, at the least possible cost.

REV. S. H. WERLEIN, D.D.,
Pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, in Which the Woman's Missionary Council is Holding Its Sessions.

When a girl is ill she has wise and tender care, the deaconess herself ministering to her every need day or night; and there is no extra charge for this service.

In the evenings the young women play innocent games, read, or busy themselves with fancy work. Young men are frequent callers at this Home, and several of our girls have gone forth to make homes of their own. From time to time socials are thoroughly enjoyed by the young women and their friends. Thus the Home meets the desire of every girl for music, laughter, and happiness.

The atmosphere of this Home is truly Christian. In the early morning the girls are reminded of God's mercy and blessings, and at the close of day they meet at the family altar. Sunday morning a short devotional service prepares each heart for the Sabbath day. A weekly Bible class has created great interest in the study of the Word of God, and the monthly vesper service is a benediction to all. Religion is not made a burden, but a joy. Through earnest prayer and personal work, the deaconess is winning the hearts of the girls for the Master. The influence of this Home will ever live in the hearts and lives of the young women

SAILORS' REST, GULFPORT, MISS.

This institution has stood as a sentinel watching the interests of the sailors since January 1, 1909. During this time, until the European war changed the situation, an average of 5000 sailors and officers were annually in port, and the attendance at the Rest averaged 10,100 visits to the reading room, 2100 to gospel services, and 2500 to entertainments; 600 visits were made to ships, 120 services held, 75 needy sailors were helped, 320 were furnished free beds, 1000 tracts, 5000 magazines, and 22 weekly papers in foreign languages were distributed.

It has been a source of much gratification that by actual comparison with statistics of other like institutions in the United States our attendance at religious services outnumbered any—not comparatively, but in actual numbers.

Since the war the number of ships and sailors coming to Gulfport has been reduced by more than half, and most of these have been Scandinavians, who have their own mission; yet there are a few each day who find their way to us, and who need attention. These are furnished reading matter and cared for in many ways. A regular stream of magazine distribution is kept up and often it taxes us to secure them.

The sailors' situation is abnormal at present. Many leave their ships rather than take chances in the war zone, and as shipping is more active in northern parts at this time, they drift there; often much trouble is now experienced in securing crews. There is such a demand that they are moving rapidly.

Should the war conditions change for the better, there is every reason to believe that all our Southern ports will be crowded with ships, especially lumber ports, and it has been the purpose of our two Boards sustaining the work to hold on and be in a position to care for the new conditions; and they keep us busy by adding new missionary territory outside the Bethel and the Wesley House work.

This is Mississippi's only foreign port, the only "Bethel," and it appeals to our people. They will stand by it.

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY AS AN EVANGELISTIC AGENCY.

Miss Grace Gatewood.

It has been said that the 18th Century discovered the man and the 19th Century the woman. We may take that as we please, but we do know that this last half-century has seen a wonderful impulse toward the evangellzation of the world, and it would be impossible to belleve that women have had no part in this impetus to mlssionary work.

Let us notice what the Woman's Missionary Society has as its object. It is to cultlvate a missionary spirit, to create a deeper interest in the spread of the Gospel; to disseminate missionary intelligence; and to support missionaries, both home and foreign. The Woman's Missionary Soclety had its birth to meet a great need. "A great force for love service was dormant, and the women seemed waiting for an appalling need and a divine volce." This came to the women of England in 1834, when David Abeel, an American missionary to China, stayed in England long enough to awaken this interest in London. It did not come to America until about a quarter of a century later. Some of the women and men who were the leaders in this thought are still with us. Dr. S. A. Steel was one of the first of our pastors to organize the women of the church. In 1876, when there were societies in New Orleans, Nashville, and Baltlmore, he organized in Richmond. Hearing of his society, Mrs. Juliette Hays, President of the Society in Baltimore, came down and spent a week in the parsonage, and together they drew up the Constitution of the General Society. Miss Lochie Rankin was our first missionary sent out by our Board to China over thirty years ago. I heard her and Miss Gibson tell about how deeply the women were stirred when they had a woman as a missionary and $1500 to send her. They said that in real effort it amounted to more than the $580,816 collected by our women in 1914.

MRS. JOHN B. PARKER,
President of the Woman's Board of City Missions.

Hattie Rowland Parker was born in New Orleans and knows the social and industrial conditions of the city not alone from a theoretical, but also from a practical viewpoint. She is the wife of Mr. John B. Parker, the eldest son of the late Bishop Linus Parker. Mrs. Parker is well known as a forceful thinker and speaker along the lines of social betterment and has taken a prominent part in the movements to establish a Juvenlle Court and to secure legislation to abolish child labobr and reduce infant mortality and all that pertains to the moral and social betterment of the community. Mrs. Parker is one of the four women elected by the New Orleans District Conference of the M. E. Church, South, to serve on the Joint Board of Church Extension of the city of New Orleans.

The time was when the Aid Society existed simply to deal out clothes and provisions and to do local work, but the women of the church caught a vision of the needs of women in foreign lands to hear the Gospel and they have become a great arm of evangelism.

Religion dare not be provincial. Our faith is not for America alone. Commerce has gone everywhere, seeking to enter the open door, and right along and keeping pace with commerce must go the missionary and religion. There is no such thing as a foreign land to real religion. The wonder of Christianity is its universalism. The true worshipers worship in spirit and in truth, and the New Jerusalem may be in Africa, Brazil or in the United States of America. We be brethren. We are sons of God; if sons of God, then brothers. We need this new view and big conception to give us loving courage to go into all the world and attack its problems for God.

Knowledge implies power, and power is a parent to duty. We can not know and then fail to act and not have the responsibility to bear. To the Christian an opportunity is an obligation. To whom much is given, of him shall much be required. Through the Woman's Missionary Society, this responsibility has been made personal to thousands of women. We know that the end of knowledge is the beginning of obedience.

If it is true that no nation can rise higher than its homes, it must be equally true that no Church can be at a higher tide spiritually than is found in its women. A pastor was once complaining to me of the lack of spirituallty in one of his congregations. He said the women were not interested in the Church or the Sunday school. I asked him if they had a missionary society, and he said they did not; then I said very emphatically, What you need is an active missionary society for the women. He said that he knew that was true. Go through the Church and pick out the women who are the ones who lead in all the Church work actively and you will find them active in the missionary society, and getting their vision and inspiration from it. The Church in its beginning recognzed its women and their usefulness, and I am so glad to think that in those first early days they had deaconesses, but through monasticism the women lost their part in this work and for years the Church went out for conquest with one arm tied to her side. The women had been silent and indifference and inaction had followed. The Church to-day, which is serving as a spiritual light-house, in the city or open country, is the one where the Woman's Missionary Society and the Men's Lay Movement are at the greatest point of efficiency. Once when asked why he wanted a missionary society in his church, one of the leading pastors of to-day, who was a pastor before the women were organized, said: "I want a woman's missionary society in my church because it raises the spiritual life of the whole church. I say whole church, because when the mother is interested at work and praying, the family are all with her."

Working for the church in these capacities develops spiritual character. We become like that for which we plan and of which we think. No woman who has a comprehensive view of the real nature and object of missions can ever be small and self-centered. The courage and self-sacrifice that women put into the missionary effort can never be told. Though their gifts are often small, they have been carefully planned and thought of for days.

The women have been successful in raising the funds for their work. When once a woman is really set on accomplishing a thing for God financially, she can nearly always do it. It used to be said that the abundance of the woman's treasuries was gained at the expense of the General Board; that they were robbing Peter to pay Paulina; but this is not true. The Woman's Missionary Society has proved the advance agent of denominational prosperity to the parent Board. Their sowing and reaping—and, yes, sometimes harrowing—furnishes one cause for our phenomenal harvest. When the mother got interested she took in the whole family—the children with the mite boxes, and the juveniles, young people and all. It is demonstrably true that the churches with active woman's missionary societies are the most generous contributors to the General Board, and that denominations with the best organized Woman's Societies are those where the per capita contributions are the largest. Notice the growth of feeling on this subject as seen by the gifts: in 1878, the women of Southern Methodism gave $4104; in 1915 the women of the same Church gave $580,816. The comparison of the financial reports of the General Board would show as much gain.

Best of all, through this agency, God is allowing women to answer their prayer, "Thy Kingdom Come." No other agency has such a power, if rightly used, to hasten the final triumph. The world cannot be evangelized without our aid. One can but stand amazed and grateful at the revelations of the last fifty years, as to how women can help the Kingdom of God to come. It looks, after all, as if the strategic point in this warfare for the world's supremacy was the heart of a woman. Women at work for women for Christ's sake should be, and is, the motto of every society. Keep ever before your society the high and noble aim of the organization—that the kingdoms of this world become the Kingdom of our Lord and His Christ in this generation.

MRS. C. F. NIEBERGALL,

President Louisiana Conference Society.

Mrs. Niebergall was born in the North. Her father was a Methodist minister, and she was one of an old-fashioned family of seven. The hardships of moving and the wonderful experiences of those early days served to strengthen the beauty and sweetness of her character.

As Mrs. Niebergall grew older, she spent much time with a sister in New York; then after her marriage she moved to Oklahoma when that State was only ten years old. Her life in this Western home was varied, for many rare experiences came to her—Indians in reservations on all sides, wheat fields like waves of the sea, days that were perfectly cloudless, blizzards in winter and dust storms in summer—but the experiences in the little Methodist Church were the most cherished, because so different from those in great city churches. While living in Oklahoma, Mrs. Niebergall was president of the missionary society of her church.

MRS. C. F. NIEBERGALL.

Ten years ago she came to New Orleans to live—so North, South, East and West, all lay claim to her. Several years ago she was elected District Secretary for the New Orleans District, and last year the women of Louisiana bestowed their greatest honor upon her by making her President of their Conference Society, which office, she says, has given her her first real understanding of the "privilege of service."

ST. MARK'S HALL, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

By Miss Helen O. Gibson, Deaconess in Charge.

New Orleans has the largest population of any city under the jurisdiction of the Southern Methodist Church. Such a mingling of nationalities and color would be hard to find elsewhere. The question might be asked, Why have a neighborhood house or mission for these people? There are many reasons. Their coming to us is not an accident, but a providence; and consequently is a real obligation. They are as sheep and surely need a shepherding. What do these alien people find in this land of their adoption? The physical conditions under which they must live are a menace. Many agencies are ready to exploit them. Because of ignorance, many of the people have not had a chance to make good in life. We find them very receptive and believe that they may be made an asset to the city and to the Church. One converted foreigner may do much to help his own people. The field is open to us to-day; to-morrow it may be pre-empted by adverse influences. St. Mark's Hall proposes to be a home place to these people in a strange land. We are affiliated with an organized church, with an Italian and an English pastor.

Activities.

St. Mark's Hall is a parish house with a clinic, kindergarten, sewing school, cooking school, mothers' club, circulating library, supply store and camp-fire group. Three troops of boy scouts have the use of our building and we are fortunate in having one of the stations of the Sickles Drug Fund.

Mothers' Club.

The membership of this club is composed of Italians, French, German, Austrians, Spanish, Irish, Scotch, and American. Helpful programs are given at their meetings, followed by a social hour. For several years their dues have been used to help finance the clinic. It is a real pleasure for them to help in this department that has meant so much to them and their families.

Vocational Training.

The sewing school is splendidly organized. Both teachers and scholars are intensely interested. Over a hundred girls annually have their hands trained in efficiency. Some of the graduates are self-supporting dressmakers. Sixty girls have joined the cooking classes and they, too, are getting practical training which will better fit them to meet life's problems.

Kindergarten.

Our little friends represent seven different nationalities. Seed are being sown in the hearts and lives that are already telling in their desire for better homes and cleaner surrounding, their hatred of sin and more love for our Lord.

Camp-Fire Girls.

Both the college and the factory are represented in this group. They, too, are receiving training that will make them more useful and helpful.

Supply Store.

This is a new department and needs your heartiest co-operation. Each week there is a sale of clothing, shoes, and household goods. It is not only a boon to the people, but the receipts help with our finances.

The Office.

Here telephone calls, and cases receive prompt attention. We are glad to find work for the unemployed and co-operate with the State Employment Bureau.

Our Limitations.

Our work is handicapped for want of room. There is no reading-room or neighborhood parlor on the first floor. The girls' club and clinic are both in cramped quarters. The room used for an office in the morning must be used by clinic patients as a waiting room in the afternoon, and at night it is headquarters for the boys. A new building is greatly needed.

Reasons for Encouragement.

Much interest has been shown by the women of co-operating churches; new auxillaries have asked to join the Board of City Missions; great interest has been shown by our long list of volunteer workers; splendid supplies have come from the city and State. The source of greatest encouragement is that recruits are coming into the church from all departments.

ST. MARK'S—THE CLINIC.

Ours is the only Free Clinic in the down-town section of the city and the people show by the great numbers who come for treatment and advice how greatly it is needed and appreciated. They have the greatest confidence in Dr. King, who is most painstaking and sympathetic in his service to them. He not only gives his time at the clinic, but visits them in their homes when necessary. Dr. Hume, our eye, ear, and nose specialist, has done fine work especially among the school children, which means so much to their whole life. The opportunities reaching the people in a spiritual way are almost incalculable, and numbers have been brought into the Sunday school from this department. The ignorance of the commonest hygienic laws, the superstitions inherited from former days, and added to by illiterate foreigners make this a field where work of this kind can accomplish a great deal for the people and build up for the city a stronger citizenship.

LULA CASON, Nurse.

INCIDENTS ABOUT ST. MARK'S HALL.

By One of Its Workers.

She was the bread-winner for a family of seven—her blind father, mother, and four children. The nurse at St. Mark's Hall, upon one of her visits, found that her eyes were badly affected and invited her to the Clinic. She came the next week, her little girl leading her. The doctor advised an operation on one eye that both might be saved. She said, "I'll do anything to keep my family from starving." At that time she was a scrub-woman in a hotel. The operation was successful and to-day she is supporting her family by sewing. This is only one of many cases that our clinic has touched with almost magic power.

Camilla is a little kindergarten girl, whose picture recently appeared in The Young Christian Worker. She is a Slav. When she first came to the kindergarten, she was so cowed and afraid she could not look any one in the face. One day she ran away from the kindergarten and went home. Her step-mother told the teacher that she beat her till she thought she had killed her. The teacher pleaded for her to be spared such awful punishment. Of course, the child grew to love the teacher dearly and all the workers became interested in watching her face light up, and a sweet little smile appear in response to the first love that had ever been offered her, and to-day she is one of the most promising and the most dependable child in the kindergarten.

'Twas a damp, foggy morning, as so many of the mornings are in New Orleans, and the deaconess started out on her usual round of visits after she had asked the Heavenly Father's guidance. She went into a home that was unusually shabby and badly kept. In the one bedroom, on a makeshift of a bed, lay the man of the family and his son about ten years old—both ill. Though it was so dark in the room she could hardly see their faces, she asked if she might read from God's Word and have prayer. She rather suspected that drink was the cause of their suffering and she prayed specially that the man might have strength and guidance. She bade them good-by and went on her way. Months afterward, quite by accident, she met the daughter of the family who told her that her father was converted by the prayer and had not since touched liquor, nor has he to this day. He now has a good position and is doing well.

A PANSY THOUGHT.

America has a pansy thought, a real heart thought for the world, and has asked the little children—the pansies—of Cuba, Brazil, Mexico, China, Japan, Korea, and Africa; the children from the mines; the little Italian children from our own St. Mark's Hall; the little children who have lost the color of childhood, huddled together in the mean tenements of our own city: the little black children, still looking to the superior race for the light so essential to all life and growth; the little red children, claiming as their very own all the wonders of our boasted country. These children are the flowers of God's vast garden; we are the gardeners.

Some one has beautifully said: "Flowers are God's thoughts for us in bloom." How wonderful, then, is this responsibility! We have often failed them and Him in the past, but we will be there Sunday, April 15, at 3 p. m., First Methodist Church, New Orleans, ready to water His flowers with tears of regret for our neglect, cultivate them with our love and sympathy, and gather them from the waste places of earth, and hold them in the arms of His protection, until He cometh to gather His flowers.

The little "Sunbonnet Babies" of St. Mark's Hall will be there to tell you how they are kept busy every day in the week, learning to make the world a better place in which to live, and to be better prepared to serve their King. When you hear the crowd of white pansies from Mary Werlein Mission sing you will first be so glad, and then you will be so sad, when you think: "I have neglected these little flowers."

Mrs. W. A. Albright, Council Second Vice President, will be there. It is said to be a real pleasure just to look at Mrs. Albright. We are to have, not only the pleasure of seeing her, but also of hearing her talk of the 60,000 children under her special guidance. Mrs. Albright will have with her the missionaries and deaconesses, who are gardeners that "need not to be ashamed." In fact, we have all decided to be there because we love God and His children.

At the close we expect to form a great circle around the church auditorium, with all the children, and here and there a missionary and a deaconess, forming, as it were, a ring about the world, with every nation, every tribe, singing each in his own tongue: "Jesus Loves Me, This I Know."

Don't let your place be vacant.

Yours for the children,

New Orleans, La. Mrs. R. H. HARPER.

NEW ORLEANS: ITS POPULATION AND RELIGIOUS DENOMINATIONS.

New Orleans is the largest distinctively Southern City, and our Church is here face to face with the problems of a large modern municipality as it is perhaps nowhere else within the range of its entire territory. The following extracts from an article in the Baptist Chronicle (Alexandria) by Rev. B. P. Robertson, pastor of the St. Charles Avenue Baptist Church of this city, furnish a fairly accurate view of the conditions in New Orleans as to the character of its population and the numerical strength of the religious denominations:

"The total poulation of the city is 387,000. Of these 170,000 are native whites from native parentage; 37,000 are foreign whites from foreign parentage, and 90,000 are Negroes. Of the foreign-born whites from foreign parentage, 800 are Austrians, 600 are Canadians, 400 are Cubans (not including Porto Ricans), 1500 are English, 300 are French, 6300 are German, 3000 are Irish, 8300 are Italians, 600 are Mexicans, 200 are Norwegians, 1400 are Prussians, 300 are Scotch, 500 are Spanish, 300 are Swiss, 400 are Turks, 400 are Chinese, 300 are Greeks, 200 are Japanese, and 800 are of other nationalities, making a total of 37,000. When you add to this the 90,000 natives of foreign-born parentage, you will see the large percentage of the population who may be considered foreigners—a total of 127,000.

"The religious statistics of the city are as follows: Adventists have 2 churches and 350 members; the white Baptists have 6 churches and 1300 members; the colored Baptists have 73 churches and 15,000 members; the Christians (Disciples) have 2 churches and 350 members; the colored Congregationalists have 4 churches and 900 members; the Episcopalians have 16 churches and 6000 members; the Evangelicals have 5 churches and 6000 members; the Greeks have 1 church and 200 members; the Lutherans have 15 churches and 7500 members; the white Methodists have 16 churches and 4000 members (of these 3500 are Southern Methodists); the colored Methodists have 24 churches and 7000 members; the Presbyterians have 17 churches and 4000 members; the Roman Catholics have 38 churches and 175,000 members; the Unitarians have 1 church and only a few members, which makes a total of 220 churches and 227,600 members."

If these figures are correct there are approximately 90,000 white people and 70,000 Negroes in New Orleans who are not actually identified with any Church. This shows beyond question that there exists here perhaps the greatest mission field in the entire South, and one of the greatest in the United States. Especially is this true when the large French-speaking population in the nearby parishes (reaching up into the tens and hundreds of thousands) is taken into consideration.

SOME FACTS ABOUT NEW ORLEANS.

The city was founded by Bienville, a French officer and pioneer explorer; it will celebrate its 200th anniversary in February, 1918.

Its population by the Federal Census of 1910 was 339,075—the latest Federal estimate placed it at 361,221.

Including both exports and imports, New Orleans is the second port in the United States, ranking next to New York City.

The area of the city in square miles is 196—being larger than any other American municipality except New York and Chicago.

It has 88 public schools, with a student enrollment of about 50,000.

It has the largest sugar refinery, the largest floating steel dock, and the largest cotton warehouse in the world.

It has 14 miles of river front, is entered by 11 railroads, and is reached by steamships from all over the world.

It is the largest oyster market in the world, and the largest sugar, rice, molasses, banana, and cotton market in the United States.

It has the largest immigrant station in the Souh, and is nearer to Cuba and the Panama Canal than any other large city in our country.

It is historically one of the most interesting cities in the Western Hemisphere, and one might easily spend weeks looking up buildings and places around which cluster many romantic and fascinating memories.

A FEW FACTS ABOUT THE STATE OF LOUISIANA.

She now ranks first as a lumber State, having recently overtaken and passed the States of Mississippi and Washington.

She has the greatest sulphur mine on earth. It is taken out of the ground 98 per cent pure.

Her deposits of pure rock salt are the largest in the Western Hemisphere. It comes up 99 per cent pure.

In spite of the boll weevil, she produces annually between 400,000 and 500,000 bales of cotton.

She produces 95 per cent of all the cane sugar produced in the United States, and more rice than any other State in the Union.

Her strawberry and vegetable crops sell for more than five million dollars annually, and her stock industry is large and growing.

Her fuel oil and natural gas fields are among the most productive in the United States, and frnit-growing is steadily on the increase. The fame of Louisiana oranges rivals that of Florida oranges. In native pecan area Louisiana stands next to Texas, and the industry is being developed.

The present population of Louisiana is estimated to be 1,829,130. It is constantly augmenting, the State having gained a Congressman during the preceding decade. The tide of immigration from the other States is enlarging, and with the cessation of the European war there is certain to come an immense stream of immigrants from foreign countries. The vast resources of Louisiana are yet but little developed, but her future is very bright. Nowhere in America is there an opportunity for Southern Methodists to do a more monumental and telling work.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. C. A. Battle, of Baton Rouge, La., spent Thursday, April 5, in New Orleans. Mrs. Battle is still with relatives in Alabama.

The Holly Springs (Miss.) District is prospering under the leadership of Rev. J. H. Felts, the able presiding elder. What a tireless worker Brother Felts is!

Rev. W. L. Storment, of Coffeeville, Miss., requests all who will attend the Holly Springs District Conference, to be held at Coffeeville, May 3-5, to send him their names at once.

The Porterville (Miss.) charge is having a successful year under the pastorate of Rev. W. D. Barnett. Brother Barnett is not unmindful of the claims of the Advocate, among his many other duties.

Colonel I. D. Wall, a distinguished attorney of Baton Rouge, La., was in New Orleans on Wednesday, April 4, and graciously looked in on us in our sanctum. We scarcely need to say that we greatly enjoyed his visit.

The news from Bishop Hoss is to the effect that he continues to improve. This hopeful message will cheer thousands throughout the bounds of Southern Methodism who have been much concerned about the Bishop's condition.

Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Drew, Miss., in his usual whole-hearted fashion, has given us 19 subscriptions from his charge, 7 of which are new. Great is Drew, and unsurpassed as a leader of Israel's hosts is Brother Lagrone. Would that there were more like him!

Rev. G. A. Morgan, of Houma, La., under date of April 3, writes: "We are in the midst of a promising revival meeting at Houma. Rev. H. Wade Cudd, of Baton Rouge, is doing the preaching. He is a fine expositor of the Word. The interest is excellent and the attendance is good."

Unavoidable circumstances prevented Judge H. H. White, of Alexandria, La., from going to Cincinnati, Ohio, this week to meet with the Committee on the Status of the Negroes in the proposed unified Church, of which he is a member. The absence of Judge White will be much regretted.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, has the sympathy of many friends in the bereavement that has come to him in the death of his sister, Mrs. Burdine, which occurred at her home in Perry County a few days ago. May Divine grace sustain him and the other stricken loved ones in their great sorrow!

We had hoped to carry in this issue of the Advocate pictures of all the officers of the Woman's Missionary Council, but were unable to obtain them. We had also expected to print this week some other articles pertaining to our missionary work in this section of the Church, which, for the lack of space, we have been compelled to carry over, much to our regret.

Bishop W. B. Murrah spent last Sunday at Meridian, Miss., preaching for our First Church congregation at 11 o'clock a.m. and at the East End Church at night. From Meridian the Bishop came to New Orleans, where he spent last Tuesday. We were pleased to note that he was looking remarkably well, though his hands have been unusually full of work within recent weeks.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, President of Port Gibson Female College, writes as follows: "The Commencement exercises of Port Gibson Female College will be held May 6-8. Rev. W. A. Hays, of the Mississippi Conference, will preach the Commencement sermon at 11 a.m., Sunday, May 6, and Judge Percy Bell, of Greenville, Miss., will deliver the Baccalaureate Address at 11 a.m., Tuesday, May 8."

Rev. T. H. Dorsey, presiding elder of the Corinth District, under date of April 3, writes as follows: "Sister W. B. Baker, the wife of our pastor at Sherman, Miss., died on Monday, April 2. Let the brethren remember Brother Baker at the throne of grace." Our heart goes out in sympathy to this stricken fellow-laborer, and we pray that the "Everlasting Arms" may support him in his sore bereavement.

Last Sunday was a fine day with Rev. R. H. Harper and the Parker Memorial Church, of this city. Three hundred persons were present at the morning service and 40 were received into the membership of the Church. Three others were admitted to membership at the evening hour, and it is expected that the number will be increased to at least 50 by next Sunday. This ingathering was a result of the "One-to-Win-One Campaign."

We are indebted to the following friends, whose kindness has not been elsewhere acknowledged, for two or more subscriptions that have reached us within the past few days: "Rev. W. W. Jones, Lula, Miss., 2; Rev. J. M. Wyatt, Booneville Miss., 4; Rev. R. T. Nolen, Blodgett, Miss., 2; Rev. J. F. Dring, Ringgold, La., 2; Rev. F. B. Ormond, McComb, Miss., 3; Rev. O. L. Savage, Webb, Miss., 2; Brother H. Lipscomb, Fearn Springs, Miss., 3.

Rev. C. C. Wier, the efficient pastor of our Algiers Church of this city, conducted an interesting series of evening services last week, which were quite helpful to his flock. According to the Algiers Tribune, the available cash funds for the construction of the new house of worship for which this congregation has been planning has passed the $5000 mark, and it is thought that things will soon be in a condition for work upon the building to commence.

We are indebted to Mrs. R. F. Harrell, of Gloster, Miss., the accomplished editor of our Woman's Department, for valuable assistance in getting out this number of the Advocate. Mrs. Harrell came to New Orleans Thursday of last week, and left the next day for Gulfport, Miss., where the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference is being held. From there, she expects to return to New Orleans to attend the Council meeting.

Rev. Walt Holcomb and Rev. J. D. Swagerty began a revival meeting at First Church, Marshall, Texas, last Sunday. Brother Swagerty writes that they would be delighted to have any Louisiana pastors who may find it possible to do so to run over and attend some of the services, since the city of Marshall is not far away. He states that Brother Snelling has invited him and Brother Holcomb to hold a meeting at Ruston, La., immediately after the one now in progress at Marshall, and that they have consented to do so.

Bishop W. A. Candler spent Sunday, April 1, at Holly Springs, Miss., where he preached in our Church both in the morning and evening. The Holly Springs Reporter speaks of his discourses there in terms highly complimentary. The Bishop was en route to Dallas, Texas, to meet the Educational Commission of the M. E. Church, South, of which he is President. Rev. Robert Selby, Commissioner for Emory University in Mississippi, spent the Sabbath at Holly Springs with Bishop Candler. Brother Selby reports that he has lately received another $1000 subscription to the Lamar Law School building.

As will be seen, we are giving this number of the Advocate very largely to the Woman's Missionary Council and the mission work being carried on in this section of the Church. We trust that our other correspondents who have sent us copy, some of which was doubtless expected to appear this week, will see the propriety of our course and be a little patient with us. Our hopper has for some time been full and overflowing. We sincerely wish that we had twice as much space at our disposal as the Advocate furnishes. We are doing the best that we can to meet the pressing demands that are being made upon our columns.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, our pastor at Leland, Miss., reports the death of Mrs. Margaret Weilenman, which occurred at 5 o'clock a.m. on April 5, aged 85 years. Brother Cunningham says: "'Grandma Weilenman,' as she was affectionately referred to by every one, was the oldest member of our church at Leland, and her home-going was as calm and peaceful as the coming of the evening twilight. She was loved by all who knew her, and the memory of her life is an abiding inspiration. She was the mother of Mr. W. E. Weilenman of this place and Mr. J. W. Weilenman, of Shaw, Miss., both substantial laymen of our Church." This true and devoted servant of the Master will be greatly missed. We pray God's blessings upon those whose hearts will be lonely and sad without her.

NEW ORLEANS METHODISM.

Rev. W. W. Holmes,
Presiding Elder of the New Orleans District.

"Is the Methodist Church in New Orleans growing?" This question is often asked, and nearly always in a tone indicating doubt. Some statistics of our Church history in New Orleans covering the last forty years will likely be of interest to the readers of the Advocate. These statistics were taken from the Minutes of the Louisiana Annual Conference, and are as follows:

Year	Churches	Members	S. S. Scholars	Raised by Women's Societies	Total Raised
1876....	6	1391	928	.....	$13,017
1880....	6	1434	1171	$183	15,528
1885....	6	1498	991	158	.....
1890....	11	2311	1853	402	25,074
1895....	11	2481	2242	584	22,050
1900....	10	1967	1750	1443	25,550
1905....	11	3094	1845	2297	44,961
1910....	11	2792	2838	3329	49,224
1916....	12	3518	3108	4358	77,841

The above figures show that we have twice as many churches as we had forty years ago, and that the average membership has increased from 231 to 293. The number of Sunday school scholars has more than trebled. Forty years ago there was no Woman's Society in the Church. Last year we had eleven societies with a membership of 312. These societies paid for all purposes $4358, nearly $14 per member. Rayne Memorial has the happy distinction of having the oldest Missionary Society in the Church. This society was organized about two years before the meeting of the General Conference which made provision for the organization of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

New Orleans Methodism is paying about six times as much for Church work as it paid in 1876. The grand total raised for all purposes last year aggregated $77,841—$22.12 per member.

The growth of our Church has been very slow—however, it has probably kept pace with the growth of the city. When we consider the fact that New Orleans has been overwhelmingly Roman Catholic from the beginning, that it is as distinctly Roman Catholic as Mexico City or Rio De Janeiro, the progress made by our Church does not seem so small. It will compare favorably with progress made in other Catholic cities.

New Orleans, the pleasure-loving, seems to have made no appeal to the migrating population of Protestantism. It has made its appeal both to the Italian and other European Catholics. The civic, social, moral, and religious ideal of the city is largely that of Continental Europe, and for that reason the work of the evangelical Churches has been difficult.

The Protestants are a mere handful when compared to the great Catholic wealth and population, but our Protestantism has never been stronger and more effective than it is to-day; and our own Methodist Church is a more potent force, perhaps, in the life of the city than it has ever been—but our main trouble is, there are not enough of us—only 3518 members out of a population of 375,000.

The records will show that the Methodists of New Orleans have supported liberally all our mission causes for fifty years. When wealth and numbers are considered, few cities have made a better record—but notwithstanding this fact we have more mission territory and less money, and fewer men and women to take it with, than any other section in the Southland.

In the Parishes (counties) about New Orleans—St. Bernard, Plaquemines, Jefferson, St. John the Baptist, St. Charles and others—there is scarcely anything being done by our Church, or any other Protestant church.

New Orleans and adjacent territory constitute the greatest home mission field of our Church. The whole Church ought to center its activities more and more on this strategic territory. Men and money ought to be given until the need is met and the field occupied by our Church. When our Church is strong and vigorous in New Orleans the work will be easier and the Church will thrive throughout all the Gulf States.

REV. A. P. LEECH.

Another of our honored superannuates, Rev. A. P. Leech, has finished his journey and found rest. It has been a long journey for him—eighty-nine years. Having been a local preacher for some years, he asked for admission into the Conference in 1871. Then he was declined; but later was admitted, in 1884. These last thirty-three years of his life were given, without reserve, as a traveling preacher, to the Church, of which he had been a member for 75 years. He was superannuated in 1898, and made his home in Columbus. During these last years he gave to the work of the ministry all the time his failing health would allow.

When the end came he was willing to lay down his burden and rest. Then he was ready to meet his Pilot face to face, when he put out to sea. His end was like to quiet ebbing of the tide. At sunset there was an Evening star.

His widow, children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, with many relatives and a vast host of friends, are more lonely since he has gone away. His brethren in the ministry of his loved Conference laid him away in the old Tabernacle graveyard, with many flowers to cover his grave. Each of the following brethren were present and took some part in the funeral service: Revs. W. L. Duren, W. V. Shearer, T. C. Wier, J. C. Park, W. C. Carlisle, J. M. Guinn, T. M. Gregory, A. S. Raper, J. H. Bell, W. W. Woollard. His pastor, Brother Duren, will write his memoir for the Annual Conference.

W. W. WOOLLARD.

A LETTER FROM DR. FELIX R. HILL.

Dear Dr. Meek: Not until I came here (Louisville, Ky.), have I been able to use a pen with any ease or comfort. My dear, faithful wife and I are at the home of our beloved son, Edward G. Hill, and we are near to our old friends of the Broadway Church, of which I was pastor for four years. I am under the treatment of Dr. Moren, one of the best specialists in the country. Please let me say to you and to my brethren and friends in the Louisiana Conference, that my heart is with you all. My soul is full of love and peace. The Lord is with me. Kindly state that my address is 1330 South First Street, Louisville, Ky., care of Edward G. Hill.

FELIX R. HILL.

Louisville, Ky., April 5, 1917.

THE MERIDIAN WESLEY HOUSE.

While I was visiting a sick mother one day she said to me, "I don't know what I would do without Dorothy; she has done every bit of the cooking these three weeks that I've been sick. She makes all her little sister's clothes and most of her own. And everything she knows about cooking or sewing either she has learned at the Wesley House, for I don't have any time to teach her."

On Thursday afternoon the children like to gather at the Wesley House to play games and hear the stories told by some good story-teller.

Through the kindness of generous-hearted music teachers, several girls who have shown musical talent are getting music lessons at a very small cost.

The kindergarten in its first session, 1916-17, has had an enrollment of 49. Already there is going up a cry for a larger room for the kindergarten work. Miss Tomasia Duncan, our kindergarten teacher, has won the hearts of all her children and their mothers who are constantly singing the praises of the kindergarten and telling of its influence on their little ones. One mother said: "Arnold is so different at home since he has been going to the kindergarten. He used to miss his meals very often. He now seems always to feel well. The kindergarten has improved his health as well as his manners."

The mothers are organized into a Kindergarten Mothers' Club and meet every Friday night. They have had lecturers from physicians on sanitation and other subjects; they have enjoyed programs of music and reading, and at Christmas-time a six o'clock dinner was served them as a surprise. At their own suggestion, they are making articles for a linen loan closet, these articles to be kept at the Wesley House when not in use in cases of sickness.

The Heroes' Club is composed of boys from eight to twelve years of age. They made their own laws and they abide by them. A mother also paid tribute to the Heroes' Club when she said: "My boy has quit using bad language and playing marbles for keeps since he joined the Club." Miss Duncan and these boys have charge of the Wesley House yard, and already several bouquets from flowers of their planting have been carried to the sick. They also have a vegetable garden, and as I write this there is a knock at the door which when answered is found to be some one wanting to buy a dime's worth of onions from the boys' garden. The proceeds from the sale of these vegetables is to go toward buying their camping outfit. The money received from the sale of the flower stands made by them will go for the same purpose. The boys have been on two hikes and are now looking forward to a week's camping out in June.

Our two groups of Hearth-Fire girls have had many good times this winter. On Christmas eve these girls sang Christmas carols for the sick and old. An old lady afterward said, "That was the sweetest music I ever heard; it seemed to come right down out of heaven." Two weeks before Thanksgiving we went to the mill authorities and asked that the girls be given this holiday. So on Thanksgiving Day the Hearth-Fire girls enjoyed a grand hike, the most enjoyable feature of which was cooking thier dinner on the camp fire.

The day nursery, under the supervision of Miss Kate Germany, has cared for 32 children during the year. Through careful attention and right feeding, these children in almost all cases soon show an improvement in health. A little brown-eyed baby who was brought to the nursery six weeks ago too weak to hold up his head, is now so healthy and happy you can hardly realize it is the same child.

LOYALTY TO CHRIST.

From over hill and plain, there come the signal strain:
Loyalty, Loyalty, Loyalty.
Let the music roll along, till all take up the song
Come join our loyal throng—
The Young People's Rally,
Rayne Memorial Church,
Sunday, April 15, 3 o'clock p. m.
And may we lay the strength of our youth at Jesus' feet this day.
Many will be there who can echo back the song of Loyalty, Loyalty, to Christ.

A cordial invitation to all young people (ages 16 and over) of every denomination of the city.

Tells how to loosen a sore, tender corn so it lifts out without pain.

Good news spreads rapidly and druggists here are kept busy dispensing freezone, the ether discovery of a Cincinnati man, which is said to loosen any corn so it lifts out with the fingers.

Ask at any pharmacy for a quarter ounce of freezone, which will cost very little, but is said to be sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply just a few drops on the tender, aching corn and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so shriveled that it lifts out without pain. It is a sticky substance which dries when applied and never inflames or even irritates the adjoining tissue.

This discovery will prevent thousands of deaths annually from lockjaw and infection heretofore resulting from the suicidal habit of cutting corns.

On Saturday afternoon, February 24, 1917, at 4:18 o'clock, at her home in Vancleave, Miss., MRS. BELLE HAVENS BREELAND quietly passed to her reward at the age of 64 years, 10 months, and 23 days, having been born near Red Creek on April 1, 1852. She joined the M. E. Church, South, when quite a young girl, and was a good Christian, and so unselfish, never thinking of herself, but always of other people. In 1882 she was married to Mr. John McCalum Breeland, and of this union only one son was born—Florian Knox. Her husband passed away on October 19, 1903. She contracted measles about ten days before she died, and, on account of her heart being very weak, she did not linger long, but closed her eyes and went to sleep as peacefully as a babe. Oh, such a sweet expression as was on her face! Besides a stepmother and a son, she left a number of brothers, sisters, relatives and friends to mourn their loss. Weep not, loved ones, bnt rejoice because she has gone to a better and sweeter home, and is waiting for you there. She was laid to rest in the Vancleave Cemetery.

A RELATIVE.

Mrs. JANE KIRK departed this life, at Provencal, La., in the home of her son, J. I. Kirk, on March 2, 1917. She was born in Marion County, Miss., on April 19, 1820, making her at her death 96 years, 10 months, and 13 days old. She was married in the State of Mississippi about the year 1844 to Isaiah Kirk, and soon after their marriage they moved to this State. They settled on the Anacoco Creek where her husband built a water-mill—known throughout this country as The Kirk Mill. It was here they lived a happy and prosperous life from about the year 1849 until the year 1888, when her husband died, leaving her to fight the battles of life alone. Aunt Jane, as she was usually called, was loved by everyone who knew her. Sister Kirk joined the M. E. Church, South, in the year 1865, and ever afterwards remained a true and consistent member. She made no great demonstration in the Christian life, but she was evidently a true Christian. She had been nearly blind for a number of years, this affliction depriving her of the privilege of reading her Bible, which she so much loved to read. Many times, when the writer of this obituary would visit her, she would ask him to sit close by her bedside and read such passages of Scripture as she would designate, and all during the reading she would be praising the Lord for his goodness to her throughout her long life. But now it is all over with her, and she has gone to the Celestial City of our Lord, to meet loved ones gone on before. She leaves two sons, a number of grandchildren, and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn her departure. JOHN FRANKLIN.

The Cause of Gray Hair.

Hair grows gray by reason of the same cause which produces dwarfed, yellow stalks of corn instead of strong, dark green growthy stalks—lack of nutrition. Hair, like the crops of the field, must be fed, either naturally from the scalp as the stalk of corn is fed from the soil, or artificial hair food may be applied as fertilizer is applied to the soil to enrich it. Unless your hair is supplied with natural oil—the food on which it subsists—you may expect it to cease its flourishing and lose its natural luster, color and beauty. The hair must have food on which to live. Don't neglect it or it will lose its luster, become stiff and coarse and eventually gray. Begin now and prevent the appearance of age by using a natural hair oil, "La Creole." It will keep the hair soft, fluffy and beautiful. Ask your dealer and if he can't supply you send $1.00 to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn., for a trial bottle.

LATIN AMERICAN WORK OF THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL, M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Mrs. George S. Brown.

We understand by Latin America the nineteen Spanish and Portuguese speaking countries on the western hemisphere. In Texas alone near a half million Mexicans find residence. There are more Mexicans in Texas than there are inhabitants in Costa Rica; more than in Panama. Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California have more Mexicans, to say nothing of other Latin-American peoples, than the whole population of the republic of Honduras.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, maintains at Laredo, Texas, a large school known as Holding Institute. This school was inaugurated more than thirty years ago, and is now called for Miss Nannie Holding, who was the first principal. There are more than three hundred Mexicans attending this school annually, and it has a faculty of fifteen teachers. This school has graduated leaders among the Mexican people. Mr. J. Y. Esquival, a recognized instructor of Mexico, was an honor graduate. He had his first inspiration there.

There are Wesley Houses for Mexicans in San Antonio, Dallas, Fort Worth, Thurber, Texas, and Los Angeles, Cal., and there are seventeen deaconesses and missionaries and twenty teachers working among these people. Two settlements at Tampa for Cubans and a large school at Key West are maintained. Down in Mexico the Woman's Missionary Society supported large schools at Saltillo, Chihuahua, San Luis Potosi, Guadalajara, and the City of Mexico, before the recent troubles in Mexico. These schools have sent out polished graduates. When a body can produce graduates like Mr. Andres Osuna, present Commissioner of Education of Mexico, it has cause for endorsement. The operations of this society in Mexico have been suspended for the last two years.

Among the Panama Congress delegates, one of the most accomplished speakers was a Miss Cortez, a young woman of native ability to be sure, but her development under the instruction of the school at Mexico City enabled her to take place as a leader among her own people. She is at present a missionary employed by the Y. W. C. A. at Buenos Aires. The demand before the Woman's Missionary Council is for more missionaries and deaconesses to do this work at home and abroad.

New Orleans, La.

WALNUT, MISS.

I am writing this to-night, as I expect to leave in the morning to visit two of my childrens at Rienzi, Miss. I was to preach here to-night, but a heavy rain prevented us from having the service. This was the beginning of the Week of Prayer and Self-denial, and, owing to the inclement weather, we have made a poor start toward making it count for much. All things considered, however, I think that I have my work fairly well in hand. I have raised nearly all of my assessment for Home Missions, and the salaries of the pastor and presiding elder are pretty well paid up. I think that I have succeeded in getting a fair hold on my people. I am expecting this to be the best year of my ministry. I am praying more and am seeking to live closer to the Lord, asking daily for the leadership of the Holy Spirit. Pray for me.—B. P. Fullilove, P. C.

Loss of Appetite is also loss of vitality, vigor, tone. To recover appetite and the rest take Hood's Sarsaparilla—that strengthens the stomach, perfects digestion, makes eating a pleasure. It also makes the blood rich and pure, and steadies the nerves.

CLASS OF THE FIRST YEAR, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dr. McNeill, the Dean of the Divinity School, requests me to call your attention to the new Course of Study.

The New Course, now effective, embraces the following subjects:

(a) The Four Gospels and Acts. (Examination to be on Scripture text.)

(b) A Handbook to the Study of the New Testambent. By Dr. Andrew Sledd. (This book we understand, has not been published.)

(c) Wesley's Sermons, Vol. I (Sermons 1 to 26.)

(d) New Life in Christ. By Joseph Agar Beet.

(e) Wesley's Journal. Vols. I and II (Thesis to be written on subject assigned.)

(f) Life of William McKendree. By Bishop E. E. Hoss.

(g) Life of Joshua Soule. By H. M. Du Bose.

(h) The Ministry to the Congregation. By J. A. Kern.

(i) The Discipline.

(j) A sermon on "Repentance" to be prepared by the applicant.

We shall be glad to see as many as possible of the members of the class at the Divinity School.

"Anaemia--Lack of Iron--Is Greatest Curse To Health and Beauty of American Women"

Says Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author

Any Woman Who Tires Easily, is Nervous or Irritable, or Looks Pale, Haggard and Worn, Should Have Her Blood Examined for Iron Deficiency.

Administration of Nuxated Iron Will Increase the Strength and Endurance of Weak, Nervous, Careworn Women 100 Per Cent. in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances.

THE CHILDS APPEAL

Mother, why don't you take NUXATED IRON and be strong and well and have nice rosy cheeks instead of being so nervous and irritable all the time and looking so haggard and old-The doctor gave some to Susie Smith's mother and she was worse off than you are and now she looks just fine

You can tell the women with plenty of iron in their blood-beautiful healthy rosy cheeked women full of Life, Vim and Vitality

"There can be no healthy, beautiful, rosy cheeked women without iron," says Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York physician and medical author. "In my recent talks to physicians on the grave and serious consequences of iron deficiency in the blood of American women, I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—nuxated iron—for their nervous, run-down, weak, haggard looking women patients. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of an anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks."

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated corn meal no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked, are responsible for another grave iron loss.

"Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe old age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

"As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak or rundown, instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants and alcoholic beverages I am convinced that in this way they could ward off disease, preventing it becoming organic in thousands of cases and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous maladies. The real and true cause which started their disease was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by a lack of iron in the blood.

On account of the peculiar nature of woman and the great drain placed upon her system at certain periods, she requires iron much more than man to help make up for the loss.

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles, in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate, or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

I have used Nuxated Iron widely in my own practice in most severe aggravated conditions with unfailing results. I have induced many other physicians to give it a trial, all of whom have given me most surprising reports in regard to its great power as a health and strength builder.

Many an athlete and prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. Howard James, formerly Ship Surgeon Holland American Line and Assistant Physician City Hospital, Ward's Island, New York, said, "It should be brought home to the minds of the younger as well as elder women of America what a wonderful change will take place, in many cases, when Nuxated Iron is taken, how it will cause the enriched blood to bring the roses to their cheeks, the sparkle to their eyes and the elasticity to their step; how their every function will be stimulated and regulated and that sense of what the French call bien entre will get up with them in the morning and accompany them at night to a sound and perfect sleep. Men, too—those who, in the strenuous strain of business competition burn up rapidly stores of nervous energy, here is a source of power, and renewed strength and endurance which will be found unfailing."

Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author, tells physicians that they should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their patients—Says anaemia—iron deficiency—is the greatest curse to the health, strength, vitality and beauty of the modern American Woman.—Sounds warning against use of metallic iron which may injure the teeth, corrode the stomach and do far more harm than good; advises use of only nuxated iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine or secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

TAKE YOUR MEDICINES

REGULARLY—Hood's Sarsaparilla Before Meals—Peptiron Pills After.

This combination is having wonderful success everywhere.

It is sweeping poor health and fear of mental and physical breakdown out of many homes.

It is restoring lost appetite, giving the glow of health to the cheeks, making faces bright and complexions clear, and literally giving worn-out, brain-fagged people the strength of iron.

For it combines that most useful of all metals—iron—in a course of medicine that is peculiarly effective.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is made from an unsurpassed formula of blood-purifying and stomach-toning remedies, including sarsaparilla, mandrake, dandelion, yellow dock, wild cherry, gentian and other valuable alteratives and kidney and liver remedies.

Peptiron Pills, named from pepsin and iron, include these with nux and other blood and stomach tonics—just what physicians prescribe.

Is your present experience hard to bear? Remember that never again, perhaps, in all your days will you have another chance of the same. Do not fly the lesson, but have a care that you master it while you have the opportunity.—Edward Carpenter.

Auto-Intoxication Causes Death

Do you know why you have sick headache, diabetes, neuralgia, rheumatism and liver or kidney troubles? It's because you are being poisoned by products of your own body. Your organs of elimination are not working properly. Waste material that should be thrown out is being retained to poison and intoxicte your system. That could not happen if the bowels were kept open with Granger Liver Regulator. This splendid preparation is purely vegetable and non-alcoholic. Demand Granger Liver Regulator at your drug store—25c a box—and take no other. There is nothing "just as good."

WHAT IS

LAX-FOS

LAX-FOS IS AN IMPROVED CASCARA

A DIGESTIVE LAXATIVE

CATHARTIC AND LIVER TONIC

LAX-FOS is not a Secret or Patent Medicine but is composed of the following old-fashioned roots and herbs:

CASCARA BARK
BLUE FLAG ROOT
BLACK ROOT
MAY APPLE ROOT
SENNA LEAVES
AND PEPSIN

In LAX-FOS the CASCARA is improved by the addition of these digestive ingredients making it better than ordinary CASCARA, and thus the combination acts not only as a stimulating laxative and cathartic but also as a digestive and liver tonic. Syrup laxatives are weak, but LAX-FOS combines strength with palatable, aromatic taste and does not gripe or disturb the stomach. One bottle will prove LAX-FOS is invaluable for Constipation, Indigestion or Torpid Liver. Price 50c.

Incontestable proof of time.

The fact that Gray's Ointment has been used in thousands of homes during the past ninety-six years is incontestable proof of its merit. All who have ever used Gray's Ointment will testify that it is a most effective remedy for allaying pain and bealing sores, boils, carbuncles, skin abrasions, cuts, burns, bruises, etc. It is a positive protection against blood poison. N. B. Hoofman, Stewart, Miss., writes: "My father used it in his family fifty years ago. For the purpose you recommend it, it has no equal." Only 25c a box at drug stores. For FREE sample, write W. HOW SHIVAR MINERAL WATER RELIEVES RHEUMATISM.

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-B, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly..

Freckles

To remove freckles the best thing to do is to remove the outer cuticle of the skin, which carries the freckles. This is easily done with Kintho Cream. The Kintho should peel off the old, freckled skin, a little at a time, gradually bringing the under layer of skin to view. The new skin is beautiful, soft, clear, white and youthful looking and, of course, should have no freckles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed. Read carefully special instructions inside of box.

Sick-Headache!

Dr. J. J. Caldwell says that this exceedingly distressing disease does not shorten life, but does not appear to be curable. Sufferers from this affliction are condemned to undergo the periodical attacks every few weeks until they are forty years of age, after which the attacks are less frequent, and finally disappear entirely. Palliative measures during the attack are all that it is possible to suggest, while care in the diet is the best preventive measure. An attack may often be prevented by taking two anti-kamnia tablets when the first symptoms appear, and one anti-kamnia tablet every two hours during the attack shorters it, eases the pain and brings rest and quiet.

Anti-kamnia tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They quickly relieve all pain.

MR. J. J. CROOKS DEAD.

Dear Dr. Meek: On last Saturday we laid to rest in the Jena Cemetery the body of Brother John J. Crooks, the father of Rev. L. E. Crooks, our pastor at Selma, La. Brother Crooks, while attempting to cross the railway track near the L. & A. depot, was struck by a passenger engine and almost instantly killed. Brother Crooks was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopai Church, South. He leaves a family of nine chiidren and a host of friends, who mourn his death. May God comfort the bereaved ones!

For Inactive Liver and Clogged System

a safe treatment should be used. A violent liver stimulant and a severe cathartic may afford temporary relief, but they weaken as well, and the reaction leaves the sufferer worse than before.

MANALIN

is prepared on different principles. It is mild, and induces a natural action of liver and bowels. It is safe, because it is free from any drastic purgatives. It is effective because it combines the principles of a liver arouser and a laxative. And it is pleasant to take.

THE TABLET FORM

is convenient, pleasing, effective and economical. Proper use will nearly always correct faulty habits and bring back a natural condition.

The sufferer who fails to obtain proper results may write to the Medical Department of this Company, and get medical advice free of all charge.

Start correcting your habits today—Manalin will help you.

To Prevent Old Age Coming Too Soon!

"Toxic poisons in the blood are thrown out by the kidneys. The kidneys act as filters for such products. If we wish to prevent old age coming too soon and increase our chances for a long life, we should drink plenty of pure water and take a little Anuric," says the world-famed Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y.

When suffering from backache, frequent or scanty urine, rheumatic pains here or there, or that constant tired, worn-out feeling, the simple way to overcome these disorders is merely to obtain a little Anuric from your nearest druggist and you will quickly notice the grand results. You will find it many times more potent than lithia, and that it dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar.

A PRETTY FACE is the result of a healthy physical condition. "Beauty is but skin deep" yet it greatly depends on a clear complexion, free from wrinkles and hollow cheeks.

Health always brings wealth of beauty. A healthy state of the system comes with Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's a medicine prepared for woman's ailments—it cures those derangements and weaknesses which make woman's life miserable.

You can overcome most bodily ills, escape sickness, build up your health with regular hours, plenty of water, sensible food, and a chance to get the poison out of the system. Take a natural laxative once or twice weekly. Such a one is made of May-apple, juice of aloes, and root of jaiap, sugar-coated and supplied to all druggists years ago by Doctor Pierce and known as Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Get them to-day!

GIRL COULD NOT WORK

How She Was Relieved from Pain by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Taunton, Mass.—"I had pains in both sides and when my periods came I had to stay at home from work and suffer a long time. One day a woman came to our house and asked my mother why I was suffering. Mother told her that I suffered every month and she said, 'Why don't you buy a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' My mother bought it and the next month I was so well that I worked all the month without staying at home a day. I am in good health now and have told lots of girls about it."—Miss CLARICE MORIN, 22 Russell Street, Taunton, Mass.

Thousands of girls suffer in silence every month rather than consult a physician. If girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a safe and pure remedy made from roots and herbs, much suffering might be avoided.

Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. (confidential) for free advice which will prove helpful.

"NEARER TO GOD OR FURTHER FROM HIM."

By Bishop Walter R. Lambuth, D.D.

In an interview granted by King Albert to Dr. Henri Anet of Brussels a few months ago, the King made the significant remark: "This war is a dreadful trial; either it brings us nearer to God or further from Him." These words indicate, upon the part of the courageous ruler of Belgium, an insight into the appalling situation confronting him and his people, and the spiritual forces involved which compel attention. Never, perhaps, have a people been more severely tested. Will they stand the strain? Will they come through it purified? Or will they go down under it physically and spiritually? Much depends—in some sense everything depends—upon the sympathetic attitude of Christian people. Are we ready to make good our profession of brotherhood? Will we lend a helping hand?

Much has been written concerning the Belgium sufferers. It is hardly necessary to add one word—the world knows the facts. It is difficult, however, to realize how the very people who opened their homes to our first party of missionaries to Africa—Mumpower, Stockwell, Bush and their wives—have had their homes destroyed, their personal property plundered, and are now enduring the severest privations; having no meat to eat, their only food rice and potatoes, and some obliged to live on boiled potato peelings. Despite this, and the loss of churches and mission halls, religious work is being carried on by the pastors who are giving consolation and hope to their own people, to Roman Catholics, and to unbelievers who are turning to Jesus Christ as their only hope. Surely this is the hour of supreme need, and one in which succor will count for most.

Rev. Henri Anet, LL.D., is in the United States under the direction of the American Huguenot Committee. He has been for years the distinguished pastor of an evangelical church in Belgium, is an eminent scholar, and one of the Directors of the Missionary Society which, prior to the European War, projected a mission in the Belgian Congo, some 300 miles south of our own mission at Wembo-Niama. He made a pioneer journey just before Prof. Gilbert and I entered the Kasai District, and wrote an interesting book in French, giving an account of his travels and observations.

The Doctor stands high in Belgium with the government authorities, and as the official representative of several of the American Missions in the Congo has been of invaluable help in their relations to the Belgian Government. He was instrumental in securing, through the Colonial Office, concessions of land for the Southern Presbyterians, and ourselves. Our Church, therefore, is profoundly indebted to him and to his colleagues in Brussels, who generously seconded his efforts, and extended their hospitality to our missionaries while studying French.

The evangelical churches in France as well as in Belgium within the war zone are represented by Dr. Anet. In some cases the congregations are absolutely without shelter, and in all they face financial conditions which may compel them to close their doors. And yet, the attendance is larger than before the war. "Never have hearts been opened as now," says the Doctor, "to the preaching of the gospel. Belgians and Frenchmen are being brought closer to God.....The patience, the faith and also the liberality of our church members are astounding.....France has found her soul," he continues, "in the struggle for international justice and freedom, but the soul of both nations must still be saved; redeemed by the faith in the Lord Jesus Christ."

"May many Belgians and Frenchmen make the discovery of a Belgian lady refugee in England, where she was converted: 'I have lost everything;' she exclaimed, 'my house is burned down, all my belongings have been taken away. I am here in exile, but I do not regret all these losses, for I have found a greater treasure—the gospel of Christ.'"

Dr. Anet is making the tour of the Southern Sates in the interest of these churches. They must be helped until they can return to normal conditions. I commend this brother and the cause he represents to the sympathy and liberality of our preachers and people. If we do our duty this war may, in the providence of God, bring the Belgian people nearer to Him. If we fail to measure up to the standards of Christian brotherhood, we shall not only be found wanting ourselves, but may be held responsible for a distressed and broken-hearted people drifting away from God.

By request of Dr. Anet's Committee, contributions should be sent to Edmond E. Robert, Treasurer, 3 Maiden Lane, New York City.

THE McDONOGHVILLE MEETING.

Dear Doctor Meek: I have just closed a ten days' meeting with Brother Mangum at McDonoghville, La. He will most likely write of the meeting, but I want to say a word, too. Those composing the McDonoghville Methodist Church I found to be a loyal and heroic people. I wish some of our up-the-State people would catch more of their spirit of zeal and church loyalty. It is a blessing for any man, layman or preacher, to come in contact with such laymen as Black, Thaggart, and Carnes, and many others whom I might mention—both men and women—connected with this little band of faithful workers. Brother Mangum is doing a great work—he would do a great work anywhere. He is a hard worker, tactful, deeply religious, and thoroughly consecrated. He has a bright future for two worlds.

Fraternally,
HENRY T. YOUNG,
Conference Evangelist.

EPILEPSY, ST. VITUS' DANCE AND OTHER FITS.

Epilepsy is one of the most dreadful of nervous disorders. Moreover, it is far more common than is generally supposed. In thousands of homes there are parents who are struggling with children subject to "spasms," "convulsions," or "fits," which would yield to proper treatment.

St. Vitus Dance is another ailment that frequently appears in children, and which causes great sorrow to parents.

Both of these ailments and their several forms has often been successfully treated by the use of Dr. Miles' Nervine. Cases have been reported by parents and adults from every State in the Union, and all of them give credit to Dr. Miles' Nervine.

If you know of anyone who suffers from any of the above mentioned disorders, and if they have found the different forms of treatment they have tried to be unsuccessful, then you will confer a lasting favor on them by advising the use of Dr. Miles' Nervine.

A trial bottle will cost nothing, for if the first bottle of medicine fails to benefit, the empty bottle may be taken to the druggist who will cheerfully refund the money paid for it.

Write to the Miles Medical Co., and they will send you testimonials from cases in your particular neighborhood.

Dr. Miles' Nervine can be purchased at any drug store.

This Ford FREE

For Church Use

This is a bona fide offer. Your church or your pastor gets the car without a cent of cost to you or to him.

It is open to any Church, Bible Class, Sunday School or Ladies' Society. The little country church will find that it can get a car just as easily as the big church in the city. Some churches that started only two or three months ago already have their cars.

Until they wrote for particulars about our offer they had no idea how easily or how quickly they could get their Ford. Now they are delighted and thankful. You will be, too.

Read this Grateful Statement

The Broad Street Methodist Episcopal Church of Richmond, Va., secured a car for their pastor's use in about three months. In a letter of acknowledgment from the committee having the matter in charge, they say:

"Please accept Broad Street M. E. Church's best wishes for your good firm, and may the blessings from above be always with you."

Write Today for Full Particulars

Don't put it off. The sooner you learn about our Free Offer, the sooner you will be eager to start, and the sooner you will get your car. You have our word for it that it will not cost you a cent. When you get the car, you do not even have to pay the freight. We do that, too.

This Free Offer is backed by one of the old reliable firms of Louisville, Ky., Ballard & Ballard Co., Incorporated, manufacturers of the famous Obelisk, Ballard's Self-Rising, Table Talk, Pioneer Self-Rising Flours, and Ballard's Carton Products. The name of the firm alone is a guarantee that every promise will be kept.

Here is the Coupon Sign it Today

Simply fill out this Coupon and send it to us. We will send all the particulars of our offer of a Ford free. It puts you under no obligation. You will not be asked to spend a cent—because the car is free just as we promise you.

Moreover, if you send in the coupon promptly, we will in addition send you a special concession which is the very acme of liberality itself, and will be a decided boost in helping you get your car.

UGH! A DOSE OF NASTY CALOMEL

It salivates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful to-night. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The 47th session of the Greenville District Conference was held at Lula, Miss., March 27-29, Rev. V. C. Curtis, P. E., presiding. The opening sermon was preached Monday night by Rev. H. C. Morrison, D.D., of Louisville, Ky., who also preached twice daily throughout the conference. After roll call, Rev. A. T. McIlwain was elected Secretary. After organization, the Presiding Elder gave a brief report of the work of the district, in which he sounded the evangelistic note, stressing the importance of looking well to this important feature of our work throughout the year.

The call of charges was taken up and the pastors made their reports. These reports, as usual, were very interesting. Three very successful meetings were reported—from Greenville, Leland, and Shelby. It was gratifying to note the number of new churches being built in the district. Friars Point and Bobo reported churches finished; Clarksdale reported a $65,000 church, to be modern in every respect, well under way of construction—to be completed by the middle of summer; Cleveland reported everything ready to let the contract for a $20,000 brick church; while the following places reported considerable repair work under way: Shelby, Duncan, and Shaw.

The reports also showed that the Sunday school work was being well looked after, which was also gratifying, as we all realize that our future success, in a large measure, lies in the Sunday school.

A special feature of the afternoon session of tho first day was an address by Mrs. E. T. Clark, of Cleveland, representing the Woman's Missionary Society of the district. Sister Clark stated that the Greenville Distrct occupied third place among the districts of the North Miss. Conference now, but her aim and plans are to have it occupy the first place before the end of 1917, and judging from her able address, we shall not be surprised to see her district take first place during this year.

The morning session of the second day was featured by a stirring address by Rev. D. R. Wasson on "The Relation of the Laymen's Movement to the Evangelization of the World." The Conference voted to have a District Evangelistic Committee, and the following were appointed on that committee: E. H. Cunningham, R. W. Evans, W. M. Campbell and J. R. Bright, with the presiding elder as chairman.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: Dr. L. L. Minor, E. M. Fant, J. H. Sherard, and J. T. Mathis. Dr. L. L. Minor was elected District Lay Leader.

The following church institutions were ably represented before the Conference: Emory University, represented by Dr Robt. Selby, of Mississippi Conference; Millsaps College by Rev. M. M. Black, also of Mississippi Conference; Grenada College by Rev. T. M. Brownlee; Methodist Hospital, at Memphis, by Rev. H. M. Ellis; Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, by Rev. J. B. Randolph. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sunday school Field Secretary, was present to present the needs of the Sunday school work, and it goes without saying that this all-important interest was well represented.

The Conference was in every way a great success, due largely, and we might say altogether, to the fact that our efficient presiding elder had arranged a good program. This was Brother Curtis' first time to preside over a conference, but one would have thought, judging from the way he presided, that he was an old hand at the business. The Conference was indeed fortunate in having Dr. Morrison to do the preaching. The Doctor believes in he old-time Holy Ghost power, and more than once he had the preachers at the altar seeking a fresh baptism of this much-needed power. Brother Curtis had arranged the program to give plenty of time to devotions and preaching, thus stressing the spiritual side of the work, and we can truly say we had a spiritual conference.

Brother Jones, the conference host, and the good, hospitable people of Lula gave us a cordial welcome and royal entertainment.

We missed you very much, Dr. Meek, and you missed a good conference by not being there. The next conference will meet at Merigold, Miss.

REUNION AT MONTROSE.

Dr. Rolfe Hunt, president of the Mississippi Conference Training School at Montrose, Miss., announces a reunion of former teachers and students of that institution for April 24. In this invitation the present student-body, the faculty and the board of trustees join, and it is hoped that all who can will be present by 9:30 a. m.

An address of welcome will be delivered by Rev. W. L. Linfield, President of the Board. A response will be made by Rev. J. L. Neill in behalf of the former students, and by Rev. W. W. Moore in behalf of the former teachers. There will be several brief informal addresses.

On the Sunday preceding this, the Commencement Sermon will be preached by Dr. H. F. Tolle, of Biloxi. On Monday afternoon, April 23, a pageant will be presented on the campus by the first 8 grades. Monday night there will be a contest for a medal in oratory by members of the Waldo Moore Society. Tuesday night the seniors will have their exercises. On the morning of Wednesday, the 25th, will come the graduating exercises, and the Baccalaureate Address will be delivered by Rev. W. B. Hogg, of Laurel.

Editorial

"It is much less what we do,
Than what we think, that fits us for the future."

True prayer is not a substitute for work, but a mighty spur to effort.

Apparently adherence to their convictions is too much to expect of some people—seemingly they haven't any.

Secretary of State Lansing is quoted as having recently said: "Society to-day tends toward materialism, and even the Church is drifting away from spirituality." This statement is well worth meditating upon.

The Church colleges will have something to do if they measure up to the claims that are being made for them. The standard set up, however, is none too high, and they should not be satisfied to fall short of it. Schools that are Christian in fact, and not merely in name, are the crying need of the hour.

A Roman Catholic priest of New Orleans recently declared in a sermon that there ought to be a deck of cards in every home. This utterance is about on a parity with much of the pernicious teaching of the Romish Church. Sam Jones was nearer right when he said: "If you sow cards, you reap gamblers."

It is somewhat amusing to hear a public speaker suggest that the present-day effort to have the Church regulate and elevate society by taking a hand in politics and legislation is something new. There was a time when the Church directly dominated in pretty nearly all the affairs of society and the State. A thinking man cannot but wonder if there are those among us who desire a re-establishment of that regime.

A comtemporary remarks that it was said of Bishop Soule that he prayed so much that there were corns on his knees. There is, in our opinion, little doubt that more "kneeology" would mightily help the ministry and membership of the Church in this day. In fact, it might even give us a sounder, a more Scriptural theology. Paul got rid of a good deal of theological rubbish as a result of the experience that came to him on the road to Damascus.

A contemporary has an editorial entitled, "The Occasionalism of Piety," an expression that is attributed to Dr. James Martineau. The truth emphasized under this caption, that there is need for stated hours and places for prayer and worship, is one which it is well to stress; but we do not consider this phrase a felicitous characterization of it. Piety ought to shine with a steady light. Worship is but one of its many manifestations. We were told some years ago of a minister who had a sermon on "The Monotony of Piety." It may have been a good discourse, but we have never been sorry that we did not hear it.

AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

The past few days have witnessed the final commitment of the United States to war with the German Empire. On the evening of April 2, President Wilson in a masterful address to Congress advised that a declaration be made that a state of war exists between the two countries, and both the Senate and House of Representatives have since adopted a resolution in harmony with that suggestion. The President's utterance was in every way worthy of the Chief Executive of a great nation and set forth the grounds of the action which he recommended in a manner that was most impressive and convincing. His message, in our humble opinion, is destined to take rank with the ablest State papers that have figured in the history of our country.

That the United States has at last been compelled to appeal to arms, we profoundly regret; but it is our conviction, in view of the existing conditions and what had taken place, that there was no other course consistent with duty and honor that she could have pursued. The President has certainly been patient and has faithfully endeavored to obviate the necessity of a conflict, and not until every expedient, except the surrender of sacred rights and principles, had been exhausted, did he gain his consent to recommend that the Nation resort to force.

As we go to war, it should be a source of strength and inspiration to know that justice, humanitarianism, and the highest interests of civilization are on our side. Our motives are pure and our aims are wholly unselfish. In a manner unparalleled in modern times, Germany has trampled underfoot International law, has murdered without warning the citizens of neutral States upon the high seas, and, while boasting of her "kultur," has perpetrated the most brutal and horrifying outrages. The American Ambassador to France, Mr. Sharp, in a recent communication to the United States Government, says: "I inspected more than a hundred miles of the invaded territory (from which the Germans had lately retreated) and left with the conviction that never before in the history of the world had there been such a destruction wrought by either a vanquished or victorious army." Mr. Sharp also tells of a mother in the town of Ham who stated to him "that several hundred people at that place, nearly half of whom were girls and young women, had been compelled to go with the Germans when they fell back." Such practices cannot be permitted to be carried on in the twentieth century, and the nation that dares to stand sponsor for them is the common enemy of mankind. We can scarcely believe that the great body of the German people themselves would fall to rise up against those committing such barbarities if they were correctly informed concerning them; but unfortunately they are governed by a cruel autocracy that will keep them blinded and deluded as long as possible.

This is a time when every citizen of the United States should be thoroughly loyal to his country. Hitherto, there was room for differences of opinion as to what course our Government should pursue; but now the Nation has spoken and we should present a united front in the support of the cause which she has resolved to maintain. Henceforth any effort to combat or hinder the prosecution of the war which has been proclaimed to exist would partake of the nature of treason.

But let us remember that the call is to fight the German army and navy, and not the Germans in our own land. So long as they keep the peace and deport themselves properly, we should be considerate of them and seek to guard against needlessly wounding their feelings. Bound as they are to the Fatherland by many tender ties, the situation is a very trying one for them, and we should exhibit toward them a magnanimous and kindly spirit. Thus shall we help them to be loyal to the land of their adoption and contribute to the maintenance of justice and good order throughout the American Republic.

MISLEADING.

In the Texas Christian Advocate of April 5, Dr. Bradfield represents Dr. Spencer, the Editor of the Central Christian Advocate (Kansas City), as having said that "the colored members of the Methodist Episcopal Church are certain to pass out the door which Dr. Edward Blake has opened." We respectfully submit that this statement is misleading, though, of course, it is unintentionally so. While disclaiming any authority to speak for the Negroes in the Church, North, Dr. Spencer expressed the view that they had been deeply wounded by the deliverance of Dr. Blake, and that if their Church should take his position, the colored contingent would withdraw from it. Note the following sentence of Dr. Spencer: "The fine phrases of the cold Boston speech do not deceive them at all. If under the gauze and sugar they discern THAT THEY ARE NOT WANTED, OR ARE WANTED ONLY ON THE PLATFORM OF ABANDONING THE AMERICANISM TO WHICH THE CHURCH HAS BORNE HER GREAT WITNESS, they will go forth."

All the indications are that the Church, North, is not going to stand for Dr. Blake's scheme. The utterances in the press of the Northern Church have been practically all against it. Not a single Northern Church paper is advocating it—a few days ago we quoted an emphatic pronouncement in opposition to it by the Northwestern Christian Advocate (Chicago). The white leaders in the Methodist Episcopal Church who are closest to the Negroes, such as Bishop Thirkield and Bishop Anderson, the chairman of the Freedman's Bureau, have shown that they are not willing to pay this price for union. Even Dr. Spencer argues against it, declaring that it would discredit and "pillory" their denomination in history. Moreover, Dr. R. E. Jones, speaking for his race, has declared that not until "the crack of doom" will they take the path that Dr. Blake has blazed out for the colored Northern Methodists, and Dr. Penn and other influential Negroes in the Church, North, have vigorously re-enforced him in this position. The truth is, for Southern Methodists to pin their faith to this remote hope which Dr. Bradfield is apparently seeking to awaken among them would, so far as the average finite mind can now see, be to waste time upon a veritable ignis fatuus.

DR. STEEL'S WASHINGTON ADDRESS.

(This notable utterance was made by Dr. S. A. Steel, of Shreveport, La., on the occasion when work was begun on our Representative Church in Washington City a few days ago.—Editor of Advocate.)

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:

The impressive ceremony you have just performed in breaking dirt for the building of our Representative Church in our National Capital marks the actual beginning of a work that has long been on the mind and heart of Southern Methodism. The interesting address to which you have just listened recalls an heroic past, and the part assigned me in the program of this service justifies me in linking this occasion with the great future which is before us. Two million Southern Methodists, and many millions of Southern people, are the real audience that celebrate this auspicious event in the history of our great Church.

Sixteen States have contributed to erect this great place of worship. Gifts, ranging from one dollar to twenty-five thousand dollars, from loyal Southern Methodists, have made possible the building of this Representative Church, and many more will have a part in the noble work before it is completed. It will be a splendid monument to the patriotic devotion and religious faith of our people. It is not a local enterprise, but an undertaking that has behind it the endorsement of the whole Church through the official action of the General Conference. Some of our ablest men are directly and actively engaged in carrying it to a successful issue, and it is to be hoped, now that the work has actually begun, that the whole Church will feel a deeper interest in its accomplishment as soon as possible. Here a noble people, in gratitude to God for the past, and with strong faith in His truth as the only hope of man, will enshrine in monumental stone the spirit and aspiration of our great Church and fair Southland.

A visitor from some other planet, who in the couse of his celestial rambles might come to see us, and who was totally unacquainted with the thoughts of men and the institutions of human society, might at first be perplexed by the number and variety of churches he would find in any of our great communities. The perplexity might grow deeper when he reflected that all of these churches acknowledged the same Head, profess faith in the same fundamental truth, and seek to do the same kind of work. Why, he might ask, do they not all unite? But he would draw a very erroneous inference if he should conclude that this diversity of churches indicated any weakness in Christianity. The very opposite is true. It is evidence of the inexhaustible fullness of the life that is in Christ.

If you should go into a virgin forest, and note the great variety of trees—the sturdy oak, the tall and stately pine, the lofty poplar and wide branching walnut—you would exclaim, "How boundless must be the strength, how intense the life of nature, that sends up from the same soil, fed by the same chemical elements, nourished by the same sunshine and rain, such widely diverse types of trees! And how admirably this variety is adapted to the manifold needs of man, the oak and poplar and pine, each filling a particular place better than the other in the building we call our home." This analogy applies to that vast spiritual temple which we call the Church. Each one of these great denominations is an integral part of a vaster whole, and the whole is stronger and more complete because of the variety in unity which this providential organization of truth affords. It is a fundamental fallacy that confounds unity of life with uniformity of organization. It is not an accident that we have different creeds and organizations of Christian truth, but a fact in harmony with the whole order of nature and promotive of the highest interests of the Kingdom. Each denomination fulfils a special end in the plan of Providence. Of course, if the oak sill in the building were to begin to quarrel with the pine floor and the poplar beam and to refuse to allow the walnut finish, the house would soon go to pieces. And so when these denominations antagonize each other, Christianity is sadly weakened. But when they work in harmony, and conform to the apostolic ideal, and maintain "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," Christianity becomes irresistible. This is the only kind of union possible because it is the only kind of union that is Scriptural.

This Church, therefore, does not represent any divisive, or sectarian or selfish sentiment; but it is in perfect harmony with the fundamental principles of true Christianity. It seeks to do here in Washington City its particular work, which it can do better than any other Church, and in doing which makes a definite contribution to our national life and to the common welfare of mankind. It is not a vain denominational pride that builds this Church, but an honorable desire to do our part in the moral upbuilding of the life of the nation, and to provide a congenial religious home for our own people who come here to live. This Church, ever true to the liberal spirit of Methodism, will seek to co-operate in fraternal relations with every other Church in this city, and rejoice in the prosperity of all, its only rivalry being to excel in zeal and devotion to our common Lord.

It is pre-eminently a representative Church. It stands for a great denomination, and for the high ideals of our Southern civilization. It represents the Methodism of the South: the Methodism that Asbury labored so abundantly to plant in our sunny land: the Methodism that has borne the banner of the Cross from the Atlantic to the Pacific along our southern parallels; the Methodism that civilized the African and evangelized the Indian, that preached the same gospel of love to the slave in his cabin and his master in his mansion, that kindled the fires of salvation along the far-flung frontier in the beginning, and keeps them burning brightly to-day among the palaces of our surging cities; the Methodism that ministered to the sick and wounded in the hospital, or on the tented field, and preached the gospel in the camps of Confederate heroes battling in defense of liberty, and pointed the dying soldier's eyes, dim with the mists of death, to a crucified Christ: the Methodism which, though shaken to its base by the throes of war, stood its ground, resisted disintegration and defied decay, reorganized its forces and renewed its life, and sprang, like the fabled Phoenix, from the very ashes of its funeral pyre, new fledged with power to pursue its shining way; the Methodism that gave us George F. Pierce, and David S. Doggett, and James A. Duncan, and Holland N. McTyeire, and Hubbard H. Kavanaugh, and Enoch M. Marvin, and John Christian Keener, and Charles B. Galloway, and Alpheus W. Wilson, and an illustrious rank and file who followed their plumes of fire!

Such a Methodism, sir, is worth perpetuating. Its doctrines, its ideals, its traditions, its family life, the subtle, yet powerful, spiritual affinities that draw its members to each other and unite them in the mystic bonds of fellowship, its denominational atmosphere—all these things are sacred, and essential elements of religion; and they are to be made concrete and enduring in the building you are to erect. There were various synagogues in Jerusalem: the synagogue of the Libertines, the Cyrenians, the Alexandrians. Each nation, all Jews, but having their own individual types and tastes, could worship amid congenial surroundings and feel at home in the capital of the nation. So, here the Southern Methodist from the everglades of Florida or the mountains of Tennessee, from the swamps of Louisiana or the prairies of Texas, from Mexico or Brazil, from China or Japan, when he comes to our National Capital will find in this church a place of congenial worship. Here he can be loyal to the faith of his fathers and the sacred traditions of his people without feeling out of harmony with the spirit of the place.

There was never an age when the world needed a Church true to its mission more than it needs it now. We are in an age of tumult and transition. Old things are passing away. All things are becoming new. Chains are being broken. Dungeons are breaking open. Light is rising. Chaos is rounding into form. Freedom is sending a Roman-off emperor to his estates, and will topple the diadem from the brow of many another king; and break the sceptre of oppression. What the world needs now is that the forces that make for righteousness shall guide the course of events and shape the future. And where else but in the Church will we find the forces of righteousness organized and active? But it must be the Church true to its mission, loyal to Jesus Christ, instinct with the presence of the Holy Spirit, putting supreme emphasis on the spiritual side of life, and bearing its testimony to the truth as it is in Jesus.

Methodism from the beginning has been one of the most vital expressions of apostolic Christianity. In an age similar in many respects to this, when revolution was shaking the foundation of thrones, and a mad democracy was revolting mankind with its excesses and shocking immoralities, the great religious revival led by Wesley saved England from the destructive forces raging around her. We must look to the same spiritual agency to save America. Our country will not escape the reaction of the cyclonic agitation now going on in Europe. If our free democracy stands firm while the world is rocking with revolution, and we succeed in molding the heterogeneous elements of our population to the ideals of republican liberty, we must create a national conscience that obeys the moral imperative, that seeks and will be satisfied with nothing less than justice for all men, high and low, irrespective of race or creed.

Methodism must do its part in creating this national conscience. It can do it best in the future, as it has done it in the past, by preaching the gospel to the masses; by kindling and keeping warm and bright the fires of salvation in the hearts of the people. When a man is converted at the Methodist altar he must be a good husband to his wife, a good father to his children, an honest man with his neighbors, a loyal citizen of the States, and a true patriot. This Church stands for these simple and unostentatious, but elemental virtues, that constitute the nation's real strength.

May I indulge a pleasing hope in connection with the great enterprise which you inaugurate to-day? May this great Church not only represent the historic past of Southern Methodism, of which we are so justly proud, but ever stand for that type of spiritual life which has made us great, and strong, and worthy to have our place among the allied forces of the Church universal; loyal to Jesus Christ the supreme Head; loyal to its own denominational banner; conservative and slow to modify its established methods to accommodate a restless and often reckless spirit of change, yet keeping step with all true progress; unaffected by the destructive liberalism that eats the heart out of Christianity and corrodes the truth; fraternal toward all of God's people; an evangelistic Church, full of the old-time religion, standing fast for the reality of that Christian experience which is the most distinctive badge of true Methodism; ever burning with revival fires, and justifying the faith and hope and liberality of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Here in the heart of our National Capital may it be a far-shining beacon; and, as our people turn their eyes to its brightness, may they, like the ancient Israelite, "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem," and realize that "they shall prosper that love thee!"

A STATEMENT BY THE EDUCATIONAL COMMISSION—SOUTHERN METHODIST UNIVERSITY.

The Educational Commission met in Dallas, Texas, April 4-5, for the purpose of looking into the present conditions and needs of the Southern Methodist University, and taking such action as might be deemed best to promote its welfare and carry to success this vastly important enterprise.

The Commission is happy to report to the Church that the University has already achieved much. Its assets now aggregate $2,500,000.

Its first session was opened September, 1915, with an enrollment of students unsurpassed by that of any American college or university for its initial session, and the year was completed most successfully.

The enrollment for the second year shows a marked increase, and now taxes the capacity of the buildings that have been erected thus far.

These facts attest the wisdom of its founders in choosing the city of Dallas for its location and put beyond all question that there is urgent demand for such an institution to meet the wants of our Church and to serve our country in the great and growing West.

Students have been enrolled, not only from Texas, but also from five contiguous States and from the Pacific Coast. It is too clear for douht or discussion that the General Conference was eminently wise in directing the adoption of this University as a connectional institution. Our people who reside in the States west of the Mississippi River need, and must have, an institution of real university grade. Such an institution is required to meet the wants of the educational situation which confronts them and which confronts, in truth, all the people of the South.

Thirty millions of the 100,000,000 of people who make up the population of the United States dwell in those States within which our Church has most of its membership, hut these millions have no university equal in financial strength to the universities of other sections of our country. The South cannot longer occupy with safety, or self-respect, a position of educational dependence. Both self-interest and sacred duty require that we make for ourselves institutions as strong as the strongest, and as good as the hest.

The educational system of our Church will not he complete until we have founded our connectional universities. To make them what we need will cost much money, but not to establish them firmly and endow them adequately will cost us things more precious than money.

Some may have entertained the discouraging notion that the establishment of two really great universities is a task beyond our strength; but what has been achieved forbids longer the entertainment of such a thought.

Southern Methodist University, with its assets of $2,500,000, and its enrollment of students near ly reaching 1000 a year, is the visible demonstration that success is within our reach. So much has been accomplished that no ground is left for discouragement—certainly no slightest reason for despair.

Thus far the Methodists of Texas have naturally and properly done most that has been done, and to them we must look for the immediate completion of the fund of $500,000 required as the initial endowment of the School of Liberal Arts: We feel sure they will not disappoint our hopes nor fall short of their own high purposes. To the speedy endowment and adequate equipment of the School of Theology, our people in the other constituent bodies of the University must give themselves heartily and generously.

At this point in the history of our Church and the development of our country, no more urgent and sacred obligation rests upon our Church than our duty concerning our two universities. We have set our lands to a great and noble task and we must not stay our efforts until we have laid such foundations of our universities as will assure their permanent and perfect success. Their foundation is not above the needs or beyond the strength of our great Church.

The Educational Commission, after fullest conference with the authorities of the Southern Methodist University, and careful inspection of the institution, agrees that for endowment, additional buildings, and proper equipment, it should not have less than $1,393,000, in addition to its present assets, and that this sum should be secured by May, 1918, when the next General Conference will be held.

During the meeting of the Educational Commission just held in Dallas, more than $40,000 of this amount was subscribed by generous friends, who were assembled on the invitation of the Commission to consider the interests of the University. We have good and definite hope of several generous contributions to come at an early day, which will largely increase this sum.

The whole amount can be easily secured within the next twelve months, if our people are enlisted unitedly and earnestly in behalf of this great interest. To this end we have suggested to the authorities of the University that a sufficient number of commissioners he engaged at once and put into the field, to present the cause to our people in the States of Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and New Mexico. And we call upon the Methodist people and their friends in these States to make generous response to the appeals of the men who will be sent forth upon this high mission.

The enterprise for which we plead is of more than local importance. Under the blessing of Almighty God it is destined, we believe, to exert a blessed influence throughout the entire Southwest, advancing the cause of Christian Education and promoting the welfare of all of our other institutions of learning in the West, while sending forth from its halls multitudes of cultured and consecrated men and women, and preparing for the service of the churches a body of trained ministers thoroughly furnished to every good word and work.

Let the great results already accomplished quicken zeal and inspire liberality. What has been done must not be allowed to suffer impairment for lack of what ought to be done. This great work can not be safely ignored or postponed, or displaced by anything else.

While we recognize the fact that in all of our Conferences there are local enterprises with whose purposes we have the deepst sympathy, we trust that our people will not permit local interests to interfere with the purpose of the General Conference to complete its educational system by the building, equipment and endowment of our two universities; and we urgently appeal to our people west of the Mississippi to give themselves at this time to the supreme task of completing at the earliest possible day the building and endowment of Southern Methodist University. Already more students are knocking at its doors than can he housed within its walls, and additional buildings are urgently needed for its work. It must have an endowment of not less than $1,000,000 to conform to the standard set by our Church for an institutions of university grade. These facts make a compelling argument for the enforcement of the appeal which we make, and we feel that interest and effort must be centered on this great task until it is done.

Signed by order and on behalf of the Educational Commission.

WARREN A. CANDLER,
Chairman.

DR. DEMPSEY'S UNDERTAKING.

By Rev. C. A. Battle.

Bishop A. G. Haygood was one of the great men of Southern Methodism of a few decades ago. His work as a leader of the Church was monumental. That a fitting biography of this renowned preacher be written by one competent to do so is eminently in order. Perhaps no individual in our Church is more able to accomplish this task than Dr. E. F. Dempsey, of Emory University. This man's scholarship, high place in the University, attainments as a preacher and pastor, Christian integrity, and full acquaintance with the facts of the life of the great Bishop, well fit him to give to the Church and country a literary work of lasting qualities. Dr. Dempsey requests any who has original letters, or their copies, clippings, or records of any facts relating to Bishop Haygood, to please forward them to him at Oxford, Ga. Douhtless, any in this section having such data will gladly comply with his request. Dr. Dempsey makes the following explanatory statement about this undertaking:

"When I entered Emory College as a member of the Freshman class in the fall of 1894, Bishop Atticus Green Haygood was a citizen of the village of Oxford. Fortunately, I brought with me the habit of attending prayer meeting on Wednesday night. Hence, although the great Bishop was broken in health, I had the pleasure of hearing him in one of those marvelous prayer meeting services for which, as I afterward learned, he was so remarkable.

"In that service, the long-debated question of my call to the ministry was definitely decided. This decision came as a result of one of those flaming and mighty thoughts which he was wont to present on theso occasions. This led to that strange searching of heart which all who have had dealings with God understand but none can explain, and which, without any outward emotion, stirred the very depths of my being, and left me with a clear and indubitable conviction of my call to the ministry. It is, then, not surprising that ever afterwards all that pertained to the life and history of this man, so knit with one of my deepest experiences, should interest me intensely. Year by year I gathered and read his books, and inquired into the record of his achievements. Hence, when I came to my present position in connection with Emory College, this interest grew more intense, and it has afforded me constant delight further to study his mighty life in this place where every tree and stone and house is eloquent with memories of him.

"As I advanced in this study, there grew within me a settled conviction that a life so inspiring and so significant should be rescued from that oblivion into which it threatens to sink. Thus, I began to collect souvenirs of his life, feeling that the Church, State and Nation—yea, the whole world which he embraced in his heart's affection and his ardent sympathies—would suffer an irreparable loss if at least the materials for a study of his life were not collected.

"Members of his family, having learned of this work in which I have been engaged, have, one after the other, requested that I should not confine my studies to magazine articles or newspaper discussion, hut continue to collect the facts and embody them in a book, giving some adequate account of the life, letters, and labors of the great Bishop. Though shrinking from the magnitude of this task, I have yet complied with their unanimous request and am going forward with the work.

"It will be a great favor to all concerned if any one possessing original letters or copies of letters written by the Bishop, clippings in regard to him, or articles from his pen, or pamphlets, will write to me and let me know of this, and, as far as possible, let me have access to them. Also, those who have any reminiscenses whatsoever of the Bishop, however slight, will contribute to the completeness of the study and confer a great favor hy writing them out and mailing them to me.

"In conclusion, I ask the sympathetic prayers and friendly co-operation of every reader in this labor of love."

NEGROES FARING BADLY IN THE NORTH.

The following press dispatch is so completely confirmatory of statements made in one of our recent editorials, "The Negro Exodus," and so informing in a general way that we are moved to give it a place in our paper:

"Jackson, Miss.—P. P. Garner, Commissioner of Agriculture and Commerce, has deemed it advisable to make public the following significant communication, which shows how deluded negro and other laborers who flock to the North in quest of work at what they deem to he high class wages, are called upon to endure:

"'The Industrial Commission of Ohio; Department of Investigation and Statistics.

"'Columhus, Feb. 2, 1917.

'Commissioner Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"'Dear Sir: The Superintendent of our free employment offices throughout the State are in receipt of numerous complaints from workmen who state that they have been induced to come North upon a promise of good wages and cheap lodging by unscrupulous private employment agencies.

"'We find that when they arrive many are without funds, and find that there is no work for them, together with having to become inured to climatic conditions altogether, which is a very undesirahle state of affairs with which our State is compelled to cope.

"'I am writing to ask your co-operation in this matter, hy trying to prohibit the migration of these men by giving this matter great publicity through your papers and by watching the employment agencies closely, and notifying the workmen that before coming North they should first write a letter of inquiry concerning employment, and he sure that they have a job to go to before coming here.

"'We have had a good demand for labor during the past year in Ohio, but now, with winter on, and some of the factories cutting down their forces, together with a cessation of much public and private construction work, the demand for labor has greatly fallen off.

"'We may suggest that if your Department had charge of the employment agencies in your State it would be well to send them a copy of this letter.

"'Trusting that through this means we may be able to stop some of this evil, I beg to remain,

Yours very truly,
(Signed) "GEO. F. MILES,
Chief Statistician.'"

JUST FIFTY YEARS AGO.

(Written on the occasion of the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., which was celebrated on April 9, 1917.)

True love was in ascendant high,
And life was bright and heaven nigh,
When two young hearts together wed,
And naught but tears of joy were shed,
Just fifty years ago.

These fifty years you've lived and wrought,
And side by side life's battles fought;
Now eyes are dim, and heads are gray,
But love is true as on that day,
Just fifty years ago.

Your lives were young, your hopes were high,
And joyous life had naught of sigh,
When each to other gave your plight
In confidence, without affright,
Just fifty years ago.

Some plans have failed, some hopes have fled,
Some cherished schemes of life are dead;
But Heaven's mercies still abide,
As on that happy vernal tide,
Just fifty years ago.

Starkville, Miss. W. S. HARRISON.

A REPLY TO REV. H. B. WATKINS.

In my recent article concerning the interdenominational work I classed Brother Watkins as an intelligent man, and now in his reply he expresses the hope that I am not mistaken; but after reading his unfair and ungracious attack upon my record, I confess I fear I was mistaken in my classification. I am sure that no fair-minded man, however intelligent he might otherwise be, knowing the difficulties under which most of our pastors labor, would attempt to base a charge of disloyalty and failure upon the fact that during one year out of ten I failed to have a Children's Day service. Since I do not have before me a Conference Journal for those ten years, I speak only from memory when I say that I think that the year 1914 is the only year during the ten when I have not observed Children's Day. It appears to me that it is a pretty good record, though Brother Watkins is so unfair as to try to make it appear that I am in the habit of that sort of thing. At least, I feel sure that, in his effort to "strain at a gnat and swallow a camel," if there had been another failure on my part to observe Children's Day, Brother Watkins, with his peculiarly microscopic vision, would have discovered it. Now, if Brother Watkins possessed half the intelligence and brotherliness which in my first article I was inclined to attribute to him, would he not have concluded, as any other fair-minded man would have done, that certainly some unavoidable circumstance prevented my observance of Children's Day on this one occasion out of ten? It is strange to what unfair methods some men will resort, and to what lengths of sophistry they will go to establish a false presumption against an opponent when they are conscious of their own weakness. If Brother Watkins' nature had in it one element of fairness, why did he not tell his readers that during my pastorate of two years at Mendenhall I did have Children's Day the first year, and that the failure to do so the second year was the first and only failure in ten years. A statement of this sort would have shown that I at least tried to do my duty; but no, Brother Watkins wanted to defend himself in the advocacy of a weak cause, and, like many others of his kind, proceeds to do so regardless of methods, though such methods leave a false impression upon the minds of his readers, thereby reflecting not only upon me, hut as well upon the good people of Mendenhall. While no man is more ready to admit that he has failed here and there than I, yet there is one thing sure—no man has more conscientiously striven to do his whole duty. Does that not count for anything in the thought of Brother Watkins? If not, what does it matter? I am not to be judged of Brother Watkins, or of any man, hut of God. There is where my work shall stand or fall. The fact is, I have already just observed Children's Day at two of my churches and will do so at others, some of which have not observed the day in years. Furthermore, following the year 1914, when, in the eyes of Brother Watkins, I sinned so unpardonably, I had Children's Day, and observed it at one place where, if such a thing were possible, it was impossible, so said the people. Besides, I paid the five-cent assessment levied by the Sunday School Board. What now becomes of Brother Watkins' charge of failure and disloyalty? "Let him now speak, or forever hereafter hold his peace."

As for my not having raised the minimum assessments on my pastoral charges, I have to say that I have never done less than my best, and if Brother Watkins can do more than that, let him try it. If raising the Conference collections is the measure of a man's ability, success, and loyalty, the majority of the preachers of the Mississippi Conference are miserable failures, as the records will show. For instance, last year out of the twenty-four charges in the Hattiesburg District only five paid in full. Again, of the twenty-two charges in the Meridian District, where Brother Watkins operates, only four paid in full, three of those failing to pay in full being in the city of Meridian where Brother Watkins resides. Now, according to the ever-successful Watkins, not less than thirty-seven pastors in these two districts, were disloyal and utter failures—three of them being in the city of Meridian where he happens to have his home. Leaving myself out of the count, I dare say that all these faithful pastors were just as successful (if not more so) considering the difficulties of their respective fields, as was the Rev. H. B. Watkins. In attacking my record, he has not only "hit below the belt"—an ungallant thing to do—but has indirectly struck a blow at the vast majority of his brethren of the Mississippi Conference. "Nothing succeeds like success" is materialistic philosophy and utterly false in its last analysis, because it postulates success upon visible results, concealing the unseen realities which count with God. Brother Watkins says that he is willing to submit to any test with me. Then, laying aside the ability of tax-gathering, is he willing to count with me the number of professions of faith under his ministry? I believe I could name just one revival among the many which I have held in which there were more conversions than Brother Watkins ever had in all his ministry. Brother Watkins, how many souls have you led to Christ? That is the question which God will want you to answer—not how much money have you collected.

Furthermore, I venture to say that if Brother Watkins had served the charges which I have he would have done no better that I have. Is he willing to try it? Then let him accept this challenge: If he will ask his presiding elder to appoint him, at the next session of the Conference, to a charge which I will name, and he succeeds in raising the collections in full, I will agree to pay $50 into the treasury of the Sunday School Board, or to the interdenominational work—whichever he is most loyal to. If he fails, he is to resign from the Board of Missions of which he is a member, making a public statement through the Advocate and at the Annual Conference of the cause of his resignation. I wonder if he is willing to surrender the pastorate of a nice city station to accept a hard country circuit just to see this matter tested out. I am anxious to see the test made because too many of our faithful pastors have too long been measured and judged by the money test—their ability as taxgatherers.

I only wanted to reply to Brother Watkins' attack upon my personal record. As for what he says about the interdenominational work, I am not concerned. I still stand by my figures and statements, and no mere assertions of Brother Watkins will move me from my position, for I could, if I were so disposed, meet assertion with assertion and argument with argument. For instance, he names men whose contributions to the Church—so he says—have not been lessened by their gifts to the interdenominational work. I could name men prominent in Methodist circles whose gifts to the Church do not begin to compare with those to the interdenominational work. I have in mind a man who gave $50 to the interdenominational work, secured from his Sunday school $100 for the same cause, and did not give one cent to the Sunday school work of his own Church, except in the penny collection of the Sunday school of which he is the Superintendent. I am just in receipt of a letter from a member of the Sunday School Board in which he states that last year the Children's Day collections, upon which our Sunday school work is absolutely dependent, amounted to only $1200, and our work calls for a budget of $3500. How does that compare with the budget of nearly $11,000 for the interdenominational work, most of which comes out of the pockets of Methodist people who ought to put their money into the treasury of their own Sunday School Board. We have only one man in the field and it is impossible for him to cover the field. If Methodist men would put their money into the Church where it belongs we could place two men in the field. Brother Watkins says that Methodists are giving 48 per cent of the budget of the interdenominational work. I said 75 per cent. My statement is worth as much as his. He tried to lessen the force of my statement relative to the fine salaries received by the interdenominational workers, but I am reliably informed, as I think, that one of their workers as he travels over the State boasts that he is the highest paid religious worker in the State. In his effort to show that our Church has an official relation to this work, Brother Watkins says that our General Conference elected a representative on the Lesson Committee. I rply that if that gives us official relation, then we have official relation with the Nothern Methodist Church because the General Conference appoints a delegate to represent our Church at their General Conference, and this movement for unification is belated. As for my permitting my Sunday school to study the uniform lessons, I do so only because I have had nothing else, but does not Brother Watkins know that our Church is substituting the Graded Lesson System as fast as possible? He also mentions the fact that they have at their conventions prominent Methodist speakers. Well, I presume that he, or any other man, would speak for them if expenses were paid, and a little over for good measure. When I come to think about it, I myself might be tempted to accept a proposition of that sort. While, as Brother Watkins suggests, the interdenominational workers may have furnished more or less inspiration in the past, it occurs to me that it would be very silly for a lame man to continue to lean on crutches after he had recovered the use of his limbs. Thus I might go on to the end, replying to every assertion of Brother Watkins.

If Brother Watkins thinks I am alone on this question, he is mistaken. A large and growing number of preachers and people of this Conference stand precisely where I do, as was evidenced by certain resolutions passed without a dissenting vote by the Hattiesburg District Conference two years ago and published, by order of that body, in the New Orleans Christian Advocate. If Brother Watkins wants us to remain loyal to the Mission Board which aids in supporting our Sunday School Field Agent and of which he is a member, it might be well for him to measure his words or have less to say—we might follow the sound of his trumpet and go over en masse to the interdenominational work. By the way, if all the members of the Mission Board endorse the attitude of Brother Watkins, some of us would like to know it. My candid opinion is that the Interdenominational Association is a positive menace to the denominational Sunday school work, and while I am neither a prophet, nor the son of a prophet, I want Brother Watkins and all of his way of thinking to mark my prediction that, if our people do not withdraw their support from the State work and stand loyally by our denominational work, sooner or later, Rev. J. L. Neill, our efficient Field Agent, will have to be withdrawn from the field.

In closing, let me say to Brother Watkins that the invitation which I extended to him is still open, and the voice of Moses is still sounding far and wide the call, "Who is on the Lord's side? let him come unto me." JOHN W. RAMSEY.

LAFAYETTE DISTRICT.

Responding to the call of the presiding elder, Rev. H. W. May, the pastors of the Lafayette District met in Crowley February 27-28 to plan for the evangelistic campaign, according to the resolutions introduced by the Committee on Evangelism, and adopted by the Annual Conference at Baton Rouge. Several of the brethren have arranged for meetings in the month of April; some found it practically impossible to arrange for meetings so early; but efforts will be made in every charge, and by practically every church. Louis Hoffpauir, at Vinton; A. A. Bernard, at Eunice; Wm. Schuhle, at Lafayette. Brother Higginbotham, at Jennings, and G. A. Morgan, at Houma, have announced definite plans for meetings in April. Plans for meetings some time in April, which are not yet mature, are being made by N. E. Joyner, in Lake Charles; T. I. Beck, in Morgan City, and H. N. Brown, in New Iberia. M. Hebert, on the French Mission, and J. H. Hoffpauir, at Gueydan, will probably arrange for meetings later in the year. G. D. Anders will have Rev. D. E. Kelly with him in a meeting at Indian Bayou in July. Rev. H. Wade Cudd assisted Rev. G. A. Morgan in his meeting at Houma, which closed on Easter Sunday. Reports are not yet in from this meeting.

CHURCH NEWS.

Bishop H. C. Morrison will soon have a book to come from the press. It is stated that it will be chiefly an autobiography, though it will contain some of his sermons.

Dr. E. G. B. Mann, of Lexington, Ky., has lately held an excellent meeting in Tampa, Fla. Dr. Mann is a revivalist of power, and one of the most forceful personalities in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

We take the following from Miss Bennett's address to the Woman's Missionary Council, now in session in New Orleans: "Less than $20,000 has so far been saved or recovered from the embezzled endowment of the Scarritt Bible and Training School. The trial of Mr. Joseph S. Chick was postponed from the October to the January term of the court, and again from January to April."

NOTES ON THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

By Mrs. R. F. Harrell.

As we listened to Miss Head speak on Korea and Japan and tell of the impressions which first came to her as she entered those fields, we were made to realize as she did the bigness of the task undertaken and we felt that this impression could well be that which is forced upon the heart of one attending the Council sessions for the first time. It is a tremendously big task which these women have before them and only the wonderful vision which they have received from the Master, and the miraculous fulfilment of their plans make it possible for them to have courage to press forward. The Spirit of God has descended upon these women and baptized their hearts with his holy love; and so great is their confidence in their leader, Miss Bennett, that whatever her great heart conceives, whether far in advance of their ideas or not, they seem, almost to a woman, to be willing to adopt.

Miss Bennett's message to the Council was a strong, earnest appeal to the women to renew their consecration to his great cause, to seek a closer communion, and a more steadfast fellowship with Him, "so that we may go forth again to teach others the meaning of those words, 'Go ye, and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.'" She spoke of the cultivation of the Home Base and the large increase in members as well as offerings; still the goal for 1916 was not reached, nor have all the uninterested been enlisted in the mighty army for the advancement of the Master's kingdom. In speaking of the work done along this line, Miss Bennett very beautifully brought out the fact that "ye are My friends if ye do the things which I command you."

We were asked to take as our task for 1917 an increase over 1916 of ten per cent in the number of auxiliaries, ten per cent in membership, and ten per cent in conference collections.

The imperative need of a Student Secretary was again brought before the Council, and Miss Bennett recommended the appointment of a committee of three to secure such a woman. The committee was appointed and at a later time reported as available not one woman, but two splendid, consecrated young women—one representing the foreign work, the other the home. Miss Bessie Combs from China, and Miss Edith Fuess from the Institutional Church, Kansas City, were presented to the body, and so apparent were their qualifications that they were accepted without a dissenting voice, except that many felt that their retirement from their present work would be a distinct loss to their respective fields—still the great opportunities which will come to them in working among the students in our colleges, summer assemblies, and the Church will more than compensate for this temporary relinquishment.

The service consecrating these two women to their new work was indeed solemn and beautiful. They were called to the front of the chancel rail and Miss Bennett feelingly addressed a few words to them, after which Bishop Lambuth was called on to pray, and such a prayer as only Bishop Lambuth can offeer came from the heart of that great man, as he asked God's blessing upon these two young women set apart for this special service. A hush fell upon the audience—the Spirit of God was truly in their midst. As the prayer ceased, Miss Bennett's voice was heard in the beautiful hymn, so expressive of trust and confidence, "He leadeth me; O blessed thought!" and as others joined in, a light from heaven seemed to descend upon these women, for an expression not earthly lit up their faces. "I have chosen you, and ordained you, that you should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain."

The reports of the Administrative Secretaries were full of interest and encouragement. Miss Head reported that the work in the foreign field had been carried forward by about the same number of workers, with the same equipment as last year. Small amounts have been spent in needed improvements and two new buildings have been erected—the missionary home at East Gate, Changchow, and the primary building at Holston Institute, Songdo.

"At Kobe, Japan, the Lambuth Memorial Bible Woman's Training School has never owned its own property. The buildings now in use are inadequate. The walls have been cracked by earthquakes, and one of them has been declared unsanitary. New property and a sufficient building, well equipped, are an urgent necessity. With some remodeling at the cost of a few hundred dollars, the old buildings, which are on ground leased for a period of eight years, might well be used for the next evangelistic center, which will serve also as a place for the practical training of the Bible women."

In Shanghai a splendid new property has been purchased for the McTyeire School and is located in the suburbs of the rapidly growing city. "The grounds are spacious and well adapted to the location of an administration building, dormitories, the Young J. Allen Memorial chapel and whatever else may be necessary for the next decade. These buildings should be erected at the earliest possible time." The changing of an open canal to a boulevard has greatly enhanced the value of the old property. This institution stands out as one of the best for educational work and character-building in all China.

The work in South America presents many problems—the people are scattered and the country is so vast, and there is much overlapping of territory. There are 22,000,000 people in the three-fourths of the country not yet reached. A plan is now being formed for an evangelical university system which will correlate in a university plan all the institutes or high-grade schools. At present we have but one school eligible to be a part of the system; that is at Piracicaba. The other schools must be strengthened and put on a higher plane.

Mrs. MacDonell, Secretary of the Home Work, spoke of the encouraging features of the home work, despite the horrors of the European war. The passage of the Federal child labor bill gives a chance for physical and mental development impossible in the past. The spread of State-wide prohibition which prohibits the sale of liquor in the States adopting it and the decision of the United States Supreme Court establishing the validity of the Webb-Kenyon bill protecting the dry States from the shipment of liquor into their territory, removes the source of much that creates the need for home mission work.

"In 1916 we maintained twelve schools with an enrollment of 1945, at the cost to the Council of $57,852.58—nearly $30 per student. The Council also spent $12,070.28 in repairs and redeeming outstanding notes. There were 28 teachers engaged in this constructive work. We maintain 2 mountain schools; 4 for Japanese, on the Pacific coast; one for Mexicans in Texas; 2 for Cubans and Americans, on the Florida coast; one for dependents; one for delinquents, and one for the industrial training of Negro girls. In addition to these, there are 22 night schools, enrolling 934 students at the various Wesley Houses."

The work of the Council in foreign and industrial neighborhoods has grouped itself about 41 Wesley Houses, Bethlehem Houses, and other social and religious institutions and 6 co-operative homes for young working women.

Children to the number of 1188 have had the benefit of the kindergarten; 666 babies were cared for in the day nurseries; 934 students were enrolled in 21 night schools, and 9653 books were loaned from the free reading rooms; 1698 have attended the story hours in the settlements.

THE BOSTON METHODIST PREACHERS SPEAK.

(At a late session of the Boston Methodist Preachers' Meeting, after addresses by Dr. William Fairfield Warren and Dr. I. Garland Penn, a colored minister of the M. E. Church, the resolutions given below were unanimously adopted. This was the body of ministers to whom Dr. Edgar Blake delivered his much-discussed speech some weeks ago.—Editor of Advocate.)

"Whereas, of late, in advance of any suggestion from the Joint Commission on Methodist Unification, or even from any sub-committee thereof, the colored members of our Church have more than once been appealed to and urged to waive once for all every claim for representation in the law-making General Conference of the new organization expected to result from the pending negotiations of the Joint Commission; and

"Whereas, the aforesaid members have been given to understand that in case they do not spontaneously and promptly tender this suggested renunciation of the rights of full membership, and the negotiations for reunion shall fail, they are to be held responsible for the result, disastrous to black and white alike; therefore

"Resolved, that we, the Boston Methodist Preachers' Meeting, duly assembled, hereby record our distinct disapproval of every such forementioned appeal and warning as unauthorized, ill-timed, and needleessly provocative of opposition to the reunion for which we are and long have been earnestly praying.

"Resolved, second, that we instruct our secretary to send a copy of this action to Zion's Herald; also another copy to the Joint Commission's Sub-committee on the Status of the Colored Membership prior to its meeting in Cincinnati a week from to-morrow."

The First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Atlanta, Ga., has established an Emory Loan Fund, the object of which is to assist worthy young men to secure collegiate and university training in Emory University. The pastor of this congregation is Dr. James E. Dickey, who is one of the safe and strong men of Southern Methodism.

The Nashville Christian Advocate thus sums up the assets of Southern Methodist University at Dallas, Texas: Buildings and grounds, $1,254,956.25; real estate, $898,225.75; invested endowment, $231,418.91; subscription notes, $443,688.43; miscellaneous assets, $95,700.77. Total, $2,922,990.11.

METHODIST UNION REVIVAL SERVICES.

We would call special attention to the union revival services which are to be held at our First Church, 1108 St. Charles Avenue, under the auspices of our city churches. The meeting is to begin next Sunday at 7:30 p. m. At this meeting it is expected that all Southern Methodists in the city who can do so will be present. The revivalist, Rev. D. L. Coale, is one of the General Evangelists of the Southern Methodist Church, and comes to us after having had large success in different parts of the country. A great concourse of Methodists should be present at First Church next Sunday night and pledge to the evangelist their prayers and hearty co-operation. A greatly successful meeting may be expected if all our people will rally and each one do his or her part. Those who have resided for a lifetime in New Orleans tell us that no such meeting has been attempted before by our churches in this city, at least in their time. In other places union meetings have often been mightily used of God in the conversion of sinners and the edification of believers. There can be no doubt in our minds as to the spiritual needs of New Orleans.

REV. D. L. COALE,

Of Dallas, Texas, one of the General Evangelists of the M. E. Church, South, who will have charge of the union revival services at the First Methodist Church of this city, which are to begin next Sunday.

A banquet for men will be given at First Church at 6:30 Friday evening of this week. The object of this is to interest the laymen of all our churches in the meeting; to confer together as to united effort, and to offer fervent prayer for the outpouring of the Holy Ghost. If our laymen will put their hearts into this movement, a glorious revival may be assured. Mr. Spindler, who accompanies the evangelist and leads the singing, is very desirous to have organized a union choir of one hundred voices. We have in our churches many who are musically gifted and who can render greatly needed help in song. Mr. I. N. Niebergall has kindly consented to organize the choir and get it in good shape for the musical director. He will need the co-operation of all the pastors and laity in this matter. Let all who are willing to assist be present at First Church next Sunday night, when a rehearsal will be conducted by Mr. Spindler.

S. H. WERLEIN,
New Orleans, La. Pastor of First Church.

Thrice is he armed who has a heart so true and gentle that it calls out from others feelings of respect and love.—Charles Edward Jefferson.

"The only way to be patient, to be calm, to be ready for all effort and all endurance is to hold in the soul the great truths of God, greater than any passing event or crisis."

THE UNIFICATION PUZZLE.

Dear Doctor Meek: Stirred by the many articles in our Church press on the subject of Unification during the past year, I have been frequently tempted to give forth "mine opinion," but have hesitated because others of wider learning and deeper research were giving to your readers that wisdom which belongs to the "well advised." Then, too, I have said this "scattered flock" needs more of my time than does the Church of my opinion, for I'm neither a lawgiver nor the son of a lawgiver; nor has it been given to me to legislate in this momentous affair; therefore, lest I should intrude where greater wisdom is required, I have been "afraid and durst not show mine opinion."

Neither is it my purpose, at this time, to do more than call attention to the communication of Dr. B. W. Bond which appeared in your issue of March 29, and which I have read the third time, only to be the more impressed each time with its sound and timely statements; and also to the article of Brother Mitchell, entitled "The People Not for Union," in the Advocate of April 5.

Of the score and more of articles which have come under my eye (and I have let none pass, and have re-read many), from the historical and philosophical standpoint, Dr. Bond's seems the clearest and most convincing, and from the practical side of the question I am impressed with the force of Brother Mitchell's contribution.

Dr. Bond furnishes food for the Commissioners; Brother Mitchell for the common people. And from each angle we have the question, Is the time for union ripe? Because of the public attractions (National and State), it is possible that the extremes meet in Vicksburg more than most places in this part of the South. Scarcely a week passes that we do not meet people from north of the Ohio River, many of whom ask, What are the chances for union? And yet few of them manifest any clear conception of the difficulties attending the question. With them the whole matter hinges upon the Negro issue, and their understanding of that feature is illustrated by a conversation which ran about thus:

"Have you any Negroes where you live?"

"Yes, but they are of very inferior type, socially. Before their coming, locks were almost unknown with us, but now we have to lock up everything."

"Well, you have the typical Negro of the South."

"Oh, no! These are those who have been driven from the South because of their very objectionable characters."

When assured that these were representative of their race (with honorable exceptions, of course), the statement was very emphatic, "We want no more." We have a goodly number of most excellent people from the North and West, many of whom have joined our different Churches, and, while we have colored organizations representing the different denominations in the city, I have not yet learned of one who has joined other than a white church. Some of the most consistent, faithful members of the Church which I serve have come to us from the Methodist Episcopal Church. The treasurer of our board of stewards was born and reared in the extreme North, and in an informal discussion of this question by the board only a few evenings ago he said: "I know how to sympathize with the Southern sentiment because of my knowledge of the difficulties better than I knew before my coming South." Call it prejudice, call it affinity or whatever you may, there is a social instinct in man which is the soul of religion, and which gives emphasis to the proverb, "There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother," and which cannot me ignored. Dr. Bond very truly says, "The first essential is to secure the unity of the churches, not their unification—and unity never can be brought about by legislation." Brother Mitchell warns us, "that the time has not come and the people do not want organic union;" and he recites what, doubtless, would be the testimony of a majority of the pastors in the South, should they be called upon for evidence.

But I promised in the beginning only reflections upon the utterances of Dr. Bond and Brother Mitchell, and I must not allow myself to be betrayed beyond my promise. I would only add that what I have written is in the interest of the Church in which I was born and in which my father was an official in different capacities for more than fifty years; the Church which I love, as I love nothing else, and to which I have given all of my time and strength for more than forty years; the Church which has taught me all I know of God as my Father and of Jesus Christ as my Savior; the Church which has inspired my best efforts and held out to me the hope of a home in that house not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens. Yes, with her altars before me and her cause my cause, I have written in her best interests, as I have understood them. For forty and four years I have answered every roll-call, and met every appointment assigned me from junior preacher on, and upon these I base my right to have concern for her "welfare or her woe."

"Beyond my highest joy I prize her heavenly ways,
Her sweet communion, solemn vows, her hymns of love and praise."

Treasurer, Mississippi Conference Board of Missions.

THE EFFICIENCY CONFERENCE.

This communication is to call the attention of our preachers and people to our Efficiency Conference, to be held at Grenada, June 5-8. The whole program cannot be announced yet; but we are to have Dr. George Stuart for four addresses, Dr. H. M. DuBose for four addresses, and Dr. H. C. Howard for three addresses. Dr. Chappell will be with us again, and we expect Dr. Pinson and Dr. McMurry. And in addition to these, Bishop Murrah, our Bishop, has agreed to be present and take part in the program.

The committee feels sure that the program will meet the expectation of all who attend. We have some of our ablest men, and we have tried to secure such a variety of subjects as to meet the need of Christian workers in every field. Since we have put forth such effort to secure men capable of informing us on the very things we need to know, and since these men have consented to come to us for a sum that is nominal, we feel that it is not too much to expect that no district or quarterly conference and no protracted meeting will be allowed to conflict with this meeting at Grenada.

The efficient man, the productive man in Christian work, is the man who lives in the atmosphere of the best thought and method of the Church. A man may be consumed with the passion for the world's salvation, but if he does not know how, "helpless" is a feeble word for the description of his condition. The substance of this philosophy, then, is that the man without a vision of the mind and method of the Church is destined to be left behind in the march of the Kingdom. We want you to regard these speakers, the best we have, and this helpful variety of subjects as your opportunity; and do not forget that unless you are present it shall profit you nothing. We hope to shake hands with you on the campus of Grenada College on the afternoon of June 5, and to say "good-by" at the noon trains June 8.

THE LITTLE BIRD TELLS.

Now isn't it strange that our mothers
Can find out all that we do,
If a body does anything naughty
Or says anything that's not true?
They'll look at you just a moment,
Till your heart in your bosom swells,
And then they know all about it,
For a little bird tells.

Now where that little bird comes from,
Or where that little bird goes,
If he's covered with beautiful plumage
Or black as the king of crows;
If his voice is as hoarse as a raven's
Or as clear as the ringing bells,
I know not; but this I am sure of—
A little bird tells.

You may be in the depths of a closet,
Where nobody sees but a mouse;
You may be alone in the cellar,
You may be on top of the house;
You may be in the dark and the silence
Or out in the woods and the dells—
No matter, wherever it happens,
The little bird tells.

And the only way you can stop him
Is just to be sure what you say—
Sure of your words and actions,
Sure of your work and your play.
Be honest, be brave, and be kindly;
Be gentle and loving and well,
And you can laugh at the stories
All the birds in the country may tell.

MARGARET OF NEW ORLEANS.

By Miss Maria Wightman Capers.

Of all the charming stories that could be told of this very charming old city of New Orleans, I doubt if there be one that can surpass or even equal that of the first statue ever erected in this great country of ours to a woman and which was unveiled in 1884.

At that time there were very few statues to women even in Europe, and most of those few were to queens. I shall leave you to judge as to the queenliness of the woman whose story I shall briefly try to tell.

The statue, which is considered an excellent likeness, shows a plain woman seated in a low chair with her arm around a little child who leans agalnst her. Her shoes are very thick, her dress very plain, and she wears a little shawl. She is stout and short, and her face is a square-chinned Irish face, but the expression on that face would arrest your attention. The inscription on the monument is the one word: "Margaret."

Many years ago two Irish immigrants crossed the water and began their new life in Baltimore. Their one little daughter, born soon after their arrival, they named Margaret. Later the awful scourge of yellow fever that swept through the city left Baby Margaret without father or mother, and she was adopted by a poor woman from Wales who had crossed in the same vessel with her parents.

When scarcely more than a girl Margaret married Charles Haughery. A baby girl came to gladden their home, but their joy was soon dimmed by the father's failing health. Seeking a warmer climate, they moved to New Orleans; but the hoped-for improvement did not come, and, a sea voyage being recommended, the father bade goodby to wife and baby and sailed for Ireland, only to die shortly after his arrival.

Grief followed grief for Margaret, for soon her tiny haby died, too; but her deep grief, instead of resulting in selfishness, made her aching mother-heart go out in love and longing to all little orphan children, and she determined to help them. She was poor, but she was strong and knew how to work. Seeking a place of service in one of the orphan asylums, she toiled day in and day out unceasingly, happy in the thought that she was helping the children. Sometimes, when food was scarce, Margaret went out to collect food and money; and her plain face, lighted by the light of love, soon became a very familiar one all over the city, and at times what she brought in was all the children had to eat. When there was need for a new building Margaret was largely instrumental in securing it and clearing it of debt. She lived in the asylum for seventeen years, managing the large dairy and doing any and every kind of work that she could to help the children; and we may be very sure she was never too busy to mother a sad, hungry little heart. Then she decided to open a dairy of her own and try to make more money in order to have more to give. She was most successful in this undertaking, and later also with a bakery that she bought. She used to drive a milk cart and a bread wagon herself, and everybody wanted Margaret's milk and bread and Margaret's smile and kind word.

Every day Margaret was getting richer and richer, and yet every day she was giving, giving to the orphan boys and girls—Irish, Jew, Catholic, Protestant, white, black, all; for her motto was: "God has been so good to me that I must be good to all." Even when she had attained great wealth she still dressed in the same plain way and herself carried food and cheer to the needy, for her bounty did not extend to children alone. Any need appealed to her tender heart, and during the war she ministered largely and lovingly to the soldiers. When the overflow of the Mississippi River caused inundations in the city, as it used constantly to do, Margaret would go through the river flats in a boat paddled by a negro and dispense bread to the half-starving families.

No wonder the poor people called her "St. Margaret." Her very name was forgotten, and she was known only as St. Margaret or Margaret, the orphans' friend.

The three largest homes for children in New Orleans resulted almost entirely from her efforts, while the home for the aged and infirm is one of her benefactions.

Margaret toiled unceasingly for forty-six years, and, in spite of all that she gave away, it was found at her death that she had amassed a fortune of $600,000, which she left to the orphans of the city, irrespective of creed or color, for "I must do good to all," she said again and again.

Her will was signed with a cross, for Margaret could not write her name. She gave her money, her work, her love, asking for nothing in return. But did she receive nothing?

When sickness came and there was no one of her own blood to minister to her, the wealthiest and most cultured women of New Orleans vied with each other in their attentions; and when her soul went back to her Maker, the city government of New Orleans, the Merchants' Association, bankers, officers of the Cotton Exchange, the Produce Exchange, and the Chamber of Commerce all gathered to pay their tribute of love and respect to her. Thousands of people stood bareheaded in the streets as the pallbearers passed bearing her casket, followed by the children from eleven orphan asylums, white and black, Catholic and Protestant.

The next Sunday sermons were preached from the pulpits of the city with Margaret's life as a text. Is it any wonder that, though up to this time no monument had ever been erected in this country of ours to a woman, such a tribute was paid to this great heart of love and unselfishness? And could any regal robes call forth the admiration that stirs our hearts as we look at the homely dress of this royal woman, with her arm about a little child?—The Young Christian Worker.

THE OLD MAN.

One spring, long ago, after the snows had melted and the robins returned, the warm sun brought a bunch of saw-toothed leaves up out of the ground.

The French children looked at these leaves and called them dent de leon—tooth of the lion—but the English boys and girls changed the words to dandelion.

The little Indians watched the plant send up a sort of a pipestem, and by and by, on the top of it there came a picture of the sun. It made them think of the white man's gold pieces and they hoped the Great Spirit would change the little suns into money with which they could buy coffee, sugar and blankets. As they watched the yellow disc became a ball and finally turned white. Now it made them think of a pale face when he has lived a long time—Indians do not turn gray.

In their disappointment they said: "No good! No grow into money! Just old man!" So with contempt they named the plant, Ba-di-to' (The Old Man) and that is what the Mesquakies still call the dandelion.—Northern Churchman.

THE TRANSFORMED APOSTLES.

Canon F. W. Farrar.

It was the stupendous fact of the resurrection of Christ by his own divine power—a fact which the Jews regarded as impossible—which changed the whole character of the Apostles, and uplifted them from what they have been—timid, and dull, and even half faithless—to what they became as the inspired teachers and converters of the world; the heralds of the world's last aeon; the proclaimers and appointed founders of the Kingdom which shall have no end. The resurrection, as we have seen, was "no mere accessory of their message, but the sum and the centre of the message itself." They grasped, if millions of Christians have failed to do so, the meaning of the angel message, "Why seek the living among the dead? He is not here; He is risen, as he said." They did not preach a dead Christ, but rather a risen Christ; not a lost Christ, but a Christ ever present; not one who was habitually to be regarded as a tortured and agonizing sufferer, but one who liveth forevermore, and imparts to us his life and joy, so that in the midst of death we are still in life. They had been but as children, full of wavering misapprehension and timidity, because "as yet they knew not the Scriptures that he must rise again from the dead." After the resurrection, they sprang into the full stature of men, because then first they began fully to apprehend all that Jesus was "as the only name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." When Jesus finally parted from them at the ascension, they returned to Jerusalem "with great joy." All things had become new to them. They saw that the awful humiliation of apparent defeat was but the work of a self-sacrifice infinitely fruitful: that the death of Christ, immediately followed by his resurrection, was the inauguration of a new and final aeon in the world's history, in which God would not only be among them, but dwell in them, and walk with them. It was in this conviction that they went forth in Christ's name, conquering and to conquer.

TO CONTRIBUTORS.

All copy submitted for publication should be legibly written on one side of the paper with pen and ink, or typewritten. Matter written with a lead pencil and rolled manuscripts are unacceptable. No copy will be returned unless postage is enclosed for that purpose. In no case will responsibility be assumed for the loss or non-return of articles—the writers should keep copies of them. We do not purchase matter of any kind.

NOW IS THE TIME.

This is the time to take care of the work of circulating the Advocate. War conditions, with constantly advancing prices, are making it increasingly difficult to meet our bills and to keep the paper going. We appeal to our friends to give us active assistance in the various pastoral charges during the next few weeks—after that time, money will be scarce and it will be hard to secure subscriptions. WHAT WE MOST DESIRE AT PRESENT IS TO HAVE AN EARNEST EFFORT MADE IN BEHALF OF RENEWALS EVERYWHERE. Will you not, brother pastor, send to the office for a list of the subscribers in your charge (giving the names of all post-offices therein), and see that a faithful effort is made to this end immediately? We shall highly appreciate it, if you will.

THE NEW YORK LEGISLATURE AND THE ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION.

We published recently, under the caption, "The Peril Perceived," an able discussion showing the influence of the Carnegie and Rockefeller Educational Foundations from the pen of Bishop Warren A. Candler. Attention was called in that most suggestive article to the fact that United States Senators and distinguished educators are beginning to discern the harmful effects of these privately established Boards, with millions of dollars at their disposal to shape the educational policies of the schools and colleges scattered throughout the United States, and are now speaking out in warning tones against permitting them to exercise untrammeled the far-reaching powers which they have shown a disposition to assume. In the light of Bishop Candler's timely and informing utterance, the following press dispatch is well worth noting:

"New York, March 13.—Bills to repeal the charter of the Rockefeller Foundation were introduced today in both Houses of the Legislature. The step was taken, according to the sponsors for the bills, as the culmination of futile attempts to obtain an official investigation of the Foundation, with a view to having a public discussion at a Legislative Committee hearing on the entire subject of the continuance of the legal sanction of such institution."

Some one may be disposed to ask if the Church colleges of the country have not to a considerable extent been the beneficiaries of these Foundations. We regret to have to answer this question in the affirmative—Church schools, because of their poverty, have been peculiarly susceptible to the temptation to seek money from almost any quarter from which it could be had—but this is no reason for giving immunity to these rich educational trusts if they are being administered in a way that is not for the public good. We hope that those into whose hands the New Orleans Advocate comes, if they have not already done so, will give Bishop Candler's recent utterance a careful reading.

There are things in our civilization that we should count of far greater value than money; and if the test of an educational institution is the men and women that it makes, endowment, important as it is, is by no means the most potent factor in its equipment. A Christian atmosphere that gives birth to noble ideals and leads to the laying of solid foundations of character, is worth vastly more than a plethoric college treasury, stately buildings, and great museums, laboratories, and libraries. This is a truth that needs ever to be kept in mind. The States in the American Union and most of the Christian Churches are abundantly able to maintain their schools upon a high plane of efficiency, without any sacrifice of principles or placing themselves even impliedly under any improper obligations, and, by every token, they ought to do so. But in the educational world, as everywhere else, first things should be put first.

SOME VIEWS OF SCIENTISTS.

It has long been the custom of preachers to argue man's superiority to the other animals of the world from the upright position of his body and his general physiological structure. For instance, Bishop Marvin in one of his masterly discourses waxes eloquent upon the physical attestations of man's greatness, dwelling particularly upon the wonderful formation of the human hand and its marvelous adaptableness to various uses. Mr. F. Wood Jones, D. Sc., Professor of Anatomy in the University of London, however, takes issue with this line of reasoning in his book, "Arboreal Man." The following are some brief extracts therefrom:

"The human body is no such finished product of evolution as we have fondly imagined. It has points of decided inferiority to the physical frames of mammals upon which we look with disdain as less finely formed than ourselves. Some of the lower animals are more capable of exquisite adaptions than we ourselves. * * * The upright attitude of man has been employed as an argument in favor of his superiority to the four-footed beasts physiologically, although the evidence makes such an argument ridiculous. * * * Man is oddly unlike the noble beasts of the jungle: but he is amazingly like the creatures of a primitive type that infest the bog, the pond, and the swamp. His relatives are not the lords of the forest, not the kings of the jungle, nor the mighty eagle, but the creatures of the slime. * * * The primitive plan on which the hands of man are built can be accounted for only by supposing that man's ancestry spent a long pilgrimage in the trees."

Science in practical, experimental fields has rendered mankind a noble service; but when it has entered speculative fields as to the past and future of the race it has seldom failed to make itself ridiculous. There are some darknesses that are too deep and dense for exploration by the feeble finite reason, and into the abysmal depths of which only a revelation from God can pour any real light. Much to be pitied are Christian teachers who are disposed to take such investigators as their guides. Surely they should take warning from the recent test of Professor James H. Leuba, of Bryn Mawr College, who interrogated two groups of American scientists of 500 each, each group being reckoned as embracing 300 men as less eminent, and 200 as more eminent, concerning their belief in a personal God who may answer prayer, and in personal immortality. The results of his inquiry are stated as follows: "In the first group of scientists, 31 per cent of the lesser men declared belief in a personal God; 37.5 per cent of the more eminent avowed that belief. In the second group of scientists 41 per cent of the lesser men believed in God, and only 27.7 per cent of the more eminent.....In the same groups the answers to the question bearing on immortality worked out as follows: First division—lesser men, 50.1 per cent believed, more eminent, 31.5 per cent believed. Second division—lesser men, 52.8 per cent believed; more eminent, 35.2 per cent believed."

Most startling are these figures. For our part, we cannot abandon the teachings of the Book of Holy Writ for the conclusions of men, so many of whom in their explorations of the universe can find no basis for a belief in a personal God. If there is so much division and uncertainty among them concerning this greatest of all truths, why should their speculative dicta concerning other things be accorded so much weight?

A NOTABLE OCCASION.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on April 9, 1917. They had several old friends to dine with them on that day and the occasion was a delightful one in every respect. Though an effort had been made to discourage the presentation of gifts, they were the recipients of many beautiful presents from friends and acquaintances, and of many letters bringing kindly greetings and messages of love and appreciation. Not a few of these communications came from North Mississippi ministers who had received kindness at the hands of this worthy couple, whose life fortunes were linked together fifty years ago. Perhaps the most significant testimonial of esteem was a handsome loving cup from the Black Hawk Sunday School, of which Brother Streater has been the efficient superintendent for forty-nine years, during which time he has never missed a session unless he was ill or was for some good reason away from the town of Black Hawk.

The home of this devoted husband and wife has ever been a pronouncedly Christian one, in which the highest ideals have been maintained, and from which have constantly gone forth pure and helpful influences. One of the most touching congratulatory notes received was from the unknown (to them) wife of a successful Jewish business man who, when a mere youth, had boarded with them while attending the village school, and who, according to his life-companion, had then received impressions for good that are still abiding with him. (Who can measure the influence of a family circle in which Christ is regnant and where there exists an altar at which He is worshiped?)

Mississippi Methodism has never had in it a truer, cleaner, or more high-minded layman than Brother Streater, who has faithfully served the Church as a steward, as a Sunday school worker, as a delegate to District, Annual, and General Conferences, and in various other capacities. He is at this time a trustee of Millsaps College, being the Secretary of that body—of which he is one of the few surviving charter members. Of Sister Streater, who is a woman of unusual intelligence and force, it is not saying too much to affirm that she has in every particular been an ideal helpmeet to her noble husband, and not less consecrated and unwearying than he as a servant of Christ. It was with Brother and Sister Streater that Bishop Charles B. Galloway made his home when he was serving his first charge—the Black Hawk Circuit—and he counted them among his most prized friends until his great life ended. We pray Heaven's richest blessings upon these two choice spirits who have so splendidly kept the faith, and we hope that they may have here on earth many more happy wedding anniversaries before the Master shall summons them to a mansion in the sky.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, of Bogalusa, La., has tendered to Governor Pleasant his services for the chaplaincy of the Second Louisiana Regiment (infantry).

The Commencement sermon of the Capleville (Tenn.) High School will be preached on May 13 by Rev. H. S. Spragins, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of Memphis, Tenn.

The General Minutes of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for 1916 are out in their usual form. The price is 50 cents, net. This handy volume should have a place in the library of every Southern Methodist preacher.

Rev. J. A. Bowen, one of the evangelists of the North Mississippi Conference, is now assisting Rev. W. M. Sullivan in a revival meeting at Columbia, Miss. Success continues to crown the efforts of Brother Bowen to win men to Christ.

Rev. J. J. Garner reports "everything in good condition" in the Kilmichael charge, North Mississippi Conference. It is nothing new for things to be in "a good condition" where Brother Garner has sway.

Rev. E. G. Wood writes that his work at Standard, La., is in an encouraging condition, and that he is expecting much to be accomplished for the Master during the remaining months of the Conference year.

We make grateful acknowledgment to Rev. R. A. Tucker, our popular pastor at Grenada, Miss., for 16 subscribers from his choice charge, with a check to correspond. The work in his field is making good headway.

Rev. J. W. Raper, our pastor at Houston, Miss., is pleased with the progress being made in his charge. He has written for a list of our subscribers in his field and will give immediate attention to the work of securing renewals.

Rev. E. H. Cooley, of Walnut Grove, Miss., says: "The work of the Kingdom has begun well in this charge. The outlook is bright, and it is my ambition to make this year, which is my fourth, the greatest of my quadrennium in this field.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb and family, of Pleasant Hill, La., have spent the past few days in New Orleans, having been drawn to the Crescent City by the Woman's Missionary Council. Brother Lipscomb brightened our sanctum with his genial presence Monday of this week.

Rev. C. A. Massey, of Varnado, La., writes: "Having been appointed to serve the Angie-Talisheek Circuit, I am making my headquarters at Varnado. We hope to have a good year and are working to be able to make a creditable report at the next Annual Conference."

Rev. C. H. Strait, of Johns, Miss., is gratified with the situation in his charge. He states that Rev. J. M. Morse, presiding elder of the Jackson District, is expected to preach the Commencement sermon for the Agricultural High School at that place on Sunday, April 29.

The Minutes of the Seventh Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Louisiana, which was held at Crowley, Feb. 26-March 1, are on our table. They are in their usual good form, and clearly show that our woman's work in this State is in a gratifying condition.

Rev. R. I. Collins, of Courtland, Miss., has been kept quite busy within the past few weeks looking after the sick and visiting his members. He is pleased with the condition of the work in his care. Brother Collins' letter brought us 4 subscriptions, for which we extend to him our thanks.

Rev. Leland Clegg, of Harperville, Miss., sends us the following note: "I have been encouragingly received on this work, and things are moving on well. I have six appointments, to which I am giving twelve sermons a month. This is a fine country, with a religious and progressive people."

Rev. L. B. Moore, of Vimville, Miss., in a business communication to our office, takes time to commend the Advocate. Among other things, he says: "I like your stand for the Church on the unification issue. I think that it would be better for us if we could never hear of union again."

Rev. A. F. Moore, of Fulton, Miss., sends us some subscriptions and comments as follows upon the status of his work: "Our work is progressing very well, considering the depressed condition of things. Our Sunday schools are increasing in interest, and this begets hope in us for the future."

Though he finds it somewhat difficult to circulate the Conference organ in his territory, Rev. D. R. McDougal, of Kossuth, Miss., carries its interests on his heart and seeks to have it come into the homes of his people. He is giving a good account of himself generally in his field of service.

Rev. G. A. Morgan, of Houma, La., together with his wife and child, was a visitor to New Orleans last week, having come to the city to secure medical treatment. Brother Morgan paid the Advocate office an appreciated call, but the Editor, being out of the city, failed to see him, much to his regret.

We are indebted to the following friends, of whose kindness we have made no mention elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. C. P. Moss, Tchula, Miss., 3; Rev. G. D. Purcell, Dubach, La., 3; Rev. J. F. Campbell, Benton, Miss., 2; Rev. Olin Ray, Tunica, Miss., 2.

In a business letter to our office, Pastor A. C. McCorkle, of Byhalia, Miss., appends the following optimistic note: "Everything is moving along finely in this charge. The finances are in a good condition; large crowds are attending church, and a spirit of Christian fellowship prevails throughout the entire work."

We are in receipt of a postal card from Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the Winona District, which reads as follows: "Please announce that the time of meeting of the Winona District Conference has been changed from April 24-27 to June 12-14. It will be held at Drew, Miss., the place remaining the same."

Rev. K. W. Dodson, of Minden, La., reports as follows: "I am pleased with the progress of the work here. Good congregations are attending public worship, including the prayer meeting. Services for the children are being conducted this week, and we are expecting a good class to join the Church when they close."

Rev. W. H. Saunders, our capable pastor at Fernwood, Miss., has completed his plans for his round of revival meetings. Rev. W. B. Hogg will be with him at Kokomo about May 16; Rev. Dan Kelly will conduct a revival campaign for him at Fernwood, starting about the 20th of June, and Rev. J. Lloyd Decell will assist him at Knoxo the third week in August.

Brother W. L. Hamil, of Homer, La., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, adds the following note: "I am very fond of the tone of your paper and I heartily endorse the sentiments of the Editor on organic union. My experience as a Confederate soldier has led me to believe that union would probably result in the disruption of both Churches."

From a late issue of The Baptist Record (Jackson, Miss.) we take the following: "Rev. S. B. Myers, a Methodist minister, was recently baptized into the fellowship of the Union Avenue Church of Nashville, Tenn. He will be ordained at once. He is said to be a good preacher." Brother Myers was formerly a member of the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. W. A. Terry, pastor of the Broadstreet M. E. Church, South, of Hattiesburg, Miss., has our thanks for 2 subscriptions to the Advocate. He says: "My charge is progressing well. All departments of the church are doing first-class work. We have recently had a really good meeting, which was conducted by Rev. J. V. Bennett, one of the evangelists of the Mississippi Conference."

Recently in referring to the gift of their father's valuable law library to Emory University by the Misses Reynolds, of Booneville, Miss., his initials were given wrong in the Advocate. They should have been L. P. instead of "J. B.," as they appeared. This choice donation was made through Rev. Robert Selby, Commissioner for Emory University in Mississippi, and is much appreciated.

Brother J. A. Cooper orders the address of his Advocate changed from West Point to Mhoon Valley, Miss. He says: "I am going back home. I am now 71 years of age. I love my Lord, my Church, and my paper. It is a comfort to me to hear how the preachers are getting on and how the Master is saving souls." Blessings on this veteran; and may his "path shine more and more unto the perfect day."

Dr. U. G. Foote, pastor of the Rayne Memorial Church of this city, has been invited to preach the annual sermon of the Seashore Compground Training School at Biloxi, Miss., on the fourth Sunday in May. He has also accepted an invitation from the Faculty of Tulane University (New Orleans) to preach the baccalaureate sermon for that institution, in the University Chapel, on Sunday morning, June 3.

From a letter from Rev. W. L. Duren, pastor of our First Church at Columbus, Miss., we take the following: "We had a splendid Easter service at the morning hour on Sunday, April 8, and a program of Easter music was rendered in the evening. A cash collection of $700 was taken for our 'building debt.'" Brother Duren is patriotic and will plant three acres of corn to help the South feed herself during these war times.

Bro. Townsley, of Bogalusa, La., writes: "We are in the midst of a good revival meeting at this place, with Rev. W. B. Hogg, of Laurel, Miss., doing the preaching. Brother Hogg has special gifts for winning men. Mr. Karl I. Bean, one of our stewards, is leading a large chorus choir at the services. Every pastor and church in Bogalusa is co-operating. I have received at the regular services in my church during the past four months 125 members."

Rev. W. W. Mitchell, presiding elder of the Durant (Miss.) District, writes: "Please kindly announce that the Durant District Conference will be held at Kosciusko, May 29 to June 1. The opening sermon will be preached on Tuesday night, May 29, by Rev. B. P. Jaco. The first business session will be held Wednesday morning. The damage done our church at Ackerman by a recent storm has made a change of the place of meeting necessary."

Rev. C. A. Northington, of the New Albany (Miss.) Circuit, writes us as follows: "The prospect in my field is encouraging. Tho people have made everything very pleasant for us. My first quarterly conference measured up to the first one of last year, in spite of the cry of hard times and the fact that it was held nearly a month earlier." Brother Northington and his worthy flock have a way of making things go whether it is easy to do so or not.

From a letter from Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of the Aberdeen (Miss.) District, we extract the following: "The Tremont and Fulton Circuits at their second quarterly conferences, recently held, made the best reports in their history. The outlook generally is encouraging. The meeting-place of the Aberdeen District Conference has been changed from Pontotoc to Amory, and it will be held about the middle of June. The exact date will be given later."

Rev. F. J. McCoy, of South Mansfield, La., sends us the following note: "Yesterday, April 15, was a great day in Naborton. We broke ground for our new church, which will cost $1200. Rev. A. G. Shankle was the principal speaker, and in his own manner he gave us an address that suited the occasion."

Mr. Whitman Davis, the accomplished Librarian of the Mississippi A. & M. College, Starkville, Miss., in renewing his subscription takes time to add a few lines commendatory of the Advocate, for which we thank him. He expresses regret at seeing churches so often resorting to suppers, bazaars, etc., to raise money, thus missing the joy that comes from the proper kind of giving. The Advocate endorses Brother Davis's view concerning these expedients, and seeks to discourage them by excluding from its columns all mention of them when they are brought into requisition.

In a letter bringing us 3 subscriptions to the Advocate, Rev. W. A. Bowlin, of Cedar Bluff, Miss., says: "The work here is in good shape. Everybody seems hopeful; we are making a record in our Sunday schools. I was called upon last week to mourn the death of my dear brother, H. L. Bowlin, who died at his home in Columbus, Miss., where he had resided for 25 years. He was a faithful official member of our First Church in that city." We deeply sympathize with Brother Bowlin in the sorrow which has come to him, and pray that he may have the sustaining power of divine grace.

From a letter from President J. R. Countiss, of Grenada College, we take the following: "We have had an unusually quiet and successful session. The student body is the most loyal and enthusiastic that I have had; the teachers are efficient, and the equipment added to bring the school up to the standard required by the Church has greatly increased the interest in the scientific work. We are cramped for room, but I believe that another year will see us in more satisfactory and ample quarters. The students are pleased and we have a larger number pledged to return than ever before. We have bought five new pianos and spent some $4000 for other improvements during the year."

Rev. R. P. Neblett, of Como, Miss., writes: "Rev. J. A. Bowen has lately been with us in a 12 days' meeting. The spiritual life of our people was wonderfully quickened and all departments of our church work were stimulated. We had on Easter Sunday 10 accessions on profession of faith and 3 by certificate. It was a beautiful sight when this class appeared, to be received. Several more will be received Sunday, April 15. The services attracted large crowds, and the following ministers favored us with their presence while the meeting was in progress: Rev. J. H. Holder, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Rev. E. H. Mohler, Rev. W. D. Wendol, Rev. Melville Johnson, and Rev. A. M. Bennett. Sisters Bowen, Wendel, and Mohler were also with us a part of the time."

THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE.

The blood is the life because it is the nutritive fluid. If the blood becomes very impure, the bones, the muscles and other parts of the body are impaired and finally become diseased. Slighter variations in the quality of the blood, such as are often brought about by breathing the bad air of unventilated rooms, have equally sure though less plain ill effects on the nervous system.

Persons that have any reason to believe that their blood is not pure should begin to take Hood's Sarsaparilla at once. This medicine has done more than any other in cleansing, enriching and revitalizing the blood and giving strength and tone to all the organs and functions.

If you want to be entirely satisfied, insist on having Hood's. Accept no substitute.—Adv.

YES! MAGICALLY! CORNS LIFT OUT WITH FINGERS

You simply say to the drug store man, "Give me a quarter of an ounce of freezone." This will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn from one's feet.

A few drops of this new ether compound applied directly upon a tender, aching corn should relieve the soreness instantly, and soon the entire corn, root and all, dries up and can be lifted out with the fingers.

This new way to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man, who says that, while freezone is sticky, it dries in a moment, and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

Don't let father die of infection or lockjaw from whittling at his corns, but clip this out and make him try it.

The subject of this sketch, Mr. ORRIN H. SWAYZE, was born in Yazoo County on March 14, 1844, and died at his home at Benton, Miss., on March 26, 1917. He was married to Miss Alice Fisher. Of this union were born eleven children—four sons and seven daughters. One son and four daughters preceded him to the better world. He leaves a wife, six children, ten grandchildren, one brother, one sister, and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn his departure. Brother Swayze has been a steward in the Benton Church for years, and was loyal to the doctrines and teachings of the Church. He loved the preachers, and was glad for them to come to see him, and it was an inspiration to be in his company. He was a citizen that will be greatly missed in this community, and all join in sympathy with the bereaved family.

His pastor, J. F. CAMPBELL,
Benton, Miss.

LEROY BARLOW, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Barlow, was born on Dec. 20, 1902, and departed this life on Feb. 28, 1917, making him 14 years, 2 months, and 8 days old. His remains were laid to rest in the Rexford Cemetery by the side of his mother, who preceded her to the grave nine years, the funeral service being conducted by Rev. J. W. Steen. His death, though he had been an invalid for years, was rather a sudden one, and came as a shock to his many friends and relatives. He leaves to mourn his death a father, step-mother, two brothers and three little half-sisters, besides a host of friends and other relatives. His life was an example of patience with God's work and ways. For, though he could not enjoy the things of this world as did others, he possessed a cheerful countenance which won for him many friends. His affectionate disposition was beautifully demonstrated by the love he bore for his relatives and little friends, and his life was an inspiration to all who knew him. He's gone to join mother and the angels. Ere long we will all have been gathered there. Then the circle will never again be broken. Lord, help us to be patient, too!

AUNT OLLIE.

In the city of Shreveport on Jan. 17, 1917, there died a faithful and good man. J. L. LINEHART was born in France on Aug. 25, 1861—of French and German parentage. He came to this country when a child and lived in Chicago and Cincinnati for many years, but he had resided in Louisiana for the last six years. By trade he was a cabinet maker and knew how to do many useful things. He was reared in the Lutheran Church, but had been a devout member of the Methodist Church for the last several years; and had served therein as steward. Brother Linehart was deeply religious. He believed in tithing. It was a matter of regret to him that he failed to do this last year and he expressed the desire to make it up this year. He had been in failing health for several months, but the spell that ended in death lasted only about two weeks. Realizing that his end was approaching, he asked for the communion. He prayed much and was clear and definite as to his faith in Christ and his acceptance with Him. He was twice married, and he has left children by both unions and a widow to mourn their loss. The plaudit, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord," has doubtless been said of him.

H. W. LEDBETTER,
Pastor.

SOME VARIED EXPERIENCES.

Dear Advocate: Varied experiences have been mine since I last wrote you; so, after giving the readers of our fine paper quite a rest from my typewriter, I thought I would make a report of things in my section of the field. Some time ago I had my first experience in tying the knot for a couple—a la Gretna Green. The gentleman was totally blind and a bridge over a rippling stream formed the setting for the affair. Then, about two weeks ago I was awakened about 11:30 at night by a friend seeking my services in the same capacity. They were at the gate waiting and there I married them. I still experience new things.

A day later one of the saddest things of my ministry occurred at Bentonia, when lightning struck and killed three young men who sought shelter in a hollow tree. The fourth was nearly killed, but was revived and has recovered. I buried two of these young men at old Dover Church Monday afternoon of last week, and a sad occasion it was, for a large assembly of friends mourned with the bereaved ones. The third body was carried to Charleston, to the family home. It was such a sudden shock that the whole town still feels the weight of it.

Lastly, let me come to myself and I close. I have at last succumbed to the fever and had an operation performed. On last Tuesday at noon my tonsils were removed, and I ought to be on the reserve list for a few days, at least; but I have gotten along so nicely that my wife can hardly keep me quiet. I am not talking much, but am feeling fine and can eat most anything, just so it is soft. The nurses thought I was rather a curiosity because I could eat and talk. I expect to be back in harness by Sunday week. Our work is progressing very well. We are far behind in farm work in this section, owing to rains, but hope to do our part in preparation for the titanic struggle that looms up before our eyes. May God lead us to a speedy peace, that his kingdom may be set up amongst us!

M. F. ADAMS.
Flora, Miss.

INSURANCE FOR MINISTERS

It is a well recognized fact that endowment insurance offers the best and safest plan for the minister to save a part of his yearly income during his best earning period. It is essential to his peace of mind that his dependents be amply protected. To meet these two demands is the purpose of the Methodist Ministers Relief Insurance and Trust Association of Boston, Mass. During its 39 years it has paid to the widows and orphans of Methodist ministers one and a quarter million dollars. Most of its insurance is written to mature at age 65, payable in cash or a life income. Its policies are the most liberal and its rates the lowest.—Adv.

THOS. H. LIPSCOMB, P.E.

STOP THAT PAIN!

The few misguided people who argue against the relief of pain as a first step in treatment, either have never suffered from any pain themselves or else they do not know what they are talking about.

It is all right to realize that pain may be the danger signal for some more serious complaint and it is well to look deep into the reason for pain, but the first step is to gain as speedy relief as possible in a safe way.

Pain is the greatest ally that disease has. Pain is the artillery, it batters down the nervous defenses of the body so that disease can safely take hold of the body.

But not only does pain do physical harm to the body, but it also does moral harm which may be tremendously far-reaching in its effects.

The nagging effect of pain is such that it will change the disposition of a person to such an extent that they will become a burden to themselves and to everybody else. The person who has normally the sweetest temper may be readily turned into an irritable crank by a succession of unrelieved headaches or pains.

Stop that pain by using Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills according to directions. They are effective, safe and harmless. They can be purchased at any drug store, and the druggist is always willing to return the purchase price if the pills fail to relieve pain. You are the judge yourself. It will cost you nothing to try.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Get at The Source of Your "Skin Diseases"

Don't be misled by this term, for the appearance of pimples, boils or rashes indicate something more serious than a mere "breaking out" of the skin. These eruptions are, in reality, signals from nature that the blood is impoverished, debilitated and in need of help. Of course you can sometimes drive away the infected places by applying a salve or lotion, but unless you treat them through the medium of the blood, they will occur again and again.

S. S. S. has proven its wonderful building and tonic properties in thousands of cases arising from disorders of the blood. It washes the poisons from the system and aids the blood in its work of cleansing and invigorating the body organs, throwing off waste matter, and keeping the body in a normal, healthy condition.

Prove these facts for yourself by taking a bottle of S. S. S. and write to our Medical Department for information about your case. Swift Specific Co., 304 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga.

The Composition of Coca-Cola and its Relation to Tea

Prompted by the desire that the public shall be thoroughly informed as to the composition and dietetic character of Coca-Cola, the Company has issued a booklet giving a detailed analysis of its recipe which is as follows:

Water, sterilized by boiling (carbonated); sugar, granulated, first quality; fruit flavoring extracts with caramel; acid flavorings, citric (lemon) and phosphoric; essence of tea—the refreshing principle.

The following analysis, by the late Dr. John W. Mallet, Fellow of the Royal Society and for nearly forty years Professor of Chemistry in the University of Virginia, shows the comparative stimulating or refreshing strength of tea and Coca-Cola, measured in terms of the refreshing principle:

Black tea (hot)	1 cupful (5 fl. oz.)	1.54
Green tea (cold)	1 glassful (8 fl. oz. exclusive of ice)	2.02
Coca-Cola (fountain)	1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.21
Coca-Cola (bottlers)	1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.12

From the above recipe and analysis, which are confirmed by all chemists who have analyzed these beverages, it is apparent that Coca-Cola is a carbonated, fruit-flavored modification of tea of a little more than one-half its stimulating strength.

A copy of the booklet referred to above will be mailed free on request, and The Coca-Cola Company especially invites inquiry from those who are interested in pure food and public health propaganda. Address

Old Looks?

(BY DR. L. H. SMITH)

Persons suffering from too much uric acid in the system frequently look older than they should. They age faster and the appearance of gray hair or baldhead in early years is, indeed, often a sign of uric acid. The face appears lean and haggard, lines and wrinkles appearing in young men or women.

The best way to combat this premature age and the obstruction to the arteries and faulty circulation is of the simplest: Drink copiously of pure water between meals. This will not make you fat, as it is only the water taken with the meals that fattens. Obtain at any drug store a small package of Anuric, which is to be taken before meals, in order to expel the uric acid from the system. The painful effects of backache, lumbago, rheumatism, gout, due to uric acid in the blood should quickly disappear after treatment with Anuric.

EXPELLED—every poison and impurity of your blood, by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Then there's a clear skin and a clean system. Tetter, Salt-rheum, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Enlarged Glands, Swellings, and all Blood and Skin Diseases, from a common blotch or eruption to scrofula, are benefited by it.

In building up needed flesh and strength of pale, puny, scrofulous children, nothing can equal it. In liquid or tablet form.

FOR GOOD HEALTH AND LONG LIFE

Do not eat meat more than once a day. Drink plenty of pure water, exercise outdoors, and take a pleasant laxative at least once a week. Such a one is made of May-apple, root of jalap, juice of aloes, sugar-coated, and first made up and sold as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets—nearly fifty years ago.

AMORY REVIVAL.

We are now in the midst of a great meeting. The whole town is stirred; the Church has been wonderfully blessed, and many converted. Brother Thomas, the pastor, is happy over the results. Dr. Thomas is one of the most faithful pastors I have ever known. He looks after all the interests of the Church. He has about secured all of his Conference collections in subscriptions and cash. About one-half has already been paid in. Brother Thomas is one of our strong preachers, and the people of Amory greatly appreciate him.

Amory is one of the most modern, up-to-date little cities I have visited in Mississippi. The Methodists have built one of the finest churches I have seen.

Mr. E. D. Gilmore, one of our leading laymen, has built and endowed one of the most modern sanitariums to be found anywhere. It is not strictly a denominational institution; however, the founder has provided in the charter that the institution shall be governed by a self-perpetuating Board, the members of which shall be selected from the Board of Stewards of the Methodist Church.

We will close out here next week and go to Waco, Texas, to assist Dr. Culver in a meeting.

Yours fraternally,
W. M. McINTOSH.

FOUR-FOLD BENEFIT

From Two Grand Medicines in Spring.

You know that physicians often give two prescriptions, perhaps more, or medicines to be taken together, or alternately or at different times.

One reason may be that the medicines are "incompatible"—do not agree when closely mixed in taking—or that desired results cannot be secured by one medicine alone.

The most successful combination spring medicine treatment that we know of—because perfectly "compatible" and productive of the best results—is in Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills. The former thoroughly searches out and expels impurities from the blood, while Peptiron Pills give the powerful tonic—they literally "put iron into your blood."

Hood's Sarsaparilla should be taken before meals and Peptiron Pills after meals—patients taking them so report the benefit is four-fold—prompt, positive, permanent. Both these medicines are economical and pleasant to take.

Freckles

To remove freckles the best thing to do is to remove the outer cuticle of the skin, which carries the freckles. This is easily done with Kintho Cream. The Kintho should peel off the old, freckled skin, a little at a time, gradually bringing the under layer of skin to view. The new skin is beautiful, soft, clear, white and youthful looking and, of course, should have no freckles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed. Read carefully special instructions inside of box.

EASTER ITEMS.

Dear Dr. Meek: The presidlng eldership has its critics and the earth its moon. The Bishops even must come In for a share of compiaints, and the great American President has been "sat upon" by some dozens of his countrymen. But the latest quarterly meeting for the Main Street and Pine Valley charge was a good happening on Easter Sunday. The sun also arose, without a council with Germany or questionings as to "unification" and the dogwoods are again in bloom. Free agency remains intact and the plan of redemption suffices for any class of the race. "Righteousness exalteth" and divine leaders make no repeal of the "I am with you" promise, and to appear "In the mldst" wheresoever any have met in His name. Rev. J. H. Felts, of the District, did a most useful and valiant service. His preachlng was O. K., and the general work of the occasion "up to snuff"—even to the drivng of a roadster and doing compliments to a chicken. Things looked encouraging and Salem is "the land of Beulah," where some other few things have come to pass, and the Sunday night meeting at the Main Street Church was delightfully pleasant. With the new furnishing, the Easter decorations, good choir, and "the elder" in the pulpit, Main Street was "much allve"—it was said, and "comling" we hope. The new pews recently purchased cost above $300 and the fixtures otherwise are to be complete in all particulars. The parsonage also has been "on the docks" for a retouching, and, since the going of the painters, paper-hangers, and carpenters, is looking better and good. The inmates and callers, we think, are greatly "chaired up." One gentleman, however, for the sake of variety, suggested that the people were too proud these days and should "sit on the floor" when they go to Church. Just so; he might do so if he wishes, but so many worshipers dislike to sit on the floor, and getting to the people is the propósition in hand. The Ladies' Missionary Aid Society and the Epworth League, supported by the entire church membership, were back of these improvement departures and have distinguished themselves. Withal the "regular order" otherwise has proceeded and something in relief has gone to the distressed and visits to the sick. The prayer meetings are a great feature in this church, and the same is true of the Epworth League and of the Sunday school. Moreover, the "church officials" are in session once per month. A new city school is in this part of the town, and indications point to an opportunity for the Main Street Church.

SHADOWS.

"The shadow cast over the earth is because clouds pass over the sun. The sun shines in spite of clouds. Even so in human life the shadows we often see we put there ourselves, but in spite of the shadows the light of God's countenance shines about us with healing in its wings. The darkest cloud in human life has a silver lining put there by God's gracious hand. There is light around the cross; just look that way. What a comfort to know that "Unto the upright there ariseth light in darkness!" What an easy matter for the sun in the heavens to scatter the darkest clouds, and what an easy matter for God to throw light gleams into the darkest experiences of life! At his bidding the clouds that may fleck your moral sky must recede and float away when God says: "Let there be light." If the clouds do not always flee, then God transfigures the clouds with supernal glory. O, the wonder of God's grace! How marvelously it makes "all things," even the most untoward, work together for one's good."

A DANGEROUS TREND.

"It seems the fashion nowadays to own as Christians those who deny the very foundations of Christianity. It is a very popular notion that, provided people are moral, amiable, benevolent, charitable, and philanthropic, it is of very small consequence what they believe. Life is better than creed or dogma, we are told. All this sounds very plausible; but the reader may rest assured that the direct tendency of all this manner of speech and line of argument is to get rid of the Bible, rid of the Holy Ghost, rid of Christ, rid of God. Let him bear this in mind and seek to keep close to the precious Word of God. Let him treasure that Word in his heart and give himself more and more to the prayerful study of it."

That Well Known Saying

"Beauty is only Skin deep," is certainly true as regards physical beauty. There are many beautiful faces and beautiful hands that have been made extremely ugly by some skin trouble. A CONFESSION.

"The old Welsh shepherd who offered this prayer put it exactly right when he lamented his backsliding in these words: 'Lord, I got among the thorns and briars and was scratched and torn and bleeding; but, Lord, it is only fair to say that it was not on Thy ground: I had wandered out of Thy pasture.' There are many others whose scars were obtained in the devil's thickets outside the field where duty called."

MANALIN Steadies Your Nerves

Most of the nervousness that makes people "high strung" and sleepless comes from a digestive disturbance. Food fails to digest and cumbers the system with a fermenting load. Gases are generated and fluids thrown off. These disturb the delicate balance of the body, and as they are absorbed into the blood irritate the nerve centers, which manifest this irritation, and you are "nervous."

The remedy for this condition is to arouse the liver and bowel action gently, empty the fermenting food out, and start the digestive process into right action. Violent cathartics will do this by further irritating the bowels, to be followed by a worse reaction.

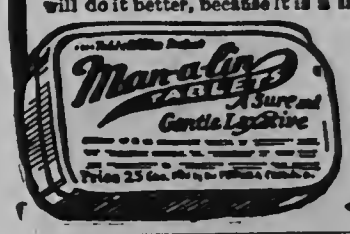
will do it better, because it is a laxative, not a purge. Its action is mild, but effective. It gives a gentle stimulation to the liver, and it does not form a habit.



A package of candy Manalin Tablets will cost you but ten cents, and it may give you more comfort than you anticipate. Next time you are nervous, try a Manalin tablet. 10 and 25 cents at druggists, or from the manufacturer.

REPORT OF THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SOCIETY.

The sixth annual session of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conferencce, M. E. Church, South, was held in the hospitable little city of Gulfport, April 6-10. This conference will be remembered by the delegates present, not only for the unbounded hospitality of the people of Gulfport, but because we were honored with the presence of so many of our Council officers at different times during our sessions.

The women of the local church were lavish in their preparation of special features on the program to vary the strenuous routine of the business sessions. The first night of the Conference the "Builders" entertained the delegates in a delightfully informal way, furnishing an occasion for an intermingling of the delegates as well as an opportunity to meet those who were so graciously entertaining the visiting body.

Saturday afternoon the delegates were the guests of the local auxiliary when a trip to the Biloxi Wesley House was the order of the day. At this place a delightfuiiy substantial luncheon was served by the auxiliary and friends of the institution. Rev. H. F. Tolle acted as toastmaster, and in a bright, pleasing manner introduced a number of the Council officers who were also guests and who responded in feeling and well chosen words. Miss Hasler, Head Resident, was everywhere present, dispensing a gracious hospitality and adding much to the enjoyment of the occasion by showing the kind of work done by the children in the various industrial classes and giving out information relative to every phase of work enterprised.

The pageant on Saturday night was one of the beautiful features of the Conference. It was a wonderfully realistic portrayal of the characteristic life of childhood, girlhood and motherhood of the non-Christian races, contrasted with the same stages in our own country. It showed the great needs of the fields presented and the opportunities which we have for giving of our time, means, and talents.

Sunday morning Miss Belle Bennett, of Richmond, Ky., President of the Woman's Missionary Council, gave a magnificent address on China. Having recently returned from a seven months' visit to the Orient, Miss Bennett was in a position to verify the information she so earnestly and clearly presented.

The Easter Cantata on Sunday night deserves special mention, not only because of the grandeur of the theme, "Life Everlasting," but the beautiful interpretation given by the artists rendering it.

Monday night Miss Mabel Head, Administrative Secretary of the foreign work, spoke of the work in Korea, giving several impressions which came to her as she first entered that quaint little country. The first was a realization of the bigness of the task, but in striking contrast comes the consciousness of a superhuman power which shows itself in the wonderful results coming from the few lives and dollars consecrated to the Master's service. Miss Head also spoke of the splendid public school system in Korea, the good roads and the various industries being introduced. At another time Miss Head spoke on the customs of Japan. Both Miss Head and Miss Bennett seemed impressed with the desire of the Japanese and Chinese to continue to have friendly relations between them and the United States. This was not an impression gained exclusively from conversations with the missionaries, but also from city and government officials.

Miss Janie Watkins, returned missionary from China and one of our own Mississippi "girls," gave helpful and inspiring messages from her field of labor, specially stressing the hopeful political outlook.

Lest too much stress be put upon the foreign work, our deaconess, Miss Hasler, of Biloxi Wesley House, and Miss Duncan, kindergartner from Meridian Wesley House, were given time to fully discuss their work and its needs. Some graphic and pathetic incidents were related by both women which served to more forcibly impress us with the great opportunities for service in this phase of the work.

It was a pleasure to the Conference to have in its midst Miss Addie Marshall, of Brookhaven, who was president of the Foreign Missionary Society from 1892 to 1902. The presence of this sweet, consecrated worker was like a benediction upon those present. Miss Marshall enjoys the honor of being the only woman trustee that Whitworth College has ever had.

Our President, Mrs. R. E. Johnson, in her message to the Conference, stressed efficiency as the "power of producing effect," and showed how this power had produced an increase in numbers, dues and offerings despite the financial depression caused by the war. Mission Study and Publicity, Social Service, Child Labor and Compulsory Education were briefly touched upon and our co-operation urged, that we do all in our power to advance these vital lines of work. She also urged every Superintendent of Social Service in the Conference to co-operate with the W. C. T. U., King's Daughters and Federated Clubs in bringing about better results in better conditions and laws. The message closed with the words, "May this power be the possession of every woman, young person and child in our Conference."

Mrs. B. F. Lewis, the Corresponding Secretary, showed by her report that $16,972.78 had been raised in the Conference during 1916: $10,491.23 was sent to the General Treasurer; $403.45 value of supplies, and $6078.10 raised for local work. The pledge of $5000 for the extension and continuation of work was reported as paid in full the first time in the history of the work. For the year 1917 an advance was made in the pledge—$5560. Mrs. Lewis spoke of Miss Alford, Miss Sells, and Miss Ruth Griffin, our three representatives at the Scarritt Training School. Miss Birdie Burnham was introduced to the Conference, being one of our new volunteers for special service for the Master. Our hearts were again filled with joy and praise when Mrs. Lewis announced that a splendid young woman, Miss Sara Brinkley, had offered not only herself but all she possesses to the Father. So well mentally equipped is Miss Brinkley that she was able to meet the high requirements of the committee on entrance to Scarritt and has been accepted by same, and will enter training this fall. The Mississippi Conference is proud that so many of her young women are placing their lives upon the altar of service.

An invitation was received from Brookhaven to hold the next annual meeting there, and said invitation was unanimously accepted.

The following officers were elected:

Mrs. R. E. Johnson, Gulfport, President; Mrs. H. O. Middleton, Mendenhall, First Vice President; Miss Katie Drake, Port Gibson, Second Vice President; Mrs. B. F. Lewis, Canton, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Hattiesburg, Recording Secretary; Mrs. Geo. H. Thompson, Meridian, Study and Publicity; Mrs. J. T. Brown, Laurel, Supt. Social Service; Mrs. J. K. Dunn, McComb, Supt. of Supplies; Mrs. Wm. Hemingway, Jackson, Treasurer. Representative on Orphanage Board, Mrs. Gus Kendall, Meridian; Representative on Hospital Board, Mrs. C. R. McQueen, Meridian.

District Secretaries.

Brookhaven, Miss Bessie Kearney, Hazlehurst; Hattiesburg, not filled; Jackson, Mrs. Sam Ewing, Jackson; Meridian, Mrs. C. R. McQueen, Meridian; Newton, Mrs. J. C. Clarke, Laurel; Port Gibson, Miss Mabel Porter, Natchez; Seashore, Mrs. T. T. Ford, Columbia.

How to avoid Operations

These Three Women Tell How They Escaped the Dreadful Ordeal of Surgical Operations.

Hospitals are great and necessary institutions, but they should be the last resort for women who suffer with ills peculiar to their sex. Many letters on file in the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., prove that a great number of women after they have been recommended to submit to an operation have been made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here are three such letters. All sick women should read them.

Marinette, Wis.—"I went to the doctor and he told me I must have an operation for a female trouble, and I hated to have it done as I had been married only a short time. I would have terrible pains and my hands and feet were cold all the time. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was cured, and I feel better in every way. I give you permission to publish my name because I am so thankful that I feel well again." —Mrs. Fred Behnke, Marinette, Wis.

Detroit, Mich.—"When I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was so run down with female troubles that I could not do anything, and our doctor said I would have to undergo an operation. I could hardly walk without help so when I read about the Vegetable Compound and what it had done for others I thought I would try it. I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and used them according to directions. They helped me and today I am able to do all my work and I am well." —Mrs. Thos. Dwyer, 989 Milwaukee Ave., East, Detroit, Mich.

Bellevue, Pa.—"I suffered more than tongue can tell with terrible bearing down pains and inflammation. I tried several doctors and they all told me the same story, that I never could get well without an operation and I just dreaded the thought of that. I also tried a good many other medicines that were recommended to me and none of them helped me until a friend advised me to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. The first bottle helped, I kept taking it and now I don't know what it is to be sick any more and I am picking up in weight. I am 20 years old and weigh 145 pounds. It will be the greatest pleasure to me if I can have the opportunity to recommend it to any other suffering woman."—Miss Irene Froelicher, 1923 Manhattan St., North Side, Bellevue, Pa.

If you would like special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

STOP! CALOMEL IS QUICKSILVER!

it's mercury! Attacks the bones, salivates and makes you sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when 50 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and does not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

NUXATED IRON

Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York City Physician and Medical Author says: "There can be no strong, vigorous, iron men nor beautiful, healthy, rosy-cheeked women without Iron—Nuxated Iron taken three times per day after meals will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down folks 100 per cent. in two weeks' time in many instances. Avoid the old forms of metallic iron which may injure the teeth, corrode the stomach, and thereby do more harm than good. Take only organic iron—Nuxated Iron." It is dispensed by all good druggists.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

To the Preachers and Laymen:

The Conference will meet at Purvis, Tuesday evening, May 8, at 8 o'clock. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. J. L. Greenway. Following the sermon, the Sacrament will be administered by Rev. L. Carley and Rev. T. W. Adams. Let all be present at this opening service, both preachers and laymen. The trains for Purvis leave Hattiesburg at 12:25 and 5:30 p. m. The preachers in charge will please have their delegates elected at once and send their names to me, in order that the roll may be made up; and to Brother Mellard that entertainment may be provided.

The law of the Church provides that local preachers shall make written reports to the District Conference. Please let this he done and requests for renewal be made if it is desired that licenses be renewed. Attention is called to the following resolution passed hy the last District Conference: "Resolved that the pastors of this district are expected to call the attention of the local preachers within the bounds of their charges to Paragraphs 76 and 175 regarding the duties of the locai preachers and their obligation to make reports to the District Conference, notifying them that their licenses will not be renewed unless they comply with the Discipline regarding this matter." The preachers in charge will please cali their attention to this and urge them to comply. The following committees are appointed:

License to preach—T. B. Cottrell, J. W. Chisolm, W. A. Terry.

Admission on Trial—P. D. Hardin, W. M. Williams, J. S. Purcell.

Let earnest prayer be made that we may have the presence of the Lord with us aii the while, and that the attendance may be the largest yet and the Conference great.

SELF-POISONiNG.

Did you know that when you allow a slight case of constipation to continue you are poisoning yourself? The pores of your skin cannot carry off all the impurities of your body, and you should never force them to do more than their share by not keeping your bowels open. When constipated take Van Lax for your liver. It cleanses your entire digestive system. It does not gripe or nauseate. Contains no Calomel and no habit-forming drugs. It is pleasant in taste and results. It is the ideal treatment for constipation and auto-intoxication or self-poisoning. Try it. Sold everywhere in bottles 50c. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

REPORT CONCERNING THE METHODIST HOSPITAL.

(Adopted by the Greenville District Conference, recently in session at Lula, Miss.)

Dear Brethren: We, your Committee on Hospitals, would respectfully state that during the month of January a campaign was launched in the city of Memphis to raise funds to build our Methodist Hospital. A great deal of interest and enthusiasm was manifested in the campaign by every one, and all were given to understand that it was not to be a sectarian institution, hut a great benevolent hospital where the sick and afflicted of all classes would he nursed and treated. One hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars was subscribed during this campaign. Of this amount, thirty-five dollars has been paid.

During the present year seventy-five hundred dollars has been received from Hospital Day and other sources. We have on former subscriptions about eighty thousand dollars. We owe a balance of sixty-two thousand five hundred dollars on our lot, which cost one hundred thousand dollars.

Our commissioners are making application for a charter and desire to commence work during the present summer on the building. The building, as accepted, will be divided into five wings, or units, three of which they intend to build, or construct, at once—the others to be added later.

The whole of the top floor of the main center unit will be given over to surgical or operating rooms. There will be eight operating rooms opening into one sterilizing room.

It is the desire of those who have the work in charge to have it modern and first-class in every particular.

Your committee would call attention to the fact that the preacher is the "key" to the whole of this hospital work, and they doubt if very much will ever be accomplished until they become more thoroughly interested in this nobie Christian duty. We would urge a more strict observance of Hospital Day and a more hearty co-operation with Brother H. M. Ellis, Field Secretary.

We would recommend that the preacher in each charge throughout the bounds of this great movement embracing the four Conferences interested suggest a suitabie layman to J. H. Sherard, Chairman of our General Board, for appointment, who shall co-operate with Brother H. M. Ellis, our Field Secretary, for soliciting funds in his district or charge.

Memphis has liberally responded and measured up to her full duty and obligation, and now may we of the country who are so vitally interested do likewise! It is true that the main business of the Church is to provide for the spiritual needs of man, but it is true also that if the Churches show no care for the bodies of men and the physical conditions under which they have to live nothing they can do for their spiritual welfare will be very effective.

J. H. SHERRARD,
For the Committee.

ALONE WITH JESUS.

Alone with Jesus! What a sweet and holy spot! What a blessed refuge to which the soul may betake itself from the charges of Satan, the accusations of the world and the sorrows of life! Sweet spot for the heart to unfoid itself, to teii its hidden taie in the ear of infinite love, tenderness and compassion! Alone with Jesus! How different a front would Christianity present to the world if the Lord's people were oftener there! What humility and gentleness and love would characterize all their dealings! What holiness stamped on the very brow that all might read! What few judgments passed on others, how many more on ourselves! What calmness and resignation and joyful submission to all the Lord's dealings! Be much alone with Jesus! Then wiii the passage to giory be one of sunshine, whether it be through the portals of the grave or through the clouds of heaven.—Frederick Whitfield.

A Godsend to Rheumatics.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold, rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts, which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood. The cause of rheumatism is uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of your rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh, of the Nashville Railway and Light Company, says: "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

NEW ORLEANS
CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 64—No. 17. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3192.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1917. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher

Editorial

"Follow, with reverent feet, the great example
Of Him whose holy work was 'doing good;'
So shall the wide earth seem our Father's temple,
Each loving life a psalm of gratitude."

The man who is in tune with eternity will never be out of tune with the passing centuries of time, though he may seem to be so. Truth is eternal, and the great realities to which human life and destiny are related never change.

* * *

Faith is the agency that enlarges the spiritual life and gives success to the Christian worker. Therefore it should be nurtured and strengthened in every way possible. Anything that would weaken faith should be shunned by the disciple of Jesus.

We chanced a few evenings ago to reread Byron's poem, "The Waltz." If half that the great English bard said about this form of the dance was true, the Church has certainly been right in opposing it. And we rather think, if his biographers are at all reliable, that Lord Byron was pretty competent to speak on this subject. Nor should it be forgotten that some of the modern dances are said to be much worse than the waltz.

* * *

In his beautiful little volume, "My Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ," Ex-Governor Frank J. Hanly says: "Christ understood every human passion and could have played upon them all. But he spoke only to the better angels of our nature. The baser keys he would not touch. Prejudice and hate, selfishness, and avarice, PRIDE AND DESIRE FOR PLACE AND POWER were beneath his use." Most suggestive words are these for the followers of the Man of Galilee. Let us not seek to enlarge the Church or Kingdom by compromising the transcendent truths of Christianity or by appealing to any wrong motive in men. The Christian worker who would "stoop to conquer" is in reality defeated, however much he may jubilate over his apparent conquests. To be wholly alive to Christ one must become completely dead to selfish pride and the vanities of the world.

The hyperbole habit is widespread and it seems impossible for many people to get rid of it. Think of any one saying, in referring to the war with Germany, that our Nation is now confronting the greatest crisis in its history, when its foe is three thousand miles across the sea and is already hemmed in and staggering forward to a crushing defeat. We believe in co-operating with the President in the execution of his declared war policies, but we can see no good reason for indulging in various kinds of exaggerated statements. Especially is it to be hoped that the Christian Churches will at this time maintain their sanity and prosecute with "a single eye" and with the utmost possible energy their great SPIRITUAL ministry to the souls of men—the loftiest and most far-reaching service that is known to earth.

THE OTHER SIDE OF IT.

Ever and anon voices are heard insisting that Christian ministers must in this day branch out into the various forms of social activity or that they will find their days of usefulness past. It is argued that the only way for a preacher to be up-to-date and to command the attention of the public is to become a hustling promoter of the various secular reforms that are constantly springing up, some even going so far as to contend that it is chiefly in such fields that a pastor must find live topics for his pulpit discourses. We have never believed that this was a wholesome trend in our religious life, and we have been pleased lately to note in two very able Church journals utterances in opposition to this tendency.

A writer in a recent issue of The British Weekly, said:

"I would not for the world disparage in the least the honored and beloved men who are giving their hearts' blood in the service of the ministry. But I lay it down as a general proposition that the great Free Churches of London cannot be sustained unless the ministers find the main field of their labor and ambition in the Church itself. Moreover, for a prolonged and powerful ministry, it is absolutely necessary that there should be long spaces for meditation and for study. If these conditions are not observed, the preachers must break down physically, and sometimes even mentally."

In calling attention to this utterance in this noted English publication, The Presbyterian (Philadelphia), one of the most virile of our American Church weeklies, commented, in part, as follows:

"The faddist broke loose upon the Church a decade or more ago, and ever since the Church to a considerable extent has been spending its time on trifles, and the ministry has been embarrassed and in many ways interfered with. Sermons have become little speculations or bits of good advice, while the great themes and messages of God have been overlooked. Let the ministry be free to fulfill their own high function, and cut loose from the faddist, who should be required to hold his peace and go to work."

DR. RIDOUT'S ARTICLE.

The article from the pen of Dr. Ridout on the Course of Study for Ministers in the Northern Methodist Church, which we are carrying on another page, is well worth reading and reflecting upon. It is, we think, proper to state that the books comprising this course, though they have been selected by the Committee named for that purpose, and it seems that they have been set down in the Discipline and the work of their issuance from the press is going forward (and they are being used), have not yet been formally approved by the College of Bishops. What the decision of the chief pastors of Northern Methodism concerning them will be, remains to be seen.

Dr. Ridout is not alone is his condemnation of this Course of Study. Dr. L. W. Munhall, the well known evangelist of the Church, North, has been crying out against it in his paper, "The Eastern Methodist," for some time, and Dr. C. B. Spencer in the Central Christian Advocate of March 14 and also in a subsequent issue of that journal has made some wholesome remarks on the subject. Of one of these volumes, Dr. Spencer says: "Dr. Soares has given us a very interesting book. So has Renan. But Renan is no more rationalistic in the midst of his flowers of rhetoric than is Soares."

We are not inclined, in view of the doctrinal situation in the Church, North, to favor heeding Dr. Ridout's appeal, "Come over and help us," and rushing into a union with the Northern Methodist Church in an attempt to do this. That body is so much larger than ours numerically that in all likelihood such a course, instead of helping it, would result in the corruption and injury of our own Church. Our readers will perhaps recall the fact that from the beginning of this agitation we have declared that this is one of the most serious and dangerous aspects of the unification movement. It has been repeatedly said that the two denominations are "one in doctrine," and this is so, as regards the Twenty-Five Articles printed in the Disciplines of the two Churches; but this statement is not true as respects the actual working theology of the two bodies—the theology which Dr. Tillett declared at the famous Evanston Conference to be more important, because more potent in its influence, than any stored-away creed, no matter how much it may be hedged about by constitutional restrictions. So far as our observation has extended, practically all the believers in a liberal theology in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are in favor of union with the Church, North, and are willing to take it on almost any terms. At the Evanston (Illinois) Conference on Union, there was a good deal of talk about the restatement of faith that is to follow the consummation of the unification proceedings.

The Editor of the Advocate is well aware that in publishing this article by Dr. Ridout he will draw criticism upon himself, but he cares little for that. In the providence of God he is on the tripod at this crucial time, and, if he can help it, he is not going to permit Southern Methodists to be led BLINDLY into any coalition of a harmful and destructive character. On the contrary, in so far as he can, he intends to lay the facts before them and bring them to a clear realization of what is involved in this consolidation movement; and then if they enter into it with their eyes open, they themselves will be responsible—he will have delivered from just condemnation his own soul.

We do not desire to do the Church, North, the least injustice, and if there be those who wish to defend the Course of Study attacked by Dr. Ridout, our columns, to a reasonable extent, are open to them. Indeed, we did not consent to publish Dr. Ridout's communication until we had written him and he had assured us that he stands ready to make good his affirmations if necessary. We ourself have seen many quotations given from the books in this course by Dr. Munhall in his series of articles concerning them in The Eastern Methodist, and we are convinced that they do not furnish the kind of teaching that young Methodist ministers need to train and equip them for their life-work.

Faith is venturesome. It dares to claim what is not yet in sight, and acts in harmony with its expectations.

PRAYER.

When one who holds communion with the skies
Has filled his urn where those pure waters rise
And once more mingles with us meaner things,
'Tis e'en as if an angel shook his wings;
Immortal fragrance fills the circuit wide
And tells us whence those treasures were supplied.

—Cowper.

CHURCH-GOING.

The men who need public and social worship will never, as a rule, seek it unless the men who think they do not need it set the example and join in it. There is, in my judgment, no more commanding public duty than attendance at church on Sunday. The greater the man's influence, the more sufficient he may be to himself, the greater and more imperative the duty. I do not believe there ever was a man who attended church constantly through life, or who brought his children to church in their youth, or who was taken by his parents to church in his own youth, who ever regretted it as he looked back.—Senator George F. Hoar.

HABIT AS A CONSTRUCTIVE FORCE.

Modern science, and especially psychology, emphasizes with great solemnity the hold that habit secures upon a man after a certain number of repetitions of an act or experiences of an emotion. Habit is, first of all, that which a man has, and lastly is that which has the man. Habits are helps or hindrances, according to their character and direction. Both virtue and vice tend through the habitual set of the mind and heart to become in time automatic—or a second nature. Advantage should be taken of this fact by all trainers of youth and moral teachers. Let duty make its deep dent into the conscience; let regularity in religious exercises be once thoroughly established, and the presumption will be that good and not evil will finally get that soul.—Unidentified.

HE WILL KEEP THEE.

He will keep thee as the apple of his eye.

He will keep thee in all thy ways, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.

He will keep thy foot from being taken.

Lest any hurt thee, he will keep thee day and night.

He will keep thee as a shepherd doth his flock.

He will keep thee from the evil that is in the world.

He will keep thee from falling.

He will keep thee from the hour of temptation.

He will keep thee in all places whither thou goest.

He will keep thee in the way, and bring thee into the place which he has prepared.

He will keep that which thou hast committed to him.—Central Christian Advocate.

A MUCH USED BIBLE.

When we turn to the Supreme Court, instead of many Bibles we find but one small volume, now celebrated as the Justices' Bible, used continuously during the one hundred and sixteen years since 1800 for the installation oaths of all the justices and the pledging of allegiance of all the attorneys who have practiced before that court. No wonder that on an average for about every decade of this period a new or extra outside cover of black leather has been required to keep the red morocco binding of the little Book in such freshness as it still possesses. This Bible is five and a half inches long and three and a half inches wide, and tradition says that it formed one of twenty thousand which Congress imported in the early days of the Republic to relieve the Scriptural dearth of the country. The title-page shows that it was printed at Oxford in 1799. This Bible has always been in the care of the clerk of the Supreme Court.—The Christian Herald.

THE NEW COURSE OF STUDY OF THE METHODIIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

By Prof. George W. Ridout, D.D.

(Dr. Ridout is Professor of Practical Theology in Taylor University, Upland, Ind., and Associate Editor of "The Christian Witness," Chicago. He is a member of the New Jersey Conference of the Northern Methodist Church.—Editor of Advocate.)

Methodist union is in the air. As a preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church (North), I hope you men of the South will "come across" to save our Northern Methodism from going clean over to the New Theology and bidding an everlasting farewell to the theology of Wesley, and the "faith of our fathers." We are in a bad way doctrinally. We want your Bishops, with their strenuous orthodoxy, to come over and help us. If you want to know what I mean, I want to call your attention to the Course of Study for our ministry, which appears in the New (1916) Discipline. I would like to know what Bishops like your Candler and Kilgo and Hoss, and others would say of some of the books in that new Course of Study. Some of them have teachings right next-door to infidelity.

There are at least ten books in this Course of Study which are definitely at variance with Methodist standards and line up with the new theology, which are evolutionary in hypothesis, which discount the Pentateuch and Mosaic authorship, and which would substitute education for regeneration. The following are the books we refer to:

1. Outline of Christian Theology. By Wm. Newton Clarke.

Rejects the doctrine of original sin—sin is a stage of evolution. Inadequate in its conception of the Godhead and of the substitutionary Atonement. Rejects Day of Judgment and traditional Eschatology, and suggests a second probation. One writer states that Clark, in his fundamentals, reduces his theology to an emasculated travesty of the Gospel, differing little, if at all, from the Unitarianism of the earlier type.

2. Studies in Christianity. By Borden P. Bowne.

His conception of the Bible is imperfect in matters of the doctrine of religion.

Takes the evolutionary theory of the race, and so is out of accord with:

Original sin,
Justification by faith,
Regeneration.

The book is aggressively critical of Church standards in the closing chapter.

3. Education in Religion and Morals. By Prof. Coe.

Rejects Natural Depravity and Original Sin.

Substitutes mechanically formed habits for the vital effusion of the Holy Ghost in Regeneration.

"The goal of religious instruction is to enlist the child as a soldier rather than to lead him to saving faith."

"The proper goal of life is simply social adjustment and efficiency and nothing more."

Education takes the place of salvation by faith. The Wesley revival was a mistake in "failing to become a first-class educational force."

4. Graded Sunday School in Principle and Practice. By H. H. Meyer.

The book is identical with that of Prof. Coe.

5. The Church School. By Walter S. Athern.

Rejects Natural Depravity and
The doctrine of the new birth,
Covers the same ground as Meyer,
Holds the same theory as Meyer and Coe.

6. How to Study and Teaching How to Study. By McMurray.

The book sets aside natural depravity with its resulting self-distrust and obedience to another's will.

Socialized self-respect and self-reliance is his goal. He wants men to lean on themselves.

7. The Social Institutions and Ideals of the Bible. By Prof. Soares.

Denies all authority to the Bible, arbitrarily setting aside facts.

Reduces Jesus to a mere Jewish prophet.

Makes the prophetic doctrine of divine providence a mistake.

New social teaching is substituted for Atonement, Justification, and Regeneration as the way to the Kingdom of God.

Bible is rejected as an authority for conduct.

Book is irreverent, destructive, naturalistic, Unitarian.

8. Socialism and Modern Social Problems. By Ellwood.

Adopts the theory of gradual evolution, excluding the fall.

Emphasizes education and social progress, gradual evolution and survival of the fittest.

9. Christianity and the Social Crisis. By Rauschenbusch.

Makes Jesus simply a teacher.
Makes the cross incidental.
Makes teaching the way of salvation.
Takes religious authority from the Bible.
Denies that the apostles understood Christianity, or passed on to us the system Jesus intended.

10. New Testament History. By Prof. Rall.

Evolutionary and rejects natural depravity and the related doctrines of salvation.

The Bibliotheca Sacra offers seven objections to the book and asks this question: "Are Methodists ready to teach such doctrines as these to their children and youth?"

Aside from these ten books, which are the most openly rationalistic and antagonistic to Methodist standards, there are some other books of questionable value. McGiffert's "Life of Luther" omits Luther's spiritual and prayer life, ignores the fundamental doctrine of the Reformation—Justification by Faith—and speaks of the infallibility of the Bible as a clog on liberty. The book is decidedly modern and unspiritual.....Smyth's books on the Bible are by a man in thorough sympathy with the new theology. He teaches in one of his books a second probation. He raises interrogation marks on inspiration and revelation, the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch, etc..... Hasting's Dictionary is avowedly committed to the Graf-Weihausen school in its Old Testament articles, and is a mixture of clay and iron, truth and error, all being mediated with equal authority to the average man....."The New Home Missions," by Douglas, is frankly depreciatory of the early revivals of pioneer preachers and puts social passion as a central motive instead of Christ. "The Bible is not so much the Word of God as a book of social invention and adventure. It is an instrument for the guidance of social experiment, and not a repository of doctrine. The social realization of Christianity is an ideal." It must be observed that systematic theology is reduced to a minimum. Wesley's sermons are excluded whilst sociology is magnified. Has it come to pass that Methodism is throwing aside her great and glorious and preachable theology and is becoming intoxicated by the "weak tea" of socialized philosophy after the rudiments of men and not after Christ? (Colossians 2:8).

There is everything in this Course of Study to lower the estimate of our students of things supernatural, inspirational and divine, to reduce to the merest minimum things theological and Methodistic. Indeed, if we were to be suspicious, there is not wanting in this Course of Study evidences of a conspiracy to commit the Methodist Church to destructive criticism wholesale and to delete every distinctive Methodist teaching until it becomes palatable to the Pelagian, acceptable to the Unitarian, unobjectionable to the Universalist, "just sweet" to the Christian Scientist and eminently proper to the Russellite. If we were to designate in a few words what this Course is, we should say:

It is a Mosaic without Moses.
It is a theology without Wesley.
It is a Christ without Deity.
It is a creed without Dogma.
It is a faith without Divinity.

What are the Methodists going to do about it?

BREAKING DIRT IN WASHINGTON.

Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

I have a great deal to be thankful for, and, among the rest, that I have lived to see the day when a Southerner can feel at home in Washington. In his eloquent address at the "dirt-breaking" for the Representative Church, Dr. Prettyman reminded us that for nearly thirty years, during most of which time it was almost considered a disgrace to be a Southerner in Washington City, Mt. Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was about the only building in Washington that dared to keep the word "South" on its front. But Mt. Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, South, stood its ground in the face of scorn and contempt and hatred. In this it was a truly "representative" Church, and for this reason deserves the hearty support of every Southerner, whether Methodist or not. But now, with "the South in the saddle," not to domineer over any section, or unduly advance our own, but to administer our national affairs for all, even an unreconstructed Southerner like me can feel at home in Washington. Wilson, a Virginian, has been called by Providence to complete the work of Washington. Washington won the victory for democracy in America, and now America, led by our Wilson, will extend the victory around the world. Amen. Let every crown go to the junk-pile.

I had the honor of representing Methodism at large on the program for inaugurating the actual beginning of the new Mt. Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Washington City. The ceremonies were simple, but very impressive. A large audience assembled in the old church, unsightly as a tobacco barn, but sacred and epulent with the memories of the heroic past. After a song by Mrs. Shircliff and prayer by Dr. Locke, Dr. Sexton, representing the General Conference, read letters of congratulation from several of the Bishops and made a stirring address. I followed with my remarks. Dr. Prettyman, to whom they give the credit of originating the idea of this "Representative Church," made a beautiful and touching address, which was followed by a brief, but very appropriate talk by the presiding elder, Dr. Canter. Then the audience adjourned to the site of the new church across the street. Mrs. W. V. Tudor, the widow of the late well-known Dr. Tudor, the founder and first pastor of Mt. Vernon Place Church, threw the first spade of dirt, and was followed by each of the surviving members of the original band that formed the Church. The service was closed by prayer and the benediction by Dr. Hardin, present pastor of the church. Then the big steam shovel was put in action to show how rapidly the debris of the demolished buildings would be removed for the new one to be erected on the spot.

The new church will be an ornament to the city. Its location is ideal for its representative character, for it is in the heart of the city, within a few minutes walk of the leading hotels, and easily accessible to all parts of Washington by the incessant stream of street cars that pass this point. The church is far enough back from the street to escape the noise, and a small lawn in front of it, which is government ground, adds greatly to its beauty. The building will be imposing without and attractive within, and will afford all the modern facilities for Church work in all departments. I have very little patience with the religion that would pass by a log cabin where my folks worshiped to mix with a crowd of strangers in a fine church; but, worthless as it is, there is a whole lot of that sort of religion in the world, and we have our share of it. But when this church is built there will be no need for a Methodist from the South to "pass by on the other side."

Now the maintenance of this Representative Church is going to be a great work. It will not be right to project a church on the scale of this one, and leave the local congregation to bear the sole burden of making it go. We have no finer band than the membership of Mt. Vernon Place Church; intelligent, staunch in their loyalty, and devoted to our ideals of civilization, they have well-deserved the recognition we have at last resolved to give them. But they are not strong enough to carry forward the work as we have projected it alone. We must help them to make this church one of the great Protestant forces in Washington City. The day of Czars and Kaisers is over and gone, thank the Lord; but if I were a Methodist czar, or even only a Bishop, hedged about with constitutional limitations, and the more serious limitations of a vigilant democratic jealousy of all autocratic authority, I would go to the limit of my powers to set this church up. Its pastor ought to be our biggest, livest man, no cross-road parson, with his "Whoa, Buck! Gee, Baldy!" program; and no tainted theologian, mouthing the vapid infidelity of some obsolete "criticism" under the absurd delusion that he was abreast of the age. But a man full of the Holy Ghost, who believes in, and has, the old time religion, and knows that that, and that alone, will heal our every wound. And I would give him an adequate salary, not a cent less than $5000; and I would give him a strong assistant pastor, two deaconesses, a secretary, a city missionary, and some other things he would need. We have the men. I have not lost faith in my brethren. Like the big trees in the woods, they are not numerous; but we have men who can take charge of that new church, and, adequately equipped with help, make our Representative Church a national institution. What I am afraid of is pious littleness that will cramp the enterprise. O for the largeness of the Gospel to dawn on our people! O for a bigness of faith corresponding to our opportunity! Yes, I would keep Sexton in the field for the work, until it is fully on its feet, and able not only to run of itself, but to send out missionary agencies from its abundant life.

While I think we have won the fight against "Union," yet don't remove the guns, Meek. The other side are honest and earnest, and will not easily give up the fight. We cannot afford to surrender our distinctive relation to the Negroes, neither can the Northern Church afford to surrender theirs. I think it is time to let the matter drop, and restore the emphasis to that fraternity that will enable us to love one another and co-operate in our work.

In your next letter to the Kaiser tell him that Shreveport has decided that he has disturbed the peace of world long enough, and must step down and out, or we will know the reason why. One company has gone to see about it, and others are forming. William must go!

RETROSPECTIVE—A TRIBUTE.

When I opened a recent issue of the Advocate, and my eyes fell on the words, "Dr. C. F. Evans Dead," memory flew back to my happy youth, when he came with his bride to Canton as our pastor. My mother took them into our home to share with us the poverty and uncertainty at the close of the war; they fitted into our lives, and found their place in our hearts, becoming part of our family. He looked like a boy in his suit of Confederate gray, minus brass buttons, but he was a man, a pastor who threw himself into the work of reorganizing the church, and getting together the flock that had been scattered by the war. He did a great work, and his influence was felt long after he had left us to join the Louisiana Conference. We missed them from our family circle, and never lost interest in them. After he transferred to the Kentucky Conference I lost sight of them, but I never saw his name in our Church papers without a return of the old interest. How proud I was when he became "Dr." Evans. I always hoped that we would meet some day and talk over "old times;" but he has gone—one more of many old friends to reach home before me.

I am facing the sunset, whose "radiant glow" brings from the past many faces of those whose memory fills my heart with thanksgiving for what they did for me. There comes before me the towering figure and saintly face of Dr. C. G. Andrews, our pastor when I was a young Christian, who was a teacher and sympathetic friend, discovering exactly one's spiritual needs. He showed me the necessity of perfect consecration, of Bible study, of reading books on spiritual subjects, and the value of morning prayer and meditation, so as to begin the day with the guidance of God—to rise early, if need be, rather than rush into the duties of the day without it. The answer for all spiritual perplexities he could find in the Bible and Wesley's sermons. Sometimes I hear even ministers say that Wesley's sermons are dull. I wonder if they have read them as soul food, or simply to pass the examination. How I sympathize with many present-day Methodists who know nothing of them! I am still grateful to my old pastor who put them in my hands. Bishop Galloway used to call him his spiritual father. I think of him that way, for he established the feet of this weak young Christian in the "way of righteousness."

His strong, spiritual character was marvelous. We know he put up a good fight for it, for he was the son of a widow, possessed of great wealth, and with the prestige of Southern aristocracy behind her; but he chose the better way, using all his education and culture in the service of the Master. Blessed be the memory of this man of God, to whom I owe so much, and to whose memory I have always desired to pay tribute!

How they troop before me, those pastors who helped me along the way! Next comes the genial Ransom J. Jones, the good friend as well as pastor to myself and two sisters, with no close male relative—all alone in the world. He performed the marriage ceremony for two of us. My husband and I loved him, and the memory of thirty-five years of happy married life always brings to mind this good pastor-friend.

Time would fail me to speak of all, but there rises from the mist the St. John of the Mississippi Conference, W. B. Lewis. What a good pastor he was! A man to whom one naturally turned in trial or sorrow; but I think of him as not only a pastor, but also as a close, congenial friend of my husband—there was a peculiar bond of sympathetic understanding between the two. I think of them now as together in heaven. The time was short between the going of these dear friends to receive the crown from the Master for whom they worked together here.

I see the frail form of H. R. Singleton, Sr., and hear his loving words of sympathy and commendation of the good deeds of his people; then come the sad ones, "Nevertheless I have something against thee," as he reproved and warned, exhorting them to follow their Master more closely. His burning eloquence, forgetfulness of self, as he labored in weakness and suffering, impressed us so, that we desired with all our might to follow him as he followed Jesus.

I have a peculiarly tender feeling for the widows of the two latter, who, with me, are awaiting the joyous reunion above.

We can rejoice together at the wonderful thought of "the crowning day that is coming," when pastors and people shall spend together an eternity of praise to Him who loved us and bought for us this glorious immortality.

PHYSICAL DIRECTOR ON FOOTBALL.

Much criticism from various viewpoints has been directed toward football. It is too dangerous; it gives opportunity for dirty work; it is abnormal, and strains the heart, causing it to break down in the struggle of life. Recently, Dr. W. G. Anderson, of Yale University, in an address before the Society of Directors of Physical Education in Colleges, spoke in part as follows:

"The danger of football's position in American universities do not come from criticisms of it as a game. The danger comes from the evident truth that American universities are gradually ceasing to regard it as a game. The fault is not with football, but in the way it is taught and practiced. Undergraduates look upon it as a vocation, not as an avocation. So much expenditure of strength and thought on football is demanded of players by their coaches and by college opinion that very few of them have enough energy left for their college studies. The curriculum necessarily becomes a side issue as football becomes primary, because it is not in human endurance to toil all day long. The curriculum has got to supply the body and mind of the players with the needed rest and relief from mental and physical strains which football imposes. Football has ceased to be recreation; it has become labor. This over-emphasis of football probably arises from a desire to win games, but it doesn't win them. It simply fatigues teams and saps their strength. It is safe to say that if intercollegiate football continues to take a larger and more important place in college men's time and thought, it will be doomed; because no institution that is primarily interested in turning out intelligen citizens is going to stand for having a larger group of men year after year effectually hindered in their proper college work by the demands put upon their energy by extra curriculum activity."

Some of the other criticisms may be extreme, but the common sense seriousness of this one will meet universal commendation and approval.—The Presbyterian.

The Great Battle

PROHIBITION PROHIBITS.

"Plague on each fox!" the farmer cried.
"They've taken half my chicks!
I'll build a fence and load a gun,
And catch them at their tricks."
"No good your fence," the wise replied,
"Protection's but a farce.
The fence and gun are futile things,
Which any fox can pass;
Besides, they make the guileless fox
A hypocrite, you see!
You cannot keep the varmints out;
Then license two or three!"

"Alas! alas!" the shepherd sighed,
"The wolves have killed my sheep!
I'll have a fold, and build a wall,
And shepherd dogs I'll keep."
"Mistaken scheme," the wise replied,
"The fact is full well known,
They're far more wolves when driven off
Than when they're left alone!
And then you'll make them hide and skulk,
A thing that should not be.
You cannot keep the varmints out,
Then license two or three."

"My boy! My girl! Your best have died,"
Fond mothers oft have wept.
"We'll have the law prohibit all
The hells where drink is kept."
"That way is wrong," the wise replied,
"And each man's right betrays.
Besides, prohibit as you will,
'Tis sold in divers ways.
The law is never quite enforced,
And tempt the devil will.
You cannot keep all sellers out,
Then license them—to kill."

—Civil Record.

NOTES.

New Hampshire has joined the growing list of prohibition States. The law passed will take effect on May 1, 1918.

Rev. A. W. Turner, Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, addressed the State Sunday School Convention at Monroe last week in the interest of the temperance cause.

Under the leadership of her Methodist Governor, Col. N. E. Harris, Georgia has enacted a "bone-dry" prohibition law, a special session of the State Legislature having been called for that purpose.

CONGRESS MEMORIALIZED.

At its recent session held in New Orleans, the Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, adopted the following memorial:

"Whereas, intemperance is the greatest menace to the moral fibre of the nation; and

"Whereas, in this national crisis there is a necessity of safeguarding our manhood and womanhood; and

"Whereas, we also realize the necessity of conserving our grain supply for the sustentation of life; therefore be it

"Resolved, That the following resolution be adopted, signed, and sent to the President of these United States and to Congress assembled:

"The Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now in session in New Orleans, and representing 200,000 women, earnestly urges the immediate passage of an adequate national prohibition bill."

A GREAT MEETING

Last Sunday was a great day in Winona, being the last day of the Morrison revival. Every day of the two weeks' meetings had witnessed an accumulated interest and growing conviction concerning the nature and supreme character of moral and spiritual verities. Each sermon and service had cleared the fog, pushed back the horizon, deepened the channel, vitalized religious life and laid a broader, saner foundation for all intellectual and practical living.

Dr. Morrison is a unique and extraordinary man in the grasp and power of his mind, the variety and breadth of his attainments, the massiveness of his personality, his clear, positive vision of things vital and structural and fundamental in life and character building. In his manner of driving home great principles and experiences, he is a past grand-master. He besieges the heart, convinces the understanding, informs the judgment, quickens apprehension, visualizes the intellect, awakens conscience and stirs the moral sensibilities and the soul. His similes, metaphors, and figures pierce the mind like barbed arrows and summon the will to its supreme function of decision. His gospel messages inspire, stimulate, enlarge and vitalize the whole scope of human life. He is a person of erect and manly bearing, prophetic mien and granite character. He makes no apology for following Jesus and compromises none of his teachings. While he is a great preacher to women and children, he is particularly a preacher to men. His message challenges men and sends its shivering lance with virile force into the ranks, cohorts, and citadel of false ideas, false standards, double thinking, "hyphenated" morals, silly, namby-pamby religious cant, and spiritual inanition, ecclesiastical giberish, buffoonery, etc. He annihilates with sledge-hammer blows and the irresistible logic of the whole Gospel of Jesus the sickly, enervating, desultory religio-vagaries, cults, and schemes of our modern-day neurotic "who-doism." He hews to pieces the giants of false philosophy, despair, and deadly hieroglyphics that would take away from a benighted, ruined and lost world its only possible Savior. Doctor, knowing your mind as I do on these lines of thought, I just felt how you would appreciate such a great gospel of strength and power and soundness. The results of the meeting were great. Everybody felt that it was the greatest meeting in Winona since the immortal Sam Jones was here eleven or twelve years ago. Not so great in the way of an ingathering, but several joined the Church. In Winona, as in most of our towns, nearly everybody is already in the Churches, so there were not so many to join, but the meeting was great in the way of edifying and building up the life and usefulness of those in the Church.

Our faithful pastor, Rev. W. N. Duncan, has prepared the way by sermon and exhortation and prayer meetings some while before Dr. Morrison arrived. He had the meeting on his heart and rejoiced in the great preaching and fine spirit that the meeting left among his people.

Dr. Morrison is a sane, wise, conservative man of the finest poise, rarest judgment, and of a great heart and spirit. He has more great things in his make-up and less that is objectionable in his spirit and methods in a revival than most any evangelist I have ever known. He did not say or do a single foolish thing the whole two weeks. He left love and fellowship and good feeling in everybody's heart and not one bad or ill feeling behind him when he went away. This, you know, Mr. Editor, is not always the case. He did us only good and left us all in love with him and a deeper, sweeter, fuller love and consecration to the Lord among us all. He left us with the love and prayers of all denominations following him in his great mission of salvation to men.

Now, Mr. Editor, I hope you can find space for this whole letter, for I would hate to see it only in part.

Everything up this way is as bright as could be under the war clouds. Be sure to come to our district conference at Drew, June 12-14. We want to see you.

Yours with high regards,
Winona, Miss. L. M. LIPSCOMB.

THE OWNERSHIP OF THE CALF.

G. W. Tuttle.

A score of years ago, at a meeting where money was being raised for church indebtedness, a very humorous story was told, which I have never forgotten.

An old farmer in New England, who was a close-fisted man, although a member of the little village Church, owned a fine cow. Great was his delight upon going out to the barn one morning, to find that his favorite cow had presented him with twin calves. This unexpected number—this double blessing—so warmed up the old farmer that he went to the house, and said to his wife: "Wife, I believe I will give one of those calves to the Lord." His good wife was surprised, but she heartily approved of this most unusual generosity.

Time went on and the calves waxed fat and frolicsome. It was a settled fact that the Lord was to have one of the calves, but the old farmer had not decided which. Then, one fateful morning, one of the calves died. The old farmer was grief-stricken. He hastened to the house to unfold the news to the partner of his joys and sorrows. "O wife, wife," said he, "the Lord's calf is dead!" The speaker concluded with the words, "Don't let the Lord's calf die first."

When we meet with losses, does all our giving stop at once? Do we let the Lord's calf die first or do we hasten to use a portion of what is left for God lest that also be lost?—Western Christian Advocate.

CONCERNING THE COURSE OF STUDY.

There is confusion through the Church about the new course of study for undergraduates. The following announcements from our authorities will clear up this confusion. Will our examining committees and our undergraduates clip and preserve for reference the statements which follow?

Bishop E. R. Hendrix,
Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Bishop Hendrix: There is existing in the Church confusion as to what are the proper subjects upon which to examine condidates for Admission on Trial.

The confusion has been caused by several things, as follows:

1. The first issue of the Discipline of 1914 in Paragraph 730 gave the old course of study both as to general educational subjects and as to theological subjects.

2. The second issue of the Discipline of 1914 gives no course of study for candidates for Admission on Trial, either on general subjects or on theological subjects.

3. Both Disciplines publish—one in Paragraph 729, and the other in Paragraph 730—the requirement in general educational subjects for candidates for Admission on Trial, but this requirement is contradicted by the publication in the first issue of the Discipline of the subjects upon which to be examined, as geography, arithmetic, bookkeeping, etc. The old course has been in the Discipline for years.

The result of this confusion has been:

1. Some candidates on application have been examined on the old grammar school course for admission.

2. Others have been examined on the high school course.

2. In religious subjects it seems that all candidates thus far have been examined on the old course of study, since the new course has never been written in the Discipline of 1914, and the old course has.

4. Following the announcement of the Bishops last spring of the new course of study, which they stated was to take effect with the adjournment of the Annual Conferences of 1916, the Correspondence School is using only the new course of study, but, as stated above, some of the Conference Committees are puzzled as to what to do.

A statement from the Bishops, it seems to me, given publicity to by the Department of Ministerial Supply and Training, would remedy the situation. This statement should make clear what are the general educational requirements for a candidate for Admission on Trial. The new courses of study do not mention this point. They give the religious subjects on which a candidate is to be examined, but they do not give subjects of general education on which he is to be examined. The requirement on general education given in the law in the first Paragraph, Chapter 22, is not sufficiently definite for our Committees throughout the Church. There is a backwardness on their part about finding out what the standards set forth by the Educational Commission really are, viz., the fourteen points necessary for admission into a standard college.

If the Bishops will make such a statement the Department of Ministerial Supply and Training will give wide publicity to it and get it into the hands of every committeeman in the Church in ample time, so that the confusion may all be cleared up. I am laying this matter before you as our Senior Bishop and presiding officer of the College, and will be glad to hear your opinion as to the best way to reach the question.

Yours very truly,
R. H. BENNETT.

University Park,
Dallas, Texas.

My Dear Doctor Bennett: Bishop Hendrix has mailed to me your letter in which you make inquiry touching the course of study for admission on trial.

As secretary of the committee on course of study I make the following statement, which you are authorized to publish:

1. It is to be regretted that the course of study for admission on trial does not appear in the Discipline. All applicants for Admission on Trial will be examined on the course of study as announced by the Bishops in May, 1916.

2. As the General Conference took action laying down the general educational requirements for admission (See Paragraph 729), the Bishops had no occasion to announce any particular books covering these subjects. The Correspondence School and all examining committees can get from Dr. Stonewall Anderson, Secretary of the Board of Education, the list of required subjects for admission into a standard college.

3. Paragraph 730 has no place in the Discipline, being annulled and superseded by Paragraph 729. All applicants are to be examined on the High School course.

Prof. Frank Seay's book (the first volume) is now in press, and will be ready in a few weeks. As Prof. Sledd could not get his book on the N. T. ready for this year's work, all students will use Prof. Seay's first volume this year, and all will

COUNCIL NOTES.

By Mrs. R. F. Harrell.

The following Mission Study Course was recommended for 1917-18:

Adult: "An African Trail" (MacKenzie); "Italians in America" (Mangano).

Senior Y. P.: "Lure of Africa" (Patton); "Missionary Milestones" (Seebach).

Intermediates: "Japan" (Peil); "From Plaza, Patio and Palm" (Waid).

Juniors: "African Adventures" (MacKenzie); "Bearers of the Torch" (Crowell).

The Prayer Room has become a vital feature of the Council Meeting and at no time during the days of the present session was it without intercessors. Much of the power and deep spirituality which pervaded the entire meeting could easily be traced to the waiting upon the Lord in this hallowed spot.

Would it not be well for all of us to place upon the wall of our "prayer room" the dedicatory prayer of this Council Meeting, and make our homes what we so desired the Council room to be:

"Lord, make it a Bethel—a house of praise;
Make it a Bethany—a home of love;
Make it a Bethlehem—a sanctuary of prayer;
Make it an Olivet—a place of council and vision;
Make it a Pentecost—a place of power;
Make it Thy Dwelling Place."

Lives would be wonderfully transformed and we would not be so slow to receive the Christ-vision of the world's great needs, nor of the suffering and heart hunger of humanity if this were done.

A resolution earnestly urging the immediate passage of an adequate national probibition bill was adopted, signed, and sent to the President of the United States and to Congress assembled.

Two vacancies having occurred during the year it was necessary to elect a First Vice President as well as a Superintendent of Social Service. Mrs. J. W. Perry was elected for the former office and Miss Mabel Howell for the latter.

The Week of Prayer offerings of 1917 are to go to the medical work in China and to the gulf coast work in the homeland.

After a spirited contest in which each woman seemed to put forth stronger arguments than her predecessor, Louisville, Ky., was selected as the place for the next Council Meeting.

The most beautiful and impressive service of the entire meeting was the consecration of deaconesses and foreign missionaries on Wednesday night, April 18. The decorations were unusually pretty, being a profusion of magnolias, Easter lilies, and other white flowers, all emblematic of the purity of the lives to be consecrated to the Master's service. As the organ pealed forth the opening notes of "Lead On, O King Eternal," a hush fell upon the vast audience and soon in the distance voices were heard singing this glorious hymn. Nearer and nearer they came until the foreign missionaries, in white, marched up the aisle and the deaconesses in their black robes marched up the other, taking seats reserved for them at the front of the auditorium. The candidates passed on to the platform, where were seated Bishop Lambuth, Miss Bennett, Miss M. L. Gibson, Mrs. MacDonell, and Miss Head. There were brief talks by the candidates, each telling of the influences set in motion to lead her to the decision which culminated in her consecration at this time and her assignment to a field of work. They were then presented to Bishop Lambuth by Miss Bennett, and after an impressive service consisting of responsive reading, prayer, a short address, and the singing of the consecation hymn,

"Take my life and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to thee,"

the deaconesses were admitted into the office of deaconess in the Church of God, and the foreign missionaries were commissioned to take the gospel to the uttermost parts of the earth. The accepted candidates then sang most feelingly, "O Jesus, I have promised," after which their certificates were presented to them and the congregation commissioned them in song, "Go, ye messengers of God!"

The deaconesses set apart are Miss Minnie Lee Eidson and Miss Josephine Bergiund.

The missionaries are Miss Grace McCubbins, missionary nurse to Korea; Miss Anna Hatcher, Missionary kindergartner to Japan; Miss Sara Stout, educational missionary to Brazil; Miss Marie Raffo, missionary kindergartner to China; Miss Sallie Lou McKinnon, educational missionary to China, and Miss Mabel Whitehead, educational missionary to Japan.

ARMENIA OUTSUFFERS ISRAEL.

By Israel Zangwill.

From more than one area of the war zone, from Belgium, from Galicia, from Turkish Armenia, the same story reaches us; the same dread saga of the wanderings of whole populations under the spur of massacre, rape, hunger. Little children fall like flies by the wayside and new children are born on the march. Mothers go mad. Girls throw themselves into the rivers. Men are killed and buried like dogs. But Belgium has almost all the world for her friends and the faith in restoration goes before her exiles like a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night. Even the Jews of the pale, torn and tossed between the alternate victors, begin to find organized help and behold some faint gleam of Zion upon the political horizon. On Ararat alone no ark can rest. For Armenia alone there is the cry without answer, "Watchman, what of the night?"

Only for a minority can there be political redemption; let us at least bring physical salvation to their agonizng remnant.

Sister nations I have been accustomed to think the Armenians and the Jew. Both hail from sister lands of the cradle of civilization. Both come trailing clouds of glory from the purple days of Persia and Babylon. Both have borne the shock of the ancient and mediaeval empires and of the militant migrations of their races, and both hold to their original faith, for if the one was the first preacher of Jehovah the other was the first nation to profess Jesus. And sisters, too, in sorrow, although exiled, scattered, persecuted, massacred.

Sisters, forsooth, yet not equal in suffering. Hitherto through the long centuries the crown of martyrdom has been pre-eminently Israel's. And as day by day during this war of wars there came to me by dark letter or whisper the tale of her woes in the central war zone, I said to myself, "Surely the cup is full. Surely no people on earth has had such a measure of gall and vinegar to drain."

But I was mistaken. One people has suffered more. That people whose ancient realm held the legendary Eden has now for abiding place the pit of hell. I bow before this higher majesty of sorrow. I take the crown of thorns from Israel's head and I place it upon Armenia's.—New York Christian Advocate.

FINE MEETING AT HOLLANDALE, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: We have just closed a ten days' protracted meeting and we have not only enjoyed it very much, but feel we have been blessed in many ways. Brother J. H. Bell, one of the North Mississippi Conference evangelists, did the preaching and I never heard more interesting and effective sermons. He is a splendid evangelist and there were eight little girls, none over eight years old, at the altar one morning who prayed a sentence prayer. We had 7 additions to the Church and there are more who promised to join next Sunday, as they were prevented before by sickness from being received at the close of the meeting. Mr. Paul Templeton, of Meridian, Miss., conducted the singing. He has a fine baritone voice and is willing and ready to serve in sacred song, being such a consecrated Christian gentleman. We hope very much that we can have him again next year. When the meeting first started there were only two or three persons who would pray in public, but when the meeting closed there were 25 or 30 more than willing to speak a word for their Master—even little children were willing to help in any way they could.

We feel sure that any church that has Brother Bell once will consider itself fortunate to have him the second time. Sincerely,

Hollandale, Miss. Mrs. EDWIN SPIVEY.

EMORY UNIVERSITY AND MISSISSIPPI METHODISM.

Emory University has been established at Atlanta, Ga., as the university for the Church east of the Mississippi River, and it is founded upon the very best and divinest principles that the Church stands for.

The Liberal Arts and the School of Theology are in their third session, the Medical School is in its second session, and the School of Law is in its first session. These four schools have an enrollment of approximately eight hundred, which is a marvelous showing for so short a while in their operation. The reason for this is not hard to understand since we not only felt the need of the institution, but the foundation is known to be secure and the quality of the work is appreciated by those who know it.

Bishop Candler is easily a great leader, and he has gathered about him a faculty that is second to none in all the South. Having been president of Emory College for a number of years, thereby getting experience that is invaluable in his present relation to the University as Chancellor, he knows the needs and adaptability of the men who have been chosen as instructors in the several departments of Emory. In addition to his experience, he has studied the questions entering into the making of a great university, and knows what he is about.

The gentlemen who compose the faculty of each department are eminently qualified by previous preparation and training for their specific departments of work, and are establishing a name for the University that will add luster to it with the passing of the years. Not a man of them is less than his duties demand, and the outlook for the institution is gaining greater excellence and possibility for service to the entire country.

The physical environment in campus and buildings could not be surpassed in any section of the South, and the Methodism of Atlanta and Georgia is justly proud of what has been brought to pass for the Church in the South; but Georgia Methodism recognizes that the University is for the South, east of the Mississippi River. I suppose that Georgia is altogether able to build and equip Emory to the very highest degree of its need, but Georgia is not selfish in doing this work, and Methodism outside of Georgia should not be satisfied to be inactive and unconcerned at this point. The fact is, Emory University is the only connectional University east of the Mississippi River, and we should greatly appreciate the fact of our opportunity in doing our share of the work. What Mississippi Methodism has become responsible for doing is hardly a "drop in the bucket," when it comes to a consideration of her ability to appreciate the importance and value of it.

There should be such an intelligent appreciation of the University that not a single member of the Church in Mississippi would fail to make a contribution to its establishment. It is not so much that the University needs what we have to give as that we need the inspiration that comes from co-operation in so great an enterprise as this already is. Why should not the comparatively few make their large contributions and the many their small gifts? Surely there should be 75,000 contributions from Mississippi to Emory University. We need not stop at the $50,000 for the Lamar School of Law building, for much more is needed than has been done and planned for.

As to the work of the Commissioner for Mississippi, it may be said that he is going as fast as he can and seeing as many of the people as are in reach of him. It might be better if he could go faster and do more in the exercise of moral force, but he goes at the rate of from twenty-five to fifty miles an hour and is reaching as many people as he can. The reports are very good, considering the conditions we are facing now, but they could be better if our people would give the consideration that is justly due so worthy an enterprise as this is.

I appeal for the prayers and thoughtfulness of our people to be given Emory, for it may be said that our achievements so far are the result of prayer and profound thought on the part of those to whom the General Conference committed the founding of this institution. It was an epochal event for Southern Methodism when the Educational Commission, in session at Atlanta in July, 1914, were stirred with tremendous emotions in the face of the possibilities suggested by the large benefaction of Mr. Asa Candler in his contribution of one million dollars as an endowment, with the distinct understanding that the University should be "forever owned and controlled by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." So far as I know, this is the greatest challenge the Church has ever had, and I do know that we would be recreant to a providential opening if we ever fail to appreciate our relation of responsibility and opportunity to the full measure of our ability.

This is a challenge that I cannot afford to overlook, because I love my Church and believe in her policy to provide the very best equipment for her ministry, and teachers, and professional men and women. There are those who are able to contribute large amounts, and they should send these amounts to me without my having to go after them. Then, there are those who are able and willing to make small contributions, and it will require very little trouble for them to send the amounts to me.

Let us awake to this greatest opportunity that has ever come our way, and one which, if used, will guarantee to our posterity an inheritance that will be worth vastly more than millions in stocks and bonds to be used in their selfishness and for their greed.

God save the Church in Mississippi from a failure to do her legitimate part in this great undertaking! Understand, it will be done, but do not think that the one who fails to do can come out at the end without condemnation. May every Methodist do his and her part, and Emory University will be a memorial to the love and loyalty of men and women whose deed in their gift will shine brighter than all the stars in the firmament above!

My call to you is, Do your best, under God, for the greatest enterprise that you have ever had the opportunity of making possible. Do what you do for God and the humanity that needs your investment in their behalf, and with this you need not fear the future. Our co-operation in this work will be told to the generations following us, and our children will rise up and call us blessed.

Jackson, Miss. ROBT. SELBY,
Commissioner for Mississippi.

COME OVER AND HELP US, IS THE CALL OF OUR FRENCH SISTERS.

By Deaconess Kate Walker.

Who shall measure the power of prayer, or who shall stay the answer if he would? It is written that if two shall agree as touching anything it shall be done. The women of Southern Methodism have been praying, "'Thy kingdom come." Doors have been opened in the heathen lands where the people dwell in darkness; the answer comes, "Go, and my presence shall go with thee." The women of Louisiana have prayed, 'Thy kingdom come, thy will be done,' as you have prayed; doors have been opened into white harvest fields. With the many others is the door unlocking to the homes of our French sisters, and the cry, 'Come over and help us' is heard.

Strangers are they, in a foreign land, having come to your shores because of their love for freedom. Attracted to the broad acres of our fair Southland, they have become our neighbors. It is the custom of all people to take with them wherever they may roam their religious faith. Being left alone for so long a period, they have increased to great numbers, and the Roman Catholic Church predominates in Southern Louisiana.

Our Lord taught in his ministry, while he worked among men, that to be a well-rounded character there must be a three-fold development, physical, mental and spiritual.

In this densely populated rural district great progress has been made along educational lines. In the past five years the Parish of Terrebonne has erected four high schools and four small rural school buildings. The corps of teachers is increased by adding two each year. Three departments of domestic science and four of agriculture have been organized—equipments are being added yearly, with the addition of two or three transfers for the children. Eight special school taxes have been voted. By 1918 we hope to have, with the other parishes, compulsory education.

We must turn our attention to the spiritual development of these people, for this is very deficient. To many, their religion is a tradition rather than a fact. With low standards of morality, loose living, and the Book of Life, whereby we must build the family altar, getting light and strength to walk through life, closed to them, God has no means of communication with them except through human lips and lives. It is not our purpose to shake their faith and cause them to doubt their religion, but to build up their weak faith by opening to them the Word of God, thus freeing them from the strong grasp of ignorance and superstition. Many have wandered away from the faith of their fathers; they no longer believe in confessing to man, though he be their spiritual adviser and stands before them as Christ's ambassador.

They are restless and dissatisfied, not finding for their souls that which satisfies when humanity cries out for God, as the hart panteth after the water-brooks. Protestantism gives to them the Word of God—his message from the homeland to the weary child of earth.

There is a work here that only the women may do. These people, having become weary and dissatisfied in the search for God, need your help. From infancy they have been taught to avoid other Churches as they would sin. They will not come to us—we must go to them. You must enter their homes in the person of your representative, show them that you love them; that you are their friend, and seek their welfare. Many homes will thus be reached that otherwise would be closed, for their doors are not open to the minister as they are to the deaconess.

Give us the money that we so much need to reach out and develop the field, with your prayers daily as our strength and support; and God will give to you souls as stars won for your crown.

Houma, La.

A WORD OF GRATIFICATION.

Dear Brother Meek: I am a humble reader of the Advocate and I have read with much interest the discussion that has gone on concerning Church union; and I desire to express the gratification that has come to me in noticing that in recent issues of your paper you and other prominent Methodists are in favor of calling off the negotiations, and letting the two Churches go on as heretofore. That is what I have wanted to see done for some time, and now while others are speaking out in favor of the adoption of that course, I wish to join them. I was raised up from childhood in the Southern Methodist Church, and it is but natural that I should love it. I never knew much about the Northern Methodist Church until the subject of unification came up.

YOUR BOY AND MY BOY.

By W. B. Lockwood.

Your boy and my boy;
What would the old flag be
Without the boys to bear it
On land and rolling sea?
Without the boys to wave it,
The boys, young, brave and true
To keep it floating in the winds,
The red, the white, the blue.

Your flag and my flag;
In half a world each day
Cannon roar saluting it
And men their homage pay,
But what a worthless piece of silk
Of red and white and blue,
Would be the flag we cherish so,
'Twere not for boys like you.

Your boy and my boy;
To him all credit's due
For the sheltering protection,
Of the red, the white, the blue.
Enduring cold and hunger
And dangers dread and grim
He keeps the flag afloatin';
The honor's due to him.

DAVY'S STRONG FOUNDATION.

Davy stood and watched the workmen as they laid the foundation for the new house next door. He had never before seen a pile-driver, and the great hammer driving the piles was very wonderful and new to Davy. Day after day found him watching at the fence that divided their garden from the next lot.

After a while the big pile-driver was moved away, and the workmen began using the lumber that lay waiting to build the house. Davy missed watching the huge hammer work, but he soon grew very much interested in the new house.

The workmen came to know and like Davy, too, and because he was polite and never meddled with anything, they saved the odds and ends of lumber and gave them to him to play with in the garden.

"Davy, dear," called his mother one bright morning, "don't you think that you have learned enough by watching the workmen next door to be a carpenter yourself and build a doll house for your little sister?"

Davy's face was as bright as the day as he ran into the house for the hammer.

"Come on, Agnes," he called, "and show me where you want it put."

Little Agnes followed him into the garden and chose her lot.

"I'll have to drive piles there first to make it safe," Davy said, as he began hammering the sticks into the ground.

Agnes started to cry, and mother came to the window to see what the trouble was.

"She wants to see the house go right up, mother," called Davy, "but I've got to make the foundation strong before I begin to build."

"You wouldn't like your house to fall when the first hard wind blows, would you, dear?" asked her mother, joining the children in the garden.

And then, while Davy laid his foundation, she explained to her little daughter something of what Davy had learned all the days he had watched the pile-driver.

Davy took a whole week to build the house, and that seemed a long time to his little sister; but he didn't slight one thing about it, and so when it was finished it was quite a nice little house.

Several of the workmen paused to watch Davy, as they passed the garden fence, and to praise his good work.

One sunshiny morning, when the house was quite complete, Davy and his mother sat under one of the garden trees and watched Agnes move her things in.

"I am glad you are so careful in your building," began his mother. "Did you ever think that people are like houses, my child?"

Davy's face grew puzzled, and he listened eagerly as she continued:

"You see, it's like this. Even little folks can begin by taking the Lord Jesus Christ as their Saviour and laying a good foundation for their lives, and as they grow older and larger they must not neglect any part of their house, but put all good works into the building."

Davy smiled as her meaning came to him.

"I never thought before of people being like houses!" he exclaimed.

"There are poor cramped houses of weak material in the world, and there are also strong, beautiful houses carefully built," his mother replied softly. "Which kind are you going to try and make your life like, Davy?"

"I mean to try and be like the strong one, mother!"

"Then," she whispered softly, "your building shall not fall, but will remain strong and good throughout all the stormy days of life."—American Messenger.

"LOOK UP."

Albert Davis came to the city partly to escape temptations that assailed him in his old home. In new environment and under helpful influences he hoped to make a fresh start in building a strong, manly character. He joined the church and tried to surround himself with all that he knew to be good. But the climb was a hard one. He did not advance in his work as quickly as he had hoped; he made few real friends and he was lonely. He wondered if it were all worth while.

One day his pastor invited him to his study for a chat. By careful, tactful questioning he led him to tell of his past, his aspirations, his temptations, and his discouragements.

After Albert had told his story, the minister said: "When I was a boy I lived near a church on which a chimney was being built. The chimney was on the outside and ran straight up through the gable at the back. With a boy's curiosity, I watched the masons at their work, and as the chimney rose I longed to climb up and see the top of it. One day a workman dropped his trowel and it fell to the ground. I picked it up and ran with it to the foot of the ladder.

"'Can you bring it up, my lad?' the mason called.

"Eagerly I mounted the ladder. When I had reached the top and was about to hand the workman his trowel, I was startled by the voice from below: 'What did you let the boy go up there for? He's sure to fall.'

"Of course I looked down, and because I was a little fellow, the distance was appalling. I felt sick and dizzy; my flesh grew cold; my hands and knees trembled. The man above saw my condition.

"'Look up, and you'll be all right!' he said quickly. 'Don't look down, keep looking up, and you won't fall.' I lifted my eyes to his. The dizziness left me, and I felt secure.

"Still looking upward, I made the descent safely; but if I had looked down, I should probably have fallen, for I never have been able to look down from a great height without feeling faint.

"I have found that the mason's words are an excellent motto for life. 'Look up! Keep looking up! Don't look down, and you won't fall!' As I looked up into his face that day to receive confidence and strength, I have many times looked up to my Heavenly Father for wisdom and help, and he has never failed me."

The minister laid his hand on Albert's shoulder. "Look up, my lad," he said heartily. Keep your mind fixed on high ideals, and you won't fall."

The young man's face glowed. "God helping me, I will," he said fervently.—The Youth's Companion.

"THAT'S WHAT I'M HERE FOR."

It was the uniformed young porter who said it, as he smiled pleasantly on the woman whose bundles he had started to carry for her. The station was full of travelers, hurrying to and from their trains, but the porter was not in the least hurried. He was quiet, ready, helpful; and he found a seat for the woman in the right car, and repeated as she thanked him for his trouble, "That's what I'm here for, madam, all day long; just to see that people get aboard all right." Then he went back to the gate, and promptly helped somebody else to another train. Cheery and pleasant, he carried babies, lifted heavy bags, reassured nervous people who were afraid the train would start without them, and made himself generally helpful, hour after hour.

"That's what I'm here for." The cheerful words carried an unconscious message. The porter's lot was not a very pleasant one. Perhaps he, too, longed to travel away from the hot city to the sea or the woods, yet all the year round he was shut within the crowded station, with its tracks and platforms. Few thanked him for helping them, and he could hardly have been blamed if he had been a trifle cross over his work. But he had no such thought; he was there to be helpful, and his heart was in his work.

The woman who had been helped to her seat by him thought it over as the train rolled away. She was one who had carried many burdens for other people, and had had few thanks. She seemed to herself to have spent her life in starting other people off where they wanted to go, and staying behind herself; and, lately, she had felt rebellious about it. But the young porter's words had started a new line of thought. "That's what I'm here for," she said to herself, "and it isn't my business to complain or to question. If he can do his day's work in that hearty spirit, I guess I can, too," and she felt her heart lighter than for many a day. The porter did not know it, but he had preached a whole sermon in five words that afternoon.—Forward.

WRECKED BY A CYCLONE.

Dear Brother Meek: Will you please kindly let me state in the Advocate that our church at Estherwood was some time since completely wrecked by a cyclone, and that we did not have a cent of insurance. We have a splendid little congregation there, but the most of them are poor people. It is urgently important that we should rebuild at that place as soon as possible. Are there not a number of readers of your paper who will assist in this important enterprise by making contributions to it? We cannot afford to let Methodism suffer at this point. Even small gifts will be much appreciated. Send remittances to me, Box 36, Estherwood, La.,

J. W. HOFFPAUIR, Pastor.

ARE THEY WILLING TO TEST IT?

The ultra-unionists are great claimers. Not infrequently when those in the South refer to the uniting of the two Episcopal Methodisms in the United States they declare that an overwhelming majority of Southern Methodists are ARDENTLY LONGING FOR UNION, the implication being that they are willing to take it upon very liberal terms, if that be necessary to obtain it. In view of the fact that there are more than 2,000,000 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and that they are scattered from the Potomac to the Rio Grande and from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, we are a bit curious to know how these gentlemen secured the information that has seemingly made them so cock-sure as to what their sentiments are. When a national political election is about to be held it is considered rather difficult to tell how the people of a single State in which there are liable to be differences of views will vote, and persons who travel over it and study the existing conditions often go far astray in their predictions. For instance, we did not see in the late Presidential contest a single forecast of the result that did not place Utah safely in the Republican column, yet it went for Mr. Wilson by a large majority. Of course, it may be that these unionist prognosticators have much more insight and prescience than our political prophets—obviously they must have, if they know for a certainty what the views of the great unconsulted masses of Southern Methodism are concerning this momentous and intricate problem.

But it may be asked, Did not the last General Conference declare unanimously for unification, and does not that indicate that such is the undoubted will of Southern Methodists? We reply that there were approximately about 300 men in that body, and that they were elected without the slightest reference to the unification issue. Indeed, the plan of the Joint Commission on Unification had not even been so much as published in the Church press, and the rank and file of our people had had no opportunity whatever to know of its provisions prior to the assembling of the General Conference. Nor did that body give it the full and careful consideration which it has sometimes been represented as having done. The truth is, the Vanderbilt University controversy stretched itself across the entire session at Oklahoma City and overshadowed everything else. The report of the Committee on Church Relations (which handled the Unification matter), after being printed in the Daily Advocate, was read and passed in a few minutes—practically without discussion, with the exception of two very brief spread-eagle speeches. The terms of the plan or what it embraced were not explained or commented upon by anybody with any degree of definiteness. So intense a unionist as Dr. T. N. Ivey has publicly declared within the past few months that few persons expected that the action taken there would amount to anything, and certainly most of the small amount of side-talk that was heard was to that effect. We have had some of the ablest and best known men who sat in that General Conference to state to us within recent months that they had given the paper that was adopted no attention and that they had at the time no clear comprehension of what was involved in it. True, there were no votes against the report, but that itself is a circumstance, when thoughtfully reflected upon, that shows how little consideration was given it. For, it is scarcely thinkable that if the members of the General Conference had realized that the right to name any subsequent commissioners that might be needed was being taken out of the hands of the College of Bishops, where all the precedents would have lodged it, the paper, without amendment, would have commanded unanimous support.

And there is not, in our opinion, the least doubt that the General Conference had the impression that (with the modification with reference to the Negroes) it was only giving its sanction, as to the fundamental principles involved, to the plan formulated by the Joint Commission, which it was understood, in a general way, would keep Southern Methodism in the South proper substantially intact and largely autonomous (in fact, no other construction was ever placed upon that plan until after the famous Evanston meeting). If any man with the authority to speak concerning that scheme had arisen upon the floor at Oklahoma City and had stated that it might result in severing Southern Methodism into four or five sections, leaving it scarcely any power of self-government, and in having Northern Bishops to preside over Southern Conferences, we do not believe that fifty votes could have been mustered in its behalf.

But how about the action of the Annual Conferences last year concerning this matter of unification? Was not that interpretative of the mind of the Church? We do not think it was at all definitely so. In the first place, the resolutions of the Conferences differed widely. Some of those along the border and some elsewhere in which the "liberalistic" influences are strong were pretty loose in their declarations, while others were cautious and very conservative. Moreover, the general representation was made to these bodies that they were merely backing up their General Conference, and the Oklahoma City plan of unification (which, with one modification, was that of the Joint Commission) was stressed as if it were something to be held on to—not something merely put forward for dickering and trading. And the point was also generally made, that any plan agreed upon by the Commissioners in future meetings would have to come back to them, as well as to another General Conference, for approval. And, furthermore, it should be remembered that in all the Conferences taking any kind of action there were less than 10,000 men (who were more or less divided in sentiment), and that most of these were ministers. There were scarcely more than a thousand laymen in them all. This was a mere handful of our more than 2,000,000 members.

Possibly some may be inclined to inquire as to what we think the feeling of Southern Methodists is concerning the question of unification. We frankly answer, We do not know, though we have an opinion as to their general attitude. We believe that probably a majority of them would support a plan of union which, while stopping friction in the Far West and along the border and giving concert of effort in missionary work and, as may be needed, in some other undertakings, would leave Methodism in the Southern States proper united and self-governing as to its own affairs, and place the Negroes in a separate Church. But, on the other hand, we do not believe that anything like a majority of them would stand for chopping up the Methodism of the South, or for bringing the Negro into the united Church or establishing any sort of makeshift relation of a missionary character with him, or that would place Northern Bishops over Southern Conferences. We base this opinion upon what we conceive to be the sentiment of the laity in this section of the Church, as it has been represented to us by pastors (some of whom themselves favor union upon rather liberal terms) and by numerous correspondents, and as it has appeared to us in our own mingling with the people. There is, however, a contingent of some strength among us that would prefer for our Church to continue its work as an entirely independent organization, maintaining the same fraternal relations toward the Northern Methodists that it does toward other Christian denominations, or at least going no further in any kind of alliance with them than to try to avoid needless competition.

Such is what we conceive to be the situation at present; but we are quite ready to admit that we may be in error. We claim none of the infallible knowledge with which the extreme unionists appear to speak. But, though we have not the cocksureness that characterizes most of those gentlemen in their utterances, we are moved to submit to them this challenge: You are constantly proclaiming that an overwhelming majority of Southern Methodists want union, and are willing to make large concessions to get it—why not stand for having any plan of union that may be formulated referred to the congregations of our Church? We will stand resolutely with you for such a referendum. It may not be provided for in our law, but such a plebiscite might be held with the understanding that it was to be advisory in its nature. And such an arrangement ought to be wholesome in its influence. It would tend to hush all such suggestions as that certain leaders and influences are trying to foist union upon the Church, nolens volens, or that others are trying to thwart the will of the majority of our members by manipulating things to defeat it. With the people themselves speaking, there would be no room for such charges and counter-charges. And, besides, our members really have a moral right to a voice in the settlement of a question that so vitally concerns them.

What say the unionist brethren who are so fearful that the people will not get what they want? Are they willing to put this thing up to the people? So far, we have not seen where any of them have expressed a wish to have the people really consulted about the matter. But we have seen where some of them desired the General Conference to dispose of the entire issue, without even sending it to the Annual Conferences. And one distinguished Editor and Commissioner, burning with a passion for union, declared that the great body of Southern Methodists know nothing about this momentous question, and would not care about it if they knew—at the same time evincing solicitude lest a mob spirit should be excited among them. These brethren should, we think, be consistent: If the will of the people is a thing to be despised and ignored, they should not invoke it in behalf of their cause; but if it is the thing that should govern, let the way be opened for it to register itself clearly, that it may be respected and made dominant. We ask again, What say these gentlemen to this proposition?

(It may seem to some that the views expressed in the foregoing editorial are out of accord with the position that we recently took when we declared in favor of calling off the present union negotiations, but such is not really the case. We are convinced from what has taken place that no plan of union that would adequately protect the Methodism of the South and keep its membership united has any chance of being agreed upon by the Joint Commission and adopted by the Church, North; hence we are in favor of stopping the hurtful agitation now going on at the earliest date possible. But if there be those on the Commission who, regardless of the effect that it would have upon our Church, are determined to force a contest over some kind of scheme of union, and they should prove to be in the majority, let them have the justice and fairness to recommend to the General Conference that it be submitted to all the congregations of Southern Methodism. It would, in our opinion, be to the credit of the Commissioners when thoy next meet if they would, before anything else is done, adopt a resolution declaring that if any program of unification is formulated, they favor having it passed upon by the entire membership of all the denominations that may be involved.)

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The Woman's Missionary Council, which was in session in this city from April 12 to 20, was in many respects a most impressive gathering. It is not likely that a finer body of women than these representatives of Southern Methodism could be assembled from any Church on earth. They gave continued evidence of large capacity, of thorough familiarity with the great work committed to their hands, and of earnest consecration to the Master's service. Miss Bennett presided with ease, dignity, and effectiveness. She obviously is a remarkably strong and resourceful leader. Many of the addresses made were informing and inspirational. The Council drew large audiences—a thing not easy to do in New Orleans—and it seemed to leave a noticeable impress upon the city. We aro glad to have had with us these busy and faithful toilers for the advancement of the Kingdom, and we pray that the year now beginning may in every way be the best that that the Woman's Missionary Society of tbe Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has ever had.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Joint Commission on the Unification of American Methodism will meet at Traverse City, Michigan, on June 27, 1917.

At its late session in New Orleans, the Woman's Missionary Council again adopted a memorial to the General Conference for ialty rights for women.

We desire to state again that in this day of so many meetings it is impossible for us to print programs, though we are always pleased to carry brief notices concerning Church gatherings.

Rev. W. B. Hogg, pastor of our First Church at Laurel, Miss., has been authorized by Governor Bilbo to raise a company of infantry. He will be assisted in doing this by Lieutenant Hollfield.

We have in hand, from Rev. Leland Clegg, the Secretary, a report of the Newton District Missionary Institute, which will appear in our next issue. The occasion seems to have been one of interest and profit.

The New York Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, lately in session, took action against Dr. Blake's scheme for disposing of the Negroes of that denomination in tho suggested new Methodist Church.

A card from Dr. Theo. Copeland, written from Miama, Fla., on April 16, contained the statement that he was at that time conducting a promising union revival meeting in that city, which was being attended by great crowds.

A note from Bishop Hoss, written on April 21, stated that he expected to leave Muskogee for Nashville, Providence permitting, Monday of this week. Some of the connectional meetings are now on at the Tennessee Capital.

We have regretted to learn that Rev. W. E. Vaughan, Editor of the Pacific Methodist Advocate, has been seriously ill. We trust that his malady will quickly respond to treatment and that he will soon be at his desk again.

That affable Christian gentleman and popular pastor, Rev. C. F. Emery, of Natchez, Miss., brings us under renewed obligations to him for an additional list of 5 subscriptions. The Advocate counts Brother Emery among its best friends.

Rev. and Mrs. B. P. Jaco, of Lexington, Miss., celebrated their 31st wedding anniversary on Sunday, April 22. We extend to them our congratulations, and pray that the years to come may bring them richer blessings than those that are gone.

Rev. W. W. Nelson, of the Scotland (Miss.) charge, gives us 3 subscriptions from his field, and adds the following note concerning his work: "Things are moving along nicely with us, and we are expecting a fine year. The people are standing faithfully by their pastor."

We have on our desk a program of the Shreveport District Conference, which is in session this week. The stirring presiding elder, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, obviously has arranged well for this occasion. Brother Atkinson believes that what is worth doing is worth doing well.

Without his seeking it, Dr. Beverly Carradine has been elected editor of The Way of Faith, an interesting weekly issued at Columbia, S. C. Dr. Carradine wields a facile pen and the readers of that paper are to be congratulated upon the fact that he is to be connected with it.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, requests us to state that in his article on New Orleans Methodism in our issue of April 12, he erred in giving the present numerical strength of Southern Methodism in this city. Instead of 8518, it should have been approximately 200 less.

The Union Methodist revival at the First Methodist Church of this city is now in full swing. The evangelist in charge of the services, Rev. D. L. Dale, of Dallas, Texas, has made a fine impression. Let the readers of the Advocate pray that these revival services may result in the accomplishment of great good.

From a business letter from Rev. E. R. Smoot, our pastor at Holly Springs, Miss., we take the following: "Bishop Candler and Rev. Robert Selby were with us on Sunday, April 1, representing Emory University. The Bishop was in splendid shape and gave us two great sermons. The work at Holly Springs is in a good condition."

We are indebted to the following friends, whose kindness we have not elsewhere mentioned, for two or more subscribers sent in within the past few days: Rev. T. B. Holloman, Vicksburg, 2; Rev. W. M. Young, Pontotoc, Miss., 3; Rev. J. H. Grice, Bay Springs, Miss., 4; Rev. C. H. Strait, Johns, Miss., 4; Rev. Leland Clegg, Harpervilie, Miss., 3.

Mr. Frank White, of Alexandria, La., a son of Hon. H. H. White, has enlisted in the First Louisiana Regiment, Infantry, for service in the German-American war. Mr. White is a steward and Sunday school worker in our church at Alexandria, and, like his father, a good lawyer. Another son of Judge White has also volunteered for service.

In renewing her subscription to the Advocate, Mrs. L. N. Chapman, of Bunkie, La., says: "It has been a weekly visitor to my home for 40 years; so I do not feel that I could do without it. If I should be compelled to curtail expenses, it will have to be at some other point." We scarcely need to say that we appreciate this expression of attachment to the Conference organ.

Rev. Robert Selby says: "Interest in Emory University is growing in proportion as our people in Mississippi gain a knowledge of it." This is as it should be. Mississippians will honor themselves by contributing the money to cover the construction of the Lamar Law School building. The South's foremost statesman since the Civil War, who so nobly served that commonwealth, well deserves this memorial.

Rev. W. H. Lewis, our pastor, thus refers to the revival recently held in the Capitol Street Church of Jackson, Miss.: "It was one of the most satisfactory meetings that I have ever had. Brother Kelly is certainly being used of God as an evangelist, and, with the help rendered by the Lewis Quartet, his work was all the more effective." A fuller account of this revival meeting may be seen elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate.

Rev. H. M. Whaling, Jr., of Dallas, Texas, writes: "Dr. Caspar S. Wright, Vice-President of Southern Methodist University, has presented to the Library of this institution several copies of the earliest volumes of The Arminian Magazine and Scott's Magazine, together with several miscellaneous volumes. The University's collection of material relating to the history of Methodism is steadily growing, and the gifts are very much appreciated."

The 1917 Directory of our Church at West Point, Miss., of which Rev. L. P. Wasson is the capable pastor, is before us. It is a neat pamphlet of about 25 pages, which gives the officials, the various organizations, and a roster of the membership of this excellent and growing congregation. The frontiespiece picture of the gifted young shepherd of this flock is an unusually fine piece of work.

Rev. W. E. Towson, of Eastman, Ga., has been in our office for some days, going over the old files of the Advocate to secure material for Bishop Lambuth's history of tho mission work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now in process of preparation. He is finding much valuable matter in these back numbers of our historic paper. Brother Towson was formerly a missionary to Japan, but. because of the state of his health, ho returned to the United States about ten years ago.

Rev. John W. Robertson, of Cochrane, Ala., gives us a list of subscribers, for which we are grateful to him, and adds the following note: "Everything is moving along well in this charge, and the Lord is blessing our efforts. Bishop Murrah and our presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Woollard, will be with us for our second quarterly conference on May 12 and 13, and our churches at both Cochrane and Dancy will be dedicated on the latter day."

The churches in the fine city of Shreveport, La., co-operated in having in The Shreveport Times of April 8 a full page of Church advertisements. Among the congregations participating in this venture was the Holy Trinity Church, Roman Catholic. Nothing like this was ever before done in this metropolis of Northwest Louisiana. The Noel Memorial Church (ours) has adopted as its motto in all its advertising these words: "A growing Church, and a growing Sunday School."

Rev. C. M. Morris, of 520 South Scott Street, New Orleans, desires to state through our columns that he will be able to assist in two revival meetings after June 1. Brother Morris' work at Epworth Church is going forwad in a most gratifying manner. A remodeled basement for Sunday school purposes, threo flourishing missionary societies, and a new mission Sunday school at tho corner of Toulouse and Pierce Streets are some phases of Church activity that he deems worthy of mention.

Rev. J. S. Rutledge, of Longville, La., writes as follows: "Easter found our home thick with the measles. One was convalescent, three were breaking out with it, and I had three degrees of fever, the doctor saying that I would be down with it in one day more. But, with the kindness of the people, the prayers of tho brethren, and the sustaining power of the Divine band, I trust that we shall be kept safely through it all." We hope tbat ere this tbe situation in the home of this faithful itinerant has greatly improved.

Rev. A. T. McIlwain, of Glen Allan, Miss., the Secretary, who sent in the report of the late session of the Greenville District Conference, calls our attention to the fact that in the Report of the Hospital Committee of that body, which we published last week, there was an error. It should have appeared therein that $175,000 was subscribed in the Memphis campaign for the Methodist Hospital, and that of this amount $35,000 had been paid—not "$35," as tbe figures were printed. We are glad to make this correction.

We acknowledge ourselves indebted to Brother F. A. Howell, of Durant, Miss., for some additional subscribers to the Advocate—he has already given us two or three lists during the year. Brother Howell is one of the best friends that our paper has. He states that he has been reading the New Orleans Advocate since boyhood, and that he will soon be 77 years old. We pray God's richest blessings upon him, and wish him many more years of useful service in the Church Militant before he takes his place in the Church Triumphant.

Rev C. H. Ellis, pastor of the Lintonia Charge, Jackson (Miss.) District, writes: "Brother J. V. Bennett came to us to assist in a meeting on April 11 and remained until April 18. He gave us the pure, plain gospel in demonstration of the Holy Spirit and power, and God blessed his labors. At the last service we had the pleasure of receiving 13 persons into the Lintonia church by profession of faith and baptism. This made 27 that have been received at Lintonia since April 1. We thank God and take courage, boping for still greater things."

Zion's Herald of April 18 says: "American Methodism will be disappointed, although it will not be greatly surprised, to learn that the Special Committee of the Commission on Unification on the status of the colored membersbip in the reorganized Church, which met in Cincinnati last week, made very little, if any, progress." We are informed that abont the same thing resulted from the Atlanta meeting of the Committee on Regional Conferences some weeks ago. Still there are brethren who are loudly proclaiming that the union movement is making glorious headway.

Miss Ella Malone, of Capleville, Tenn., and Mr. Richard G. Watson, were married at tho residence of the bride's brother, Hon. James H. Malone, in Memphis, Tenn., on April 3, Rev. T. W. Lewis officiating. Mrs. Watson is a sister of tho late Judge Walter Malone, the widely known poet. The couple will reside at the old Malone homestead at Capleville, of which her distinguished brother was so fond and where he usually spent his summer vacations. This interesting property now belongs to Mrs. Watson, whose husband was a schoolmate of hers. We extend to the bride and groom congratulations and best wishes.

From a letter from Rev. W. H. Coleman, who is one of the most efficient pastors of our acquaintance, we extract tho following: "Our work here (Alexandria, La.) is making gratifying progress. The membership continues to grow; there is an ever-increasing activity in all departments of the work, and we rejoice to see evidences of a deepening spirituality. We had expected to erect a new two-story, model Sunday school building this year, but since conditions in our country have become so unsettled we may not be able to carry out our plans at present. Rev. Thurston B. Price, one of our General Evangelists, will be with us in a meeting, June 10-24."

Rev. W. H. Saxon, Secretary of the Epworth League of the Brookhaven District, sends us a program of the League Institute to be held during the approaching session of the Brookhaven District Conferenco at Crystal Springs, Miss., with the request that we publish it. We regret that the rules of our office will not permit this, since if we were to do this for one organization, we should have to do it for all making like requests. The general theme announced for discussion on this occasion is "The League as the Training School of the Church." Prof. Harrison, of Fernwood, will discuss "The League and Education"; Miss E. Dunn, of McComb, "The League and the Social Life of Young People"; Rev. J. M. Thomas, of Summit, "The League and Missions," and Rev. J. V. Bennett, of Monticello, "The League and Evangelization."

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slighest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles as the prescription othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. Otherwise the obituaries will, without correspondence about them, be edited down to 200 words. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

OTIS N. GRAVES, son of Marcus and Ida Brumfield Graves, was born on Nov. 10, 1901, and died on March 17, 1917, and on Sunday the 18th we buried him in the cemetery at Knoxo, where we had, only a few days before, buried his father and brother. At the time that Bennie joined the Church, under the ministry of Brother Hogg, he united with the church at Knoxo and was a good Christian boy, unselfish and mindful of others' comfort. He was a patient little sufferer and bore it all with great fortitude and came to the end caring for others. The prayers and sympathy of all the community go out to this much afflicted family. May God's blessings be upon the mother, sister and brother left behind! His pastor,

W. H. SAUNDERS.

Mr. JAMES M. GUY was born in Alabama on March 25, 1843, and came to Louisiana more than 50 years ago, making his home on a farm in St. Helena Parish. In 1861 Mr. Guy was married to Miss Martha Fairchild, and this union was blessed with 9 children—Misses Martha and Sara, Mrs. Eliis Donoho, and Messrs. R. A. and J. W., Johua, W. N., W. L., of this parish, and Mr. John Guy of Baton Rouge. Mr. Guy espoused the cause of the Confederacy and served faithfully during the Civil War. At the close of the war, he returned to his farm, where he lived a quiet, peaceful life. In 1880 he became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He had a childlike faith in God, and expressed himself to members of his family as being ready to go before he passed away. His friends and fellow-Christians unite in saying "Well done, good and faithful servant." May God bless, comfort and sustain the grief-stricken ones!

Q. R. HENRY.

BENNIE E. GRAVES, son of Marcus and Ida Brumfield Graves, was born on March 19, 1896, in Pike County, Miss., and died on Feb. 18, 1917. Under the ministry of Brother W. B. Hogg, in July of 1913, he united with the Church at Knoxo and lived a faithful and consistent Christian life. Bennie was a young man who had a high ideal and his plans to make his life stand for something had already been settled. Just one month before we buried him, he told me that he was going to college this fall or next and make a man of himself. At preaching, one month before he died, I preached on the true ideals of the Christian life, and, young as he was, he came to me and said that the sermon would make him a better boy. Although he was 20 years old, his mother said to me that Bennie had never spent a night out of the home when she did not know where he was. It is a sad thing to give up a fine young man like this, but we know he has gone to a better place and entered into the reward of faithfulness. His pastor,

W. H. SAUNDERS.

MARCUS W. GRAVES, son of Bennie and Margaret Graves, was born on March 20, 1870, in Franklin Parish, La., and died on Feb. 28, 1917, in Walthall County, Miss. On Feb. 21, 1895, he was happily married to Miss Ida Brumfield of Pike County, Miss., and of this union were born four children to bless and make happy the home. As a result of the influence of the Christian home in which he was reared, he united with the Church in early life and remained a faithful member to the end of the way. His father was a devout member of the Baptist Church and his mother, who was a Miss Lewis, was a Methodist at the time of their marriage, but to be with her husband she soon united with his Church. Brother Marcus was of a quiet disposition and a deeply devotional nature. He loved his family and was a good provider, was patient in time of affliction and suffering, and exhibited his faith in Christ in the times that try men. A good man is gone from us, but we will look to meet him face to face when we pass over the way. His pastor,

W. H. SAUNDERS.

WALTER A. LEWIS, son of Jos. W. and Ellen Davis Lewis, was born on April 17, 1880, and died on Feb. 18, 1917. He was married to Miss Lucy L. Brumfield, on July 4, 1909. He joined the Church in early life and lived a faithful Christian to the end. He was a steward in our Church at the time of his death and was a faithful official. He was a good citizen, and a good husband and father. The community sustained a great loss in his going, but his good example remains. He was a member of the famous Lewis family, which has given so much to the State in the lives and ministry of nine preachers. In the early days of this country three brothers settled in the Water Hole and China Grove communities—Martin, Quinnie and Lemuell Lewis, and Walter was a descendent of Lemuel. If Walter had a failing, it was his impatience with littleness in men. He leaves a wife and four children, two brothers, a mother and three sisters, and a good name, which is "rather to be chosen than great riches." May God's blessings abide with the family!

W. H. SAUNDERS, P. C.

ANTHONY L. MONROE, the subject of this sketch, was born on Jan. 12, 1852, and died on Feb. 1, 1917. The cause of his death was creeping paralysis, to which he fell a victim five years ago. All was done that medical science could do to check the disease, but to no avail. He gradually grew worse until his death. The writer was his pastor for two years. He was a member of the M. E. Church, South, at the old campground. He was on the board of stewards 36 years. I remember that on one quarterly conference occasion he requested that I relieve him, since, owing to the state of his health, he was not able to do his duty as he wished to. We refused on the ground that he was too exemplary and influential a man to release as a member of that body. May the Lord raise up more like unto him! His life was above reproach. His remains were laid to rest in the old Campground Cemetery amidst a host of friends and relatives. The funeral was conducted by his pastor, Rev. W. W. Perry. Brother Monroe is not dead. He still lives in the heart and minds of those who knew him and his influence will be felt for all time. May God comfort those who mourn because of his going!

Hair Needs Food

just as every other living thing does, and, just as every other living thing, it will die if it is not fed. Hair food takes the form of the natural oil on which it subsists. Fifty years ago the Creoles of Louisiana, who prided themselves on their hair, discovered a recipe for beautiful hair. By the use of this natural hair oil, "La Creole," they kept their hair beautiful, light and fluffy. This secret has been handed down through generations and presents the very best hair food and hair disease remedy. Does your hair fall out? Is it coarse? Is it stiff? Has it lost its natural luster? Then ask your dealer for a bottle of "La Creole" hair dressing. The price is only $1.00 and it will be the life of your hair. If he can't supply you, write at once to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

Hurrah! How's This
Cincinnati authority says corns dry up and lift out with fingers.

Hospital records show that every time you cut a corn you invite lockjaw or blood poison, which is needless, says a Cincinnati authority, who tells you that a quarter-ounce of a drug called freezone can be obtained at little cost from the drug store but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You simply apply a few drops of freezone on a tender, aching corn and soreness is instantly relieved. Shortly the entire corn can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

This drug is sticky but dries at once and is claimed to just shrivel up any corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

If your wife wears high heels she will be glad to know of this.

HUSBAND OBJECTS TO OPERATION

Wife Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Des Moines, Iowa.—"Four years ago I was very sick and my life was nearly spent. The doctors stated that I would never get well without an operation and that without it I would not live one year. My husband objected to any operation and got me some of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and commenced to get better and am now well, am stout and able to do my own housework. I can recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman who is sick and run down as a wonderful strength and health restorer. My husband says I would have been in my grave ere this if it had not been for your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. BLANCHE JEFFERSON, 703 Lyon St., Des Moines, Iowa.

Before submitting to a surgical operation it is wise to try to build up the female system and cure its derangements with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it has saved many women from surgical operations.

A SURPRISE BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION.

Mrs. Annie Bynum, whose sterling qualities are recognized and appreciated in the Church, in the Sunday school, in the W. C. T. U., and in all organizations for the betterment of conditions and the uplift of humanity, was given an ovation long to be remembered by members of the Missionary Society at Booneville, Miss., on Monday afternoon, April 2. Knowing that April contains a golden milestone which marks the natal day of our much-valued member, Sister Wyatt, whose keen perception, broad intelligence, warm sympathy, and artistic temperament, well fitted her for mistress of ceremonies, had requested that the missionary meeting be held at the parsonage, that she might the more effectively carry out a charming little scheme of celebration.

And we all like the suggestion of the poet:

"If you have a friend worth loving,
Love her; yes, and let her know
That you love her, ere her life be Passed beyond the sunset glow."

By a pre-arranged plan, the members of the society had assembled early, each holding a candle in her hand when the honoree and Mrs. Johnson, the president, arrived. Mrs. Wyatt met them and escorted them to a seat of honor, and as the candles dispensed their rays of light and were passed on from one to another, Mrs. Wyatt explained in her own inimitable way why we were trying to do honor to our beloved Mrs. Bynum, and this little pantomime betrays in a feeble way the light of her beautiful life, and how it has radiated from one to another, embiematic of that Great Light which shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

After prayer by our pastor, Rev. J. M. Wyatt, that her useful life may be long continued and with thanksgiving for her worthy example, Mrs. Wyatt, in behalf of the missionary society, presented her with a lovely boquet of pink and white carnations, and expressed in the loftiest manner possible the sentiments of love and appreciation of the entire society.

At this juncture, a special delivery messenger handed in a packet of letters, artistically bound together with loops and rosettes of bright-hued ribbons. Then Mrs. Emma Rugg McMillian arose and said: "Assuredly, I do feel highly honored to represent our society in paying tribute to this dear pioneer member as she is passing another mileston of her exemplary life. Her strength of mind, her greatness of heart, her splendid executive ability and thorough knowledge of missionary needs have all contributed to keeping up the work. She held on even when the work seemed difficult and discouraging. She has served in every office, was president a number of years, sometimes would discharge the duties of two offices at once, working here a little, there a little, nurturing the tender plant, until to-day we have a strong, vigorous missionary society of which we are all justly proud. I'm sure I voice the sentiments of every member when I tell her that we do appreciate her, and we believe the fruit of her efforts will live as a lasting monument after we have all left the work for other hands to do. May we all learn a lesson from her life of service! And may we learn, as she has often told us, to 'put first things first.' We all join in wishing her many returns of the day. Surely 'she hath done what she could.'"

It is needless to say that Mrs. Bynum was completely surprised and overcome by the lavish shower of flowers, letters and loving encomiums, but her wonderful personality asserted itself, and her ever-ready wit sustained her in a beautiful, loving and loyal response.

After an interesting program from The Missionary Voice, and reports of officers, superintendents, etc., delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Wyatt and Miss Helen Brown, which added very materially and pleasantly to the birthday celebration.

Ono of the participants,
Mrs. SIDNEY HODGES.

ANNUAL REPORT OF NATIONAL MUTUL CHURCH INSURANCE COMPANY.

The annual report for last year of the National Mutual Church Insurance Company shows the unusual increase in business of more than $2,300,000, which is nearly twice the increace for the previous year and more than four tlimes that for 1914.

This institution was organized by order of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of 1896 and remained under official supervision until it had become so thoroughly established as no longer to need the fostering care of the General Conference, which, because of state laws relating to the business of fire insurance, had no legal control after the company was incorporated (the management and methods remaining, of course, the same).

During the more than eighteen years of activity, policies have been issued aggregating over $150,000,000. There now remains in force, after deducting expirations and cancellations, more than $38,750,000, the policies being in all parts of the country, including Alaska. Losses aggregating considerably more than $1,000,000 have been paid.

Tho character of the management of this great company is indicated by the fact that, although the protection is extended upon terms easily met, not one dollar has ever ben due and unpaid to a policy-holder for losses sustained, of which there have been approximately 3,300.

In addition to furnishing insurance at cost and upon terms that are within the reach of churches financially weak, and giving opportunity for those more fortunately situated to help the churches tempted to neglect insurance, the company is constantly engaged in the effort to prevent unnecessary fires by its system of inspection and education as to conditions that would not otherwise be recognized as hazardous.

We are glad to add a cordial word of appreciation of the service that is being rendered. This could not be fully expressed in figures because of the damage that is done to the cause of Christ and of Methodism, reaching to the remotest corners of the earth, wherever our denomination is represented, every time a Mthodist church burns down or blows down without insurance. If rebuilding at all is possible there is of necessity a more or less less serious deflection to the building fund of the money that would otherwise flow naturally to the missionary and other benevolent causes of the church.

We are informed that since the management reached its maximum compensation years ago, the business had largely increased, but that fact seems to have stimulated rather than otherwise the efforts made to constantly extend the usefulness of the company. It is estimated that more than half of the losses sustained could be avoided by proper care.

If attention is given to the recommendations made in the columns of The Insurance Review, which is published three or four times a year and sent to all policy-holders, and to the direct communications from the Inspection Department, many churches can be saved to bless the community in which they are located that will otherwise go up in smoke.

Freckles

To remove freckles the best thing to do is to remove the outer cuticle of the skin, which carries the freckles. This is easily done with Kintho Cream. The Kintho should peel off the old, freckled skin, a little at a time, gradually bringing the under layer of skin to view. The new skin is beautiful, soft, clear, white and youthful looking and, of course, should have no freckles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed. Read carefully special instructions inside of box.

CROWLEY, LA.

Editor Advocate: We are sure the friends of the Crowley Church everywhere who have been praying for its welfare will be glad to know of the successful revival now being carried on. The preaching is being done by the pastor, Rev. R. W. Tucker, and the singing by the people. No outside men nor undue stimulus is used, but the strong, plain, direct gospel preaching is being driven home with an earnestness and force that is bearing fruit. Brother Tucker is making an effort to get the people to think, and no doubt he is provoking serious thought, and the fruits of the messages are already evident. The Board of Stewards of the church and its working force are united now as never before, and the lives of the membership are being strengthened and deepened under the influence and preaching of this man of God. A very helpful series of sermons by the pastor on the Holy Ghost preceded the meeting and prepared the hearts of the people for this series of revival sermons. One of the special features of the meeting is the hearty co-operation of the pastors and congregations of the other denominations. The Christian people of the town are becoming united as never before. That Brother Tucker is broad-minded and tolerant is attested by the sanction given to his meeting by his brother-ministers of the other churches. Last night the seating capacity of the church was practically taken up. This is truly remarkable when it is considered that the meeting is "home made" and that no excitement, no clap-trap methods—not even any unusual advertising—are resorted to. Last Sunday 3 joined the Church, and yesterday 7. This all shows that gospel preaching has not lost its power, and that the strength of the message and its drawing power lies not in external paraphernalia, important as that is, but in the spirituality of the preacher and the spiritual force of his message. H. G. LATTA,

Chairman Board of Stewards.

REVIVAL AT CAPITOL ST., JACKSON, MISS.

The revival services at the Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., closed Sunday, April 15. The pastor was assisted by Rev. Dan E. Kelly, of Hattiesburg, and the Lewis Quartette. These men of God labored faithfully among us for three weeks, and God graciously blessed their efforts at every service. In the face of stormy weather, patriotic demonstrations and other things calculated to divert the attention, the interest steadily increased. On several occasions the church was filled to its utmost capacity, and on the last night quite a number were turned away.

On Sunday afternoon 69 children were received into the Church, and at the evening service 31 adults. There will be a class of adults to be received next Sunday. Several applied for membership in other Churches. A number of members of the Church were converted and many were reclaimed.

An interesting service was held by Brother Kelly at the Methodist Orphans' Home on Monday, after the meeting closed. Eighteen of the children accepted Christ and applied for Church membership; at the chapel exercises that evening, conducted by Brother Randolph, the manager of the Home, 13 others followed. It was my privilege Tuesday evening at the chapel exercises to baptize and receive into the Church these 31 orphan children.

It was never my privilege to work with more earnest and consecrated helpers than Brother Kelly and the Lewis Quartette. God honored the singing of the Gospel as well as His preached Word, and eternity alone will reveal the real good accomplished. They won a warm place in the hearts of the people. W. H. LEWIS.

FROM THE WALL HILL (MISS.) CIRCUIT.

Dear Brother Meek: Our quarterly conference was held at Marvin on March 31 and April 1. We were indeed very glad to have our presiding elder, Brother J. H. Holder, with us. He is much loved by the people here. Brother Gladney preached on Saturday at 11 o'clock a fine sermon, which every one enjoyed greatly. At noon a nice dinner was served, which I think everybody enjoyed. The conference met at an early hour in the afternoon. Brother Holder administered the Sacrament, and preached a very fine sermon on Sunday at the 11 o'clock hour—which was greatly enjoyed by every one. They organized a Sunday school (making my father, Mr. A. B. Woods, superintendent), which, we trust, will soon be a flourishing one. Our pastor, Brother O. P. Armour, is very highly appreciated by his people here. He has appointed a committee of three to organize a Woman's Missionary Society, which we trust to see doing a great work in a short while. With best wishes for the Advocate and its readers, I am,

ROBBIE LUCILLE WOODS.

A CARD OF THANKS.

Since I cannot answer all the letters the brethren are writing me endorsing my reply to Rev. H. B. Watkins, I take this means of expressing my appreciation of their kindly letters.

NOEL MEMORIAL CHURCH, SHREVEPORT.

It will be most gratifying news to the members of the Louisiana Conference to learn of the wonderful development of the Noel Memorial Church under the able pastorate of Rev. W. W. Drake. Every department of the church is thoroughly alive to its possibilities and extending its energies in forward developments, and already marked improvements are seen, and this has given them new enthusiasm to increase their activities.

In January an "every-member canvass" of the church membership was made and this canvass has placed the church in the best financial condition in the history of the congregation. The Sunday school is making rapid developments in all departments and the attendance in these departments is much the largest in the history of the school. The attendance upon the regular preaching services on Sunday shows a marked increase and the accessions to the Church this year are far ahead of any other Conference year at this time. The attendance at the weekly prayer meeting services on Wednesday evenings has increased over 100 per cent since Rev. W. W. Drake became the pastor.

Next Sunday afternoon, April 15, at 2:30, the members of the Senior Epworth League will conduct an every-member canvass of the church membership to increase the attendance and effectiveness of the League organization. Plans are under way by the Sunday school to have an every-member canvass of the Church within the next few weeks to bring about a greater development of Sunday school activities. The Highland Avenue Baptist and Duniop Memorial Presbyterian Sunday schools will join in with the Noel Memorial Sunday school in conducting the Sunday school canvass in the section of the city in which these churches are located. The Woman's Missionary Society also conducted an every member canvass a short while ago and placed this society in the best financial condition in the history of that organization. The Junior Epworth League is alive in activities. Noel Memorial is setting the pace in activities for Shreveport Methodism this year, and great things are predicted for this growing church in 1917. This church and school made a liberal contribution to the Ruston Orphanage last Sunday.

BISHOP THIRKIELD IN VICKSBURG.

Finding that he could stop between trains, Bishop Thirkield telegraphed the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church here that he would stop over for a service. At the invitation of the pastor, it was my pleasure, with several other white brethren, to hear the eloquent Bishop deliver a lecture on "Making a Man," which was not only edifying but timely. I will not attempt an outline of the lecture, but wish simply to endorse its appeal to the colored people (to whom it was delivered) for a higher, clearer, more self-respecting, elevating life. The good Bishop evidently appreciates the needs of the colored man and does not hesitate to give in clear terms most wholesome advice. It is said that every fellow thinks his job the most important, and I do not claim to be an exception to that rule; but if there is a place in our Southland that needs all the encouragement and influence of the stronger men of Methodism it seems to me that it is Vicksburg. This city is the stronghold of Catholicism and Judaism in Mississippi, and if Protestantism is to measure up to its obligations, we need more visits from such men as Bishop Thirkield. Methodism is about celebrating her centenary in Vicksburg. She was first on the ground; the city is named for one of her pioneer preachers, and she should be easily in the lead of all other denominations. I verily believe if our Bishops could appreciate this point as stratgetic, that more would stop with us on their rounds.

I was greatly impressed with the emphasis placed by the Bishop on the importance of the Bible in our schools and his appeal for its equal standing with other subjects in the curricula of all our schools—and it's coming, Doctor, must come, if the Church is to keep pace with the Sunday school demands. PEPSIN NUX IRON and Sarsaparilla—Fine Course of Medicine.

Physicians and pharmacists have long known the desirability and difficulty of combining iron—a superlative tonic—in a blood-purifying medicine.

The combination of the iron with Hood's Sarsaparilla has now been secured through the happy thought of prescribing Peptiron Pills in connection with the Sarsaparilla—the latter before eating, Peptiron Pills after.

In this way the two medicines work harmoniously, giving four-fold results in blood-cleansing and up-building.

Peptiron Pills include pepsin and iron,—note the name, Peptiron Pills,—nux vomica, manganese, other tonics, digestives and laxatives.

What better course of medicine can you imagine for this season? You get blood-purifying, appetite-giving, liver-stimulating qualities in Hood's Sarsaparilla and great strength makers in Peptiron Pills. Buy these medicines today. They also combine economy with merit.

For All Pain

"The efficiency of any drug" says Dr. C. P. Robbins "is known to us by the results we obtain from its use. If we are able to control pain and disease by means of any preparation, we certainly are warranted in its use. One of the principal symptoms of all diseases is pain, and this is what the patient most often applies to us for, i. e., something to relieve his pain. If we can arrest this promptly the patient is most liable to trust in us for the other remedies which will effect a permanent cure. One remedy which I have used largely in my practice is antikamnia tablets. Many and varied are their uses. I have put them to the test on many occasions, and have never been disappointed. I found them especially valuable for headaches of malarial origin, where quinine was being taken. They appear to prevent the bad after-effects of the quinine. Antikamnia tablets are also excellent for the headaches from improper digestion; also for headaches of a neuralgic origin, and especially for women subject to pains at certain times. Two anti-kamnia tablets give prompt relief, and in a short time the patient is able to go about as usual."

AS ANOTHER LAYMAN SEES IT.

After reading the article from Brother E. F. Arnold on the subject of Methodist Unification, I am constrained to say a few words. When the subject was first agitated, I was elated with the hope that the two big sisters would soon unite. After the venerable Bishop who had taken such a prominent part in wresting Vanderbilt University from our Church volunteered to turn our Church over to our big sister, my elation was calmed to a considerable extent, and when it was made plain to me that our sister proposed to assume supreme control by placing the supreme authority in the General Conference, of which body she would have a majority, I began to view the proposition with coolness. When I saw the article from their colored brother, Dr. Jones, giving his and, as I suppose, his race's, views on the matter I became indifferent, and when I saw quotations from some of the most prominent white brethren stating that they can't think of depriving their Church of the benefits derived from these colored members and permit them to organize a Church of their own, I confess the spirit of unification is gone out of me.

I am sorry to see rivalry between the two Churches. I think both have done wrong; they ought never to have encroached on each other's territory. The great church building now about to be erected in Washington, D. C., is to my mind the ugliest memorial in all the history of the Church, South. The great church building to be built in Atlanta is a similar memorial of the Church, North. Other reasons are given for building these houses, but it is plain to the world that rivalry and ill feeling is at the bottom of the whole thing. Altar against altar—nothing more or less.

Brother Arnold says plainly he will not accept union on any terms. I think our leading men could formulate a plan which I would accept, but I think it is better to drop the whole business of union, try to make plain the points of difference in the two churches so that the outsiders can see it, and have some reason to choose between the two. I will venture the assertion that there is not one person in ten of the members of either Church in Louisiana who can tell the difference between the two. The world looks on and wonders why if we are all Christians and our belief is the same, we don't work together and not have two weak little churches in one town hardly able to support one.

This effort to unite has cost a good deal in money and will no doubt cost a good deal in the loss of brotherly love, no matter which way it goes. If the two Churches unite they will lose Brother Arnold and all his sort, and if they drop the question now I fear the rivalry and waste of means and energy will be worse than ever. We can only wait and watch and pray.

A PREACHERS' INSTITUTE.

At the Brookhaven District Conference, at Crystal Springs, Miss., on May 2, 1917, a preachers' institute will be held under the direction of Rev. W. H. Saunders. The following themes will be discussed on that occasion: "The Preacher and His Message," by Rev. J. L. Decell; "The Preacher in the Life of the Community," by Rev. R. H. Kleiser; "The Modern Church and its Mission," by Rev. C. W. Crisler; "The Problems of the Country Church, and How to Solve Them," by Rev. L. L. Roberts.

Each speaker will be allowed 15 minutes, and 5 minutes will be allowed for open discussion. Brethren, let's make this hour and twenty minutes a season of inspiration and helpfulness.

EPWORTH LEAGUE MEETING.

The New Orleans Conference Epworth League held its regular monthly meeting at the Mary Werlein Mission on Tuesday, April 10, with an exceptionally large attendance. Reports from the various Leagues brought out the fact that quite a few of our young men were absent, due to their having enlisted in either the Army or Navy, which was the occasion for an enthusiastic, patriotic demonstration, the Leaguers rising in a body and singing "America." It was voted to count all enlisted members present at our Union meetings and have the Secretary keep in touch with them.

It was decided to hold a District Meeting in New Orleans, May 25 and 26. The business meeting was followed by a lively debate, the subject being, Resolved that parents should choose their daughters' husbands." Affirmative—Louisiana Avenue League; Negative, Algiers League — each League being represented by a young gentleman and young lady. The judges awarded the decision to the negative. This was the second debate won by the Algiers League.

Dr. Scott, a retired missionary of the Methodist Church, who served 35 years in India, gave an interesting, entertaining and uplifting talk on "Hindoo Habits and Customs."

The Banner was awarded to Louisiana Avenue, it being necessary, however, that they take into consideration the fact that one of their number was absent on account of having enlisted. Otherwise, it was a tie between that League and that of the Mary Werlein Mission. The home League served refreshments.

NERVOUSNESS AND DISORDERS OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.

The energy that gives life to the body is known to be nerve force. It is this hidden energy that creates the difference between the living and the dead body. It is the indefinable something that the body is robbed of in death.

Irregular distribution of the nerve-force is responsible for many of the disorders of the system. Consequently any remedy that has the power to soothe the irritated nerves, thus regulating the supply of nervous energy, is of inestimable value.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is such a medicine. It not only soothes the irritated nerves, but it induces a more regular distribution of the nerveforce, and thus assists the bodily organs in performing their proper functions. Furthermore, it induces a natural sleep, which is nature's greatest tonic and strengthener.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is especially recommended in cases of Sick, Bilious and Nervous Headache; Epilepsy; Fits; Irregular, Profuse and Painful Menses; Neuralgia; Sciatica; Sleeplessness; Melancholy; Backache; Nervous Irritation and Nervous Dyspepsia.

For more than 25 years Dr. Miles' Nervine has been largely used, and the success that it has met with on all sides is the best proof of its merit.

If you think that Dr. Miles' Nervine is suited to your case, procure a bottle from your druggist, take it according to directions, which you will find wrapped around the bottle, and then if you are not benefited return the empty bottle, one only, to your druggist and he will return your money in full. The Miles Medical Co. repays him the full retail price, so there is no reason why he should not return your money promptly.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Died of Premature Old Age!

How many times we hear of comparatively young persons passing away when they should have lived to be 70 or 80 years of age. This fatal work is usually attributed to the kidneys, as, when the kidneys degenerate, it causes auto-intoxication. The more injurious the poisons passing thru the kidneys the quicker will those noble organs be degenerated, and the sooner they decay.

It is thus the wisest policy, to prevent premature old age and promote long life, to lighten the work of the kidneys. This can be done by drinking plenty of pure water all day long, and occasionally taking a little Anuric before meals. This can be obtained at almost any drug store. You will find Anuric more potent than lithia for it dissolves uric acid as water does sugar.

WITH YOUR HANDS TIED by some chronic "female complaint" or weakness, what can you expect? There's nothing you can accomplish—nothing you can enjoy. And no good reason for it. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription will cure you, safely and certainly, if you'll give it faithful use. For every one of these womanly troubles, this is the only remedy: In periodical pains, bearing-down sensations, organic displacements, and every kindred ailment, and in all the nervous disorders caused by functional derangements.

An easily procured vegetable pill is made up of May-apple, the dried juice of the leaves of aloes, and the root of jalap made into a tiny pellet and coated with sugar. It was first put into ready-to-use form by Dr. Pierce nearly 50 years ago. Almost every drug store in this country sells these vegetable pellets in vials for 25c—simply ask for Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They have Dr. R. V. Pierce stamped on them.

NOTES FROM THE COUNCIL MEETING.

Peter's wonderful vision of the "great sheet" found in the tenth chapter of Acts, and read by Miss Mabel Howell, Professor of Sociology at Scarritt Bible and Training School, prefaced Rev. F. S. Onderdonk's presentation of the work among the Mexicans along our Texas border. Miss Howell tried to impress the audience with the fact that "what God hath cleansed that call not thou common." She said that while many contended that our pocket-books were the last thing to be touched in our Christian lives, she had heard Dr. Cook say emphatically that our race prejudice was the last stronghold to be conquered. Rev. Onderdonk followed up this remark with strong examples proving its truth. There was no polishing over the facts he so ably presented, nor how we as Americans are disregarding the words found in the above chapter of Acts—regarding ourselves as very superior beings. He pleaded for the 400,000 Mexicans in Texas, that they might have the opportunity to know God, that his love might transform their lives as it had done ours. Two beautiful illustrations were given to prove this glorious transforming power of Christ's gospel. One incident dealt with an old woman earning an amount equivalent to $1.50 per month in our money, and out of this meager sum she pledged $1 per month to the Master's work. Such sacrifice should put to shame our paltry offerings. The eagerness with which these people reach out for the Gospel was indelibly impressed upon us after hearing the wonderful experience of Mr. Gomez. This man was on his way to spend the Sabbath in a drunken carousal with some friends when he met a little girl carrying a Testament under her robosa. Through the workings of the Holy Spirit he was led to borrow the book, and the next day, after securing candles and writing materials, went home and for two weeks, although he had to plow and work hard all day, he sat up till 1 and 2 every night transcribing the New Testament and the Psalms, and at the close of two weeks he had finished his own book. For many years it was the only Bible he had until finally he heard that twelve miles over the mountains a colporteur was selling Bibles, and he went and bought some. Would we Americans, who pride ourselves on our ancestors, go to that much trouble to have God's Word in our homes? Surely these "common" people have many lessons which they can teach us.

Rev. Onderdonk spoke also of his recent visit to the Regional Conference in Mexico City, and the recommendations coming from said meeting. Four things were agreed upon as best for the advance of the work—a union church paper; union publishing house; union theological school; and the redistributing of territory.

In speaking of the work on the Pacific coast, Mrs. MacDonell said there were more Christians in Shanghai, China, than in San Francisco; and to further emphasize the great need of the work in this section Bishop Lambuth gave out the fact that there were more men in the saloons of San Francisco than there were Protestants in the Churches there. Truly the harvest is great, but the laborers are few. This Japanese work is a wonderful evangelizing agency, and those in the foreign lands speak of the splendid character of the Christians who return home to them. In connection with the work on the coast, Mrs. MacDonell spoke of the splendid work done by the Dendo Dau, as the name indicates a preaching committee, who are banded together to preach the gospel to the non-Christian in this section.

The Committee on Estimates for the Foreign Work recommended an appropriation of $2000 towards the erection of a church building in Changchow, China. This caused some little discussion, as a few of the women thought it would be a change in the policy of the Council. So heavily did the matter press upon the heart of a dear old lady, Mrs. Nellie Cardz, of Missouri, that she was constrained to give of the Lord's money $500 to help in the erection of this much-needed house of worship. She gave not that it should be published abroad, but that others might be stimulated to do likewise.

There were an unusually large number of returned missionaries and deaconesses present—twenty-two of the former, thirty of the latter—besides three city missionaries. At different times during the sessions were those from the foreign fields heard from. Each told of some special phase of the work and emphasized the particular needs of her field. Miss Maude Bonnell, of the Lambuth Memorial Bible School, spoke with wonderfully convincing power. She thrilled all hearts as she told how God had answered her prayers for the Council to enter this field (Japan); and now the Council is planning for a new home for the Bible school, the old one being inadequate in every respect. Miss Bonnell spoke of the beautiful Christian lives of the women who go from this school, and each year, as the school has a special course, many of the former graduates come back for a five-days' study, or, as they express it, "to make connections with God again." One and a half million women in Japan are waiting for us to send them the gospel of Christ. How long shall they wait?

Miss Bennett supplemented what Miss Bonnell said about the needs of the Lambuth Memorial School and pleaded with the women for the erection of a new building this year, and bringing out the fact that $20,000 would cover the cost of the ground as well as the erection of the necessary buildings of Japanese-American architecture.

The deaconesses gave messages full of interest and enthusiasm. "Some facts brought out by these speeches were as follows: That the institutional church in Kansas City has an annual budget of $14,000; that the Council has 15 Wesley Houses in cotton mill districts, in practically all of which the mill owners co-operate either with monthly contributions or rentals, the sums totaling about $14,000 this year; that 100,000 young women are added to the ranks of the fallen each year." The messages from these workers in the home field were all full of power and inspiration, but, perhaps, the most impressive was given in song by Miss Cornelia Godbey from First Church, Memphis, Tenn., who sang, "I am Satisfied with Jesus; Is He Satisfied with Me?"

It was with hearts full of joy that the women learned that at last the Virginia K. Johnson Home in Dallas, Texas, was paid for, the last check having reached Mrs. Ross only a few weeks previous to this meeting. This glad news was made possible by the efforts of our saintly Mrs. Johnson, who has stood back of the institution for so many years, working and praying for it as perhaps no other woman in the entire connection has done.

As we listened to the missionaries tell of the awful ignorance and superstition of those in the foreign lands we could not help thinking that practically the same thing exists in our own country, for had we not heard our own Miss Hasler, of Biloxi Wesley House, tell of many revolting superstitions among the people with whom she works? To cure Mirasmus you must try charmed rubbing of the abdomen, then tie a string around the same, let it remain for twenty-four hours; then remove the string and tie around a newly laid egg, after which drop in the fire. If the egg breaks the child will die. That is a superstitious belief and cannot hurt the child one way or the other; but think of a little sickly baby ("mourning baby") being given chicken-manure tea to drink. Is it any wonder that they die? Surely the Father above must "mourn" over our slowness in sending out workers to combat such superstitions and customs.

Tuesday night the pledges were taken from the different conferences and in almost every instance there was a ten per cent increase over that pledged the previous year. The total for the adult, young people and Junior auxiliaries amounted to $238,100.50, an increase of $23,381 above what was paid last year.

THE NEEDS IN THE CHURCH.

Our Lord needs in His Church to-day disciples with the clearness of mind, the steadiness of faith, the balance of judgment which His Spirit gives. He needs in His service men and women whose faith rests on sure foundations, who believe intelligently, and, therefore firmly, all the glorious truths contained in the Creed, who accept the teaching of the Scriptures as interpreted by the Church and believe this with all their minds as well as with all their hearts and souls and strength. It is this spirit in us and this firm faith in our Lord and His truth that makes us witnesses of His resurrection.—Dr. William Manning.

EDWIN D. MOUZON.

At the request of the Department of Ministerial Supply and Training Dr. Stonewall Anderson, Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Education, has prepared the following statement as to the conditions for Admission on Trial. These conditions are taken from the sixth report of the Commission on Education, appointed by the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, and were adopted at the meeting of the Commission at Eagle's Nest, N. C., August 10-14, 1914.

Conditions for Admission on Trial.

"According to the law of the Church, a candidate for admission on trial into the traveling connection may meet the requirements for general education in either of two ways, as follows:

1. The Examining Committee may accept in lieu of an examination on high school branches a certificate that the candidate has successfully completed the course in a four-year high school or academy. The minimum value of a high school course in high school units is 14—a unit being a subject of study throughout the year, with at least four recitations per week.

2. A candidate may present himself to the committee for examination, in which case the committee shall examine the candidate upon the following subjects: (1) Three years of high school English, including Higher English Grammar, ½ unit, Elements of Rhetoric, 1 unit, and English Literature, 1½ units; (2) Three years of high school Mathematics, including Algebra, 1½ units, Plane Geometry, 1 unit, and Solid Geometry, ½ unit; (3) Three years of high school History, including Ancient History, 1 unit, Mediaeval and Modern European History, 1 unit, English History, 1 unit.

In addition to the above subjects, the value of which is 9, the candidates must be examined for five additional high school units upon subjects selected by him from the following list: (1) Latin (as many as four high school years allowed, valued at 4 units); (2) Greek (as many as three high school years allowed, valued at 3 units); (3) Modern Foreign Languages (as many as four high school years allowed, valued at 4 units); (4) Science: Chemistry, one high school year, 1 unit; Physics, one high school year, 1 unit; Botany, one high school year, 1 unit; Biology, one high school year, 1 unit; Physical Geography, one high school year, 1 unit; History of the United States, including Civics, one high school year, 1 unit."

It is to be hoped that the above standards of our Church in regard to the proper preparation of men for the ministry, as thus written into our law by the General Conference and interpreted by our highest authorities, will be carefully observed by all Committees and by all District and Annual Conferences. Surely it is small enough preparation to demand of men before the Church sends them out with her stamp of approval upon them, as teachers and leaders of the people, in the most delicate and responsible work of preaching the Gospel, that they shall have pursued their studies at least as far as a college boy, entering his freshman year. R. H. BENNETT, Sec'y,
Department Ministerial Supply and Training.

FROM SARDIS, MISS.

When this scribe had been here a short while, he was invited to a meeting of the stewards. This is something new under the sun. The preacher as a rule has to call his stewards together and frequently he has to urge them to attend. Not so here at Sardis. When I arrived at the place of meeting, I was greeted by a fine body of men, assembled to attend to the duties which the church has laid upon them. In the chair, presiding, was Captain D. G. Pepper, quite advanced in age, but alert and deeply interested in the affairs of his church. He has been faithful and true all of these years. He rarely ever misses the morning services. I also found among that body of men Brother Andrew Johnson, who erected the old church and also the present beautiful new structure. Brother Johnson is a faithful steward. Brother Carlton, a steward of long standing, a true and good man, was also in his place. The other members of the Board, active young men, are E. L. Howry, J. S. Wood, P. C. Wall, J. A. Arnold, W. H. Dorr and A. M. Ballentine. After a short time spent in pleasant conversation the brethren took up the business of the meeting and dispatched it with an earnest appreciation of its importance. After the regular business was attended to, the question of paying off the church debt of $1300, which had been running for some time, was discussed. Brother A. M. Ballentine was elected to bring the matter before the church and then make a personal canvass of the membership. Brother Ballentine joined the church last year, along with his splendid young sons, Robert Taylor and John Goff. He was elected a steward at the ensuing fourth quarterly conference. He went to work like an old hand, and in a few weeks reported that he had collected the entire $1300, and $357.91 over, which was needed to pay some other obligations. The church now can look the world in the face with the consciousness that it owes no one a cent. The church gave Brother Ballentine a vote of thanks for this splendid work. We feel that a man who can do such work has the promise of making a fine steward. In fact, we feel as if he were not a young steward, but an old one of the best type. These are as noble a set of men as it has ever been the pleasure of this pastor to be associated with. The outlook is very encouraging for a good year. We are looking expectantly to the coming of Brother McIntosh to be with us in a revival early in June. Our Sunday school is moving along nicely under the superintendency of Brother John W. Kyle, who is making a splendid superintendent. We have organized a Junior Epworth League of twenty-odd members. It is doing a great work among our young people. Sardis Station has a good record, and she expects to make this the best year of all.

W. D. WENDEL, Pastor.

Calomel To-Day, Sick To-Morrow

Dose of nasty calomel makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Mr. Editor: Please announce that the first session of the Hattiesburg District Conference will be held Tuesday afternoon, May 1, at 3 o'clock. The opening sermon will be on Tuesday night. The changing of the schedule of trains makes it convenient for the preachers and delegates who come from all directions to take the train which leaves Hattiesburg at 12:25 p. m., arriving at Purvis about 1 o'clock. Let all be present at the opening session; and please let the preachers be ready to make reports in a concise form.

A SACRED RELATION.

The relation between minister and congregation is one of the very highest pictures of human companionship that can be seen on earth. Its constant presence has given Christianity much of its noblest and sweetest color in all ages. It has much of the intimacy of the family, with something of the breadth and dignity that belongs to the State. It is too sacred to be thought of as a contract. It is a union which God joins together for purposes worthy of His care. When it is worthily realized, who can say that it may not stretch beyond the line of death, and they who have been minister and people to each other here be something holy and peculiar to each other in the City of God forever.—Brooks.

Physicians Explain Why Women Need More Iron in Their Blood Today Than 20 Years Ago

Say Anaemia --- Lack of Iron is Greatest Curse to the Health, Strength, Vitality and Beauty of the Modern American Woman.

Dr. Howard James, formerly Resident Physician of a New York City Hospital and Assistant Physician the Manhattan State Hospital of New York, says physicians should prescribe more organic iron--Nuxated Iron --to correct the great drain nature has placed upon women at certain periods and to supply the iron deficiency resulting from a demineralized diet now being served in thousands of homes. Opinions of Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author, and other physicians who have thoroughly tested the value of Nuxated Iron.

Any woman who tires easily, is nervous or irritable, or looks pale, haggard and worn should at once have her blood examined for iron deficiency—administration of simple Nuxated Iron will often increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, careworn women 100 per cent. in two weeks time.

"There can be no strong, healthy, beautiful, rosy-cheeked women without iron," says Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York Physician and Medical author. "In my recent talks to physicians on the grave and serious consequences of iron deficiency in the blood of American women, I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—nuxated iron—for their nervous, run-down, weak, haggard looking women patients. Paliormeans anaemia. The skin of an anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags, and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women the roses go from their cheeks.

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked are responsible for another grave iron loss. Therefore if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe old age you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

Dr. Howard James, formerly Resident Physician of a New York City Hospital and Assistant Physician the Manhattan State Hospital of New York, says: "In my opinion, organic iron is beyond question the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak or rundown instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants and alcoholic beverages, I am convinced that in this way they could ward off disease preventing it becoming organic, in thousands of cases and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous maladies. The real and true cause which started their disease was nothing more nor less than lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. A patient of mine remarked to me (after having been on a six weeks' course of Nuxated iron); 'Say Doctor, that there stuff is like magic.'

Previous to using Nuxated Iron, I had been prescribing the various mineral salts of iron for years, only to meet complaints of discolored teeth, disturbed digestion, tied-up, hardened secretions, etc., when I came across Nuxated Iron, an elegant ingenious preparation containing organic iron, which has no destructive action on the teeth—no corrosive effects on the stomach and which is readily assimilated into the blood and quickly makes its presence felt by increased vigor, snap and staying power.

"On account of the peculiar nature of woman, and the great drain placed upon her system at certain periods, she requires iron much more than men to help make up for the loss.

"If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of nuxated iron, three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. From my own experience with Nuxated Iron, I feel it is such a valuable remedy that it should be kept in every hospital and prescribed by every physician in this country."

Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston Physician, who has studied both in this country and great European Medical Institutions, says: "I am a great believer in Nuxated Iron, it often acts almost like magic. Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 20 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50, after taking nuxated iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But so many American women suffer from iron deficiency with its attendant ills—physical weakness, nervous irritability, melancholy, indigestion, flabby, sagging muscles, etc., etc., and in consequence of their weakened, run-down condition they are so liable to contract serious and even fatal diseases that I deem it my duty to advise such to take Nuxated Iron. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

Dr. T. Alphonsus Wallace, a physician of many years' experience in this country and who has been given many honorary titles in England, says: "I do not make a practice of recommending advertised medicinal products, but I have found Nuxated Iron so potent in nervous, run-down conditions, that I believe all should know of it. The men and women of today need more iron in their blood than was the case twenty or thirty years ago. This because of the demineralized diet which now is served daily in thousands of homes and also because of the demand for greater resistance necessary to offset the greater number of health hazards to be met at every turn."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

THE CHILD'S APPEAL

"Mother, why don't you take NUXATED IRON and be strong and well and have nice rosy cheeks instead of being so nervous and irritable all the time and looking so haggard and old-The doctor gave some to Susie Smith's mother and she was worse off than you are and now she looks years younger nd feels just fine."

WHAT IS YOUR ANSWER?

You can tell the women with plenty of iron in their blood-beautiful healthy rosy cheeked women full of Life, Vim and Vitality - while those who lack iron are often cross, nervous, irritable, weak, tired, complaining creatures whom nobody wants to have around.

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 64—No. 18. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3193.

"If you think your Church the best,
Tell her so;
If you'd have her lead the rest,
Help her grow."

One of the things that Southern Methodism is suffering for the lack of, is denominational "spinality." This is saying nothing against Christian fraternity and co-operation, in which we heartily believe.

* * *

The Lafourche Comet, published at Thibodaux, La., has the following motto on its first page: "Unless God is with us, all our labors are in vain." Pretty good for a secular paper. or for any other, for that matter.

* * *

In his essay, "Some Aspects of Robert Burns," Robert Louis Stevenson thus refers to the Scotch bard, who he says was "not devoted to religion, but haunted by it:" "At a touch of sickness he prostrated himself before God in what I call only unmanly penitence." This is not a bad characterization of "penitence" that comes only with the arrival of trouble and departs with it.

St. John was "in the Spirit on the Lord's day" when he was given his glorious vision of the ascended Christ and the heavenly world. Few would fail to have inspiring visions if succeeding Sundays should thus find them. The risen and living Savior has not ceased to manifest himself to the soul that sincerely and earnestly seeks communion with him. Such manifestations are mysterious, but they are not less real on that account.

A contemporary says: "The Moody Bible Institute has been called 'the West Point of Christian service.'" That institution is indeed, if we are correctly informed, doing a noble and telling work for the cause of true Christianity. It has been for years our conviction that more schools of that type are needed—schools which have as their definite aim the making of efficient toilers for the Master with the least possible delay, and which are not top-heavy with surplusage.

What lost men and women most need, especially in civilized lands, is not more knowledge, though that might in many respects help them; but a new life and strength imparted to the soul. This energizing, transforming, lifting power of Christianity has ever been, and is, its crowning glory. However excellent may be its teachings, apart from this power, there is no saving efficacy in them. The Gospel is effective only when accompanied by the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. Never was there a vainer attempt than that of trying to induct men into the Kingdom of Christ by means of education alone. Paul declared: "The world by wisdom knew not God;" nor will it ever thus come to a knowledge of him. The great Apostle made much of the Power that wrought in the hearts of men, and so should we in this day. That only can lead human beings along the path of conviction, penitence, faith, and confession into light and life.

THE CASE CLEARLY STATED.

The following from The Independent (New York) is so clear a setting forth of an important matter, that we take pleasure in passing it on:

"We must eliminate every ounce of waste and extravagance that we can.

"We must save food by abolishing drink.

"Drink is made from food. Beer is made from barley and sugar; whiskey from rye or corn. What we drink we cannot have to eat.

"England cut her production of beer in half and saved five hundred and seventy million pounds of barley, seventy-two million pounds of sugar, and thirty-three million pounds of other grain products a year.

"If the United States were to cut its consumption of drink only in half, enough breadstuffs would be saved to provide eleven million loaves of bread a day.

"In this great national crisis, shall men drink or women and children eat?"

THE QUESTION OF PERSONALITIES.

There seems to be an idea abroad that to discuss with disapproval the public utterances or records of persons in the Church, calling their names in doing so, without abuse or an impeachment of their motives, is indulging in improper personalities. In our opinion, this notion is without justification and the dominance of it is calculated to result in great harm to the sacred interests of the Divine Kingdom. Of course, malignant personalities, born of unworthy motives, are always out of place in religious journals, but all direct and pointed discussion does not by any means rightly come under this head.

If an individual occupying an important position in the Church is publicly sending forth unsound teaching or is inaugurating policies that are harmful in their effects, if his name may not be called and the responsibility fastened upon him for these things, this of course being done in a decorous manner, how are such evils to be effectively combated and the welfare of Zion adequately safeguarded? To proceed upon the supposition that all entrusted with the exercise of public functions in the Church are all that they ought to be in every respect, and that their deliverances and doings ought never to be specifically called in question in the public prints, is to assume what every sensible man knows is not true and to move upon a plane of false idealism which is fraught with grave perils. All Churches have in them large elements not soundly spiritual that have representation in their official life; and even if this were not so, human fallibility would still open the way for grave mistakes that need to be corrected.

The safety of the Church, as well as of the State, must be found in an amenability to moral and enlightened public sentiment. Perhaps nothing has contributed so much to the corruption of Roman Catholicism as the stifling of public discussion concerning its affairs upon the part of those who know its inner workings, and, in our judgment, there is a trend in this direction in Protestantism which is not wholesome. We are inclined to think that it would be a salutary thing if every denomination had at least two or three entirely independent periodicals, under the direction of well-poised, true, and fearless men. In the very nature of the case, any kind of official organ is under more or less restraint.

AN APPEALING NEED.

Dr. J. A. Hardin, of this city, Vice President of the National Medical Association, is reported to have given out a few days ago the following figures:

"Six hundred thousand of the present Negro population of the United States will die of tuberculosis, though of this number 150,000 might with proper care and attention be saved. It is estimated that 450,000 Negroes are ill all the time, and that of the deaths among them 45 per cent are preventable. The loss in potential earnings from sickness and deaths annually is set down at $75,000,000, and the expenditure for funerals at $15,000,000."

Here is undoubtedly a wide-open door of opportunity for the Southern people. Both the States and Churches of the South should bestir themselves to better the condition of the colored population of this section. This is a duty that we should not dare to shirk. We hope to see the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, address herself immediately to this task much more energetically than she has yet done. We must do so.

But the plea of the Northern Methodists that the Negroes of the South can only be effectively helped by taking them into the same Church with the whites cannot be justified by a study of the facts. We cannot now go fully into details, but in proof of this affirmation we submit the few following figures:

There are only two white Churches in the United States that have any considerable number of colored members, namely, the Seventh Day Adventists, with 514,571 communicants, with property holdings estimated at $12,107,655; and the Methodist Episcopal Church (North), with 308,551 communicants, holding property to the amount of $6,104,379. (These figures are from United States Government Church Census of 1906.)

Over against these figures stand those of some of the leading independent Negro Churches, viz.:

	Members	Property
Baptists — National Convention	3,789,898	$15,191,422
Colored Primitive Baptists	2,261,607	24,432,272
A. M. E. Church	620,000	11,303,489
A. M. E. Zion Church	568,608	4,833,207
C. M. E. Church	240,798	3,500,000

In the light of these statistics, is it not perfectly obvious that the best way to assist the Negroes is to help them to forge ahead for themselves? And in the face of this showing, is it any wonder that the colored members of the Northern Methodist Church seemed to feel humiliated over Dr. Edgar Blake's suggestion that they were not competent to have turned entirely over to them the $6,000,000 or $7,000,000 worth of church property that they are now permitted to use?

PRAY, GIVE, GO.

By Annie Johnson Flint.

Three things the Master hath to do,
And we who serve Him here below
And long to see His kingdom come
May pray it give it go.

He needs them all—the open hand,
The willing feet, the asking heart:
To work together and to weave
The threefold cord that will not part.

Nor shall the giver count his gift
As greater than the worker's deed,
Nor he in turn his service boast
Above the prayers that voice the need.

Not all can go; not all can give
To arm the others for the fray;
But young or old, or rich or poor,
Or strong or weak—we all can pray

NON EST.

A "nominal Christian," indeed! Is there such a thing? Who cares to consult a "nominal doctor," or buy a suit of a "nominal tailor," or eat a dinner prepared by a "nominal cook?" Just how far could one travel on a "nominal train," and how much money would we care to keep in a "nominal bank?" A "nominal Christian" is no Christian at all.—The Christian Herald.

WHAT IS WORSHIP?

"To sit quiet in a pew in the house of God is not all of worship. A man's body may be in a pew and his mind and heart be a thousand miles away. Worship is concentration. Body, mind, soul fixed on God, communing with God, that is true worship. The Spirit comes into the heart of the worshiper, and brings the things of God to him. He prays, and praises, and becomes conscious of God. The truth is applied by the spirit to the individual heart, and the worshiper becomes conscious that he has been sitting in a heavenly place with Jesus Christ."

A DANGEROUS TREND.

"It seems the fashion nowadays to own as Christians those who deny the very foundations of Christianity. It is a very popular notion that, provided people are moral, amiable, benevolent, charitable and philanthropic, it is of very small consequence what they believe. Life is better than creed or dogma, we are told. All this sounds very plausible; but the reader may rest assured that the direct tendency of all this manner of speech and line of argument is to get rid of the Bible, rid of the Holy Ghost, rid of Christ, rid of God. Let him bear this in mind and seek to keep close to the precious Word of God. Let him treasure that Word in his heart and give himself more and more to the prayerful study of it."

"JESUS, LOVER OF MY SOUL."

In the message based upon this hymn, the author tells of a sinful, conscience-stricken man who came to him for help, and then adds, "I might have told him to turn over a new leaf, to forget the past, to stop wrongdoing, to try to do right, to love the beautiful, not to believe that there was anything called 'sin' in the world, to be saved by character.' There are many in these modern days who would have thus advised him. But following such advice would not make this man free and give him a pure heart and a clear conscience. So I directed him to flee straight to the arms of Jesus, the Savior."—Robert Elmer Smith, in Modern Messages from Great Britain.

"Are you discouraged? Then get closer to the Master and let the courage of Christ strengthen your soul."

"The greatest hindrance to the progress of the chariot wheels of the Kingdom of God is man's indifference."

DR. WALLACE ON UNIFICATION.

By Rev. C. A. Battle.

Dr. J. J. Wallace, a member of the Joint Commission on Unification from the Northern Church, and the editor of the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate, in an editorial on "The Crux of Unification" appearing April 12, arbitrarily assumes that the unification movement has gone so far that the situation is rendered impossible of other solution than the actual uniting of the Churches. He peremptorily states that "we can now draw back only to the perdition of unwholesome controversy and unfraternal recrimination." But, on the contrary, the actions of the two General Conferences have been so conservative and guarded on this question that a breaking off of negotiations would be as feasible as their continuation. No official act has been committed without forethought and prudence, most of the leaders being entirely cognizant of the fact that unification is a stupendous matter, with great liability of failure, and the way has been purposely kept open for a recession to normal conditions without injury. It is true that other individuals, along with Dr. Wallace, have undertaken to precipitate the status of affairs to the point of embarrassment in favor of unification, which action has had the undesirable effect upon many of causing them to believe that the actual amalgamation of the denominations to be absolutely essential. Why should there be, in case unification is found impossible, a withdrawal to the "perdition" of unwholesome controversy and recrimination? The unification movement may have a pleasant effect in failure if it is proven thereby that each Church realizes the difficulties of the other and determines upon a more salutary and helpful course in regard to its neighbor. Unwholesome controversy and recrimination certainly cannot be justified because the unification movement is found impossible.

It is evident from Dr. Wallace's utterance that, however much he may favor unification, even so-ing, as he does, so far as to say it is "an imperative demand of the age, of the kingdom of God and the teaching and spirit of Jesus Christ," he is unwilling for it to proceed along other lines than those laid down by the General Conference of the Northern Methodist Church. After voicing the sentiment that if the Negro question were settled (to which the writer cannot subscribe) the accomplishment of unification would be possible, he endeavors to demonstrate the necessity of the Northern plan of unification upon the ground that the Negro must be included in the united Church, because a Church cannot bear even the mark of one of the branches of the "holy catholic Church" if what it has to offer men does not tend to make them one. This is very high ground indeed which Dr. Wallace has taken; it smacks of the sentiments of popery, for he withdraws from the field of the reasonably expedient and hides behind the cloak of religion to marshal his forces in favor of Church unification. He states that the "crucial difficulty" is the "inclusion in the one fellowship of members of two distinct races which have had certain very definite and well-known relations to each other." The economic, social, and political relations of the races have heightened race consciousness from his view-point, but both races must bear the "cross" of this "one fellowship." This is just the attitude Northern Methodism has assumed all along, and the cross-of-the-one-fellowship plea of Dr. Wallace is his manner of expressing the Northern view that the Negro must not be eliminated from the proposed Church of the future.

But it may be evident that this one fellowship, which is here regarded as so essential, would not be such a great "cross" to the Negro, for it is scarcely on record where he has objected to a close social affiliation with his white brethren. To read after Dr. R. E. Jones, the (Negro) editor of the Southwestern Christian Advocate, published at New Orleans, it appears that the "cross" to his race would be manifest in extinguishing this hope for the future. Not until the "crack of doom," he remarks, will the Negro consent to being placed in another Church from the whites. In an article entitled "White and Black," appearing some time ago in the Central Christian Advocate, Kansas City, Dr. Jones said that "no one deprecates the existence of sectional and race lines, in our common Methodism, more than the Negro, and no one class of the Methodist hosts is more anxious for the obliteration of these lines than the Negro himself." What can be Dr. Jones' meaning when he declares in the same article: "The Negro has all to gain and nothing to lose in the abolishing of sectional lines and in the uprooting of sectional feeling—just as he profited by the doctrine, 'One and inseparable, now and forever,' so will he profit by the reconciliation of the once antagonistic and inharmonious forces in our common Methodism?" (The writer's italics.)

Dr. Wallace endeavors to deduce, from the fact that the attitude of both Northern and Southern Methodism has been that of kindness to the Negro, that he should be included in the unified Church. While one may readily determine that the Church, North, could assume no other position because the Negro is already included in its fold, it by no means follows that the Church, South, should be characterized by such a mind. Dr. Wallace refers to the activity of Bishop William Capers, of the Southern Church, in reference to the Negro; and it is true, the South is proud to say, that he was the founder of missions to the black man. But Bishop Capers died in 1855 and his name cannot be used as an argument to embrace the Negro in the same organization on an equal social standing with the Southern white people; he did not live to see the Negro a freedman. Bishop Capers was a true friend to the Negro; and many think to-day that the majority of the Negro's well-wishers dwell below the Mason and Dixon line. As quoted by Dr. Wallace, Bishop Hoss did say at the Northern Methodist General Conference of 1900 that he was "profoundly sorry that circumstances which at least seemed to be beyond our control made it impossible for us to engage directly in the further work of evangelizing the colored people," but the writer personally knows that Bishop Hoss was speaking of the gulf which for a time was erected by the Civil War and the Reconstruction period between the Southern people and the Negro, and that he did not mean to say that the Southern Church had pursued the wrong course in reference to the colored man, or that the plan of the Southern Church in dealing with him was less desirable than that of the Northern Church. The attitude of the two Methodisms in respect to the Negro was never more at variance than now. The Southern Methodist Church, as a unit, recognizes the true social conditions existing in its midst; and it knows it would be a suicidal policy to inaugurate a scheme wherein the Negro would be included in its organic fold such as exists in the Church, North. It is sheer folly for those who do not know Southern conditions to advise the Church, South, relative to its attitude in this direction; the fact that the Southern people as a whole stand absolutely together on the question is the highest testimony that prejudice and preconceived combinations have nothing to do with the conditions. It is the matter of a superior race saving itself from retrogression by being blended with an inferior race.

In the North, however, it is remembered that many of the States have no miscegenation laws; black and white people are actually married to each other, and the races are being legally blended. This condition is undoubtedly attributable to the fact that the fewness of Negroes render the situation of less importance than in the South; but, nevertheless, it seems to furnish the attitude of judgment of the South by those who reside in Northern latitudes. Dr. Jones states in his article to which previous reference was made: "The Methodist Episcopal Church has been doing work among the colored people in the South. The men and women who have gone South have entered into a most friendly and brotherly relation with our people, preaching the truth, teaching the ignorant, advising in many ways, and they have eaten and slept in our cabins, but we do not know of a single marriage that has grown out of this relation." (The writer's italics.) It is a problem to imagine that so astute a Negro as Dr. Jones has overlooked the fact that laws prohibiting miscegenation are rigidly enforced in the South and that such a marriage as he has referred to is beyond the realms of possibility. Some of the words of Dr. Jones just quoted bear out the testimony of Dr. W. W. Sweet, of De Pauw University, which he made at the famous Evanston Conference of 1916: "Most of those who went South were sincere and unselfish, though perhaps many of them were overzealous, and much overestimated the Negro." (The writer's italics.) To further demonstrate the fact that it will not cost the Northern Church anything to include the Negro in the unified organization, the words of Dr. W. T. Perrin, a minister of prominence in that Church, recently appearing in Zion's Herald, may be quoted: "Mrs. Perrin and myself, sorry for those under bondage to race prejudice or insistent social customs, have been happily free to entertain in our homes Christian gentlemen without regard to color. At our family gathering, in another home, on last Thanksgiving Day, as heretofore for years, there sat at the table with us a colored person without any consciousness on the part of any one of any distinction on account of complexion."

In his zeal to advance reasons why the Southern Church might allow the Negro to be embraced in a unified organization, thereby waging his fight for unification, but according to the Northern plan alone, Dr. Wallace makes the statement that the Southern Church has "not a few colored people in the membership of her white churches." The writer spent his boyhood days in Georgia, some time in Tennessee, and the last decade in Louisiana, but he has never seen a single Negro member of the Southern Methodist Church, nor has he heard any one testify to having seen one since the organization of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. It is very probable that a few of the old Negroes, loyal and true to pure Southern ideals and instincts, together with their families, remained for a while members of the white Church, but at the present time the colored membership is unquestionably nil. Expressions from prominent Southern Methodist leaders lead the writer to this conviction as to the present status relative to this subject.

There are some evidences that the Northern Methodist Church has never had much faith in the unification movement, and that it has put forth little effort to really bring it to pass. Dr. Wallace, just after writing his opinion that the unification movement depended for success or failure upon the solution of the Negro question by the Joint Commission, takes the position of his Church that the colored man must be included in the unified organization, and says it will be against the spirit of the kingdom of God if he is excluded. He therefore assumes that unification is essential, calls it sinful to defeat it, but is unwilling to depart from his own platform an iota, and lays all the blame of failure at the doors of Southern Methodism. Along with others, Dr. Wallace has fallen into the fallacy of thinking outward unification is essential to unity of heart in following Christ. Would that the day might dawn when real Christian unity would sweep over the Churches by storm! Then would be apparent the futility of these feeble efforts to bring it to pass by a forced outward union.

Dr. Wallace tacitly admits the existence of a race problem in the South by advancing the plan of the Northern Church, to which he tenaciously holds, to place the Negroes in a Regional Conference by themselves and in this manner prevent actual contact between the races socially. The 350,000 Negroes of the Northern Church would soon swell into a million or more when other Methodist denominations of like color were gathered in. When the Southern section of the unified organization became thoroughly cognizant of the great representation of Negroes in the law-making body, that portion of the Church would soon be depopulated to swell the membership of other denominations. Even if this knowledge failed to bring about such an effect, which is unbelievable, encroachments along the line of favors to the Negro would naturally follow in time because of his large representation, backed by the preponderance of sentiment in his favor in the North. Nothing but the complete dissolution of the Church in the South could follow. To include the Negro in the unified Church in any manner would soon result in the same conclusions, for immediately when the status of his membership were fixed, however powerless it might be, plans would be begun to be formulated for his elevation therein.

In contravention of the statement of Dr. Wallace that the movement of Methodist unification is in accordance with the spirit of the age, it may be stated that economic or industrial affairs do seem to have a tendency in the direction of combines and trusts, but it may be noted that executives and legislative bodies have in many instances realized the unfairness of such movements and prevented such by the heavy hand of the law. It also may be said that the Roman Church seems to show no spirit of unifying with other denominations; the Greek Catholics are imperturbed; the Baptist Churches in America are pursuing the even tenor of their ways; the Presbyterian Churches evince little desire apparently for further outward unification, and many other instances of denominational fidelity may be brought to his mind as the reader will reflect.

GOD'S MORAL GOVERNMENT.

I think I rightly interpret the teaching of the Scriptures when I say that the fundamental teaching of Hebrew prophecy is concerned with revealing to mankind the fact that God is dealing with the nations of earth through the power of moral law, governing in His universe, and that man must reckon with that law, whether or not he chooses to do so. Man's failure to reckon with that law will inevitably lead to the destruction both of the individual and the nation.

The prophecy of Obadiah teaches a two-fold lesson, from which a third may be deduced, which three lessons I believe it would be well for us to meditate upon in these days of international strife and bloodshed.

I.

This is God's world and, ultimately, God's kingdom of RIGHTEOUSNESS will be established hereon. The fact that God is working but slowly toward the establishing of His kingdom of righteousness upon the earth is no argument against the teaching that His kingdom of righteousness will one day dominate human affairs. All human authority is delegated authority from God, for the exercise of which man must at some time account to God, though apparently there is no authority on earth beyond that of human origin. Howsoever impregnably the vendors of unrighteousness may fancy themselves established against overthrow, the time is approaching, though slowly, when the judgments of God will be pronounced and executed against all who are exercised by the spirit of unrighteousness. "Though thou exalt thyself as the eagle and though thou set thyself among the stars; thence will I bring thee down, saith the Lord." The one and only hope from the ultimate doom that God holds out to individuals and nations who violate moral law, is repentance from all unrighteousness and aggressive reconciliation with righteousness. Though God hates sin, He loves the sinner-man and desires to save him from ultimate destruction; hence his offer of salvation through Jesus Christ. Though the prophet makes God say, "Jacob have I loved, and Esau have I hated," he does not mean to convey the thought that God arbitrarily loves and hates human beings, without thought of their chosen attitude toward his moral government; but God hates men because of their intelligent, willful defiance of RIGHT.

II.

Wrong done to mankind is sin against God's moral government; therefore, all unrighteousness must ultimately become a boomerang to persons exercised thereby, save as a merciful God intervenes in behalf of repentant sinners. Wicked men imagine because the widow, the orphan and other helpless individuals, have no visible means of recourse against those who wrong them, that, therefore, one can with impunity oppress and otherwise sin against the defenseless of earth; but all such are but deluded mortals who are being led to ultimate destruction by authority of the righteous moral law governing in God's world. These deceived mortals imagine that sin is a great asset, but ultimately sin becomes a liability of such weight that all persons exercised thereby are crushed beneath the accumulating, unbearable load, except they repent and become reconciled to God's moral order.

III.

The moral character of a community, or nation, is determined by the public opinion governing therein. Public opinion is formed by the majority attitude of aggressive individuals toward God's moral law. Selfishness leads one to think that so long as one's own life is clean from unrighteousness, one is not responsible for the unrighteousness obtaining in one's community or nation; but Hebrew prophecy teaches truth directly contrary to that thought. Through the teaching of Scripture God has ever attempted to drill into the mind of mankind the truth that our talents and delegated human authority are entrusted to us that we may exercise the same for the advancement of God's kingdom of righteousness on earth. This is a truth that is alike applicable to all individuals of the human family. Scripture teaches the principle that all governments should exist with the consent of the governed. This principle being true, we are individually responsible, according to our light and power, for the public opinion obtaining in our community and nation. According to this teaching, that runs all through the Scriptures, it is not enough for an individual to be personally clean from all unrighteousness. The fact is, passive righteousness may degrade into the most refined kind of selfishness. For one may keep one's self clean from all personal unrighteousness, yet profit through the unrighteousness of others, which unrighteousness one has only not to see. The righteousness that Jesus implants in human hearts is AGGRESSIVE RIGHTEOUSNESS, which is pledged to the destruction of every form of unrighteousness, without fear, favor, or compromise. Passive righteousness receives but little, if any, persecution for righteousness' sake. But aggressive righteousness is the target against which all evil-doers launch their missiles, because such righteousness is pledged to the destruction of all institutions that are fattening upon depraved human beings. As individuals we stand guiltless before God's moral law only as we have been active in behalf of aggressive righteousness, according to the light of truth known to us. Love is the dominating principle of aggressive righteousness; therefore, love is the fulfilling of the law.

Greenville, Miss. J. TILLERY LEWIS.

TURNING ANOTHER LEAF.

The thirty-fifth fiscal year of the Board of Church Extension closed on March 31, 1917. The books have been closed, the auditor has done his work and made his report, and the Church may be interested in some facts and figures concerning the year's business.

1. The total receipts for the year are $638,148.31, as against $571,107.79 for last year.

2. The receipts on the assessment are $222,302.33, as against $205,112.41 for last year.

3. The receipts on specials amount to $60,191.34, as against $56,963.78 for last year.

4. The addition to the loan fund capital is $171,832.91, as against $133,192.89 last year, making the total loan fund capital $976,461.99, which amount is $23,538.01 short of the $1,000,000 goal fixed for the quadrennium ending March 31, 1918, by the last General Conference.—W. F. McMurry, Corresponding Secretary.

MY WISH.

May every soul that touches mine,
Be it the slightest contact, get therefrom some good,
Some little grace, one kindly thought,
One aspiration yet unfelt, one bit of courage
For the darkening sky, one gleam of faith
To brave the thickening ills of life,
One glimpse of brighter skies beyond the gathering mists,
To make this life worth while,
And Heaven a surer heritage. —Anon.

Church News

Bishop W. A. Candler will preach the Commencement sermon of Wofford College on June 3.

Candler College, located in Havana, Cuba, is reported to be having the best session in its history.

The Commencement sermon of Lander College (South Carolina) will be preached by Bishop J. H. McCoy on May 27.

Bishop James Atkins is stated to be somewhat run down physically as a result of strenuous work. His physicians have advised a lessening of his labors for a time.

It has been announced that Drs. Sledd and Smart, of the Candler School of Theology, will be on a leave of absence during the next term of that institution.

A Cuban correspondent of one of our weekly contemporaries states that the objection to Bishop Murrah's sermons on the occasion of his recent visit to Cuba was that "their ends were too close together."

An effort will be made to have the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church meet in the First Presbyterian Church of this city—Dr. E. M. Palmer's Church—in 1918. The General Assembly this year will meet in Birmingham, Ala.

Rev. J. E. Wray, who is known to many in this section of the Church, was recently convicted in Florida of sending obscene literature through the mails. This is a most pathetic case. Despite the decision of the court to the contrary, we are disposed to think that Mr. Wray is unbalanced mentally.

Dr J. H. Jowett has resigned the pastorate of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City, to become pastor of Westminster Chapel, London, England, left vacant by the resignation of Dr. G. Campbell Morgan. It has been said that even King George has been concerned to have Dr. Jowett return to England.

Dr. Bradfield, Editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, recently referred to the Lamar School of Law of Emory University as Southern Methodism's only Law School. If he meant that there is no other law school maintained by our Church, Dr. Bradfield was in error. Millsaps College has a Law Department which has a highly creditable record.

The next session of the Woman's Missionary Council will go to Louisville, Ky., but we think that if good speaking had been the determining factor in the selection of a meeting-place, it would have gone to Huntington, West Virginia. The ladies representing the Western Virginia Conference certainly presented their claims in a brilliant and impressive manner.

Archbishop Blenk, of the New Orleans Diocese of the Roman Catholic Church, died in this city on Friday, April 20, after an extended illness. He was born on July 28, 1856, at Neustadt, Bavaria, and was brought to New Orleans when an infant. He was the youngest of sixteen children, and was a twin, his brother born at the same time dying at the age of six months. He was made Bishop of Porto Rico in 1899, and Archbishop of New Orleans in 1906. He was distinguished as a reformer, having strongly opposed race horse gambling and other evils in the city. The body was interred in the St. Louis Cathedral.

REV. FELIX ROBERTSON HILL, D.D.—A WORD TO HIS MEMORY.

By Rev. Payton A. Sowell.

To-day, in a New Orleans daily, my heart was saddened when my eye fell on the caption of an article—"Rev. Dr. Hill Is Dead." While I had entertained fears that the end of his journey was not far off, I had been relieved by the hopeful news which lately had gone out to the public.

In 1870, in Pulaski, Tenn., I first saw him and heard him preach. His form was as erect and elastic as an Indian's; his locks were as black as the raven's; his voice was mellow and filled with pathos. He preached in the old Methodist Church one night of the Conference, in the pulpit he had filled only one or two years before, and where he had enjoyed a fruitful ministry. During that ministry, Jno. G. Gibson, among a vast number of others, was converted and became a most acceptable and successful preacher, and a valued member of the Tennessee Conference. Although forty-seven years (next October) have passed, I recall his text and the current thought of his sermon. He used the old-time, thrilling passage, "The Spirit and the bride say, come," etc. And this evangelistic theme well illustrated the character of his life-time messages. He did not strain after the novel, but his efforts were to win men to a Christian life.

Dr. Hill was well born; his grandfather, James Robertson, born in North Carolina, came through the wilderness in 1779 to the place where Nashville, Tenn., is now situated. His grandmother, in company with the other women related to the adventurers, under the protection of John Donelson and Chas. Robertson, descended, in flatboats, the Holston and Tennessee Rivers—the voyage was most perilous—to the mouth of the Tennessee River, thence going up the Ohio to the Cumberland, and up that River to Nashville. General James Robertson was one of the most conspicuous actors in the settlement of Tennessee. His wife was Miss Charlotte Reeves, and they were members of the first Methodist society organized in Nashville, Tenn.

Dr. Hill was born and reared, converted, educated, and entered the Methodist ministry in Nashville. He was a Methodist itinerant for at least 57 years; and, so far as I know, he was a supernumerary for only about eighteen months of these years. He soon rose to notice and was gladly received in the strongest churches of the Tennessee Conference. He later served the largest churches in other Conferences—in Mobile, Kansas City, St. Louis, Baltimore, Louisville, Shreveport, and New Orleans. He was widely known in the Church as a remarkably successful pastor. He was a most lovable man and minister. His last service was a heroic work in rebuilding the Felicity Street Church of New Orleans, after its destruction by a storm. He was a winner of souls, and his crown doubtless glitters with the stars he won to Christ.

He ought not to be forgotten, but this is a busy, forgetful world. His spirit was optimistic. He was cheerful and full of hope until he passed into the shadows. Personally, after an acquaintance of 47 years, I shall miss him the rest of the way, and my heart is sad. I enjoyed him so much last winter, while I was in New Orleans, and have been lonely without him this winter; and now my tear-dimmed eyes shall see him no more. I was so enfeebled last winter, and his step was so much more elastic than mine, that I thought I should cease the journey before he did. He needed to take the tender advice he gave me—"Rest." Had he rested sooner, he would perhaps have been with us now. He must have a large acquaintanceship in heaven. What a welcome he must have received from Tennesseans and others in heaven when his spirit reached the celestial shores—Green, Pitts, Riggs, McFerrin, Baldwin, Cullom, Paine, McTyeire, and hundreds and thousands of preachers and laymen from Tennessee, Alabama, Maryland, Missouri, Kentucky, and Louisiana, doubtless being there to greet him!

Somehow—I hope it is pardonable in me—I desire to see his body carried to Nashville, to rest in the soil of the State to which his grandparents came to settle in 1779, and the State in which he himself was born.

New Orleans, La.

ROOM FOR ALL.

This writer does not care to compete with Brother Ramsey in personalities, neither interesting nor edifying to the readers of the Advocate. Perhaps I should say that if in using the word "loyal" in commenting on Brother Ramsey's record I used the wrong word and proved more than I really cared to or felt, it was he himself who first used it. I am sure "skim-milk" loyalty never was born in my brain. If he was offended at the use of it, he should have blamed himself for having instituted comparison between his loyalty and mine. So much for personalities.

However, with reference to the International Sunday School Association, I beg leave to add a few words. First, my statement that Methodists paid 43 per cent of the Association's budget in 1916-17 was not a mere assertion. It was based on facts obtained from the books of Mr. Z. D. Davis at Jackson, which are open to anybody. The new budget made up at the last Convention shows that our people are paying 47 per cent for 1917-18. Brother Ramsey admits that his statement about 75 per cent was a mere assertion. Mine was not. Will Brother Ramsey be fair enough to admit one mistake?

Secondly, Brother Ramsey seeks to evade the fact that he is using the uniform lessons of the International Association in his Sunday school by asking if I did not know we had the Graded Lessons now. I will answer by saying, "Yes; and if he will borrow him a copy, he will find that they also are 'tarred with the same stick,' for they are marked Graded Lessons—International Course, and come through the same committee." They are merely printed by Smith & Lamar, as all the other lessons that we use are.

Personally (and I censure no man who differs with me), I rejoice that there are some great movements in which we may enter together, and in which we may catch the inspiration of men of all denominations. We ought to hold on to such an organization as a privilege in which not only we may profit, but also in which the world may understand that we are brethren. There is no lack of denominational movements. We think every day in Methodist language and institutions. Should we not rejoice in one where we may work together? I think so. I have often noticed that our laymen love to find their own churches lined up with others in common movements for the common good. Methodists have never been afraid to stand beside others and have always carried their own end.

In this Sunday school movement, doubtless there ought to be adjustment and division of labor, but there ought not to be friction or jealousy, as if when others prosper we suffer. That never was true.

By the way, I did not say anything about anybody being an "utter failure." I can not imagine why Brother Ramsey thought of such a thing.

I am not willing to boast of how many people have been saved in my ministry—their names are written in Heaven. But it is not well to belittle the great benevolent interests of the Church by calling the preachers "tax-gatherers." I beg Brother Ramsey to remember that the superannuated minister, the preacher who serves a mission, and the man and woman out on the foreign field, may feel like these financial interests are fairly important. These may be little matters, but Christ has a blessing for him who is faithful in "that which is least." I do not know why, but whenever, early in the year, I have remitted my assessment for "Conference Claimants" or "Domestic Missions," I fall asleep with my heart as happy as if I had been to a revival. And when the check for Foreign Missions has gone forward, I feel that some Livingstone is saying, "I go down; you hold the ropes." Yes, "a tax-gatherer," if you please, but "a tax-gatherer" for Christ's sake, and I had as soon fall anywhere else as here.

I know it is felt that there are some charges where the assessments cannot be raised. Perhaps so. But I would not decide that until Conference morning had dawned and I had to leave without them. At any rate, there is not a charge in Mississippi where the people are not able to pay them, and it wont help them to belittle these claims. There are plenty of people who prefer a revival to a collection.

The hardest of my appointments have been as hard as the hardest of Brother Ramsey's, but when the "large and growing number of preachers and people" who think as he thinks elect him Bishop, I will take the appointment he names for me, and report, "Everything in full, Bishop," when Conference meets and he presides.

Until then adieu,

Meridian, Miss. H. B. WATKINS.

Because of existing conditions throughout the country, the opening of the Mississippi Centennial Exposition at Gulfport has been changed from December 10, 1917, to February 22, 1919.

It is reported that the Italian Government is planning to send a Commission to the United States for special purposes, and that it will include the Duke of the Abruzzi, a cousin of the king, and William Marconi.

The Wisconsin State Senate expelled a Socialist member a few days ago for unpatriotic and disloyal remarks made when a resolution was under consideration to have 50,000 copies of President Wilson's "state of war" message to Congress printed and distributed.

According to the press dispatches, seven nations are asking financial assistance of the United States at the present time, viz: Great Britain, France, Italy, Russia, Belgium, Cuba, and Haiti. Ours is by far the richest nation that has ever existed in the world's history.

President Wilson has decided to send a Commission to Russia with a view to ascertaining the needs of that country and how the United States can best give it assistance. This Commission will be headed by Hon. Elihu Root, the well known lawyer, statesman, and diplomat.

There are several unknown factors in the present great war which it make it difficult to form an intelligent opinion as to its probable future course. Among these, pehaps the most outstanding are: (1) The internal situation in Russia; (2) the extent of the disaffection in Germany; (3) the gravity of the submarine menance.

It is said that 354 graduates of Tulane University, according to a canvass conducted by Prof. W. B. Gregory, are willing to enlist for military service without restriction; that 389 have offered to volunteer at a later date, and that 62 declined to pledge for enlistment. Of the women graduates, it is stated that two-thirds have offered their assistance.

A Louisville (Ky.) ordinance making provision for the segregation of the white and black races is now before the Supreme Court of the United States to have its constitutionality passed upon. Attorneys representing Negro societies appeared in the case. On the one side, it is contended that it runs amuck of the Amendment to the Federal Constitution forbidding discriminations on account of "race, color, or previous condition of servitude; on the other, it is held, that it applies alike to whites and blacks, neither being able to reside in the area assigned the other race, and that it makes for peace and good order.

War Commissioners from England and France are now in Washington to confer with the authorities of our Government concerning the prevailing world war. The principal representatives of the former country are Hon. A. J. Balfour, Foreign Secretary of the present British Cabinet; Lord Cunliff, Governor of the Bank of England; Lieutenant General Bridges, of the British Army, and Admiral De Chair, of the British Navy. The French delegation is headed by Hon. Rene Vivlani, Vice Premier and Minister of Justice, and General Joffre, the famous soldier. Invitations from a number of organizations of this city and from the Mayor to visit New Orleans have been extended to the French Commission, and to Marshal Joffre in particular.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT AND QUARTO-CENTENNIAL.

From a personal letter from Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, we extract the following:

The Commencement Sermon of Millsaps College will be delivered in the College Chapel at 11 o'clock a.m., May 27, by Dr. J. W. Lee, of St. Louis, and Dr. S. A. Steel, of Shreveport, La., will preach the sermon before the Young Men's Christian Association at the evening hour on the same day. The Board of Trustees will meet at 9 o'clock a. m. on Monday, May 28. The exercises Monday will be given over entirely to the Alumni Association and old students of the College. Beginning at 10 o'clock, there will be a formal meeting, at which addresses will be delivered by Rev. W. L. Duren and other representatives of the Alumni. Monday afternoon a joint meeting of the Alumni and old students will be held in the College Chapel. Monday evening there will be a banquet, presented by the College to our guests. Tuesday will be "College Day." The College authorities, visitors, and students will at 9:45 a. m. march from the Library to the Chapel, where at 10 o'clock the public exercises will begin, which will consist of four addresses, interspersed with music. The first address will be by Dr. W. R. Webb, President of Randolph-Macon College, who will speak as the representative of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Southern States. The second address will be delivered by Dr. D. H. Bishop, of the University of Mississippi, as the representative of the Mississippi State institutions. The third address will be delivered by Dr. M. E. Melvin, Commissioner of Education of the Synod of Mississippi, who will represent the denominational institutions of Mississippi; and the fourth address will be delivered by Dr. Stonewall Anderson, Secretary of the General Board of Education of the M. E. Church, South, who will represent the connectional educational interests of our Church. That afternoon we will have the ceremony of the transfer of the flag, consisting of the formal conveyance of the United States flag from the custody of the outgoing Senior Class into that of the incoming Senior Class. (We hope that this ceremony will become one of the traditions of Millsaps College.) Tuesday night will be the occasion of the Senior oratorical contest. Wednesday will be Commencement Day, and the Baccalaureate Address will be delivered by Dr. J. A. Rice, of St. Louis. We hope also to be favored with a brief address in honor of Major Millsaps by Bishop W. B. Murrah.

AGAINST LIQUOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

(Adopted at the recent session of the Shreveport, La., District Conference.)

Whereas, The advertising columns of the Shreveport Times, which circulates throughout the territory of this district, carry a plea for the waste and destruction of grain in the manufacture of liquors, and

Whereas the present situation imperatively demands the careful conservation of all foodstuffs for the supply of actual need in our own country and among the starving people of Europe,

Resolved, That the Shreveport District Conference, representing 25,000 Methodist people in northwest Louisiana, most emphatically protest against the unpatriotic plea of the liquor interests, and, with full appreciation of the public service rendered it as a newspaper, we regret that the Shreveport Times has admitted such advertising to its columns.

Resolved, That the Secretary be instructed to furnish a copy of these resolutions to the Shreveport Times and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

TO THE CREDITORS OF W. W. CARRE CO., Ltd.

We beg to advise that by order of the United States District Court, Messrs. J. S. Otis and W. W. Carré were appointed receivers of the W. W. Carre Co., Ltd., on April 23, 1917.

For your information, statements prepared by Messrs. Robinson, Havener & Co., Certified Public Accountants, showed our financial condition on February 28, 1917, to be as follows:

Assets—
Fixed	$406,759.61
Slow	136,264.67
Current	175,142.06
Contingent	220,609.83
Total assets		$933,776.17
Liabilities—
Current	$409,216.75
Contingent	220,609.83
Total Liabilities		$629,826.58
Leaving net worth of		$308,949.59

From this it appears that not only will all creditors be paid in full, but a substantial surplus remain for the stockholders.

It is the intention of the Receivers to continue the operation of the business the same as heretofore, having authority from Court to buy and sell, paying promptly for all their purchases, and we will duly appreciate your full co-operation with the Receivers in order that the best results may be obtained for all. All purchases by the Receivers will be entitled to priority of payment.

In order to facilitate the checking up of the accounts and for the protection of your interest, please forward by return mail a detailed statement of account, showing the amount owing to you by the W. W. Carre Co., Ltd., to our auditors, Messrs. Robinson, Havener & Co., Whitney-Central Building, New Orleans, La.

Yours truly,
W. W. CARRE CO., Ltd.

REV. L. J. JONES CALLED HOME.

Dear Mr. Editor: I write to say that the Rev. L. J. Jones, of Hattiesburg, an honored superannuated member of the Mississippi Conference, died at his home here on Saturday morning, April 28, and was buried in the city cemetery Sunday afternoon from the Broad Street Church. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by the Revs. P. D. Hardin, W. A. Terry, and P. H. Howse. His body was laid to rest by the members of the Masonic Fraternity. A good and useful servant of the Church has gone, but he left abundant assurance that all is well. A Christian man has passed to the Christian's home in glory. He leaves a wife and four children and thousands of friends to mourn his departure. A suitable memoir will be prepared for the Advocate.

W. B. JONES.

Hattiesburg, Miss., April 29.

It is with sincere sorrow that we chronicle the decease of this faithful itinerant. He had been ill for a long while; and, as his letters to the Advocate have indicated, he suffered much; but through it all his faith continued triumphant and he maintained a sweet spirit of Christian resignation. He fought a good fight, and has now doubtless received from the Master's hand the promised crown. May the Holy Spirit comfort those who have been made lonely and sad because he has gone from them! Such partings need be for but a brief season, and the swift wings of time will soon reunite those who live for Jesus and fall asleep in Him in "the land where farewell words are never spoken."

MERIDIAN DISTRICT BULLETIN.

The First Quarterly Bulletin of the Meridian District, of which Rev. George H. Thompson is the presiding elder, is at hand. It shows that Brother Thompson and his colaborers are keeping busy in the Master's service and that they are not toiling in vain. There are many items that we should like to take from this Bulletin if the space were at our disposal. We can, however, quote only one statement, viz: "The Central Church (Meridian) Sunday School had an average attendance of 500 for the quarter, with 586 as the highest number. Does this lead the Conference? Why not try to see what school can make the best average attendance for the next quarter?"

A LETTER TO PRESIDENT WILSON

[illegible]

To His Excellency, President Woodrow Wilson,
Washington, D. C.

[illegible]

[illegible]

Our business world is conserved and our efficiency increased in every relation.

The millions of dollars of grain consumed annually in the manufacture of such liquors would at the lowest reckoning feed the starving and reduce the price of such foodstuffs to every people who are poor and of moderate means and purchase it in sufficient amount.

The experience of the nations at war in Europe has demonstrated that the maximum efficiency of all, both the civilian population and soldiery, is obtained through total prohibition.

We heartily commend you in all of your efforts in behalf of this nation, and we would uphold your hands in every way possible.

We pray the direction of Almighty God upon you in your task. Respectfully submitted.

LIQUOR KILLS

Time was when almost the sole loss of life from the use of intoxicants was attributed directly to the effect of alcohol upon the body resulting either in alcoholism or related diseases. But it is far different today. The same mortality is charged against alcohol in its direct effect, but in addition many thousands of lives are sacrificed indirectly because of drink. Life especially in a modern city is crowded with the problem of risks. The hazards and more often can be made no greater on an ordinary city street or in the factory with its complicated machinery. But it is just from this fact that in the use of intoxicants either of the stronger sort or the so-called harmless beer is discernible a fearful mortality.

It will never be known how many automobile "joy-rides" who have met death in their wild, careening course, were under the treacherous influence of liquor. Police officials will testify that the number is comparatively large. No one can calculate the number of instances of track walkers that have been run down by trains because of intoxication. In our modern factories many workmen have been maimed for life or killed because they were muddled by liquor. Drunken drivers have been responsible for an indescribable list of accidents that ordinarily would not be chargeable to liquor. Not long ago a drunken plumber was sent to fix a gas leak in a large Chicago warehouse building. He blasted the job. That evening the building was blown up as a result of the accumulation and a score of lives were sacrificed upon the altar of—drink. We could illustrate further to show that the so-called indirect effects of liquor are really the direct cause of thousands of deaths, and of the most tragic and deplorable sort. There is some reading these words but can verify from his own observation the truth just stated.

Under the effect of a two-cent drink a man will vote for one who will see to the end that will make it the way of it to continue, serve.—J. V. Christian Advocate.

SOME REFLECTIONS

Dear Brother Neel: The recent session of the Greenville District Conference was a great occasion in our little town. Not only was everything extended for the comfortably and profitably are the social occasions ever meeting of the kind was very welcome in the business and social features of the Conference.

Methodist preachers are a peculiar set of men, especially with respect to their singleness of effort and purpose. We hear much about 'absolute consecration' to the will The Lord, 'Christ and work' a term sometimes perhaps used with a sincere determination to [illegible] struggle especially to [illegible] actions and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

A HOUSE TO PROTECT.

By Adelbert F. Caldwell.

A little blue house holds an embryo song,
A song full of wonderful cheer;
But should robbers attack the little blue house,
That music the world would not hear.
And this little blue house with such wonder within?
It is neither a riddle nor jest,
But a dainty blue egg full of life and a song,
Which will float—give it time—from the nest!

TESSIE'S TWO CLOUDS.

Did you ever see a little real live cloud? Well, I have. Tessie was one this morning. She was a little shiny, white cloud, till her mother told her she couldn't go over and play in Gertrude's swing.

Then, oh, my! What a black little cloud gathered on Tessie's face.

You have seen those fat black clouds up in the sky when it is getting ready to rain, or for a thunder storm; they are ugly looking things, aren't they?

Well, so was this little black cloud on Tessie's face, and it grumbled and rumbled like the cloud in the sky, too.

Only the cloud on her face thundered in words. "I don't see why you won't let me go," it said. "I just don't want to stay here and play on this gallery." And I am sorry to say it, but this little cloud made a big storm!

You know clouds—the black ones—rain, after they thunder awhile, and so did this little cloud on Tessie's face.

Only this little cloud cried tears instead of raindrops. Oh, it was a regular little thunder-shower that was on Tessie's face then.

"What an ugly, ugly storm!" I said.

"Where?" asked Tessie, forgetting to cry for a moment.

And then I told her about the two kinds of clouds she had been, and showed her a little fluffy white one, sailing by, 'way high up in the sky.

"Don't you think that is a much prettier cloud than the one on your face?" I asked her.

"It looks just like a plate of ice cream!" she exclaimed. And it did.

"Black clouds are ugly, and I won't be one; I'd rather be like a pile of ice cream, anyway," she said, laughing, and away rolled that black cloud.

Don't you think she was a wise little girl to prefer a soft white cloud to a 'thundery" black one?

We carry the sunshine of good temper in us and if we only let it shine, it will chase away those black clouds every time!

Try it and see.—My Lesson.

THE DIFFERENCE IN RELIGIONS.

"As for me, I think one religion is about as good as another. It's mostly a matter of climate and race and tradition."

"That's so," said the other man. "Christianity is sentimentally attractive. But what has it ever really done? It has broken down under the war. It's no better than any other religion."

The world is small, and travelers in America may expect the unusual. The two men were on a transcontinental train. A man seated across the aisle who had the air of a foreigner, suddenly leaned forward and said very politely:

"Pardon. But your remarks, which I could not help but hearing, deeply interest me. May I say why?"

"Surely. Go ahead," the first speaker replied, looking curiously at the foreigner.

"Thank you, sir, I am an Armenian. I was born in Bitlis. Bitlis has about forty thousand people. Have you a town of that size you can think of in America?"

"Just the size of my own town," said the second man.

"Take your town, then, and call it Bitlis; and say of your town these things: no hospital, no doctor, no dentist, no church, except the mission and the Armenian, no press, no telephone, no sanitation, no water system, no library, no transportation, no nurse, no public school. And that is your town here in America. That is, you understand, my town of Bitlis, Turkey.

"The one bright spot in my town is the Christian mission, which supports a dispensary and a school and the hope of life. During the recent uprising against the Armenians, in which over three hundred thousand of them were massacred, the missionaries in Bitlis, aided by those in Van, at the risk of their lives, saved me from torture and death. All my relatives were murdered and our property was utterly destroyed. My wife and children were tortured and burned alive in my house.

"Do you wonder that I can not agree with you that one religion is as good as another? Gentlemen, it is Christianity that has stretched out its healing hand to the tortured peoples of Europe, and after the war it will be the spirit of the Master that will build up life on the ghastly ruins. I am a witness of it."

The men who had flippantly dismissed Christianity in two sentences spent the next hour learning some wholesome truths about Christian missions and heroes of the Cross. The Armenian was helping the Bitlis missionaries to raise money for a hospital in his city. The two travelers pulled out their pocketbooks to make a contribution.

"Send it to the headquarters in Boston," said the defender of Christianity. And they did, to the agreeable surprise of the treasurer.—Youth's Companion.

AN ILLUSTRATION.

By E. B. Partin, M. D.

"So run that ye may obtain" (1 Cor. 9-24.) The whole verse in this quotation from the Apostle Paul reads thus: "Know ye not that they which run in a race, run all, but one receiveth the prize? 'So run' that ye may obtain." Evidently, in this illustration, the Apostle had reference to the athletic games of that day and time. In these games there were many runners for the prize, but only one could win. But in the Christian race all may win who run. He used the illustration to show Christians how to run successfully in the Christian race—the whole meaning of which is to so live, that when we come to die we will be received at the right hand of God.

It may be aptly illustrated by a modern illustration. A position of honor and trust is offered by the government to be filled by the one passing the best examination to be held at a certain date to determine the fitness of those who desire to fill the office. It is an office much desired by many, because of the emoluments and high honor which it confers. One candidate sits down and counts the cost of the race. He decides that if he wins, it will take his best energies and thought in order to pass the examination. So he exercises his best efforts to improve the time given him to get ready for the examination, so that he may obtain this much-to-be-desired position. He diligently prepares himself, leaving nothing undone which might be helpful to him in the race, and is rewarded for his diligent preparation by passing the examination and obtaining the office.

To every soul God has offered a place to enjoy a rich reward at the end of this life—a place of honor and glory and happiness—"a house not made with hands eternal in the heavens." The conditions are: "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ," give him the best we have of time and talents and loving service, and we shall so run that we shall obtain.

SCHWAB BELIEVES IN COMPETITION.

It was near the end of the day; in a few minutes the night force would come on duty. I turned to a workman who was standing beside one of the red-mouthed furnaces and asked him for a piece of chalk.

"How many heats has your shift made to-day?" I queried.

"Six," he replied.

I chalked a big "6" on the floor, and passed along without another word. When the night shift came in they saw the "6," and asked about it.

"The big boss was in here to-day," said the day men. "He asked us how many heats we had made, and we told him six. He chalked it down."

The next morning I passed through the same mill. I saw that the "6" had been rubbed out and a big "7" written instead. The night shift had announced itself. That night I went back. The "7" had been erased, and a "10" swaggered in its place. The day force recognized no superiors. Thus a fine competition was started and it went on until this mill, formerly the poorest producer, was turning out more than any other mill in the plant.—Charles M. Schwab in The American Magazine.

(Pretty nearly everybody seems to believe in the value of competition except the extreme Church unionists. Apparently they think that if they can get all or most of the religious denominations amalgated, they will have cured all the evils of the world and ushered in the Millenium. But why the vast churches which have dominated entire nations, such as the Roman Catholic, the Greek Catholic, the Lutheran, and the Established Church of England, have not produced some of the glorious results of which they so eloquently discourse, they do not tell us.—Editor of the Advocate.)

KHAKI TESTAMENTS FOR SOLDIERS.

The Board of Managers of the American Bible Society sends out a call for $50,000 in special gifts to prepare and have ready a sufficient issue of New Testaments and Bibles in khaki and other bindings to assist all the agencies in this country that are interested or may become interested in placing the Scriptures in the hands of the officers and men of the United States Army and Navy. It has supplied 100,000 copies to the troops on the Mexican border, but is not able without special help to meet the new exigencies which have arisen. Funds may be sent to William Foulke, treasurer, Bible House, Astor place, New York City, N. Y.

TO CONTRIBUTORS.

All copy submitted for publication should be legibly written on one side of the paper with pen and ink, or typewritten. Matter written with a lead pencil and rolled manuscripts are unacceptable. No copy will be returned unless postage is enclosed for that purpose. In no case will responsibility be assumed for the loss or non-return of articles—the writers should keep copies of them. We do not purchase matter of any kind.

THE EPISCOPAL ASSIGNMENTS.

We are carrying elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate the plan of episcopal visitation for the next twelve months. As will be seen, the Louisiana Conference has been continued under the supervision of Bishop E. E. Hoss, and the two Mississippi Conferences remain under the jurisdiction of Bishop W. B. Murrah. We scarcely need to say that we are pleased to see these two chief pastors come this way again, and we pray that the Methodism of this section may enjoy a large degree of prosperity under the inspiration of their leadership.

We are happy to note that Bishop Waterhouse has been restored to the list of active general superintendents, though his health is reported still to lack much of being robust. We have seen it stated within the past few days that he will from henceforth reside at Emory, Va., which place was his home before he went West.

Bishop Kilgo has been designated to go to the Orient. He will be greatly missed in the homeland, but it should be a source of gratification that so vigorous and safe a leader will represent our Church in the Far East at this time when world conditions are so unsettled.

NEW RELIGIOUS CENSUS.

The Bureau of the Census in Washington is now engaged in the work of taking another census of religious bodies, and schedules have been mailed to the pastor of each church throughout the connection, with the request that the schedule be filled out and returned without delay. The returns have been most gratifying, but some churches are still to be heard from. It is most important, in order that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, may receive its full representation, that each pastor respond promptly, and all are urged to attend to the request of the Government without delay.

The statistics for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the close of the year 1906, as then compiled by the Federal Bureau of the Census, and with which the new census will be compared, showed that in Louisiana there were 381 organizations, with 31,639 communicants. In Mississippi, the number of organizations reporting at the close of 1906 was 1113, with 94,845 communicants. Eleven churches in Louisiana and eight in Mississippi failed to send in reports, which, if they had been sent, would have increased the number of communicants in the three Conferences.

The general statistics for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the close of the year 1906, showed that there were 1,638,480 communicants, of whom, as shown by the returns from 15,446 organizations, about 41 per cent were males and 59 per cent females. The reports also showed Church edifices valued at $37,278,424, and 5811 ministers who belonged to the different Conferences.

As compared with the report for 1890, the figures showed an increase of 2814 churches, 428,504 communicants, and $18,503,062 in the value of Church property.

The increase reported in the present census will depend upon the completeness of the returns from the individual churches.

TOO UNSTABLE.

"General Butler was at one time a member of a commission to examine young applicants for admission to the har," says an exchange, "and before him came a youth who failed. Finally, Butler asked: 'What would you like to be examined in? You have failed in everything we have suggested.' The reply came, 'Try me on the statutes. I'm up to them.' Butler shook his head solemnly. 'My friend,' he said, 'I'm afraid you won't do. You may be ever so familiar with the statutes; but what is to prevent a foolish legislature from repealing all you know?' "

This is a good story, and it illustrates finely what may be the experience of the man who takes up with the new theology. Often he hardly grasps a so-called new discovery and begins to parade it before he finds out that the reputed scholars from whom he got it have discarded it for something else.

A NOTABLE CAREER ENDED.

According to the press dispatches, Dr. Felix R. Hill died in Louisville, Ky., last Friday, where he and his wife were visiting the family of their son, Mr. Edward G. Hill. As many of our readers will doubtless remember, Dr. Hill was stricken with paralysis at Alexandria, La., some weeks ago and was for a time seriously ill there; but finally recovered sufficiently to make the trip to Kentucky. In our issue of April 12, we published a cheerful letter from him in which he sent greetings and love to the brethren of the Louisiana Conference, along with a few words of testimony that he had great peace of soul and the conscious presence of the Master.

The announcement of the transiation of this much beloved minister will cause sincere sorrow throughout the State of Louisiana, to which his last years of service were given as a pastor and as the President of Centenary College, as well as some of the earlier years of his remarkable ministry. Dr. Hill was born in Nashville, Tenn., being a descendant of General James Robertson, the founder of that city. He was a truly great pastor, and, besides in New Orleans and Shreveport, he served in Louisville, Nashville, Baltimore, St. Louis, and other leading Southern cities, nearly always for four years, and with marked success. There was a spirituality and force in his discourses that gripped his hearers, and yielded gracious results in their lives. He knew how to find his way into the hearts of men and enlist their assistance in commendable enterprises. This unusual power enabled him to render an invaluable service to Centenary College in perhaps its neediest and darkest days.

It was largely through Dr. Hill's influence (he was then on its Publishing Committee) that Bishop Galloway was elected Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and he was fond of telling how he opened the way to the tripod for that brilliant young Mississippian who so abundantly vindicated his judgment concerning him. At the last session of the Louisiana Conference, not being strong himself and Mrs. Hill being in a very unsatisfactory state of health, Dr. Hill, at his own instance, was given the supernumerary relation, it being his purpose to do a good deal of evangelistic work during the year. But the Heavenly Father's plan for him was otherwise, and he has now passed from the Church Militant to the Church Triumphant, leaving behind a shining record, and a wide circle of sorrowing ones, who will long cherish his memory. Dr. Hill is stated to have been 73 years of age, and to have been in the itinerant ministry for 52 years. Of his immediate family, Dr. Hill is survived by his wife, and four sons—Rev. Felix R. Hill, Jr., of San Antonio, Texas, Dr. John D. Hill, of Columbus, Miss., Dr. David Spence Hill, of the University of Wisconsin, and Mr. Edward G. Hill, a prominent attorney of Louisville, Ky.; and by a brother, Mr. William Hill of Alexandria, La., and two sisters—Mrs. J. A. Alsworth, of Alexandria, and Mrs. R. L. Swain, of Rosedale, La. To all these, we extend our deepest sympathy in their great hereavement.

THE UNION REVIVAL.

The union revival meeting at the First Methodist Church of this city has aroused considerable interest during the past week. The preaching of Evangelist Coale has been sound and searching and many have been profoundly touched by it. Brother Coale is a man who is tremendously in earnest and he does not believe in making compromises with the world. The singing, led by Mr. Spindler, has been evangelistic and helpful. The day audiences have been very good for New Orleans, and at night the congregations have been encouragingly large. Last Sunday night not a few persons had to leave, being unable to obtain seats. There have been many penitents and a number of conversions; but we will not yet undertake to state definitely the results. The services will probably continue for several days longer, covering a period of three weeks in all. We ask our readers still to pray for the meeting. New Orleans urgently needs a great spiritual awakening.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. C. W. Hillman, of Woodville, Miss., finds his work pleasant and reports success in his labors.

Rev. W. L. Graves writes as follows: "We are in the midst of a good meeting at Okolona, Miss. The Spirit's power and blessing are manifest in all the services. Brother Bell, the pastor, is in splendid favor with his people and the entire town. He is doing a good work here."

Rev. J. A. Bowen, one of the North Mississippi Conference evangelists, is now engaged with Rev. T. W. Adams in a revival meeting at the Court Street Methodist Church of Hattiesburg, Miss. Persons desiring to communicate with Brother Bowen should address him at Tupelo, Miss.

Rev. Herbert O. Leonard, of St. Paul, Minn., a minister of note in the Methodist Episcopal Church, has been spending some days in New Orleans. He called at the Advocate office last week and conversed with the Editor for a brief season. We trust that his sojourn in the South will prove to be a pleasant one.

Mrs. M. R. Pickens, in ordering the address of her Advocate changed from Lexington to Goodman, Miss., adds the following kindly words: "I do not want to miss a single copy of your very interesting paper. It has been in our family since its first edition, first coming into the home of my father, Rev. James Walton, and after his death, in 1861, into my own home."

Rev. R. W. Tucker, of Crowley, La., sends us the following note: "I closed a two weeks' meeting here last Sunday night, and, while the preaching and singing were done by 'home folks,' the interest was good and the services were a success. Some 18 or 20 joined the Church and many promised to take a new start. I am more and more convinced that the simple preaching of the Word has lost none of its power."

Rev. J. D. Barbee, now of Memphis, Tenn., recently tendered his services to the Government in connection with the German-American war, but they were not accepted because of physical disabilities. Few men are so well informed concerning the present colossal conflict in Europe as Brother Barbee, and he has been ardently anti-German in his sympathies ever since the outbreak of hostilities nearly three years ago.

Rev. John F. Foster, of Shreveport, La., writes: "The campaign for a 'greater Centenary College' is opening up finely and the prospects are good. The mark has been set for over $100,000. Rev. A. E. Clements is managing it, and Dr. Wynn is all smiles. My own work moves on pleasantly and I am happy in it." This is indeed gratifying news. Our Centenary property is a beautiful one, and there is no reason why, with proper endowment, this institution should not be one of the foremost colleges in the South. Let the good work of strengthening it go gloriously on.

Rev. W. W. Mitchell, presiding elder of the Durant District, writes: "Please announce that the opening sermon of the Durant District Conference will be preached by Rev. Thos. H. Mills, instead of Rev. B. P. Jaco." This Conference will be held at Kosciusko, May 29 to June 1.

Col. J. G. Hamilton has left Durant, Miss., for California, where he will visit his daughter, Mrs. A. S. Hoyt, formerly Miss Minnie Hamilton, who resides in South Pasadena. We trust that he will have a pleasant stay in the Far West, but not tarry too long, since he is much missed in North Mississippi when he is away.

The Annual Address of Whitworth College, at the approaching Commencement of that Institution, will be delivered by Hon. Joseph Norwood, of Magnolia, Miss., an influential member of the Mississippi State Legislature and Editor of the Magnolia Gazette. Mr. Norwood will doubtless give the Whitworth young ladies a message well worth hearing.

Rev. W. V. Shearer writes as follows from Columbus, Miss.: "Our Central Church here is in the midst of a great revival meeting. Rev. J. H. Bell, one of the North Mississippi Conference evangelists, whose home, by the way, is here, is with us. He is doing some very effective preaching. His singer, Paul Templeton, is also rendering fine service."

Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Secretary for the Methodist Hospital (Memphis, Tenn.), writes that the amount paid on the recent subscription for the Hospital taken in that city is about $45,000, and that cash is now coming in rapidly. On the day that Brother Ellis wrote, $1100 in money was received. We are happy to have this good news concerning this noble and needed enterprise.

The Bulletin of St. Mark's Hall for April is on our table. From it we take the following: "During the month boxes were received from the Auxiliaries of Rayne, Crowley, and Mansfield, La., bringing splendid contributions. The number of visits reported was 274, and 784 prescriptions were filled at the Sickles Drug Station. The Woman's Missionary Council is stated to have given much encouragement and inspiration to this important work.

Through the courtesy of Dr. T. M. Dye, of Clarksdale, Miss., we have in hand a copy of the printed program of the Fiftieth Annual Session of the Mississippi State Medical Association, which will be held in the Hall of the House of Representatives, in the State Capitol at Jackson, Miss., on May 8 and 9. Dr. Dye is the accomplished President of this distinguished body. He is a son of Rev. T. W. Dye, who is well known throughout North Mississippi, and is a useful layman in our church at Clarksdale.

Rev. B. P. Jaco, of Lexington, Miss., in a note bringing us some subscriptions, says: "I will have to observe 'Advocate Day,' I guess. We have had 'Education Day,' 'Vocation Day,' 'Decision Day,' 'Easter Day,' and 'Children's Day.' We may soon be able to realize that the 'Days' of our years are three score, etc.; and should they become four score, we may be occupied, or words to that effect. Brother T. M. Brownlee was with us recently and made a good impression—not only getting some money, but also securing some pledges for the future."

The Commencement exercises of the Memphis Conference Female Institute (Jackson, Tenn.) will be held May 6-9. Dr. Stonewall Anderson will preach the Commencement Sermon, and the Annual Address will be delivered by Dr. T. E. Sharp, of Memphis. This school has had another prosperous session under the presidency of Rev. H. G. Hawkins, the enrollment having reached 190. Plans are being perfected to have important improvements made during the vacation season and the work of the next term is expected to open with conditions still more favorable.

The Methodist Review Quarterly for April (Rev. H. M. DuBose, D.D., Editor) is on our table. As usual, it contains a number of articles that will amply repay the careful reader. Some of the more prominent papers in this number are: "John's Portrait of Christ," by Dr. A. T. Robertson; "The Late Bishop Alpheus Waters Wilson," by Rev. C. D. Harris; "The Epistle to the Ephesians," by Dr. DuBose, and "The Resurrection of Jesus Christ," by Rev. S. E. Wasson. The Editorial Departments and Book Reviews are up to their regular standard. The price of this publication is $2 per annum; single numbers, 50 cents.

From a letter from Dr. T. C. Wier, of Starkville, Miss., than whom there is no finer Christian gentleman anywhere, we take the following: "The continued discussion of the unification question in the Church press renders the fact more apparent that the Methodist Church, North, and the Methodist Church, South, are two distinct organizations. Let us cherish the spirit of unity and of Christian brotherhood and love for our Methodist brethren across the Ohio, faithfully addressing ourselves to the work of our Lord and Master in separate bodies. May we not be 'as distinct as the billows, yet one as the sea?'"

Rev. H. M. Whaling, of Southern Methodist University (Dallas, Texas), writes: "Mr. H. P. Goodman, of Galveston, Texas, has made a handsome gift to the Library of Southern Methodist University for the purchase of books dealing with Comparative Religions. In his letter accompanying the check, Mr. Goodman, who is a loyal Methodist, said: 'About the only defense that our blessed religion needs is 'the wholly surrendered life.'' And it is his desire that young men going through this Methodist institution should see how flimsy and how false are the grounds upon which the attack upon Christianity from the side of Comparative Religions is based."

Dr. Paul H. Saunders, of New Orleans, has been elected President of the Commercial-Germania Trust and Savings Bank of this city, a notably strong and prosperous financial institution, the deposits of which amount to several million dollars. Dr. Saunders is also a director of the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank, and chairman of the Board of Directors of its New Orleans branch. He was born in Hernando, Miss., and was educated at the University of that State, in which he was also a professor for some time. His friends have reason to be proud of the increasing success which is coming to him as a financier. He is a member of Rayne Memorial Church.

We are indebted to the following friends, whose kindness has not elsewhere been noted, for two or more subscriptions received within the past few days: Rev. C. E. Downer, Petal, Miss., 2; Rev. F. R. Power, Pelican, La., 4; Brother J. C. Joyner, Pelican, La., 2; Rev. W. S. Lagrone, Drew, Miss., 2; Rev. W. B. Baker, Sherman, Miss., 4; Rev. W. E. Akin, Clay, La., 2; Rev. J. H. Foreman, Silver City, Miss., 3; Rev. J. L. Carter, Wade, Miss., 5; Rev. R. M. Evans, Calhoun City, Miss., 4; Rev. R. H. Clegg, Laurel, Miss., 3; Rev. R. S. Walton, Winnfield, La., 4; Rev. W. J. Porter, Sicily Island, La., 2; Rev. J. F. Dring, Ringgold, La., 2; Rev. W. M. Young, Pontotoc, Miss., 3.

Brother J. T. Buckley, of Winona, Miss., in remitting to have the Advocate to continue to come to his wife, says: "I gave her this paper for a bridal present when we were married in 1874, and she has been getting it ever since. I began reading the Advocate when I was six years old—60 years ago. My mother then was a regular subscriber, but she has long since gone to the final home of the faithful, and is there awaiting the coming of her three children who yet survive her." Blessings on these long-time readers of the Advocate, and may their paths grow brighter until they shall lead to the Father's house above, where they shall overtake the loved ones "lost awhile!"

METHODIST UNION—A NEGLECTED PHASE.

By Rev. B. F. Lewis.

During the past two or three years I have read nearly everything which has been written on Methodist union that has come to my hand, except those articles which have dealt in personalities, which have been reviews of articles which had already appeared in print. But in these discussions I have seen no reference to one of the most vitally important questions calling for consideration, namely: Who will represent us in the General Conference next year, and vote for or against Methodist union? Whatever may be said of the importance of the other facts and principles involved in union, this one is strategic. The issues involved in union are not going to be settled by the Commission on Unification. They may unanimously agree on a basis of union, but that is not going to settle the question. They may adjourn finally and hopelessly divided, but that does not settle it. The final settlement of this question, so far as the Southern Church is concerned, will be by our General Conference. Who shall compose this General Conference will be definitely and finally determined when the Annual Conferences meet next fall. Then the die having been cast, the act will be irrevocable. Tremendous issues are at stake, and this matter cannot be dealt with lightly.

In talking to some of the brethren about this matter a few months ago, one remarked that he usually voted for those to go to the General Conference whom he especially desired to honor. The question of fitness was entirely secondary. Some said one thing—some another; but the majority acknowledged that but little thought was given the matter until the time for the votes to be cast. Franchise should not be regarded so lightly. It is a God-given privilege and duty, and should be so exercised. Facing the issues we face to-day, we should vote as we pray. We should pray as we shall wish we had prayed when we stand before the judgment bar. Men standing consciously before Jehovah do not often make mistakes when they follow their convictions.

We may have the profoundest convictions on all matters under consideration, and these convictions may be unquestionably and unqualifiedly right. They may represent the very things which make for the good of Methodism and the glory of God. But a vote of the General Conference can, as far as we are concerned, forever sidetrack these principles, and bring disaster, and not a blessing. This is no light question then, "Who will represent me next May."

I have been reviewing that out-of-print book, "The History of the Organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," published by authority of the Louisville Convention in 1845. It contains the addresses, motions, and resolutions of the General Conference which met in Baltimore in 1844. It is impossible for any one to read that book and the current history without finding between almost every line the impression that the men who went to the Annual Conference in 1843, went from their knees determined that only the best men in the Church, those qualified in gifts and grace, should represent them in the never-to-be-forgotten session of 1844. And wisely did they choose. Not since that time have we faced such momentous issues as we do to-day. We did not face them four years ago as now. Who will represent us next May, then, is a vital question.

Over two million communicants, six million adherents, a total of over eight million Southern Methodist adherents, await our action.

A financial budget of a million dollars annually for Foreign Missions; a million dollars in the Church Extension Loan Fund; other millions raised annually for other purposes; and several score of millions in church property, await our action. Can we afford to go to our Annual Conferences next fall and vote indifferently?

ANSWERED PRAYER.

I asked for bread; God gave a stone instead;
Yet while I pillowed there my aching head
The angels made a ladder of my dreams,
Which upward celestial mountains led,
And when I woke before the morning beams,
Around my resting-place the manna lay;
And, praising God, I went upon my way.
For I was fed.

I asked for strength; for with the noontide heat
I fainted while the reapers, singing sweet,
Went forward with rich sheaves I could not bear.
Then came the Master, with his blood-stained feet,
And lifted me with sympathetic care;
Then on his arm I leaned till all was done,
And I stood with the rest at set of sun,
My task complete.

I asked for light; around me closed the night,
Nor guiding star met my bewildered sight;
For storm-clouds gathered in a tempest near.
Yet in the lightning's blazing, roaring light,
I saw the way before me, straight and clear.
What though his leading pillar was of fire,
And not the sunbeam of my heart's desire?
My path was bright.

God answers prayer; sometimes when hearts are weak
He gives the very gifts believers seek.
But often faith must learn a deeper rest,
And trust in God's silence when he does not speak;
For he, whose name is Love, will send the best.
Stars may burn out, nor mountain walls endure,
But God is true, his promises are sure
To those who seek.

Sure! High Heels Cause Corns But Who Cares Now

Because style decrees that women crowd and buckle up their tender toes in high heel footwear they suffer from corns, then they cut and trim at these painful pests which merely makes the corn grow hard. This suicidal habit may cause lockjaw and women are warned to stop it.

A few drops of a drug called freezone applied directly upon a sore corn gives quick relief and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out without pain. Ask the drug store man for a quarter of an ounce of freezone, which costs very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

This drug is an ether compound and dries in a moment and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. Clip this out and pin on your wife's dresser.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slighest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles as the prescription othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. Otherwise the obituaries will, without correspondence about them, be edited down to 200 words. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

On April 11, 1917, in old Castor Cemetery we laid to rest the body of our friend and brother, HERBERT HALL MORGAN. He was born in Claiborne Parish, on Jan. 4, 1857, and fell on sleep on April 10, 1917. It was our blessed privilege to meet him in the summer of 1910, at which time a very pleasant friendship was formed, which continued to the end. His going marked the departure of another one of the good citizens of the old Castor community. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1896. He gave us the assurance of his trust in the Lord. So his dear family mourn not as those who have no hope; but they may look forward with comforting expectation to the day when this mortal shall have put on immortality and a union made to be broken no more hy death. Our deepest sympathy goes out to the bereaved wife and sorrowing children. We pray that the God of all comfort may abundantly supply all their needs in Christ Jesus.

F. P. MOSS, P. C.

On January 30, 1917, the Spirit of God came and claimed as its own Sister REBECCA J. TRIPLETTE. Sister Triplette was born near Singleton, Winston County, Mississippi, on May 8, 1838; she was married to S. R. (Dock) Triplette on October 29, 1856. She was the mother of eight children—seven girls and one boy. Sister Triplette joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in early girlhood and lived a consistent member until God called her to her reward. She was a member of the Mt. Hebron Church and, as a member, she was to be found in her place—for she had a regular place to sit—at almost every service. She was a great lover of her Church paper, and looked with jealous pride upon the fundamental doctrines of Methodism. Her tired body was laid to rest in the Pleasant Springs Cemetery, in Kemper County, on January 31, 1917, in the presence of a large congregation to await the final resurrection. Her life was worthy of imitation. A faithful mother, a gentle grandmother and a faithful Christian has gone to her reward. Her pastor,

A. W. O'BRYANT.

EMILY CORNELIA KELLER was born in Wilkinson County, Miss., on March 24, 1876. She joined the Methodist Church at Grange Hall Meetinghouse when ten years of age. She was married to Mr. J. H. Eubanks on Dec. 24, 1901. She departed this life on April 6, 1917, and was buried at the Black Water Cemetery, in East Baton Rouge Parish, Louisiana. Such, in brief, is the biography of a useful and well spent life. Hers was a life that was felt, not seen. Born in a Christian home, and reared under its influences, it is not surprising that she united with the Church at ten years of age. From that time she was consistent—more ready to do than to talk. Her calm, peaceful life flowed on, its moments filled with useful deeds. The storms which surge about, the undercurrents and cross-currents that undermine the strength, left her undisturbed. Her cheerfulness was born of optimism; her strength of reliant faith. She leaves to mourn her departure a husband, two daughters, a father and a mother, three brothers, and a sister, but they sorrow not as those who mourn without hope. Living, she bore a good testimony, and dying, she faced eternity prepared. May the consolation which God can give comfort the loved ones!

J. B. FULTON.

THOMAS JASON JORDAN was born in Holmes County, near Lexington, Miss., on August 26, 1865; professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, on Nov. 16, 1890, under the pastoral care of Rev. J. C. Lowe; was married to Miss Mattie Amanda Burt, of Duck Hill, Miss., on Jan. 27, 1897; and, after a surgical operation and long illness, in all of which he displayed much courage, he fell on sleep on April 12, 1917. The writer did not have the pleasure of a long acquaintance with this big-hearted, noble man, but on account of his illness I visited him very often. His friendliness made possible the rapid growth of our friendship, so that we talked about things as freely as old friends. In this way I got into the world of his business, domestic, social, and religious life. We also prayed together. He was a brave man, meeting all matters with the fortitude that gave poise for deliberation and good judgment. He fought bravely for life and met death without fear, saying often that he was ready to go. Thus we are again admonished that, whatever may have been the weakness of our mortal lives, the only wise thing to do is to be courageous in life, trust in God in affliction, and fall on sleep expecting to awake in "His likeness." The large number of friends both of the Church and Masonic fraternity, as well as many others, who lovingly laid his body away, will faithfully follow his family with their love and prayers.

IN MEMORIAN.

"I saw her coming and going,
Now to the grave of the dead, and now
to the bed of the dying,
Patient, courageous and strong."

These words describe the life and character of Mrs. LOUISE IRVINE BAHIN, whose gentle spirit took its flight to the spirit land on Feb. 25, 1917. She lived for others; no one ever appealed to her for aid in valn. Morning, noon, midnight, she was ever ready to lend a helping hand to those who were in sorrow, and it is sad to think that we shall look into her face no more. And as she was ready to go to those who needed her on earth, she was also ready for her Master's call to cease from her earthiy toll and enter the home prepared for her, where now she is waiting for those whom she loved, to come to her.

ONE WHO LOVED HER AND WILL MISS HER.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

We, the Committee appointed by tbe Woman's Missionary Society of Slidell, La., to write resolutions concerning our beloved member and sister, Mrs. Mollie Saddier, who departed this life on December 24, 1916, submit the following:

Resolved that we, the members of tbe Missionary Society, deeply regret the loss of our Christian friend and sister, who was ready and willng to do what she could for the Master at all times. She loved her Church and Society and will be greatly missed; and, while we bow In submission to God's will, we cannot but grieve over her departure.

Resolved, further, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family who have our heartfelt sympathy in their sorrow, that a copy be spread upon our minutes, and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mrs. G. O. Salassi, Mrs. W. H. Morris, Mrs. J. A Bousquet, Committee.

REMINISCENT.

November, 1860, following the election of Abraham Lincoln to the Presidency of the United States, was an exciting time. Our country was divided. Party spirit was very bitter and freely indulged. Not only was our country divided, but towns and families as well. One of this correspondent's brothers was living in Illinois when the Civil War began and enlisted with the 120th Infantry. This writer was visiting in the South, and united with a Mississippi regiment.

I was a student in 1860 at Cumberland College, Ky., but, owing to the demoralized condition of the country, which seriously affected the schools, I left college and spent the winter in Point Coupee Parish with an uncle, Perry P. Sugg, my mother's brother. I made the trip by boat from Cairo, Ill., to Baton Rouge. I left my boat at Baton Rouge in the forenoon and, in taking in the city, I met, face to face, John F. De Witt, a young Methodist minister from Kentucky. He informed me that the Louisiana Conference was in session there and that he had been transferred to it. I accompanied him to the church and became acquainted with a number of the preachers. Dr. Surratt preached a stirring sermon at 3 o'clock. I think Bishop Paine was holding the Conference. About 5 o'clock I crossed over the river to West Baton Rouge, and went thence by train to Rosedale, and from Rosedale got conveyance to the home of my uncle and aunt, who had no children. They had a big house and many musical instruments, and were very fond of company. People from the North, and elsewhere—a half-dozen or more at a time—would come and spend the winter. The entertainment was free, and fish from Bayou Grosse Tete, and bear, deer, and a variety of game in the immediate vicinity made the place more enjoyable.

I soon enquired about preaching, and learned that Dr. John C. Keener was the presiding elder of the district and that H. B. Frazee was the circuit pastor—both Methodists; and a little above, Dr. Smylie, a Presbyterian minister, had two churches in his care—nice frame buildings—and the attendance consisted of about two dozen ladies and a half-dozen men. There were large plantations surrounding and but few white people. A common, rough overseer was paid from $3000 to $4000 yearly. At preaching at those country churches no one attended on foot, or horseback, or in a wagon, but they came in fine carriages, with negro drivers. The times were then ante-bellum, and the people pretty generally observed them. The Presbyterian minister had a family, a nice home, and a governess from the North to teach and care for two or three children.

I heard Dr. Smylie preach frequently, and regarded him as a fine scholar, a fine theologian, and one of the most humble and spiritual men that I had ever heard. One sermon in particular impressed me. The text was Heb. x, 26-27. The attendance was good for that part of the country. It is now about fifty-seven years since that time, but I have not forgotten it. How could I? The good man seemed that day to be more deliberate and solemn than usual, and in quoting the text, "There remaineth no more sacrifice for sin," he paused and asked, "Does God's Book say that?" "Yes," he said, "here it is;" and, trembling with emotion, there fell a dash of tears from his eyes and he exclaimed, "God have mercy," two or three times. Handkerchiefs were drawn and the people were deeply moved. The preacher is dead, but his works still abide.

A LETTER FROM A LITTLE BOY.

(This letter is printed by special request of Rev. W. J. Wood, of Winona, Miss., under whose ministry the writer of it was converted and received into the Church. The little fellow then stated that he expected to be a preacher, and, as will be observed, this thought seems to be abiding with him. He is now eight years of age. It pays to look well after the children. —The Editor.)

Blaine, Miss., April 19, 1917.

Dear Brother Wood: I thought I would write you and see if you have forgotten me. I think of you a great many times, and wonder if you have found another little boy that you love as you used to love me. I am not a little boy now—I am getting to be a big boy, and will soon be in the fifth grade at school.

How is this war suiting you? Do you reckon that it will interfere with our preaching?

I am still counting on being a preacher. I hope that nothing will interfere with my plans.

Can't you come down this summer and help us in a meeting at Blaine? I would be so glad to see you.

Daddy is getting along fine. He is through planting. Mamma is not well. As it is getting late, I will close, by asking you to remember me in your prayers. Answer soon.

Your little friend,
GEORGE EVERETT REEVES.

DON'T WANT WAR WITH THE UNITED STATES.

(Reprinted from the Muskogee (Oklahoma) Times-Democrat.)

"Japan will not join forces against America quickly or without serious thought," says Miss Maude Bonnell, for seventeen years a missionary in Kohe, Japan, who arrived this morning to visit her brother, Dr. A. E. Bonnell.

Although she left Japan last October and does not know the attitude of the people since the recent developments in which Germany has been trying to make allies of Japan and Mexico, she bases her beliefs upon her long residence in that country and her knowledge of its people and government.

"The rulers of Japan are level-headed men—men who think seriously before they act, and they will not jump quickly into war with America, her greatest foreign customer. Like Germany, France, England and America, she thinks of her own interests first and will look out for No. 1, but she values her trade with America too greatly to lose it without first considering the consequences. The Japanese are not quickly inflamed, but are slow to act.

"Of course, we read of many editorials of an opposite nature, but the more sober editorials of that country are to the effect that they do not wish war."

Miss Bonnell said she was not surprised at Germany's last effort, for since the beginning of this war Germany has stopped at nothing.

"However, I will be very much surprised if Japan listens to Germany."

Although this is her third visit back to America since leaving it seventeen years ago, she seems more out-of-place in America than in her mission field. One of the most noticeable contrasts which Miss Bonnell finds between the two countries is the democracy of America and the non-democratic people of Japan.

"There, the people are more like the English, inclined to class distinctions—upper and lower classes. At present everyone in Japan, even the lower classes, are after education, and to-day they have 47,000 schools throughout that country. In America it is a common thing for a boy or girl to work their way through school, but not so there. The government mothers its boys, sending them to school in exchange for several years' service. The mission schools are encouraging them to be more independent and to assist themselves to receive an education."

Although Japan is still considered a heathen nation, it is not far behind the Western nations which she takes delight in imitating. In Kobe, the great shipping point, big, handsome automobiles whirl by in large numbers, although not as many as are seen on the American streets, and the moving picture shows are filled to capacity. The government is in control of many airships and other recent inventions are quickly making their way to that country.

"But Japan does not want her women to progress as those of other countries," says Miss Bonnell. "They still cling to their kimono gowns, in fact they cannot wear the American style of dress with the grace and freedom that they wear their native costumes."

Constipation

You are apt to think lightly of a slight case of constipation. Did you know that constipation is incipient auto-intoxication or self-poisoning? You cannot be too careful, for constipation without treatment is liable to become the source of far more serious ills. To be entirely healthy and have a clean body, it is necessary to keep the bowels clean and the liver active. When constipated, take Van Lax, for it is the ideal treatment for constipation. Contains no calomel and no habit-forming drugs. Does not gripe or nauseate. It is pleasant in taste and results. Sold everywhere by the best dealers. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

You Need Not Suffer From Catarrh

You have probably been in the habit of using external treatments to relieve your catarrh. You have applied sprays, washes and lotions to the mucous surfaces of the nose and throat, have been temporarily relieved, and then wondered a short time after, why you were troubled with another attack of catarrh.

You should realize that catarrh is an infection of the blood. This fact has been agreed upon by specialists in catarrh troubles, and has been proven in the laboratories of the Swift Specific Co. S. S. S., which was discovered over fifty years ago, will cleanse your blood of the catarrhal poisons and will thereby relieve you of the dripping in your throat, the sores in your nostrils, spitting, hawking and bad breath.

All druggists carry S. S. S., and the physicians of our Medical Department will cheerfully answer any letters which you may write them in regard to your case. Swift Specific Co., 305 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga.

You Can Tell The People Who Have Iron in Their Blood —Strong, Healthy, Vigorous Folks

Doctor Says Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Nervous Rundown People 100 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—"One glance is enough to tell which people have iron in their blood," said Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied widely both in this country and in great European Medical institutions, in a recent discourse. They are the ones that do and dare. The others are in the weakling class. Sleepless nights spent worrying over supposed ailments, constant dosing with habit-forming drugs and narcotics for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease and useless attempts to brace up with strong coffee or other stimulants are what keep them suffering and vainly longing to be strong. Their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. Without iron the blood has no power to change food into living tissue and therefore, nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. The moment iron is supplied the multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. I have seen dozens of nervous, rundown people who were ailing all the time, double and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of every sign of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without any benefit.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. There is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and sound, healthy flesh on your bones. But you must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

NOTE—Nuxated iron recommended above by Dr. E. Sauer, is one of the newer organic iron compounds. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

THE SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Shreveport District Conference was held in Logansport, La., April 24-25, with Rev. C. D. Atkinson, presiding elder, in the chair, who was ever and always ready to say a kind and helpful word, thus adding much to the pleasure of the Conference. Those who preached were Dr. S. A. Steel, Dr. R. H. Wynn, and Rev. John F. Foster. Addresses were delivered by Rev. C. V. Breithaupt on "Young Life in the Sunday School," and Mrs. A. P. Holt, of Crowley, on "The Young People's Missionary Society." Prof. R. E. Bobbitt spoke on "Young Life and Our Educational Institutions," and was fully up to his usual vigor of thought. Rev. W. W. Drake spoke on "Young Life and Evangelism," calling attention to the field near at hand for active evangelistic work among the young people of the Church.

The addresses of Dr. George S. Sexton and Dr. S. A. Steel on Church Extension placed before the Conference in a most masterful way the claims of that worthy cause and the opportunities it affords for service to God and humanity.

In the absence of Brother W. S. Holmes, the Conference Lay Leader, Brother L. H. Porter, of Zwolle, presented this phase of the work. The speakers at the Tuesday evening session were Mrs. A. P. Holt and Rev. W. W. Drake, and Rev. A. W. Turner delivered an address on Wednesday evening. Sister Holt told of the Woman's Missionary Council of 1917, and in graphic language described its intense interest in the fields occupied and the work being accomplished in them. The address of Brother Drake on "Evangelism" was easily the best effort of the conference, being upon an unusually high level. The absence of Rev. N. E. Joyner, who was to have spoken Wednesday evening, was much regretted. His place, however, was worthily filled by Rev. A. W. Turner, who discussed the temperance cause, setting forth many convincing arguments.

The reports showed the district to be advancing along all lines, and a deep interest in Conference evangelism was quite apparent.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: Dan Lockwood, L. H. Porter, R. E. Bobbitt, and O. A. Wright, with Judge W. C. Barnett and Mr. A. J. Scott as alternates.

The sermons of Dr. Steel and Dr. Wynn on "The Divine Call to Service" made deep impressions. Leesville was selected as the place for holding the next District Conference.

MINISTERS' RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

Methodism has one Association run solely in the interest of her ministers. The Methodist Ministers' Relief Insurance and Trust Association, of Boston, Mass., was incorporated in 1878. It writes insurance without the cost of agents. For several years it has been paying about one thousand dollars a week to the widows and orphans of ministers. Most of its two million dollars of insurance is written to mature at age 65 with a life income as one option. Insurance is the only safe way to provide protection for one's family and also to make provision for old age, if one is spared. Write for particulars. Adv.

THE NEWTON DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

On the evening of April 9, the introductory sermon of the second annual Missionary Institute of the Newton District was delivered by Rev. J. M. Carley, pastor of the Lake and Hickory charge. The subject was "The Macedonian Call." The sermon was well prepared, strong, and well delivered.

At 9 o'clock a. m., on April 10, the devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. W. L. Linfield, presiding elder of the district, after which, upon motion of Rev. M. L. White, a Secretary was asked for, and Leland Clegg was elected. The special speaker to whom the subject of "Missions in the Sunday School" had been assigned being absent, that theme was discussed by Rev. H. R. McKee and Rev. Leland Clegg. Following this, Rev. J. H. Moore delivered an address on "Mission Study," and Rev. J. B. Stringer from the McDonald charge also made some remarks on the subject. At this juncture the meeting adjourned to hear a discourse on "Money and Missions" by Rev. J. G. Galloway, of the Forest and Morton charge.

The Institute reconvened at 2:30 o'clock p. m., the opening exercises being in charge of Rev. W. L. Linfield. The minutes were read and approved. "The Advantages of Early Collections" were then set forth by Rev. M. K. Miller and Rev. T. B. Winstead. A discussion of "The Every Member Canvass," which was suggestive and helpful, was led by Rev. M. L. White, Rev. R. H. Clegg, of Laurel, also speaking concerning this important phase of the work, after which came an address on "The Reflex Influence of Missions" by Rev. R. L. McNeese, of Chunky. Dr. Rolfe Hunt also ably discussed the last-mentioned subject.

There was a sermon at the evening hour, Rev. W. A. Hays being the preacher. He was greeted by a large audience and discussed impressively the question, "What Constitutes Eternal Life?"

The spirit of the Institute was fine and it was a pronounced success. Nothing associated with the name of Rev. W. L. Linfield can be otherwise than useful, enjoyable, and successful. He has shown himself to be a real leader, and is loved and trusted by all.

Brother J. C. Chambers made an ideal host. He is wide-awake in his work, and is ever thoughtful and considerate of others. We adjourned with regret, wondering why every district does not have such a meeting.

MEDICINES, LIKE MEN HAVE CHARACTER

From their fine outward appearance, through the various elements of strength that go to make up the standing of a remedy, including the final and absolute test—does it "make good"?—does it cure?—Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills conclusively prove every day that they are medicines of the highest character.

Hood's Sarsaparilla originated in a physician's successful prescription.

Peptiron Pills, named from pepsin and iron, include nux and other tonics.

For scrofula, eczema, humors, boils, pimples and other eruptions—for loss of appetite, indigestion and dyspepsia—for kidney and liver troubles—for loss of appetite, that tired feeling—for brain-fag, nerve exhaustion, anemia and poor, thin blood—Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills make the ideal course of medicine, the former before meals, the latter after.

AFTER SIX YEARS OF SUFFERING

Woman Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Columbus, Ohio.—"I had almost given up. I had been sick for six years with female troubles and nervousness. I had a pain in my right side and could not eat anything without hurting my stomach. I could not drink cold water at all nor eat any kind of raw fruit, nor fresh meat nor chicken. From 178 pounds I went to 118 and would get so weak at times that I fell over. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and ten days later I could eat and it did not hurt my stomach. I have taken the medicine ever since and I feel like a new woman. I now weigh 127 pounds so you can see what it has done for me already. My husband says he knows your medicine has saved my life."—Mrs. J. S. BARLOW, 1624 South 4th St., Columbus, Ohio.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound contains just the virtues of roots and herbs needed to restore health and strength to the weakened organs of the body. That is why Mrs. Barlow, a chronic invalid, recovered so completely.

It pays for women suffering from any female ailments to insist upon having Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

YOU WILL WRITE A LETTER LIKE THIS.

I wish I knew which one of the thousands of letters I receive would have the most weight with you, my friend. I can't quote all of them here, but I am going to ask you to read these carefully and then give me a chance to renew your health and make you write me one very much like them:

Barnard St., Savannah, Ga.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.

Dear Sir: I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft-boiled eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your Mineral Water, which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantity as possible for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

A. L. R. AVANT, M.D.

Leeds, S. C.

I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time it will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.

C. A. CROSBY, M.D.

These are not selected cases, nor are the results unusual. I receive thousands like them from physicians, ministers, lawyers, merchants, farmers, manufacturers and every conceivable profession. I want the satisfaction of receiving such a letter from you. No matter what your complaint may be, dyspepsia, indigestion, nervous headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, or any curable ailment that has not responded to drugs, I invite you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If the water fails to benefit you simply say so, return the empty demijohns, and I will promptly and willingly refund your money—every cent. Sign below:

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-C, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

Faith is more than a mental decision; it is a surrender of the will. It is more than a verdict; it is the execution of the verdict.—Jowett.

Do You Neglect Your Machinery?

The machinery of the body needs to be well oiled, kept in good condition just as the automobile, steam engine or bicycle. Why should the human neglect his own machinery more than that of his horse or his engine? Yet most people do neglect themselves. To clean the system at least once a week is to practice preventive measures. You will escape many ills and clear up the coated tongue, the sallow complexion, the dull headache, the lazy liver, if you will take a pleasant laxative made up of the May-apple, juice of the leaves of aloes, root of jalap, and called Pleasant Pellets. You can obtain at almost any drug store in this country these vegetable pellets in vials for 25c—simply ask for Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. There can be no counterfeit if they have the Dr. Pierce stamp. Proven good by 50 years use.

FAIR AND CLEAR—that's the way your skin will be, if you'll take Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Pimples, blotches, eruptions, and humors are utterly banished by this medicine. It takes away, more thoroughly and certainly than anything else, the blood poisons or impurities that cause them.

For every Skin, Scalp, and Scrofulous affection, no matter how it came, the "Discovery" cleanses, builds up, strengthens, and invigorates every part of the system. Eczema, Erysipelas, Salt-rheum, Tetter, Boils, Carbuncles, Enlarged Glands, and the worst Scrofulous Sores and Swellings are completely and permanently benefited by it.

The "Discovery" is made from native roots without alcohol, and can be had in liquid or tablet form from all dealers. It is one of the best tonics to-day, you feel refreshed in strength and vigor after taking this vegetable tonic.

A CALM BEFORE A STORM.

The desire of the worldly heart is for a prophecy of smooth things. The people in the days of Isaiah did not want right things prophesied unto them, and thus they are now—they want the smooth things of life.

We do not mean to cater to this demand. We are living among perils, but can not appreciate that a great storm is brewing upon us. If the people were down in sackcloth and ashes, praying to God for guidance and the joys of salvation, there would be no occasion to fear that a storm will come. On the contrary, the peopel sit down to eat and rise up to play. The theater, the dance and the play-parties have become essential adjuncts to many of our churches, and Satan, "the world's tempter," is the chief actor in many of our churches of to-day; and this sad state of affairs in the Church indicates to us why the Spirit has been lulled among the Church's forces of to-day.

The nation is plunging into awful sin on every hand and it is not possible to see how their eyes can be turned away from sin without a great quaking of the earth and a wonderful buzzing in the tops of the mulberry trees—that then Thou shalt bestir thyself. Scorners are becoming more bold and defiant and wickedness has become a courted attainment and a fine ethical art.

In the world of business, prices have become a mania, so much so that the poor may be driven into a famine, while plenty and to spare abound on every hand. They ignore God because the churches have in a measure become proud and vain, instead of crying to him day and night that he might redeem them from the sort of slavery that is rapidly overtaking them daily.

When the transgression has come to be full, then the storm will be here. The world is pushing forward to make it as bitter as possible, a great cup of iniquity is being filled, and when the shaft of the Lord will destroy it, the smoke of misery will fill the land with stifling, blinding smoke, dimming the pathway of the ongoing march of the traveler.

All who love Jesus and obey him fully will be saved triumphantly in his kingdom above. So mote it be with us. Yours, in the true work,

HILARY WESTBROOK.

Meridian, Miss.

HEADACHES AND OTHER ACHES AND PAINS.

Pain keeps the thoughts of the sufferer continuously on the ailment that is that causing the pain, and in this way it acts to retard recovery.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are their own best advertisers. The wonderful degree of success that they have met with for more than 25 years has been entirely due to their efficiency.

Users are willing to concede that these pills do all that is claimed for them. That is, they promptly relieve headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatic pains, monthly pains, and almost every other kind of ache or pain and do this without any bad after-effects.

And if the sufferer finds rest from the pain that weakens the mind and harrasses the nerves pending treatment for the cause of the pain he certainly should be satisfied.

Furthermore, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills do not constipate, do not derange the stomach or leave any disagreeable after-effects when taken as directed.

If you suffer from any ache or pain you will not be out any money to try these pills. Go to your druggist and purchase one box of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Use them as directed and if the results are not satisfactory return the empty package to the druggist and he will immediately return you your money. No questions will be asked. You are the judge of the merits of these pills. Could anything be fairer than this?

What a Pity!

Isn't it a pitiful sight to see a handsome face covered with pimples and other scaly patches? And it is still more pitiable that some people allow these cutaneous troubles to continue, growing worse each day, when the simple treatment of applying Tetterine salve will entirely eliminate skin troubles and will restore the skin to its normal health. 50c a box. INTERNATIONAL BIRD TREATY.

By the recent treaty relating to migratory birds, negotiated between the United States and Canada and ratified by both governments, more than one thousand species and sub-species of the most valuable birds of North America will be protected from the Gulf of Mexico to the Arctic Ocean.

All that remains to complete the work of migratory bird conservation in this country is the passage by Congress of an enabling act to carry out the provisions of the treaty effectively. The efforts of those men who have been responsible for this far-sighted, international agreement are deserving of country-wide recognition. — Our Dumb Animals.

The Composition of Coca-Cola and its Relation to Tea

Prompted by the desire that the public shall be thoroughly informed as to the composition and dietetic character of Coca-Cola, the Company has issued a booklet giving a detailed analysis of its recipe which is as follows:

Water, sterilized by boiling (carbonated); sugar, granulated, first quality; fruit flavoring extracts with caramel; acid flavorings, citric (lemon) and phosphoric; essence of tea—the refreshing principle.

The following analysis, by the late Dr. John W. Mallet, Fellow of the Royal Society and for nearly forty years Professor of Chemistry in the University of Virginia, shows the comparative stimulating or refreshing strength of tea and Coca-Cola, measured in terms of the refreshing principle:

Black tea (hot)—1 cupful (5 fl. oz.)	1.54
Green tea (cold)—1 glassful (8 fl. oz. exclusive of ice)	2.02
Coca-Cola (fountain)—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.21
Coca-Cola (bottlers)—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.12

From the above recipe and analysis, which are confirmed by all chemists who have analyzed these beverages, it is apparent that Coca-Cola is a carbonated, fruit-flavored modification of tea of a little more than one-half its stimulating strength.

A copy of the booklet referred to above will be mailed free on request, and The Coca-Cola Company especially invites inquiry from those who are interested in pure food and public health propaganda. Address

Sherman, Miss.

Our work is moving on very nicely. We have a great people to serve. They have been very nice to me in my recent bereavement. I haven't wanted for anything. I love my people and work. Our finances are in advance of what they were this time last year, and I feel that this is going to be the greatest year in every way in the history of this charge. Pray for us. I wish to thank all the preachers who wrote me letters of sympathy recently.

Truly your brother.

W. B. BAKER.

Anguilla, Miss.

The Anguilla Missionary Society elected the following officers the first of the year: Mrs. J. E. J. Ferguson, President; Mrs. C. V. Jones, First Vice President; Mrs. W. C. H. McKinney, Second Vice President; Mrs. H. C. Greer, Secretary; Mrs. E. Barwick, Treasurer; Miss Dora Crockett, Superintendent of Study and Publicity. Everything started off with renewed enthusiasm, and we hope to do a good year's work. We have only thirteen members, but this is a small town and has two churches. We hope to enroll all the ladies of our church before the year is gone. A Young People's Missionary Society has been organized, with 30 members enrolled. They all seem very much entbused. The following officers were elected: Miss Mary D. Barwick, President; Miss Christine Ferguson, First Vice President; Miss Ruby Kathrine Fields, Second Vice President; Master Harris Greer, Recording Secretary; Master Thomas Baggett, Corresponding Secretary; Miss Eugene Barwick, Treasurer; Miss Katie Martin, Superintendent Local Work and Social Service. They have already begun work. Mrs. W. C. H. McKinney has charge of the children's work.

Miss DORA CROCKETT.

Houma, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: Our revival meeting closed here on Easter Sunday, after a campaign of two weeks. Rev. H. Wade Cudd, of Baton Rouge, La., preached two sermons each day for ten days, and then Brother Martin Hebert, superintendent of the Foreign Mission, came to us and preached three very helpful sermons. The writer also preached five times. With the possible one exception, the preaching was of a very high order. We labored earnestly and faithfully to give the people the pure gospel by offering Christ to them as the only hope of eternal life. Brother Cudd is thoroughly consecrated and is uncompromising with sin. The Holy Spirit attended the Word in power as he expounded it. The Spirit-filled messages of Brother Martin Hebert were delivered in his usual pleasing, yet fearless, manner. Two young ladies were received into the Church on Easter Sunday, and have gone to work in the church. While the results as to the number of conversions and accessions were small, I feel safe in saying that the spiritual life of the church was quickened. Many testified to the fact that they had experienced a real revival of religion in their souls.

This is perhaps one of the most difficult fields in the Louisiana Conference. Ignorance, superstition as a result of ignorance, and opposition by Roman Catholicism to public education and more especially to Protestantism, is a fitting description of conditions in the Houma Mission. One, in writing of the field, says: "It does not differ materially from the Foreign field." Yet, notwithstanding the difficult field and the opposition encountered, we have a responsive people and our church is growing in every department of activity. We now have 70 members within reach of the church. Our Sunday school, under the capable superintendency of Dr. J. W. Warren, is rapidly taking on new life and increased membership. We have organized a Wesley Bible Class with 20 members, and the membership is still growing. We are pressing on toward the Standard of Efficiency. We have an active, wide-awake Woman's Missionary Society with sixteen members. These women are thoroughly consecrated, pay tithes, and will lead in public prayer. Our two prayer meetings are well attended. A Senior Epworth League was organized last week.

Brother H. W. May, our presiding elder, has held our first quarterly conference. He captivated his hearers on Sunday by his magnificent and eloquent sermons. In his grasp of the business affairs of the Church, Brother May has few equals. He endeared himself to the hearts of our people when he paid us a visit before the time of our first quarterly conference.

Our greatest need here perhaps is a church building. The old, out-of-date residence in which we are worshiping does not present a very attractive appearance. And our greatest task perhaps is the building of a church. However, we are actively engaged in raising funds for this purpose. Have we not enough men and women who will respond to this worthy cause and help to build this needed church?

G. A. MORGAN,
Pastor of Houma Mission.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER BROWN.

My Dear Brother: Since I left Enterprise, Fla., on February 28, I have assisted in good revivals at Hurtsboro, Ala., Shelby, Miss., and Como, Miss., and I am now in the concluding days of a good meeting here in Columbia, Miss. At each of the above-named towns the efficient pastors had made ample preparation for the meetings, and so it will be in the meetings to succeed these. My work opens with better prospects this year than usual. My health is good, and I am doing my best to meet all the calls made upon my time. Requests have come from five States, but I am devoting most of my time to Mississippi, and especially North Mississippi. While I appreciate the kindness of my brethren in other Conferences to a high degree, I must say, from the depths of my heart, that the very thoughtful consideration of my brethren of North Mississippi inspires me to render to them the best service of my life.

Yours faithfully,

April 23, 1917. J. A. BOWEN.

CALOMEL SELDOM SOLD HERE NOW

Nasty drug salivates, makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling-off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The little city of Shubuta, with its cordial, hospitable people, and with its genial, industrious, thoughtful pastor, Rev. L. E. Alford, is an ideal place for the holding of a district conference, and the members of the recent Meridian District gathering are ready to add abundant testimony to this fact.

The Conference was begun with a sermon from Rev. B. L. Sutherland, pastor of the Popiar Springs Church, Meridian, which pitched high the spiritual key of the entire session. A goodly number of lay delegates and preachers answered to roll-cail at 8:30 Wednesday morning and lo! Brother Neill and Brother Robert Selby were already present to see that their especial interests were not neglected. To this aggregation of visitors was later added the Rev. M. M. Black, who completed the iist of "Connectionais," unless our Conference Lay Leader, Brother George L. Harrell, comes under that head.

Brother George H. Thompson gathered up the reins early in the drive, like he had used them before, and in two days every interest had been carefully iooked after and the members were on their way home.

Diligent committees worked on the matter of License and Recommendation, Deacons' and Elders' Orders, Missions, Snnday schools and Epworth Leagues, Quarterly Conference Records, Lay Activities, War Emergency, Publishing Interests, Social Service, and Local Preachers, and a surprising amount of work was done in very short order.

The reports of charges indicated the district work very finely advanced for this time of year and seemed prophetic of fine reports at the Annual Conference. On Wednesday afternoon, Brother J. L. Neill, in the capacity of Conference Missionary Secretary, presented the matter of Missions, especially dealing with Sunday school speciais and Sunday schooi instruction. We could not but feel that a great transformation in our missionary vision and methods must come if the Conference catches the spirit and program suggested so forcibly by our Field Secretary.

The Conference elected the following Licensing Committee: H. B. Watkins, W. J. Ferguson, B. L. Sutherland, and E. C. Gunn.

On Wednesday night the District Lay Leader, Dr. J. W. Beeson, had charge of the service, and a number of short spicy talks were made by laymen along the line of lay activities, Professor George L. Harrell delivering a splendidly prepared address, which the Conference asked should be put into pamphlet form by Smith & Lamar.

On Thursday morning at 8:30 o'clock, the Conference was opened by a sermon from Rev. Robert Selby on Christian Education, at the close of which more than $300 was subscribed for Emory University.

The following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: D. W. Heidelberg, D. C. Hull, W. D. Hawkins, and C. W. Cochran. Alternates: J. W. Beeson and J. B. Holiand.

Erie Howeil and Joseph A. Smith were recommended for local deacons' orders. Brother Smith is the pastor, and Brother Howell a student at Meridian College.

Dr. J. W. Beeson was re-elected District Lay Leader. Keith Kenworthy Alien was granted license to preach and recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial. Among the very fine reports made, that of Brother Broadway, of South Side, Meridian, who reported a recent meeting with 50 accessions and conversions, and that from Waynesboro by Rev. C. M. Chapman, where the missionary interests seem to be fairly aflame, deserve to be especially mentioned. Brother Gunn from East End reported 35 additions. There were many other fine reports.

On Thursday morning Mrs. McQueen, District Secretary for the Woman's Missionary Society, exhorted in a very forcible way in behalf of that interest. Thursday afternoon Brother Neill presented the Sunday school interests in a way that reimpressed the Conference that we have the right man assigned to that task.

The Epworth League interests were well presented by Rev. Erie Howell. Rev. M. M. Biack presented the needs of Milisaps College very impressively and in a way that will doubtless bring forth fruit. Waynesboro was chosen as the next place of meeting. A subscription of $125 was taken to assist Brother L. L. Harger in attending one of our Church schools. He will doubtiess enter Millsaps College next fall.

Rev. W. J. Ferguson on Wednesday morning preached a most helpful sermon on "Willing to Do His Will." Thursday evening, after a sermon by this writer, Rev. J. L. Neill addressed the congregation on the present food emergency, which presents an obligation to the minister in awakening his community. Brother Neill declared the President's suggestion, "The South must feed herself," may be well sounded from all pulpits. A resolution was passed asking our Conference coileges to consider placing our Sunday School Teacher-Training Course in their cnrricnla.

The Conference greatly enjoyed an automobile ride given after adjournment Thursday afternoon by the citizens of Shubuta. There were plenty of cars and plenty of delegates. Every pastor in the district, except one, was present during the session. This writer, assisted by Rev. E. C. Gunn, served as Secretary.

The Conference adopted resoiutions of thanks to the Shubuta people for their hospitality and congratulations to Brother Alford that he serves so delightfui a community. Cordially,

H. B. WATKINS.

CONFERENCE ORGANIZER CHOSEN.

On Saturday, Aprii 14, the Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference met in the First Methodist Church, of New Orleans, and elected Mrs. T. H. Morris, of Shreveport, Conference Organizer. This action was in accord with that taken at the Annual Meeting at Crowley, February 27-March 1, "to put into the field a Conference Organizer," whose work is to go into the unorganized churches of the Conference to organize missionary societies wherever possible. We feel that we are extremely fortunate in having secured the services of this splendid woman, who is widely known throughout the districts already. We bespeak for her and for our beloved missionary enterprise, which we are thus seeking to advance, the hearty co-operation and prayers of Louisiana Methodism. Mrs. Morris wiii begin work in the Shreveport District at once. At the recent joint session of the Shreveport District Conference and the Annuai District Meeting of the women, we were much encouraged by the help of the pastors and women in this new phase of our work. We are constrained to believe that the time and the choice of such a worker are providential.

Mrs. A. P. HOLT, Cor. Secretary.

Editorial

"Grief's of God's sending all have an ending; Sunshine will come when the tempest is past."

* * *

"The field is the world." There is work to do for the Master everywhere, even in the smallest community.

* * *

He contributes most to the Church who adds most to its spirituality. But he who contributes spirituality is certain to be ready to give anything in his power that may be needed.

* * *

The moral law of God is of universal application. It makes the same demands upon prince and peasant, the rich and poor, and the distinguished and obscure. All who knowingly infract it must reckon with the penalties attached.

* * *

The supernatural stretches entirely across the Divine Revelation called the Bible. It comes into view in the first chapter of Genesis and is still plainly in evidence in the last books written. So to make war upon the supernatural is in reality to attack the Holy Scriptures. This is a fact which the Church needs to recognize in its full significance.

* * *

The New Orleans reform wave has been objected to on the ground that it originated with men who are without any real convictions against the evils assailed, and who were incited to their course by a feeling of resentment because they were not allowed equal privileges with others in operating a race-track. A sufficient answer to this charge is contained in the words of Dr. Edward Everett Hale: "Light is light, no matter who holds the candle."

* * *

The Gospel is not worn out, nor does it need revision at the hands of men. When preached in purity and power, its effects to-day are the same that they have ever been. It is a very common remark that the theology of successful evangelists is that of the apostles and of the fathers. There is a good reason for this—no other kind will do the work of reaching and saving the lost. When the late B. Fay Mills, who had been a flaming revivalist, became "liberalistic" in his religious views, his power soon departed from him and he ceased to be effective as a soul-winner.

* * *

Mere numbers, despite the stress that some people seem disposed to place upon them, are not the proper test of a denomination's true strength as a Christian body. We dare say that there is not a Church in existence that would not really be stronger if it were rid of many whose names are carried on its membership roll. The lust for numbers has long been one of the weaknesses of Christian denominations. They should, indeed, desire to grow, but not by gathering in those who are unchanged in nature—who have not ceased to be dominated by the spirit of the world. Such members are a liability, not an asset.

THE "GOOD SAMARITAN" NATION.

We were pleased to note a few days ago the following press dispatch:

"Havre, France, May 5.—The Belgian government has been advised that the United States will devote $150,000,000 for provisioning the population of the occupied districts of Belgium and France. Of this sum $90,000,000 will be devoted to Belgium and $60,000,000 to the occupied districts of France."

Never was there more cause to be proud of our Nation than when she thus performs the part of the "Good Samaritan" to other stricken and suffering peoples. Such acts of philanthropy are "the silver linings" to the dark clouds of war now overshadowing far the greater portion of the world. They encourage us to hope even amid the widespread and unspeakable horrors of this awful time that "the brotherhood of man" will yet come to be a glorious reality.

MR. BALFOUR.

The Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, a member of the British Cabinet, who is now on a visit to the United States as a War Commissioner, is easily one of England's foremost public men and a statesman of recognized ability throughout the world. Not only has he had bestowed upon him the highest honors within the gift of his country, but he is a widely known author, some of his publications being treatises on the great themes of Christianity, which have been largely read on this side of the Atlantic. The New York World recently gave the following interesting description of this famous guest of our Nation:

"Washington has sized up Arthur James Balfour in this way: Five feet, 10¾ inches in height. Weight, 155 pounds or thereabouts. Of slender figure with narrow shoulders that stoop slightly, but very long, sinewy arms—a figure unusually athletic for a man of 69 years.

"The Balfour eyes are rather prominent, ordinarily steely and penetrating save when the Balfour smile comes into them to radiate over the entire face. This smile is infectious—"winning," it might almost be called. When the Balfour smile is working—which is most of the time—there is little in the expression to suggest the "Bloody Balfour" of Fenian days, when the then Secretary of Foreign Affairs for Ireland was compelled, with firm hand, to stay frequent disorders.

"The Balfour voice is that of the orator and linguist. It possesses all the charm of the well-cultivated English vocal vehicle; it is soft, modulated almost to a whisper at times, though it is decidedly resonant when roused in public speaking. The chief use Mr. Balfour makes of his brilliant power of speech is to keep it out of action most of the time. He is an eloquent listener, his smile taking the place of speech. Mr. Balfour's diversions—he is a bachelor—are bicycling, and golf. He can recite pages of Socrates in the original. He speaks French, German, Spanish, Italian, and can make himself understood in the original Gaelic."

WOULD BE MOST HARMFUL, IF NOT RUINOUS.

Ever and anon we note some brother writing as if he expects the agitation for Methodist union to be kept up indefinitely. In our opinion, such a course of things would be extremely hurtful, so far as the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is concerned. If union is to come within the next few years, the sooner it is hurried to a consummation the better; and if it is not to come, the quicker that fact is definitely realized and the attention of our people is turned to something else, the better it will be for the sacred interests committed to our hands.

The stability of the Roman Catholic Church was one of the things that helped to draw Manning and Newman into its fold, and the same characteristic is known to have made a profound impression upon the mind of Gladstone, the foremost Protestant layman of the nineteenth century. Men do not desire to put their money and invest their energies in enterprises or organizations that have tottering foundations, and which may soon pass out of existence. Southern Methodism is already suffering because of the feeling of uneasiness as to the future of our Church, and if this spirit should increase among our people, much damage to our work and institutions is, in our opinion, certain to follow. Well may we beware of precipitating a prolonged wrangle and reign of uncertainty among our more than two million communicants and much larger constituency! We may be sure that an unsettled condition of things thus protracted would set to work in our beloved Church arresting and disintegrating influences that would have a far-reaching and disastrous effect. Let us pray that from such a denouement, the good Lord, who has so signally blessed Southern Methodism in the past, may deliver us.

HARD TO ACCOUNT FOR.

It is strange how a perfectly obvious fallacy is sometimes paraded by seemingly intelligent people. For instance, we have seen in print a number of times within recent months the affirmation, "War never settles anything." How absurd that declaration is! Did not the Revolutionary War settle the question of American independence? Did not the War between the States settle the issue of secession? Did not the war in Europe that culminated in the Battle of Waterloo decide that Napoleon was to be a prisoner on the Isle of St. Helena instead of swaying the scepter of empire? If a person cannot see that the arbitrament of arms, regrettable as it always is, has had a large part in shaping the course of human history, there is something wrong with the working of his thinking faculties.

Let us only be patient, and let God our Father teach His own lesson in His own way. Let us try to learn it well and learn it quickly; but do not let us fancy that He will ring the school bell and send us to play before our lesson is learned.—Kingsley.

DO YOUR BEST.

Do your best, be not disheartened,
Though the task seems hard and long
God is ever near to help you;
He can make the weakest strong.

Tell Him of the work accomplished,
Ask His help to do the best;
He can smooth the path before you;
God helps them that do their best.

—The Presbyterian.

HIS MESSENGERS.

The aspostolic or missionary character of the Church is fundamental. Our Lord Himself came to us, because, as He himself tells us, He was sent by the Father. In the upper room He said further, "As My Father hath sent Me, even so send I you." There is a missionary tincture in the daily life of the whole Church. Every one of us, enlightened by the words of Christ and quickened by the Spirit, should be able to say in His own measure, "The Father hath sent me into the world."—Rev. J. T. Farquhar.

ASKING FOR HE KNEW NOT WHAT.

"I should like to see your God," said the Emperor Trajan to a Jewish rabbi. "No mortal eye can look upon Him," the rabbi replied. When the Emperor insisted, the rabbi said: "Well, suppose we begin by looking at one of His ambassadors," and bade the Emperor gaze at the midday sun in a cloudless sky. "I cannot," the Emperor confessed; "the light dazzles me." "If, then," said the rabbi, "you cannot endure the glory of one of His creatures, how could you behold the unclouded glory of the Creator?"—The Christian Herald.

THE ROAD TO HEAVEN.

Pointed out by Billy Sunday.

The road to heaven is not by the bathtub, or Harvard or Yale, but by Christ's blood. The world to-day is trying to crucify the fundamentals of religion, and somebody has got to get the world back to its moorings. Social service, in its place, is a road to Jesus Christ, but somebody needs to cry like a watchman to call people back to the fundamentals. I believe in books, but I don't believe that they can take the place of faith. I believe in construction and instruction so long as they make people realize that they need also something else—the Lord.

The United States leads all other nations in crime. What we must do is to cleanse the heart. A dressed-up body covering a black heart is like a nice parlor with a pole-cat in it. The Gospel brings a man into the way of obeying the law. The scholar says that the remedy lies in a universal system of education. Forget it! The remedy lies in a pure heart. I believe thoroughly in education, but that won't do the trick. It is the Church's business to knock out sin and work for salvation, and when churches turn into amusement bureaus it is time for them to shut up. They call me illiterate and crude and vulgar, but I preach Jesus, and the crowds flock to hear me while the man that is preaching Schopenhauer and Anheauser Busch talks his ethics to paint and varnish.

There is no substitute for the Gospel, or salvation through Jesus Christ. The church that preaches only doctrines may be evangelical, but it is not evangelistic. An evangelical church is a church on ice; an evangelistic church is on fire. You might as well turn out the sun and light a tallow candle in the heavens as to think that a man can be saved by any other method than by faith in Jesus Christ. —The Watchman-Examiner.

DAY BY DAY.

Charge not thyself with the weight of a year,
Child of the Master, faithful and dear;
Choose not the cross for the coming week,
For that is more than He bids thee seek;
Bend not thine arms for to-morrow's load,
Thou mayest leave that to thy Savior God;
"Daily," only, He saith to thee,
"Take up thy cross and follow Me."

THE REMARKABLE CASE OF WILL PURVIS.

(Reprinted from the Meridian, Miss., Dispatch of March 25, 1917.)

A man who has had perhaps a more remarkable experience with the courts of his country than almost any man in the United States, was a visitor to a friend here last week.

The visitor was Will Purvis and the friend visited was L. P. Brown, who stood by Purvis and believed in his innocence when others had deserted him. The last time, previous to Thursday, that Mr. Brown had seen Purvis was eighteen years ago at the State convict camp, on the same day that Governor McLaurin gave the assurance of a full pardon, which was issued a short time later.

The story of Purvis' life reads like a chapter of impossible fiction. Not only sentenced to be hanged, but actually hanged, but not until he was dead, dead, was the fate of Purvis. The noose slipped from his neck and he dropped to the ground, prostrated. The officers wanted to try the job over—hang him again, but the crowd said no. He had escaped in such a miraculous way that there was some superstition that there was a supernatural power working in Purvis' behalf.

Purvis was placed in jail; escaped; stayed at large four months, and then surrendered himself to the sheriff of Marion County. That was nearly twenty years ago. Purvis has been pardoned in the meantime and has become a good citizen of his home county.

Another Confesses Crime.

A few days ago Joe Beard lay dying, near the Purvis home. The specter of death had entered the doorway of this man 60 years old, and, facing an unknown future, Joe Beard became conscience-stricken. He himself had murdered Will Buckley, and had seen an innocent man go to the scaffold. Beard confessed his crime. It was too late for him to answer to his country, but not too late to answer to his God. The dying man at last did the only thing that he could then do—he removed forever the suspicion of crime from an innocent man. Will Purvis stood again before the world innocent—a vicarious sufferer from a miscarriage of justice.

When the stigma was removed from his name he thought of a man who had always believed him innocent from the time he told his first story, denying his guilt. With his innocence proclaimed to the world, Purvis came to Meridian Thursday and was entertained until Friday by Mr. Brown and his family.

Was in Meridian Jail.

When Purvis was convicted at Columbia of the murder of Will Buckley, he was brought to Meridian for safekeeping and was held here nine months. Mr. Brown visited Purvis at the county jail to hear his story and to offer him religious consolation as far as possible, continuing these visits as long as he was here. Purvis became a converted man. It was while doing this that Mr. Brown became thoroughly convinced that Purvis, who was only 18 years old and uneducated, was innocent; that it was some one else who had hid by the roadside and had fired the shots that sent Will Buckley's soul into eternity.

Mr. Brown felt and firmly believed that Will Purvis would not be hanged; that something would interfere to prevent his death, and this faith never left Mr. Brown even when the man was carried away to be executed.

When the rope slipped and Will Purvis fell to the ground more dead than alive, but with power to recover. Mr. Brown was not surprised. He had a prayer intuition that something would happen to prevent a judicial murder.

When Purvis was again placed in jail, he escaped, and after four months he returned to his home town, never having been over ten miles away, and surrendered to the sheriff.

McLaurin Pardons.

Gov. A. J. McLaurin commuted Purvis' sentence to life imprisonment in the penitentiary. Twenty-two months later the same Governor pardoned Purvis. Purvis returned home, married, settled down to farm life, and now has an interesting family of six children and a wife, the daughter of a Baptist minister, and is respected as a good citizen.

Should the State reimburse him for the horror that he went through? He stayed in the Meridian jail nine months, Hattiesburg sixteen months, Purvis five, convict farms twenty-two months, at large four months, 56 months in all, or in round numbers about five long years. That is a question that is now concerning Mr. Brown and other people who know what Purvis went through.

It is realized that Purvis can never be paid in full for the terror that came to him through acts of a court in finding him guilty when he was not guilty, but it is believed by Mr. Brown and others that the future of Purvis should be made lighter by an appropriation from the Legislature.

Purvis is said to be an humble, sweet-spirited Christian man. He is a man of few words and by some was misunderstood for this reason. He is said to hold no resentment against any one, and those who know him say that he is a man of great religious faith.

TENNESSEE A CONTRIBUTOR TO MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA.

By Rev. Payton A. Sowell.

Through a temporary residence in Louisiana for much of four years—and serving for eighteen months the Methodists of Jeanerette; and sharing generously in the gracious fellowship of the preachers in Louisiana, I have been led incidentally to peep into the history of the interest Tennessee has taken in the work of the church in these two States. What I shall say is only a fragmentary statement, and by no means a complete recital of all the names of preachers who have come this way from Tennessee to preach the gospel.

For quite a while Mississippi and Louisiana composed a presiding elder's district in the "Western Conference," which finally eventuated into the Holston, Tennessee and Kentucky Conferences. And as the years passed on, men were sent into these far Southern States to preach, and annually to return and report their labors to Conference sessions in Tennessee.

Tobias Gibson came alone through the wilderness from a session of the Conference held in Middle Tennessee, and traveled to Natchez over "The Trace," as it is known in Tennessee, or as the backwoodsmen called it, "The Natchez Trace," and preached for a year, and then rode back over the same lonesome road—maybe five hundred miles—and met the preachers in Conference. Instead of carrying back a tale of woe, he begged for recruits, and getting none, he rode back over the same road, and preached another year, when finally, he secured recruits—and Methodism grew in Mississippi.

Rev. Wm. Lambuth lived and died in Tennessee, near Fountain Head, Sumner County, where Bishop McKendree's brother lived, and where the old Bishop died and was buried, though finally his dust was brought to the Campus of Vanderbilt University. Rev. Wm. Lambuth had a son, Rev. Jno. R. Lambuth, who preached in Alabama and Mississippi. "Father Lambuth," as he was called, was a manufacturer of combs. He died in peace and sleeps at Fountain Head, Tennessee. He was the great-grandfather of Bishop W. R. Lambuth.

Rev. Learner Blackman, who was one of the remarkable men and preachers of his day, spent one year in Mississippi and Louisiana, coming through the wilds of an unsettled country to break the bread of life to this far Southland. Returning to Conference, he was sent into Ohio, and was drowned in the Ohio River, near Cincinnati.

In the memory, no doubt, of preachers now living, it is easy for them to recall the name of Rev. Wm. Doty, who became a member of the Louisiana Conference. He was from Tennessee.

The Rev. Dr. Wm. Winans, that great preacher who gave so much reputation to Methodism in Mississippi, was once a member of the Tennessee Conference. He was admitted on trial at the Conference held at the residence of Col. Green Hill, called "Liberty Hill," in Williamson County, in 1808.

In 1811, there were two presiding elders' districts, called Mississippi and Louisiana. In 1812, Rev. Thos. Nixon was admitted into the Tennessee Conference; he came to Mississippi and spent a fruitful ministry there. His father lived in Maury County, Tenn., ten miles below Columbia. In 1816 he traveled Pearl River Circuit; in 1817, Opelousas and Rapides, or Alexandria Circuit, and in 1818, Amite Circuit.

Rev. Wm. Garrett, a prince in Israel, descended the Mississippi River in 1813, and met and had religious fellowship with Rev. Lewis Hobbs, a missionary to New Orleans.

In 1813, Bishop Asbury desired to hold a Conference in Mississippi for this Southern country, but the warlike disposition of the Creek Indians deterred him from the hazardous undertaking.

In 1814 Rev. Elijah Gentry was sent to Mississippi, and he finally became a member of that Conference when it was organized. Rev. James Dixon, an Irishman, finely educated and highly gifted came in 1815, and again in 1816, serving Natchez the second year, his first year having been spent in Mississippi in no definite locality.

In 1815 Rev. Richard Nolly, having been received, was immediately sent into the far South; and preached in Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, and in 1815, died alone, near an Indian trail, having been thrown from his horse into a deep stream, but, getting to shore, the cold led to his death in a swamp.

In 1816, the Mississippi Conference was organized, and thence afterwards these two States ceased to be a part of the Tennessee Conference. Now our territory is not much larger than the Lafayette District. The old Jerusalem has given men and territory to the North, South, and West.

In 1816 there were 1576 white members in Mississippi, and 131 in Louisiana. The Rev. Wm. McMahon, one of the most remarkable preachers who ever held connection with the Tennessee Conference, gave a period of service to Mississippi. About 1818, the Rev. John Johnson, an eccentric but remarkable man, came twelve hundred miles from Sandy Circuit, to serve Natchez, Miss. In 1818, he was the first station preacher in Nashville, Tenn. He became one of the foremost preachers of his Church in his day.

About 1838, Rev. Jno. M. Holland, who was born of a fine family in Williamson County, Tennessee, one of the best counties in the State, was made presiding elder of the Holly Springs District, and later was agent for the Holly Springs University (Mississippi). Rev. Logan D. Overall preached in Mississippi for a short time. Rev. Daniel Alexander served the church at Columbus, Miss., for perhaps a year.

Rev. Dr. Joseph B. Walker, who entered the Tennessee Conference in his young manhood, gave many of his best years to the Church in New Orleans.

Rev. Dr. P. P. Neely, who was born in Rutherford County, Tenn., and who very early developed into a brilliant preacher, was stationed in 1841 at Holly Springs, Miss.

Rev. Ashury Davidson, horn in Bedford County, Tenn., gave a valuable ministry to Mississippi between the years of 1845 and 1852.

Rev. Richmond Randle was admitted into the Tennessee Conference in 1832, and gave a prominent service to Louisiana and died in that Conference.

Rev. Jno. S. Davis entered the Tennessee Conference in 1836, with Dr. J. B. Walker, and became a very prominent member of the Louisana Conference. Rev. Thos. J. Lowrey, who was a Tennessee preacher, came to North Mississippi and rendered an effective service.

Time, spacc, and memory would fail me, to be perfectly accurate and mention the names of all the men who have come from the Tennessee Conference and have given to these two States a fruitful minstry. Dr. W. E. Munsey, who served Rayne Memorial Church for a time, was born in the mountains of East Tennessee.

Rev. Dr. John Matthews, brilliant, eccentric, and entertaining, was born in Bedford County, Tennessee. He gave a number of years to New Orleans Methodism.

Rev. Dr. F. R. Hill, my dear friend, was born in Nashville, Tenn., a descendant of the man who came as the first white settler, where Nashville now stands, and was admitted into the itinerancy in the Tennessee Conference. He had a long and remarkable history of successful service in the pastorate, and has given, maybe, fifteen years to Methodism in Louisiana and New Orleans. And I do not forget my young and efficient friend, Rev. W. H. Coleman. He was recommended from the Clarksville District, while I was presiding elder, for admission into the Tennessee Conference. He came to Louisiana and began what has proven to be (perhaps) fifteen years of the most fruitful service to Methodism. I am sure if any brother ever looked away towards the hills of Tennessee, and thought lightly of the little sister Conference, which leans its head against the East Tennessee mountains, and dips its feet in the beautiful waters of the Tennessee River, when he reads over the names of these illustrious men, who came and labored in this field of Methodism, he will take back all disposition to undervalue the "Old Jerusalem" Conference, and will express love for the Conference that has sent so many true men to toil in these wide fields.

THE NEED AND THE OPPORTUNITY.

We are living in a tremendous day. Tremendous facts daily startle us, tremendous problems press for solution, tremendous issues are at stake.

The life of the leader is under tremendous strain. Little men are inevitably thrust aside. The demand of this crucial day is for men—big men, envisioned men, courageous men, mighty men—men at their best.

The minister of God stands among the leaders. His place makes him conspicuous. He must meet this demand, if he is to hold the respect of his fellows and be accounted worthy of his place. For him to fail in this hour is little short of treason to God, his Church and mankind.

But to be at one's best even the strongest and most gifted must relax at times. The bow that is kept strung soon loses its strength and value. Proper rest, comradeship, exchange of view-points and renewed inspiration are essential to maintained efficiency and high-class leadership. To neglect these God-appointed agencies of rejuvenation is as unreasonable and fatal as neglect of the Sabbath and needed slumber. The greater the stress and strain of life the more urgent the necessity of seizing and using proper occasions for respite and re-empowering.

The Seashore Divinity School, conducted each summer on the beautiful Seashore Camp Ground in Biloxi, Miss., on the Gulf, seeks to provide all the elements of recreation and inspiration needed by the hard-worked Methodist preacher.

This summer the best treat of all is prepared.

Bishop William A. Quayle, D.D., LL.D., one of American Methodism's greatest leaders and platform speakers, will be there.

Rev. Charles LeRoy Goddell, D. D., the greatest evangelist-pastor on the contingent, will be there.

Rev. John W. Shackford, D.D., of the department of Sunday School Teacher Training, will be there.

Bishop J. H. McCoy, D.D., of Birmingham, Ala., will be there.

Other speakers not yet announced will be there.

And scores of the choicest spirits among the preachers and laymen of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana will be there with their Christly influence.

The under-graduates will have the opportunity of capable instruction, and, if they have read the books in their course of study for the year previous to the session, they will be permitted to take the examinations.

A delightful post-graduate course has been provided, consisting of "Bury's Student's History of Greece," by Dr. Everett Kimball; "An Introduction to Philosophy," by George Stuart Fullerton; "The Story of Our Bible," by Rev. H. B. Hunting; "Ivanhoe," by Sir Walter Scott, and "Macbeth," by Shakespeare. The set can be had at our Publishing House for $5. Send for them now.

Prizes of $25, $15, and $10, respectively, are offered for the first, second and third best essays on, "How to Increase the Efficiency of the Country Church," a subject that any Methodist preacher should blush to confess he has not studied.

But we will mail you fuller information later.

Seashore Divinity School seeks to provide for the Methodist preacher the most healthful recreation, the most helpful association, the most profitable information and the most blessed inspiration that he may thereby become "a greater man for a greater service."

It will pay any charge many times over to send its pastor to share the benefits of the School. There are public day schools that will not employ a teacher who will not agree to spend some part of the summer months in special study.

Do not forget the time—June 26 to July 5, 1917—and do not appoint any other meetings for that date.

The fee is only $2.50 for the entire session, or 50 cents for one day. Board and lodging from $1.25 to $2.00 a day.

The railroads put on special summer rates to all Mississippi seacoast towns.

Bring as many lay brethren with you as possible. They will thank you.

For further information write Rev. C. W. Crisler, Brookhaven, Miss.; Rev. H. H. McNeill, D.D., Dothan, Ala.; Rev. W. W. Holmes, 1127 Fern Street, New Orleans, La.; Rev. J. E. Cunningham, Corinth, Miss. or to myself.

AN EMBODIED BENEDICTION.

(First Corinthians 3:6.)

From the holy shrine of Night,
On the wistful, upturned faces
Of the roses, falls the dew;
Through the gift of rain from heaven,
Through the boon of air and light,
Year by year each child of Nature
May its lease of life renew.

All unselfish, all impartial,
Come the gifts from Nature's hand,
On the night shade, on the roses,
On the rich or barren sod;
And each seed its like produces
Till a harvest fills the land;
Man may plant and Nature water,
But the increase comes from God.

Air and soil and sun and water,
Working through their ways unknown,
Through what hidden, secret process,
Gradual—through an ordered plan—
Bring the mystery of Springtime!
Seed by man and Nature sown
Fill the earth with golden harvest
For the sustenance of man.

Side by side the ash and cypress,
Cedar, holly, oak and pine;
Side by side the varied blossoms
With an equal vigor thrive.
From the selfsame soil and sunshine
Flower and shrub and tree and vine
Draw the essence of their being,
And the means through which they live.

Northward, southward, eastward, westward,
Come the travelers from afar,
Each with different incentive
And through varied ways may come.
Yet all eyes are fixed intently
On the selfsame guiding Star—
On the far-off Holy City,
For all highways lead to Rome!
When the Sabbath bells are sending
O'er the city, o'er the vale,
Peals that whisper, "Come and worship!
God is mercy, God is grace,"
In the city's gorgeous temple,
In the wee church in the dale,
Kneel we at the hour appointed,
Each in his accustomed place.

At a touch of fires celestial
Pent up feelings overflow,
As the Rock its living waters
Yielded to the Prophet's rod;
God's eternities a harvest
Reap from seeds that man may sow—
"Paul may plant, Apollos water,"
But salvation comes from God.

* * * * *

Is it a song from the gates ajar?
Or wafted down from the Morning Star?
A wandering voice from the realms of Light?
The haunting strain of a woodland sprite?
That tremulous note that seems to float
Out on the air from a source remote?
So low, so faint, 'tis scarcely heard,
The mating song of the mocking-bird!
And hark! another ethereal note,
Clear and pure as a far-off bell,
Thrills to the ear from the mottled throat
Of a thrush, deep hid in the shadowed dell.
And the vibrant song of the mountain lark;
The redbird's whistle, clear and keen,
Like blades of music cleaves the dark
From its hiding-place in the evergreen.
And lake and river, and hill and plain
Their voices blend in the glad refrain.
And o'er the hill, lo! the Morning Star,
The Prophet of Day, in his robe of white
Stands proud and calm on the walls of night
In the glow of the gates of Morn ajar!

And a bird's notes whisper from glade and dell,
"God rules the world and all is well."

* * * * *

Hear the voice of Nature singing
In a softened undertone—
"Comes the free gift of the Spirit
As the harvest from the sod;
God, through Nature brings the harvest,
From the seed that man has sown;
"Paul may plant, Apollos water,
But the increase comes from God."

Church News

The famous Rheims Cathedral' is reported to have been greatly injured by German shells in a battle on April 26.

The Protestant Episcopal Church which set out to raise a fund of $5,000,000 to take care of its aged and disabled preachers has succeeded in securing $7,500,000.

Under the pastorate of Dr. J. H. Jowett, the average mid-week prayer meeting at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City is stated to have been about 400.

Dr. L. W. Munhall, the noted evangelist of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has been elected President of the Philadelphia Conference Historical Society. Dr. Munhall seems to stand well with the brethren who know him best.

Under a decision of Surrogate Cohalan, who dismissed a contest instituted by distant relatives, the bulk of the $2,000,000 estate of the late Miss Jessie Gillender of New York City will go to the Paulist Fathers, of the Roman Catholic Church.

Rev. A. D. Betts, of the South Carolina Conference, has been elected President of Paine College, our school for Negroes at Angusta, Ga., in place of Mr. D. E. Atkins, resigned. Mr. Betts was for a time a member of the Mississippi Conference.

We take the following from the Pacific Methodist Advocate: "The Billy Snnday Tabernacle in New York City seats 17,000. There is standing room for 3,000. A cafeteria in charge of the Y. W. C. A. will accommodate 818 persons. A rest room and a hospital form an annex to the Tabernacle. From Billy Sunday down, the equipment is np-to-date."

Some of onr Church papers are printing advice from so-called Canadian Methodists concerning the matter of Methodist union in the United States. Having been striving for the complete wiping out of Methodism in their own country for some years with a pretty good prospect of success, it is not surprising that that these gentlemen are pleased to see movements with similar possibilities under way in the States. The true logic of the preachment of the extreme unionists is the extinguishment of denominationalism as rapidly as possible.

SHREVEPORT PREACHERS' MEETING.

Present: C. D. Atkinson, P. E.; W. W. Drake, S. J. Davies, S. A. Steel; Dr. A. C. Clement, and Rev. O. M. Posey, visitors.

The Rev. C. D. Atkinson presided. After the regular business was attended to, a committee was appointed to draft suitable resolutions expressive of our love for Rev. F. R. Hill, D. D., whose death had just been reported. Dr. Hill had many warm friends in Shreveport A resolution was adopted expressing our pleasure at the return of Bishop Moss to hold the next session of our Conference. The Brown meeting was discussed, and plans adopted for getting everything ready for the meeting in the fall. Dr. Wynn reported on the Centenary campaign, and said he felt greatly encouraged at the results so far. Dr. Clement, the head hustler who is conducting the campaign, made a brief address, and also expressed the hope that in spite of adverse conditions, they would succeed in "putting it over." The local workers are fortunate in having the assistance of Dr. Sexton in the campaign, for this wizard has great influence in this "neck of the woods." Some folks around here won't turn loose a nickel till they "ax George," and when he says so, they shell ont. Dr. Steel introduced a resolution that was unanimously agreed to, that in the interest of the universe a preacher ought to have one evening in the week at home with his family. There was no debate on the subject, but the question is how to do it. The press of the city has been very cordial in its co-operation with the Centenary campaign. Some of the "old buddies," to use Sexton's lingo, have had their pictures in the papers, and some of them would not be mistaken for Apollo. Wynn is the handsomest man among the bunch, perhaps (don't leave out that 'perhaps,' it is my only protection), but his picture made him look like he was an impersonated grouch. By the way, they onght to get his picture now while this campaign is in full headway, for his handsome face is illuminated with a smile as bright as the sunlight. But the "Reporter" may lose his job if he monkeys too much with the portraits of the brethren, for some of them won't bear comment. REPORTER.

CONCERNING CHURCH UNION.

The question of organic Church union has somewhat fallen into the rear, both because of the stronger interest in the great war, and because the subject had become somewhat hackneyed, with little evidence of progress. Rev. Dr. Peter Ainslee, of the Christian Church, and editor of a special magazine on Church Union, discusses this subject in "The Christian Work." The article is very sane, and it impresses us as showing much more patience than has sometimes marked his writings. We are glad to note this, and the spread of such a spirit will do more toward true union than the imitation produced by constant irritation. Some of the abuse, ridicule and unwise fervor on this subject has retarded the growth of union. The demand now is to recognize the clear line of distinction between the believers in Christ and in the Holy Scriptures, and those who are unbelievers in these things. When this distinction is clearly drawn, and the real danger of the enemy of false teachings is clearly perceived, it will do much to bind believers closer together in the face of the common peril. If men meet on the great fundamentals, those minor convictions and interpretations will be respected, and will continue. If any believe that the points of difference are sufficiently essential as to require testimony, their convictions will be respected, and they will receive general fellowship, confidence, and even aid from their brethren of different views upon union. It is this freedom, confidence and respect that provides the soil and the atmosphere in which union most vigorously prospers. Just now the healthy separation of evangelical believers from those who are unbelievers is more important than the formal union of bodies. When once the irritant is removed, and the poison counteracted, the wound will heal, but not before.—The Presbyterian.

LIFE AS A SCHOOL.

Beyond all this, life to me is a school in which to learn how best to serve, a school in which we may be taught how best to employ and develop our special talents for service here and, I believe, hereafter. In order to achieve results, call it sentimentality or what you will, rather than accept any or all the "isms" for my teacher, I prefer to go to Jesus Christ and learn of Him—of Him who brought us the good news of God's love to us—individually; who showed that even a shameful death and a despised life do not affect the real value and joy of a life of love, and who dignified each human life by saying it even can be useful in that way to God above. Meanwhile, He seems to me to teach first, last, and always, that it is better not to exist at all than not to love; and this I most firmly believe.—Wilfred T. Grenfell, M. D., in What Life Means to Me.

"The supreme concern of life is to do Christ's will and to bear whatever he sends into the life. All personal considerations, such as home, friends, even life itself, are tributary to this purpose."

KEEPING SUNDAY SCHOOL CHILDREN IN THE CHURCH.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

To any critical observer of the times it is evident that the teaching function in the Church is being magnified and the preaching function minimized. The field is full of Sunday school specialists, and many of them are so enthused in their specialties that one might judge from their enthsiastic utterances that all we have to do to make a model Christian is to get him as a baby on the Sunday school Cradle Roll and hold him in some of the classes to adult life, and the work is done, without the aid of pastor or any other Church agency. And, as a consequence of such doctrine, we are not surprised to find some parents feeling that if their children go to Sunday school they have "made their religion," and no further attendance upon Church for the day is necessary. And many of the children who are brought into the membership of the Church with much enthusiasm on "Decision Days" never keep one vow that they then make; and later they must be won to an active Christian life, just as are those who have never attended Sunday school. A business firm that would lose so large a per cent of its profits as does the Sunday school the fruits of its work, would soon have a special commission working on the problem, that the loss might be stopped. But many of our Sunday school specialists are so busy crowding the children in at the front door that they have no time to give attention to the guarding of the back door. As a supplementary agency to the worship and preaching of the Church, the Sunday school is of inestimably great value; but when this is allowed to be substituted for the "foolishness of preaching," as ordained by God for the saving of the world, then it is questionable as to whether or not the Sunday school should ever have been born. Christ "began both to preach and to teach," but he did not appoint some sixteen-year-old girls and some untrained laymen to "hear the lessons" of the multitudes and then send them home. But he himself, who "spake as never man spake," did both the preaching and the teaching, while in some of our modern churches, with their large Sunday schools, the pastor must see his growing boys and girls taken from under his ministry and put under the tutelage of persons who have neither had special training for their work, nor do they sometimes give more than thirty minutes per week, and sometimes not half that much, we dare say, to the preparation for their class work. The pastor's divine call to preach and his years of training and specializing are valueless, as far as the pupils of such a Sunday school are concerned; and in some cases it might be considered an economic waste to have a preacher at all simply to administer the sacraments to the adults of the Church, and to preach to those of mature age, the most of whom were converted in the days before the Sunday schools were substituted for the Church, and are now estahlished in their Christian lives. Unlike an army specialist, the pastor's work, according to this conception, is not essential to train the coming force in the Kingdom, but more to comfort the retired members of the pension roll.

In analizing the excuses that we sometimes hear given as justifying reasons for our Sunday school scholars not staying to the services of the Church, we note the following:

1. The Sunday school is a part of the church, say some, and when a scholar has attended Sunday school he has kept his vow and obligation of church membership. According to this conception, the church is run in sections, and which one a member attends is simply a matter of choice. If he likes the Sunday school better, well and good; if the preaching service, it is his own affair.

Over against this we suggest that when our membership vows "to attend the ordinances of the Church and to support its institutions" were formulated and adopted, the idea that any department of the church should ever be substituted for

THE CENTENARY CAMPAIGN

A special Ten Days' Campaign to raise $100,000 for Centenary College has been under way in Shreveport for some days, having started on Wednesday, May 3. The canvass for funds is under the direction of 12 teams, each having a captain, with Rev. A. E. Clement, of Nashville, Tenn., directing the movement as a whole.

Prior to starting the campaign, there was a preliminary dinner at the Youree Hotel, at which the principal speakers were Dr. George S. Sexton and Mr. O. A. Wright. At this dining enthusiasm was at high tide, and Mr. J. C. Foster, Chairman of the Advance Pledge Committee, announced subscriptions already made, as follows: E. A. Frost and F. T. Whited, $3000 each; J. B. Ardis, Dr. J. L. Scales, T. C. Clanton, Foster & Glassell, S. H. Bolinger, G. S. Prestridge, and O. A. Wright, $1000 each—a total of $13,000.

The following are the team captains: M. L. Bath, E. P. Carstens, D. P. Eubanks, Mayor John McW. Ford, J. C. Foster, J. H. Fullilove, Jr., W. A. McKennon, Dr. A. B. Nelson, G. S. Prestridge, Dr. J. L. Scales, and J. M. Robinson.

The plan provided for a luncheon at noon each day, at which reports were to be submitted. It also arranged for having the progress of the campaign indicated in a scale placed on the Commercial National Bank Building.

The slogan for the campaign is "Watch the Centenary College Boy Climb the Bank Building." With every addition to the fund, the figure of a college boy will ascend the scale on the building, his hand pointing to the latest total.

Good News.

On last Monday, May 7, Dr. R. H. Wynn sent us the following telegram: "Centenary campaign beyond $30,000 on the fourth day." This good news will make many hearts happy throughout the State of Louisiana.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

(An Editorial Utterance in the Shreveport Times of May 2.)

We do not have to hark back many years to the time when all of us were enthusiastic over the prospect of inducing the powers that be in Louisiana Methodism to move Centenary College from its old home at Jackson to Shreveport. We enlisted in the fight vigorously, even joyously. Here was something worth fighting for, we told ourselves, and so we gave battle with an order which recalled the brave days when we fought for the big enterprises which do so much to help build a city.

It is certain that we expended no less effort, in its way, to get Centenary College than we did to get the Kansas City Southern railroad, although we looked upon the latter as a more material achievement and in some ways more worth while from a strictly commercial standpoint. And as an earnest of the fact that we meant business, we set about getting Centenary along much the same lines as we were accustomed to do in getting a new railroad. We proposed to vote a subsidy to Centenary in the form of a tax, and when we learned that this could not be done under the law, we were disappointed, but this did not prove an insuperable obstacle—a good many of us subscribed to a voluntary tax and paid it for a period of years.

Thus it was that Shreveport secured the removal of this historic institution of learning from Jackson, where for so many years it had been a landmark of education and a source of pride. The battle won, we promised ourselves and Centenary great things. We would make Shreveport a "college town," with all that this term implied. We would watch and help the new Centenary grow on foundations firmer and more useful than had been the case with old Centenary. Most of us had secret dreams and ambitious plans for the growth and upbuilding of the institution.

Well, we have waited and watched and the years have gone by. Centenary has justified itself fully, considering the resources at its command. The Methodist Conference of Louisiana has done what it could, with all the varied burdens of the Church in the many fields of endeavor resting upon it, to put Centenary upon its feet and to help it forward. The college has increased in usefulness and in the benefits it conferred upon a growing student body and upon Shreveport. More particularly in the past few years, under the presidency of Dr. Wynn, have its potentialities been revealed.

This brings us down to the present day and to the duty and the responsibility that rest upon this community in particular and upon lovers of educational progress throughout Louisiana in general to place Centenary in a position to realize the ambitions that we had for it in the days that we struggled to have it established here. We should regard this as no less a privilege than a duty, because Centenary has reached that point in its evolution as a college where it is capable of exercising a powerful influence in civic welfare, in the development of social ideals and in the promotion of higher education. Shreveport has a selfish interest in the institution, not only for these reasons, but also because it is a material asset worthy of every encouragement.

To a more or less pronounced extent we have neglected Centenary, that is to say, those of us who were not immediately identified with the work that it has been doing. Our first enthusiasm in making sure of its removal to Shreveport over, we have been content to let the board of trustees and devoted men like the late Dr. Hill and Dr. Wynn, work out its salvation. The Centenary of to-day is a monument to their indefatigable labors and to the indomitable courage with which they have striven to surmount a lethargic public interest.

A movement has been launched to raise $100,000 as an endowment fund for Centenary College and it is needless for The Times to state that it considers this movement one that is fraught with the most far-reaching consequences, not merely for Centenary itself, but for the city of Shreveport and for educational progress, which must always remain of prime importance to the people of Louisiana. There could be no better tribute to the high character of the work that is being done at Centenary and to the possibilities of good in the upbuilding of this institution than in the standing of the men who have enlisted in this campaign and who are cheerfully lending their support to Dr. Wynn in his efforts to increase the usefulness and consequently the benefits of Centenary.

The Times earnestly hopes that the campaign now under way will meet with success. Other cities in this country spend millions of dollars in the development of such institutions, well knowing that such investments are justified both from the standpoint of civic interest and from the standpoint of the material gain derived from them. Centenary, above any other institution of learning in Louisiana that is divorced from State aid, deserves every encouragement necessary to its growth and development. The opportunity is here presented for Shreveport to become in truth and in fact the "college town" of its dreams.

It has been announced that Cambridge University, England, will confer the LL.D. degree upon the Hon. Walter Hines Page, United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

By the will of the late Isaac Dudley Fletcher, the Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York City will receive a gift of $7,000,000, the second largest donation ever made to that institution.

The following institutions have been designated by the United States War Department as training schools for prospective army aviators: Cornell, Illinois, Ohio (State), California, and Texas Universities, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The reports received up to April 15, 1917, showed that during the year 1916 there were in operation in Louisiana 441 sawmills, which sawed 4,492,997,000 feet of lumber. The figures for Mississippi for the same period, so far as reported, were 328 mills, which cut lumber to the amount of 3,905,842,000 feet.

It is stated that as a means of providing revenue for the war with Germany postage may be increased a cent an ounce on both first and second-class mail matter. This would be a pretty heavy tax upon papers, which are already hard hit by the phenomenally high cost of all kinds of printing material. If this scheme is adopted, it will require three cents to send a letter.

NAIL THE FLAG TO THE PLOW.

By W. B. Lockwood.

Nail the flag to the plow—
The country needs grain,
While the sailor-boys guard
The tracks of the main.
God gave you the fields
And the sun with its light,
Then double their yields
While the sailor-boys fight.

Nail the flag to the plow—
The soldiers must eat
While defending the trenches
Or suffer defeat.
You can help the brave soldier
At this time of his need,
By increasing your acres
And planting more seed.

Nail the flag to the plow—
Your children and wife
Must be saved from starvation
While the world is in strife.
Your duty is plain—
Your mission is grand—
Each man is a hero
Who's tilling the land.

You say you're too old
To fight with a gun;
Then work in the fields
Till the setting of sun,
And show to the world
By the sweat on your brow,
That you're serving your country
With a flag on your plow.

PURITY GIVES POWER.

There are still many persons in the world that need to be impressed with the fact that the purer the blood is the greater is the power of the system to remove disease and the less the liability to contract it. Persons whose blood is in good condition are much less likely to take cold or to be long troubled with it, or to catch any contagious or infectious disease, than are those whose blood is impure and therefore impoverished and lacking in vitality. The best medicine for purifying the blood is Hood's Sarsaparilla, and persons suffering from any blood disease or any want of tone in the system are urged to give this medicine a trial. It is especially useful at this time of year.—Adv.

The Great Battle

NOTES.

An Indiana judge, according to a contemporary, has ruled that a man who becomes intoxicated in a saloon has a legal right to lie down and sleep there.

On May 1, 529 saloons, 15 breweries, and 10 rectifying plants went out of existence in Nebraska, as a result of the recently enacted prohibition law coming into effect.

In Florida, the State Legislature has passed a measure submitting a prohibition constitutional amendment to the people. A bill has also been enacted which limits the amount of liquor that may be shipped to any one person in "dry" territory to a quart a month—this law to take effect at once.

A resolution urging National prohibition as a war measure was unanimously adopted by the American Society for Clinical Investigation in its session at Atlantic City, N. J., of May 2, and President Wilson was informed of this action. This society includes in its membership some of the foremost physicans in the United States.

THE AUTHOR OF THE WEBB-KENYON ACT SAYS WAR CALLS FOR A DRY NATION.

War's demand for a dry nation will be pointed ont by Representative Edwin Yates Webb, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, and author of the Webb-Kenyon Act, in The Sunday School Times of May 5. The Webb-Kenyon Act empowers the individual States to prevent liquor shipments from wet States into their own borders. The masterly manner in which Mr. Webb drew this act was attested when the Supreme Court in January declared it to be constitutional. Congressman Webb says:

"If our national life is at stake, our soldiers and sailors are the prop upon which such a life rests, and every drunken or drinking member of our armed forces weakens to that extent our national prop. This statement seems to me to be axiomatic. If so, then it is unthinkabie that our great country, while in a life-and-death struggle, should permit one drop of whiskey to go into the hands or mouths of its fighting forces. We should, therefore, have by all means a law prohibiting, under severe penalties, selling or giving intoxicants to any soldier or sailor of the United States. * * *

"But a sober army cannot long endure if it is dependent upon a drinking or drunken population."

Mr. Webb states "that the President and his advisers have the liquor problem now under consideration," and then he goes on to show what Congress could do to give us National Prohibition. It is a timely utterance, and should be read in full as it appears in The Sunday School Times, published by The Sunday School Times Co., 1031 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION NEEDED.

The movement toward nation-wide prohibition in the United States has attained tremendous momentum in the last few years, and with the entrance of the nation into war new and powerful arguments are marshaled in its favor. All over the country the word is being spread that the world's food supply is dangerously low. Appeals are being made and great organizations perfected to produce more and waste less. Instantly then the question arises: What about the waste through liquor? What about the hurt to the efficiency of men who drink? What about the absorption in a worse than useless occupation of the energies of the thousands of workers who make that drink? What about the waste of the grain that ought to be kept for food? Let these questions be asked often enough and they will drive home their inevitable conclusion: the nation's real preparedness involves nation-wide prohibition. —Southern Churchman.

SOME OBSERVATIONS OF A TEXAN.

(Reprinted from a recent issue of the Texas Christian Advocate.)

During my recent visit to my old home in Belleville, West Virginia, I made a special study of the Unification question as it is on the borderland. Our brethren in the Methodist Episcopal Church are willing to unite on the principle of the "Big and Little Fish" parable. The big fish said to the little fish, "Let me swallow you and then we will be one fish, you know." Our people at Bellevilie are not willing for such a union. They prefer to swim in the river of God's love, "little and unknown; prized and loved by God alone." The feeling engendered by the war between the North and South still exists, and there will not soon be a union of hearts on either side in that community. I am fully convinced the best thing for us to do is to let well enough alone and remain as we are.

West Virginia has prohibition and the law is as well enforced as any other law. Parkersburg, the capital city of Wood County, is a town of 25,000 population. Business is better and the city is growing faster under prohibition than it did with the open saloon. We had a great time and a good meeting in old Believille, but I was glad to get back to old Texas and down to hard work again.

KEEP AN EYE ON THE MORMONS.

Mormonism is one of the greatest menaces which threaten this country. If people generally realized the greatness of the danger from this gigantic organization, the citizens of this country who believe in the fundamental principles upon which the government is founded would rise in their might and crush it as a political power. Of course it must be dealt with in a different way as a religious power and influence. There had been a feeling with many that the Mormons were all in Utah and that the rest of the country need not be concerned about it. The fact is that there is not a State in the union nor a civilized country in the world which is not feeling their influence. Their missionaries are constantly going all over this country teaching their doctrines and circulating their literature. This propaganda has generally been of a very quiet kind, but it seems now that they are coming more into the open. Following the example of that unmitigated fakir, Pastor Russell, they are now making use of the secular press by furnishing the weekly papers with their sermons. The Christian people of the country should enter their most vigorous protest against their publication.—Presbyterian of the South.

FORTUNATE.

Those of us—we old fellows so to write it—how fortunate we are! If we had delayed applying for admission into the Annual Conference to these latter days—the days when the "Carnegie units" must be considered—how many of us would have to stay out? It may be all right to have the standard for those who have been admitted high and continually being placed higher, but there is such a thing as having the "entrance requirements" too high. Some "mighty" good men, men who have done a great work for the Church and the world, would be left out now if they had to have the number of "units" required. But we suppose Mr. Carnegie knows what ought to be the educational furnishing of the men who wish to preach the gospel and become members of an Annual Conference.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

INFLUENCING A WORLD LEADER.

Recent news bears witness afresh to the influence which even a plain and humble life may exert upon the world. Richard Lloyd, who died last month in Wales was a poor man, who supported his family by cobbling shoes. When his sister's husband died, Richard Lloyd took her little son David into his family. He gave the boy all the education the village schools afforded, and, as a matter of encouragement to the child, himself took up the same studies. Sometimes the exercises and "examples" in arithmetic were worked out with chalk upon sole leather, in lieu of slates or paper. Nor did the cobbler, who was a deeply religious man, neglect the spiritual in the boy David's education. Not only was the mind trained, but the soul was nurtured. David became a lawyer, then, when he was but twenty-seven years of age, he was made a member of the House of Commons. Now he is known as David Lloyd-George, Premier of the British Nation, and their great leader. Plain old Richard Lloyd, working over the lad David, praying over him, following him in his public life with letters of wise counsel and more prayers, lived to see the honors that had come to his ward, and to thank God accordingly. Mentally, he could never have performed for humanity what his nephew has been able to accomplish. Yet, faithfully he labored to teach the child the things of God, and lo! unawares he was fitting one who was to be called "to the kingdom for such a time as this."—The Presbyterian.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

February 12 was the anniversary of Lincoln's birth. He will always have a great place in history. His was a strong, great life. We honor him, and believe it would have been vastly better for the South as well as for the nation if the fanatic who assassinated him had never been born. With all of his goodness and greatness, however, Lincoln never became a member of any branch of the Church. We once heard a Bishop say to thousands of young church people: "Abraham Lincoln towered from his shoulders above every other man born of woman in the last six thousand years." We thought, "What would have become of the Church, if all other men had followed his example," and we did not believe it wise to thus unqualifiedly hold him up before young people as the paragon of all goodness and greatness. This neglect or indifference to the Church of Jesus Christ was the fly in the ointment of a noble life. Let no reader think that we undervalue his heroic character or that we fail to appreciate his wonderful career. But we would be untrue to our convictions if we did not tell our young people that there was at least this spot on the sun.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

THE BOY WHO WASN'T AFRAID.

Two bright little fellows, named Harry and Will,
Were just the same age and the same size until
One day in their travels it chanced that they met
A queer little creature surnamed Cigaret.

This queer little creature made friends with the boys,
And told them a story of masculine joys
He held for their sharing. "I tell you,' quoth he,
"The way to be manly and big is through me."

Will listened and yielded, but Harry held out.
"I think your assertions are open to doubt."
"Afraid!" echoed Will. "Oh, you cowardly stick!
Well, I'm not afraid, just look here!" As he spoke
He blew off a halo of cigaret smoke.

Five years from the meeting I saw them again,
The time had arrived when they should be men,
But strangely enough, although Harry boy stood
As tall and as strong as a tree in the wood,
Poor Will seemed a dwarf; sunken eye, hollow cheek,
Stooped shoulders, proclaimed him unmanly and weak.

With thumb and forefinger he listlessly rolled
A cigaret, smoothing each wrinkle and fold;
And the smoke he puffed from his lips, I declare,
Took the form of a demon and grinned from the air.
And it said: "See the wreck of a man that I made
Of the boasting young fellow who was not afraid."

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

THE MAY BASKETS.

Margaret sat by the table making May baskets. As she worked, her face was very sober. For the past two years she and Evelyn Gray had made their May baskets together. This year for the first time in their lives they had quarreled, and it was now almost a week since they had spoken to each other.

"I shant speak until she does," Margaret had kept repeating, yet she had found the week a very long one. Her school work dragged and her play was dull and lifeless.

"This is for Ruth and this for Arthur and this for mamma," she said as she counted up her completed work. She stopped with a lump rising in her throat. She had always hung one for Evelyn before.

"Here's a whole sheet of pink paper left!" For a few moments the little girl stood hesitating.

"I'm going to—no, I won't. Yes, I will," and before she could change her mind again, she seized paper and scissors and went resolutely to work.

When she had finished, she had a dainty little basket of pink and white, the prettiest she had made. She filled it with candy and peanuts and set it aside.

As soon as evening came she hastened out. She would hang this one first. The house was but a short distance down the street. She hung the basket on the knob, rang the bell and before anyone could answer it, she was half-way toward home.

The next day in school she looked at Evelyn but saw that she was studying hard. At recess she stood around expectantly, and after school she waited a few moments until she saw Evelyn going home with another little girl.

Margaret could not keep back the tears.

"She might have known it was mine," she said with a little catch in her voice. "I made it pink, cause I knew it was her favorite color. She doesn't want to make up."

She did not glance at Evelyn that afternoon, and when school was out, she hurried quickly home.

Just after dark the doorbell rang. It was a May basket, of course. Margaret rushed to the door in time to see a little figure hastening away in the distance.

On the knob was a basket just like the one she had hung the night before, only it was blue instead of pink.

"Oh!" she cried, "it's from Evelyn! She knows I like blue." Her eyes shone as she carried it into the house.

The next morning on her way to school she saw Evelyn a little ahead and ran to overtake her.

"I had a lovely May basket last night," she exclaimed. "It was blue and white."

"And I had a pink and white one, night before last," answered Evelyn.

The two little girls looked into each other's eyes.

"You hung it!" they cried together. Then they put their arms about each other, and as they went on chatting gayly no one would suppose that they had ever been anything but the best of friends.—American Messenger.

JIMMIE SQUIRREL'S ESCAPE.

Jimmie Squirrel lived on a beautiful old campus with lots of nice feathery elms that stretched out long, droopy branches to jump across. He was a funny little snubby-nosed fellow, and the first time he tried to beg nuts from a student, as his mother had taught him, he nearly fell over on his little snub nose. The student laughed and said: "Well, James," but Jimmie was so embarrassed that he frisked around his fuzzy gray tail and jumped for the lowest hanging bough.

The student stopped laughing and tried to coax him down with nuts, but he wouldn't come until the student had gone away. Then he slid down the trunk, with his beady little black eyes on the walk, and snatched up a nut in his paw. It was a peanut, and nice and soft to crack and eat.

The student tried to get Jimmie to eat nuts from his shoulder, but Jimmie would only cock a bright eye and come a little nearer, with his tail balanced, ready to flick off at a move.

Jimmie had always wanted to play in a big elm just across the street, but his mother had warned him never to go there, that only the campus was safe for little gray squirrels. But, like other children, Jimmie got tired of obeying his mother, and one day when she was not around he scrooched down his fuzzy gray tail and scooted across the car tracks to that tree as fast as he could go.

The branches were just right for swinging on and playing hide and seek with the birds and Jimmie was having a beautiful time, when a naughty little boy in the street below with a sling-shot happened to spy him.

"Oh, come on, fellers; here's a squirrel," called the little boy. Jimmie's poor little heart came right up to his throat. How he wished he had obeyed his mother!

The little boy kept shooting at him with his sling-shot, and the other boys came and threw stones, and Jimmie jumped and dodged from branch to branch, but it wasn't any fun any more.

Pretty soon a car came in across the road and a lot of student's got out. Some of them saw the crowd of boys across the road and came over to see what was the matter. Jimmie saw them, too, and began to chatter at the top of his voice. When they came nearer he saw that one of them was his student. He said:

"Hello, boys; what's the matter?"

Then he looked up in the tree and saw Jimmie.

"Why, it's James," he said. "Here, you young rascals, get out of here quick, and don't let me catch you doing this again."

He said it so threateningly that the bad boys were scared and started running off down the street.

"Come on down, James," said his student. "It's safer on the campus."

Jimmie didn't want to come down a bit, but it was getting dark and he was afraid of those boys, and the campus looked ever so far away. So he sidled down the trunk and jumped from branch to branch, scolding all the while. When he got to the lowest branch he jumped right onto the student's shoulder, and maybe he wasn't glad to be carried safely back to the campus again!

He never went off the campus again, but he often came up and ate peanuts out of the student's hand after that, or sat on his shoulder. And never again did he disobey his mother.—E. A. Stuart, in the Pittsburgh Dispatch.

"THE LADIES' AID WILL DO THE REST."

We've put a grand addition on the good old church at home;
It's just the latest kilter, with a gallery and a dome.
It seats a thousand people, the finest in all the town,
And when 'twas dedicated, why, we planked ten thousand down;
That is, we paid five thousand; every deacon did his best,
And the Ladies' Aid Society, it promised all the rest.

They'll give a hundred sociables, cantatas, too, and teas;
They'll bake a thousand angel cakes and tons of cream they'll freeze;
They'll beg and scrape and toil and sweat, for seven years or more,
And they'll start all over again for a carpet on the floor.
No, it isn't just like digging out the money from your vest,
When the Ladies' Aid gets busy and says "We'll pay the rest."

Of course, we're proud of our big church, from pulpit up to spire;
It is the darling of our eyes, the crown of our desire.
But when I see the sisters work to raise the cash that lacks
I somehow feel the church is built on women's tired backs;
And sometimes I can't help thinking, when we reach the region blest,
That men will get the toil and sweat and the Ladies' Aid the rest.

TO CONTRIBUTORS.

All copy submitted for publication should be legibly written on one side of the paper with pen and ink, or typewritten. Matter written with a lead pencil and rolled manuscripts are unacceptable. No copy will be returned unless postage is enclosed for that purpose. In no case will responsibility be assumed for the loss or non-return of articles—the writers should keep copies of them. We do not purchase matter of any kind.

HELP THE ADVOCATE!

We desire once more to appeal urgently to our pastors and other friends to lend the Advocate a helping hand AT ONCE in the various pastoral charges. Perhaps never since the Civil War has there been such a trying time as this for Church publications. The cost of print paper and the other materials that we have to use are already well-nigh ruinously high, and are still going up; and, furthermore, Congress is now considering the question of making a large advance in postal rates. Experience has taught us that what is done in the way of securing subscriptions must be chiefly done in the winter and spring months, and this period has now nearly passed, leaving hundreds, and even thousands, of unrenewed subscriptions upon our books. These will have to be dropped soon unless they are remitted for. And if our circulation is thus reduced, disaster will likely overtake the Conference organ in the fall, if not at an even earlier date.

WILL YOU NOT, DEAR BROTHER, WRITE THE ADVOCATE OFFICE IMMEDIATELY, giving the post-offices in your charge and obtain a list of the subscribers in your field, and make an earnest and faithful effort to secure the renewal of them? We believe that the Church needs to have the New Orleans Advocate properly maintained in this crucial period, but it cannot be done without your active assistance. Because of the hard times, many people are more inclined than usual to cease to take a religious paper; and if things are let alone, the Advocate is certain to fare worse than it ordinarily does. Only prompt and energetic work can tide us successfully over the present menacing situation. May we not count on your assistance?

A GREAT MEETING.

At this writing the union meeting of the Southern Methodist churches of this city is still going on, having been in progress two weeks last Sunday. The interest has deepened and widened until it has become a truly remarkable revival. Dr. Werlein stated publicly last Sunday evening that it had been the greatest meeting held in any Church in New Orleans in perhaps fifty years. The attendance in the morning has been far from what it should have been, but at night the audiences have been very large, frequently overflowing the spacious auditorium (including the galleries and all other available space) of the First Methodist Church. Some of the services have been characterized by wonderful manifestations of the Holy Spirit's power. On last Friday evening, after a powerful discourse by Brother Coale on "The Modern Dance," there were 52 conversions and hundreds of people, many of them young, promised henceforth to use their influence against this harmful diversion. An inspiring consecration service was held last Sunday afternoon, at which six men announced their purpose to enter the ministry, and three young ladies volunteered for missionary work. The number of conversions on that day was said to be 38, and up to last Monday the total number during the meeting was estimated to be near the 500 mark.

Brother Coale, who is one of the General Evangelists of our Church, is a man of unusual spiritual power, and his sermons are clear-cut, forceful, and probing in their effect. They find their way to the heart and conscience, and the results are soon seen in conviction, penitence, and the birth of awakened souls into the Kingdom. He is obviously a man of God, who is dead to the world, and whose whole heart is in his work. Like Billy Sunday, he preaches the old theology—the only theology that can kindle the revival flame. The Bible is to him the very Word of God, and the ultimate authority on all religious and moral questions. He preaches the Gospel as it has always been understood, and there is no note of uncertainty or speculation in any of his discourses. He is free from eccentricities—a plain, practical, sensible, unspoiled Methodist minister, who feels that he is a commissioned ambassador of Christ, and who believes it is the privilege of every Christian worker, even in this materialistic age, to be Spirit-filled and Spirit-led. It is a tonic to one's faith to listen to such a man as Brother Coale and to witness the effect of his earnest, searching messages; it demonstrates the fact that God yet speaks through men whom he has called to proclaim his truth and that the Gospel has not lost its saving power.

We have also been much pleased with Brother Coale's associate workers—his chorister, Brother Spindler, and his other helper, Rev. W. E. Hawkins, of Fort Worth, Texas. They are both choice young men, earnest, capable, and admirable in their manners and deportment. Together, the three make a fine team, and we heartily wish that there were many more like them in Southern Methodism. They have shown that the right kind of work for Christ is effective in pleasure-loving, sinful New Orleans, and if it is so here, it must be so anywhere. Oh, that our Church might realize this, and set herself aggressively to this supreme work, renouncing all worldliness, and seeking for its accomplishment that enduement of power which cometh from above!

A REQUEST.

The Editor of the Advocate, overworked as he is, is moved to make a request of persons sending in matter. It is to ask those forwarding it, to please put it in proper form for publication. We have never, so far as we know, been called a lazy man, but we are being literally overwhelmed by being used by the public as a kind of general amanuensis. We are willing to do such work for persons who do not know how to do it; but when brethren who are fully competent to write thus impose upon us, requesting us to take scattered information and shape it into an announcement or statement that can be printed, or to compile an article from newspapers mailed to us, we feel somewhat inclined to demur. With no clerical assistance in the office, with a heavy correspondence to attend to, with the task of reading and correcting articles that are to be turned over to the linotypists, with our editorial work, with the gathering of matter for the several departments of the paper, and with a goodly share of the proof-reading to do, our hands are somewhat more than full. It is not likely that there is any minister in Louisiana or Mississippi who has a more engrossing or taxing job than is ours. We are very well aware that there are some who imagine otherwise, and who think that the Editor ought to be out of his office and somewhere in the field a large part of the time; but if any brother with such notions would come down and do our work for two or three weeks, we haven't the least doubt that he would change his mind. It would tend to lighten our labors very much if all writing for the Advocate would try to have their copy reach the office ready to be put in type.

A CORRECTION.

The figures that appeared on the first page of the Advocate last week in our brief discussion of the relative strength of the colored communicants in white churches and independent Negro bodies were erroneous at two or three points, as a result of hurried work and a wrong tracing out of the dotted index lines across the page. The figures as to the Seventh Day Adventists (chiefly a white organization), the Colored Primitive Baptists, and the Baptists—National Convention (Independent bodies) were largely excessive. But for the fact that our paper was brought out amid many interruptions last week, the preparation of much of the copy used being very hasty, these mistakes would almost certainly have been detected in advance of publication, as they were as soon as we had time to read the issue carefully. We are now making this statement entirely upon our own initiative, having had no complaint from any quarter.

This correction does not at all upset the point that we sought to make in favor of having the Negro Methodists in an independent Church, since their largest religious achievements have been made in such bodies. The between 300,000 and 350,000 Negro communicants in the Methodist Episcopal Church, with $6,000,000 or $7,000,000 worth of property, make a very meager showing in comparison with the several million Negroes in the independent bodies, with property aggregating nearly $45,000,000. The following figures are from the Negro Year Book, edited by Monroe N. Work, of the Tuskegee Institute: A. M. E. Church—communicants 620,000, property $11,303,489; A. M. E. Zion Church—communicants 568,608, property $4,833,207; C. M. E. Church—communicants 240,000, property $3,500,000; National Convention of Colored Baptists—communicants 2,261,607, property $24,432,272.

ALONG THE BORDER.

The Baltimore Conference had an increase of about 3000 in membership during the past year. As will be seen by reading the brief article, entitled "Observations of a Texan," which is printed in this issue of the Advocate, the work in our Western Virginia Conference is also prospering. We have in the Connection no Conferences truer or more loyal to the ideals and traditions of Southern Methodism than these. What they are accomplishing is a complete refutation of the suggestion (scattered abroad) that our work is in a crumbling condition along the border.

A rumor that a high official of Southern Methodism has declared that unless our Church shall consent to unite with the Northern Methodist Church, nearly all our preachers in certain areas in the West will desert the ranks, has been pretty considerably worked in some sections of the South. But we have never considered this representation in any other light than as an unjust reflection upon our ministers laboring in the fields referred to. No man has presumed to make any such statement in the public prints over his own signature. It is doubtful whether in the entire history of our Church our work along the entire border has ever been more encouraging than it is now.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Shreveport Preachers' Meeting adopted a resolution expressing gratification that the Louisiana Conference has been continued under the episcopal supervision of Bishop Hoss.

More than 20 members were received in the Carrollton Avenue Church of this city during the month of April. Rev. A. F. Vaughan is giving a good account of himself as the shepherd of that flock.

Brother J. L. Bell, a prominent laymen of Newton, Miss., has our thanks for 5 subscriptions from that excellent community. Such service to the Advocate upon the part of the laity is much appreciated.

Rev. J. T. Lewis, of Greenville, Miss., recently delivered a patriotic lecture to the Bolivar County Agricultural High School, at Cleveland, Miss.,

which evoked considerable enthusiasm. His theme was "Liberty—Freedom."

Mr. Paul Renshaw, advertising manager of the D. H. Holmes Company of this city, has been chosen President of the New Orleans Advertising Club. This is a distinction worthily bestowed. Mr. Renshaw is a son of Rev. J. S. Renshaw, of the Memphis Conference.

We are indebted to Rev. O. L. Savage, of Webb, Miss., for 3 additional subscriptions to the Advocate. This makes, in all, 23 subscriptions that Brother Savage has sent us since the beginning of the Conference year. Would that the Conference organ had more such friends!

The following friends (not elsewhere mentioned) have our thanks for two or more subscriptions to the Advocate sent in within the past few days: Rev. T. B. Holloman, Vicksburg, Miss., 2; Rev. J. T. Lewis, Greenville, Miss., 6; Rev A. R. Beasley, Poplar Creek, Miss., 2; Rev. N. B. Harmon, Magnolia, Miss., 2.

Brother B. W. Lewis, of Utica, Miss., gives us 2 subscriptions from his charge, adding in his letter the following note: "We are getting along well with our work. The Lord is blessing us abundantly. Our church at Learned was blown down about a month ago, but we will have it up, ready for use, in a few days."

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, pastor of Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, writes: "God is blessing us at Main Street. We have had 82 accessions this year, 14 of them on profession of faith. We will begin a revival campaign next Sunday, May 13, under the leadership of the Coale evangelistic party. Our people are praying for and expecting a great meeting. Pray for us."

Presiding Elder Mitchell sounds the following optimistic note from the Durant (Miss.) District, in the service of which he is magnifying his office: "We are going to wind up the second round of appointments with things in an encouraging condition, and with the prospect of a good district conference and increased interest and inspiration for the second lap of the year."

Brother W. D. Brock, of Brock, Miss., remits to have the Advocate come to his home and to go to that of his daughter, Mrs. A. S. Hill, of Holcomb, Miss., and, in doing so, says: "I have been taking the New Orleans Advocate something over 40 years, and I must still have it." Brother Brock has long been one of the mainstays of Methodism in his community. Blessings on him!

The Commencement Sermon of Centenary College will be preached in the First Methodist Church of Shreveport on Sunday, June 3, by Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker. The Alumni Address will be delivered in the Noel Memorial Church on June 4, by Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, and the Baccalaureate Address will be delivered by Dr. S. A. Steel at the same place on the same day.

Rev. J. A. Goad, of Myrtle, Miss., says: "On last Tuesday, May 1, we buried Brother W. P. Dodds, the father of Rev. W. N. Dodds, our pastor at Verona, Miss. He was 75 years old, and had been a lifelong Methodist. A good man has gone from us!" We extend sympathy to Brother Dodds and all others who have been bereaved by the home-going of this faithful servant of the Master.

Dr. E. H. Rawlings has been elected Secretary of the Board of Missions for the Foreign Work, succeeding Dr. Ed. F. Cook, resigned; Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, of the Virginia Conference, has been elected Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, in place of Dr. Rawlings, and Rev. C. G. Hounshell, who for some years was a missionary in Korea, has been elected Educational Missionary Secretary.

We desire to state again that all matters pertaining to the Woman's Missionary work should be sent to the Editor of that Department of the Advocate, Mrs. R. F. Harrell, Gloster, Miss. This "Department" is maintained for the express purpose of serving this important phase of our Church work. It is impossible for us, after having given space to this interest, to publish additional matter in other parts of the Conference organ.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, writes: "The Aberdeen District Conference will be held at Amory, Miss., June 19-21. I had hoped to have Bishop Murrah with us, but he has written me that his engagements will not permit him to come. Rev. W. M. Commander has been appointed pastor of the Houston Circuit for the remainder of the year, taking the place of Rev. J. W. Raper, Jr., who at his own request was released from the work."

Rev. W. L. Duren, pastor of our First Church at Columbus, Miss., preached to the students of the A. and M. College of Mississippi in the College Chapel at 8:30 o'clock a. m., on Sunday, April 29, and at the Methodist Church in Starkville at 11 a. m. on the same day. Brother Duren states that he greatly enjoyed meeting again his friends in Starkville, having served that congregation for some weeks when he was a student in Millsaps College several years ago, the Editor then being its pastor and somewhat run-down physically.

Rev. H. W. Bowman, the energetic presiding elder of the Baton Rouge (La.) District, thus refers to the status of things in his field: "Everything is moving along smoothly in the district, and I trust that this will be the best year of my quadrennium. If the work does not advance, it will not be because the preachers are not doing their best." The Baton Rouge District Conference will be held at Amite, May 14-17." We thank Brother Bowman for a cordial invitation to be present.

From a letter from Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Secretary of the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., bearing date of May 2, we extract the following: "I am just from Hernando, Miss., where the brethren gave the Methodist Hospital cause and myself the best of treatment. They are having a great district conference. Brother Holder is making a fine presiding elder. The brethren are doing well, and Brother Johnson, at Hernando, is universally loved. I am now bound for Crystal Springs, Miss., to spend a day at my own district conference—the Brookhaven."

The Columbus (Miss.) Dispatch of May 3 says: "The Caledonia High School closed a most successful session on Wednesday night, April 25. The Commencement sermon was preached on April 22 by Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., and it was pronounced by all who heard it to be the best ever delivered in Caledonia. The address to the graduating class was delivered by the Hon. W. W. Magruder, of Starkville." We dare say that Brother Magruder gave those present a message well worth hearing.

We take the following from the Midland Methodist (Nashville, Tenn.): "Bishop R. G. Waterhouse arrived last week from Los Angeles and will soon be in his home at Emory, Va. He came on ahead of Mrs. Waterhouse, made brief visits at Morristown, Bristol, Emory, and Chattanooga, attended the meeting of Bishops at Nashville, and went on to the Church Extension Board meeting in Louisville, Ky. The Bishop is much reduced in flesh, but his color is better and his eye clearer. Holston is more than glad to have him back at home again."

We take the following from the Bulletin of our First Church at Baton Rouge, La.: "The new church erected on the ground donated to the First Methodist Church by Mr. Hart about two miles from the city in the growing Istrouma suburb has been completed on the outside, painted red, and presents a pleasing appearance to those who pass. Many favorable comments on the building have been heard. The campaign for funds undertaken by the young people of the Leagues of the two Methodist churches of the city, which was partly for the new church, amounted to about $1100."

Rev. A. J. Henry, of Ratliff, Miss., in a letter bringing us two subscriptions, says: "Our second quarterly conference is a matter of history, having been held on April 25. The times are hard, but we hope to make 1917 a better year than 1916 was. We are putting on an "Every Member Canvass" with a view to securing our Conference assessments. It is our purpose to get something from every member, big and little, old and young. We have never tried to operate a plan like this before. We ask the prayers of every one in our behalf until we stand on the Conference floor at Oxford."

From Louisville, Ky., on April 5, Rev. B. P. Jaco, of Lexington, Miss., writes: "I came all the way up here in rainy weather, and upon my arrival I found the day to be a cold and drizzling one. The people one meets present a strange appearance as to dress—some wearing straw hats, and some closely buttoned up in overcoats, etc. Dr. McMurry is in his usual good health and humor. Mr. R. H. Tapp, of this city, a charter member of the Board of Church Extension, died at 12:30 p. m. today." It was to attend the annual meeting of the Board of Church Extension, of which he is a member, that Brother Jaco went to the Kentucky metropolis.

Rev. H. W. May thus writes concerning the work in his district—the Lafayette: "My last itinerary was full, and I trust fruitful. I preached 8 times and held four quarterly conferences in 8 days. The brethren are faithful and active in their labors. The official boards have raised the assessments for the pastors at a number of places, and a revival spirit is prevalent in many communities. I was in three revival meetings in April. The preachers are helping one another and much good is being accomplished. Brother Tucker has had a fine meeting at Crowley, and Shankle and Joyner are holding a good meeting in Lafayette now. The outlook was never brighter in this section."

Sister Davis, the wife of Rev. R. A. Davis, a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, whose home is now in Houston, Texas, is in the city, stopping with her daughter, Mrs. R. S. Crichlow, at 924 Lowerline Street. Robert Branker Crichlow is the name of a new baby born into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Crichlow. We are also informed that Mr. R. B. Davis, a son of the Rev. and Mrs. Davis, was in New Orleans last week, having enlisted in Company A, of McLemore's Infantry.

The address of Brother J. D. Barbee will hereafter be Cordova, Tenn., which is a few miles out from Memphis.

Rev. J. B. Williams thus refers to his pastorate at Ponchatoula, La.: "My work is prospering, and I hope that this, my fourth, year will be the best I have had in my present field."

Dr. J. T. Sawyer had the privilege of preaching last Sunday morning at our McDonoghville Church, in Jefferson Parish. He reports that a large and attentive congregation was present, and that after the sermon a helpful communion service was conducted. He states that the pastor, Rev. W. A. Mangum, is doing a good work, and that his congregation is prosperous.

Under date of May 6, Rev. R. W. Vaughan, of Ruston, La., writes: "The Orphanage family has just visited First Church, Shreveport, having spent in that city one of the most delightful days ever experienced by our children. We had a great congregation, a hearty welcome, royal entertainment, and were given a collection of nearly $1400 for the Orphanage. The entire service—Sunday school and church—was devoted to our cause. This liberal offering, with the nearly $4000 that came from the Easter collections from over the State, has made our receipts for the Home the largest that ever came to us in the spring of the year."

Edward Pearson Moses, former Superintendent of Public Schools, Raleigh, N. C., author of the bill establishing the State Historical Commission of North Carolina (Public Acts 1903, ch. 767); author of the revised and consolidated public school law of North Carolina (Public Acts of 1899, ch. 732); author of the bill forcing the City Council of Knoxville, Tenn., his native place, over their protest and the protest of their Citizens' Charter Committee, to establish a free public library there (Private Acts of Tennessee, 1911, ch. 498, sec. 21), will soon call, with his credentials, upon certain Christian ministers, Sunday school superintendents and teachers, and secular teachers, to ask their co-operation in a fight which he has begun in this city against vicious moving picture plays. He will fight under the banner of the Provosity Act (Laws of Louisiana, 1914, No. 10). This bill passed the Senate by a vote of 32 to 4. It passed the House by a vote of 65 to 1. All of the eight Orleans Senators voted for the bill, as did all the Orleans Representatives, except Mr. Koppel. Senate Journal, p. 515 (June 23, 1914); House Journal, p. 1280 (July 7, 1914).

On last Monday morning the following telegram from Lexington, Miss., reached our office: "Mrs. J. B. Streater died this morning at 9:30 o'clock." The grief which this brief message brought to the Editor's home is beyond the power of words to express. Mrs. Streater was the only sister of Mrs Meek, and, being much older, had reared her—her mother having died when she was a small child, thus largely establishing between them the relation of daughter and parent. The deceased was a rare woman, measured from any standpoint, and her beautiful Christian life could have but one ending—an "abundant entrance" into the glorious City of God. She had been in an unsatisfactory state of health for some years, but her acute illness lasted only a few days, before the end came at the family residence at Black Hawk. How she will be missed! Our heart goes out in tenderest sympathy to Brother Streater and the others in the home, who will be so lonely without her. May the loving Lord have them in his gracious keeping!

NAMES OF DELEGATES DESIRED.

Will the pastors of Durant District please send me the names of those who will attend the district conference at Kosciusko, May 30 to June 1? Your prompt attention will aid me and be greatly appreciated.

LISTEN TO THIS! SAYS CORNS LIFT RIGHT OUT NOW

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn, the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out with the fingers.

It is a sticky ether compound which dries the moment it is applied and simply shrivels the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You are further warned that cutting at a corn is a suicidal habit.

On February 4, 1917, LOYD ADAIR, the son of T. G. Adair, was called to his home above. Loyd was born on May 10, 1895. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the age of 13 at Old Mount Zion Church. He always loved his Church. He was a young man who always won the love and friendship of all who knew him. His outward life was an evidence of the strong faith that he had in the Lord. When the end came Loyd was leaning on the everlasting arm of his Lord. He said he was ready and willing to go, and that he had but one desire, and that was that he might hear his father, Rev. T. G. Adair, preach once more. Weep not, loved ones. Loyd is not dead, but sleepeth. I commend you all to the great Physician who can and who will heal your broken hearts.

Mrs. SARAH JONES GALLOWAY, second daughter of W. T. and Sarah J. Jones, was born near old Richland, in Holmes County, Miss., on March 20, 1858, and died at her home in Greenwood, Miss., on April 20, 1917. On June 20, 1883, she was married to William J. Galloway of Kosclusko, Miss. One child, a daughter, blessed this union. A while after their marriage they moved to the A. & M. College at Starkville, where they lived for eighteen years. After the death of her husband, which occurred in 1906, Mrs. Galloway moved to Greenwood. Mrs. Galloway was a woman of exceptionally fine character, gentle in manner, quiet and retiring in disposition, kind and generous in heart, guarded and charitable in speech, and bright and cheerful in spirit. She looked for virtues, and not for faults, and hence had something good to say about every one. She was a devoted and precious mother. She was faithful and true to her friends, and they were many—indeed, they were numbered by her acquaintances. Every one who knew her loved her, and those who knew her best loved her best. Quite early in life, she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Her fidelity to her Church and her love for Jesus Christ spoke out in the daily, godly life she lived. Her life was a living testimony to the power of the Gospel to save and to keep. All the Christly graces were so blended and set forth in her life as to produce a character of indefinable beauty. May the good Lord comfort the sad hearts of her loved ones!

Greenwood, Miss. J. A. HALL.

On Sunday afternoon, April 15, the death angel came to the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Summer and carried away their dear little boy, HAROLD EMMETT. He was just two years old the first of last October; but his extraordinary intelligence and sunny disposition had inextricably interwoven his life into the heart-strings of every one who knew him. It seems hard and we do not fully understand but we are taught that,

When the storms of affliction are raging,
When the blasts of adversity blow;
When the bolts of bereavement are falling,
When the lamp of life burns low;
There is One who governs the tempest,
There's guidance in the waste of woe;
There's deliverance deeper than disaster,
There's One who peace can bestow.
For his wonderful words still are ringing,
Out to those who are sore dismayed;
He comes his assurance still bringing,
"It is I, be not afraid."

"It is I"—the God of heaven and hell; the highest and best of all. "Be not afraid." The clouds shall clear; the day shall dawn; the darkness disappear, and the countenance of God shall beam. For sadness, loss and dire dismay are sent to man for discipline, not for destruction.

Yet a little while and the anguish that has pierced the breast shall purify the soul; the helplessness of self-despair shall change to the rest of reliance. All the solitude shall smile, the shadows be bright, and all the souls of frantic fear and desolating doubt be whelmed in the sweet whisper of the Voice Divine. The funeral service was held at the Methodist Church at Columbia, Miss., by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. E. Williams, the Rev. J. A. Bowen, and the pastors of the three Columbia churches. The interment was at the Columbia Cemetery. HUGH K. McKEE, Pastor.

MR. T. L. ALFORD DEAD.

Mr. T. L. Alford, a son of Rev. N. E. Alford, of this community, died at Vicksburg, on Wednesday afternoon, aged 34 years. Mr. Alford was afflicted with tuberculosis, and had been an invalid for the past four years. He had been a resident of Vicksburg for the past fourteen years. Ten years of that time he was on the police force of the city, and in the last election was elected justice of the peace. Three weeks ago he was taken to New Orleans, but specialists there found the disease too far advanced to give him any relief, and he went back home to die. The body was brought here Thursday morning and carried to his father's home four miles east of town, Thursday afternoon. In the presence of a large crowd of sympathizing friends and sorrowing relatives, Rev. N. B. Harmon conducted the funeral services, and the remains were interred in the family cemetery. Mr. Alford is survived by his wife, his aged father, seven brothers and two sisters. —Magnolia Gazette of April 28.

SHALL WE LEAVE GOD OUT?

Shall we undertake to carry forward the work of the Church on the same basis that we do a worldly organization? Shall we formulate our plans according to the wisdom of the world? If so, we are foredoomed to failure. We are not, indeed, to throw our reason to the winds in these matters; but neither must we forget that "It is not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." The wisdom of the world at its best is utterly inadequate for the task.

"WHAT BEAUTIFUL HAIR!"

Have you ever heard that remark made as some one passed by who had carefully kept hair? Did it not make you envious and did it not make you ashamed of every coarse, stiff or gray hair in your head? Did it not make you wish that you, too, had kept your hair carefully and could hear similar compliments passed on ou? Don't envy a beautiful head of hair. It is your privilege to have one. The beauty of the hair depends entirely on its care; and its luster depends on the food on which it subsists. Hair must be fed. Every single hair is a distinctly individual living thing and it demands food. Unless you feed it, it is going to be stiff and coarse and void of beauty. Follow the example of the Creoles of Louisiana, who pride themselves on their hair. Get their recipe. It was kept as a race secret for many years but you can get it now by asking our dealer for "La Creole," the natural hair dressing, or by sending one dollar to the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

IRREVERENCE.

Profanity weakens the spiritual sense-perceptions so insidiously that Sunday sickness at preaching time is a natural result. What is the inducement to worship "the Name high over all" when it is idly used with contemptuous familiarity in daily life? And when the commandment with a curse is considered a dead letter, there is small wonder that the Spirit ceases to strive with the transgressor.

It would seem that the painlessness, pervasiveness, and permanence of profanity is typified by the dreaded leprosy of Moses' laws. "Just a bad habit," and "don't mean anything by it!"

There might be a hypothetical defense of infringements on the other commandments—on natural grounds—but profanity is not natural. It is a really strange expression—did it fall with Satan from heaven when that war was lost?

The Bible records very severe discipline against such offenders. Our God is a consuming fire, and He will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain. Nor is this restricted to "roustabout" language—prayer and song come perilously near the breaking over sometimes, not to mention the exclamation points of ordinary conversation. The Rev. S. P. Jones called profanity "the devil's unbaited hook," and it is evidence that some brain cells of the time "when you were a fish and I was a frog" are still retained.

And the great trouble with finding a remedy for this moral, social, and civil complaint is the pernicious circle in which it travels. As parents, so children. Does it take Sinai's arguments to convince that it is better not to trespass on the God of all our hope and fears for time and eternity? And, he is love. So, why is profanity?

Belen, Miss. Mrs. S. C. STONE.

PALPITATION AND OTHER DISORDERS OF THE HEART.

Weak hearts are exceedingly common. Directly you are conscious of the fact that you have a heart, it means that your heart is not acting normally and that it needs attention.

Every time your heart misses a beat its efficiency is lessened.

Heart trouble, taken in its early stages, may not be difficult to relieve; but the more the treatment is delayed the harder it is to obtain permanent relief. If there is the slightest symptom to show that your heart is weak or diseased you should not delay taking treatment.

Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment has been the popular choice for more than twenty years. It has stood the test of time in a manner that forbids any doubt as to its efficiency. People who praised this remedy twenty years ago still believe in it and are only too glad to state that the trouble has never returned.

Any of these symptoms may indicate heart trouble: Shortness of Breath, Fluttering or Palpitation; Choking Sensation; Irregular Pulse; Weak or Hungry Spells, Swelling of Feet or Ankles, Pain under the Left Shoulder Blade.

If you notice any of these symptoms get a bottle of Dr. Miles' Heart Treatment. You risk nothing, for if the first bottle fails to benefit you, you have only to return the empty bottle to your druggist and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of our Church was held in Nashville, April 26. The report of Dr. John R. Stewart, Secretary-Treasurer of the Superannuate Endowment Fund, gave the following items of information concerning the record for the year ending March 31:

The total receipts for the year were $109,267.10. Deducting loans returned and sundries, the sum of $63,404.55 remains, showing the growth of the fund during the year. Of this latter amount, $34,372.54 has been received from assessments on Annual Conferences, which is an increase over last year of $5733.19. One thousand dollars has been paid in on the annuity account, with a recent promise of three thousand more. Other sums received worthy of mention are: A donation of $1000 from "a friend," a bequest of $1000 from the late R. W. Millsaps, of Jackson, Miss., and a bequest of $500 from the late G. A. Weaver, of Thomaston, Ga.

The net increase in the items of loans and cash in bank is $43,058.19. Cash assets, consisting of loans, cash on hand, and accrued interest, amount to $421,676.90; total assets, $521,397.90 Disbursed to Conference claimants in the Annual Conferences, $11,176, which represents three-fourths of the net income from the fund.

The resources April 1, 1917, were: Cash in bank, $12,069.64; loans in force, $394,066.66; notes receivable, $29,362.25; subscriptions unpaid, $11,558.75; accrued interest, $15,540.60; assets not realized on, $58,500. Total resources, $521,397.90. — Methodist News Bureau.

CHURCH MATTERS AT HOLLY SPRINGS, MISS.

Dear Advocate: May I have space for a few lines in your valuable paper to make a brief report on yesterday's work (April 29) in the Methodist Church here? At the eleven o'clock service our pastor, Rev. E. R. Smoot, preached to a packed house from the 12th Chapter of Genesis, verses 1 to 3, inclusive, his subject being "The Call of Abram." Last night he rather continued his subject, preaching from the 13th Chapter of Genesis, verse 3, which reads as follows: "And he went on his journey from the south even to Bethel unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning." Again last night the Church was literally packed. His sermons were both indeed great. He is a vigorous thinker and is doing a fine work here. His congregations are always large and attentive. Companies K and C of the State Militia are camped here, under Col. E. B. Boyd. The Colonel and a large number of his soldier-boys in their uniforms attended service at our church last night, as did also the entire student-body and teachers of the Mississippi Synodical college. It was a great occasion and Brother Smoot was equal to it in every particular. His choir rendered delightful music and his gifted organist, Mrs. G. W. Stephenson, was at her best. Miss Clyde Belk, teacher of voice and piano in the Marshall County Agricultural High School, and Brother Smoot rendered a most touching and sweet duet, singing that old song, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," to the air composed by Holbrook. Brother Smoot is not alone in his great work. His cultured and charming wife stands close beside him in every good work. She has charge of the Young Men's Bible Class in the Sunday school, which already numbers nearly 40 members. One of her boys, Mr. Shirley Hopkins, will conduct prayer meeting for us next Wednesday night, the pastor being absent at district conference at Coffeeville. Holly Springs feels thankful and fortunate in having this noble couple to help us and to guide us in our spiritual work. Respectfully,

W. A. BELK.

Holly Springs, Miss., April 30, 1917.

Have You Written yet to find out how You can give your Pastor a

Ford Car FREE

A FORD! FREE! Think what that will mean, not only as a help to your pastor in his work, but as a stimulus to the Church itself. Churches all over the country have been buying cars for their pastors, and here we offer to give you one free. Not a penny of cost to you, the Church or to him.

Perhaps you think that is not possible. All right, then, write and find out about the plan. It is the simplest thing in the world. You will say, "Of course, why didn't someone think of that long ago?" Under this plan, you can have your car in a short time. Some churches get theirs in two months, and are finding it a tremendous help in building up interest and securing new members. It has livened up the whole congregation, increased church attendance, and the church's activities are flourishing as never before. It is the most natural thing in the world that it should. A man who gets a car feels that he has advanced his standing in the community. It is the same way with a church.

Everyone Ready to Help You.

Our free car plan appeals to everyone, whether he or she has taken an active interest in church work before or not. Ask anybody about it, and he will say, "Of course, I will be glad to help." From infant class to Bible Class everyone and every home will help you.

Opinions from Folks Who Know

For malarial headache, Granger Liver Regulator entirely relieved my trouble.—J. Height, Wetumpka, Ala.

Had heavy headache. Vomited twice to six times a day. Four doses of Granger Liver Regulator made me well.—Laundas P. Brindley, Somerville, Ala.

Mother had sick headache. Granger Liver Regulator did her more good than all the medicine she had taken before.—Pearley Davis, Pacio, Ala.

I never expect to be without it in my home.—Jenie Usey, Gadsden, Ala.

It is a great saver of doctor's bills.—Louis N. Kent, Honoraville, Ala.

There is none better.—Dr. T. E. Cothram, Alexis, Ala.

Freckles—

The fairer the skin the more ugly it is when marred by freckles; and they are not necessary at all. As soon as the warm sunshine or the hot winds bring them out, and with the natural embarrasment that every woman feels, get a package of Kintho; this is the easy way to remove them. If Kintho is used at the first sign of the ugly spots, they'll sometimes disappear overnight. Any druggist has or can get Kintho for you. Use Kintho soap too. It's astonishing how it helps keep the freckles away once Kintho has removed them.

For Whooping Cough, Spasmodic Croup, Asthma, Sore Throat, Coughs, Bronchitis, Colds, Catarrh.

Established 1879

Don't fail to use Cresolene for the distressing, and often fatal affections for which it is recommended.

It is a simple, safe, effective and drugless treatment.

Vaporized Cresolene stops the paroxysms of Whooping Cough and relieves Spasmodic Croup at once.

In asthma it shortens the attack and insures comfortable repose.

The air carrying the antiseptic vapor inspired with every breath, makes breathing easy, soothes the sore throat, and stops the cough, assuring restful nights.

Cresolene relieves the bronchial complications of Scarlet Fever and Measles and is a valuable aid in the treatment of Diphtheria.

Cresolene's best recommendation is its 37 years of successful use. Send postal for Descriptive Booklet.

NERVOUS SPELLS

And Combination of Troubles Relieve by a Combination of Medicines.

A quotation from one recent letter: "I have been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills as a course of medicine and find this combination has worked like a charm. They told me I had neuralgia, and certainly I was in a very low and discouraging state of health. I suffered extremely with nervousness and had neuralgia pains so I could not sleep nights.

"Those nervous spells were awful!

"I heard about taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills—one before meals the other after—the suggestion struck me favorably so that I have taken the medicines carefully and faithfully with most pleasing results.

"It is a long time now since I have had one of those severe nervous spells. I can do a good day's housework, can work in my garden and walk a mile." Mrs. Fred J. Weekley, Bagdad, Fla.

Your druggist will be pleased to supply you with these good medicines.

HOW TO HAVE CLEAN WHITE TEETH.

There is a film which forms on the teeth when they are not cleaned regularly with the proper dentifrice. In this deposit germs breed, and acid is formed. Stains which discolor the teeth are also held in this film. The only way to keep your teeth clean, white and healthy is to use a saponaceous dentifrice which will dissolve this film.

Brown's Camphorated Saponaceous Dentifrice

is made with the best quality abrasive and best quality soap obtainable. It dissolves the slimy film on the teeth removes all stains, prevents acid mouth, relieves sore gums, destroys all parasites, preserves the teeth, and sweetens the breath. Used and recommended by the best dentists. 25c a jar at druggists.

ANNUAL MEETING OF BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

(From "Our Home," organ of the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage.)

The annual meeting of the Board of Directors was held at the Orphanage on April 19. All the members were present except Rev. T. H. Dorsey, Rowan Thayer and Hon. F. C. Holmes. Brother J. H. Sherard was re-elected President; Dr. A. F. Watkins, Vice-President; Brother M. S. Enochs, Secretary, and Brother W. M. Buie, Treasurer. Brother M. L. Burton had served as Treasurer from the beginning of the institution and asked to be relieved of the responsibility. The present Manager asked that his name be not considered for re-election for another year, declining the responsibility without full authority in the employment of his helpers. A resolution was passed re-electing him to serve until the next session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference. The Executive Committee remains the same as last year with the exception of one change: Brother Holmes was elected in the place of Brother Thayer, from the North Mississippi Conference. The entire Board was invited to take dinner at the Orphanage, which was served from products, nearly all of which were raised at the Home.

EDISON ON CIGARETTE-SMOKING.

Thomas A. Edison sometime ago sent the following letter to Henry Ford: "Friend Ford: The injurious agent in cigarettes comes principally from the burning paper wrapper. The substance thereby formed is called 'acrolin.' It has a violent action on the nerve centers, producing degeneration of the cells of the brain, which is quite rapid among boys. Unlike that of narcotics, this effect is permanent and uncontrollable. I employ no person who smokes cigarettes."

BELOW OUR PRIVILEGE.

What mere dwarfs we are in the ways of God, swimming upon the surface of religion, when it is our privilege to sink into all the depths of humble love, and rise into all the life of God, all the heights of Christian confidence!—Lady Maxwell.

Neglected Wounds Troublesome.

Did you ever notice how a small wound often festers and produces pus? That is a sign that the wound is becoming infected—it is the danger signal of blood poison. Don't neglect small wounds. Slight bruises, skin abrasions, sores, cuts, burns, pin pricks, etc., often cause blood poison which may prove fatal. Apply Gray's Ointment immediately to the affected part. It allays pain, heals the wound and prevents the serious and common after-effects. It has been used almost daily for ninety-six years by a multitude of families. Isn't that enough proof of its merit? Only 25c a box at drug stores. For FREE sample, write W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

The goal of human history is the redemption of the world. If the field of Christ and the field of the Church is the world, the field of every man with the love of God in his heart is the world.—J. Campbell White.

He who witnesses everywhere to Jesus is sure to witness somewhere convincingly, while he who witnesses only where he can see some chance of results will not always witness with power even there.—Canadian Churchman.

Jesus Christ still keeps His place in civilization. He begins where others end. When they cry from exhaustion He puts on His strength.—Dr. J. Parker.

All the doors that lead inward to the secret place of the Most High are doors outward—out of self, out of smallness, out of wrong.—George Macdonald.

Kidney & Co.

(BY DR. J. H. WATSON)

The kidneys and the skin work in harmony. They're companions, the skin being the second partner. If we are anxious to keep well and preserve the vitality of the kidneys and, also, free the blood from noxious elements, we must pay special attention to a good action of the skin and to see that the kidneys are flushed so as to eliminate the poisons from the blood.

Sweating, by hard work or in a bath, at least once a week, helps to keep the skin and kidneys in good condition. Flush the kidneys by drinking plenty of pure water with meals and between meals. Occasionally obtain at the nearest drug store Anuric, which will help flush the kidneys and the intestines. You will find that Anuric is many times more active than lithia and that it dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar.

AS A SUPPORT for exhausted, nervous, overworked women, nothing can do as much as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It regulates and assists all the natural functions, never conflicts with them, and it strengthens and builds up the female system in a way of its own.

Nursing mothers and women generally, will find it exactly fitted to their needs. It lessens the pains and burdens, and ensures healthy, vigorous offspring.

You will escape many ills and clear up the coated tongue, the sallow complexion, the dull headache, the lazy liver, if you will take a pleasant laxative made up of the May-apple, juice of the leaves of aloes, root of jalap, and called "Pleasant Pellets." You can obtain at almost any drug store in this country these vegetable pellets in vials for twenty-five cents—simply ask for Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Sold for fifty years.

"In our moments on the mount we sing of Christ's love demanding our lives, our souls, our all; but, out of sight of the mount, we provide for our own wants first, and give him the residue."

CHIENGMAI LEPER ASYLUM.

Siam is spotted with leprosy. It is estimated that there are 10,000 of these sufferers in the kingdom. They are feared, hated and cursed, and turned out from their homes hy their families, who do not know how to take care of them. They wander up and down the roads, begging, and utterly hopeless in their dire misery. The North Siam Mission of the American Presbyterian Church, however, has established a leper asylum at Chiengmai on an island of 160 acres, presented to them for this pnrpose hy His Majesty, the King. In this haven some 200 lepers have been gathered and live in neat brick houses amid cleanly surroundings. They receive about forty cents a week each for subsistence. The entire colony has become Christian, and recently they gave out of savings from their allowance money a sum equal to $12, gold, "to be sent to lepers in some other land who are less fortunate than ourselves."

This work has called the attention of all classes of people in Siam to the beneficent character of Christianity in the most striking way, and will, no doubt, lead the government to establish other asylums where lepers will be segregated, and as a consequence the country will gradually be freed from the terrible menace of the disease.—The Missionary Review of the World.

DISTRICT MEETINGS IN THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The district meeting of the Greenville District will he held in Shelby, May 3 and 4. That of the Corinth District will convene on the same dates, May 3 and 4, with the New Albany Society as hostess. Both Mrs. Clark and Miss Rogers urge upon their women a full attendance at these meetings, and nothing is more important to our work than the emphasizing of our district meetings. We would be glad if each secretary would see that a short, interesting account of her meeting is sent to us for publication.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

New Summer School for Foreign Missions, Chambersburg, Pa., June 28 to July 6.

A program similar to the one at Northfield, Mass., will afford opportunity for mission study and Bible study. Special emphasis will he laid upon work for young people and juniors. Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery will lecture on the foreign study hook for the year, "An African Trail." Miss Nellie Prescott will have "Junior Methods," and Miss Mary C. Peacock "Methods for Young Women's Societies." Miss Gertrude Schultz will teach a normal study class. The Bible hour, methods hour, and other interesting features will be provided for.

Representatives of seven women's boards compose the Executive Committee of the new School of Missions. Mrs. H. R. Steele, Educational Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Council, represents the Southern Methodist Board.

A GIFT TO THE RETIREMENT FUND.

At the recent annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, Mississippi Conference, held in Gulfport; a gift of $50 was tendered the society, the amount to he placed on the Retirement Fund, and given as a memorial to the mother and son of the donor, who is a sweet, lovable, Christian woman, not desiring her name to be made public. We cannot refrain from saying that her home is in Port Gibson, for we are proud of the fact that one in our district feels so keenly her responsihility in discharging its duties as one of the Master's stewards. Then, again, so few special gifts have come from this district in the past few years. We have seemed to be in a state of lethargy along this line, and it has caused some distress to our officers, especially when other districts were forging ahead. Now that this lovely example has heen set for us, we earnestly pray that other women in the district may be constrained to make like gifts, if not for this special cause, then for some other. We must not "provide for our wants first and give Him the residue," hut we must remember that to Him belong the first fruits of all that we possess. If we are faithful in observing this there will always be plenty in the storehouse to make these larger gifts possible.

The fragrance of this beautiful deed will continue to he shed over the hearts of many, and in the garden of eternity will be found blooming a flower of rare heauty which sprang from the deeds of this gentle child of the Master.

CONFERENCE ORGANIZER IN LOUISIANA.

At the annual meeting of the Louisiana Conference Missionary Society, the Committee on Extension of Work recommended putting into the field a "Conference Organizer" so that the campaign work might he successfully continued. During the session of the recent Council meeting in New Orleans, the Executive Committee of the Louisiana Conference Society met and elected Mrs. T. H. Morris, of Shreveport, as "Field or Conference Organizer," thus carrying out the recommendation of the Crowley meeting. It will he the duty of Mrs. Morris to go throughout the seven districts organizing missionary societies in all the unorganized churches possihle.

Mrs. A. P. Holt writes: "We feel that we are extremely fortunate in securing the services of this splendid woman, who is known to the pastors and to many of the women already, and that we need only to bespeak for her and for our heloved missionary enterprise the hearty co-operation and prayers of the Methodists of our Conference that this new work may mean much to the cause. Mrs. Morris' work will be in conjunction with that of the District Secretaries. The first work will he in the Shreveport District."

Mrs. Holt was home from the Council Meeting only one day when she had to go to Shreveport to complete arrangements with Mrs. Morris. When Mrs. Holt has anything to do, she loses no time in doing it. We know that mnch of the success of the work in the Louisiana Conference the past year was due to the indefatigable labors of this consecrated woman, and now that she is pushing this new undertaking, we predict wonderful strides in the work this year.

A note from Mrs. Holt to-day tells of a card received from Mrs. Morris in which the latter writes of her first visit ont: "We had a good meeting yesterday at Stonewall, and organized a society with 14 members. I also left a young married woman whom I've known for some time to organize the children at once."

We ask that not only the Methodist women of the Louisiana Conference, but those of our other two patronizing Conferences remember this splendid woman daily in prayer—that God may wonderfully use her in the upbuilding of his Kingdom in this Conference; that she may be enabled to kindle fires of unselfish love and devotion to the missionary cause in the hearts of the indifferent in her territory; and that she may have the assurance that He guides her with His counsel.

A REMINDER.

The Aberdeen District meeting is in session to-day and to-morrow (May 10-12) at Amory, Miss. The notice for this meeting has just reached us—too late, to serve as a reminder to attend, but not too late to ask the women not in attendnce to pray earnestly that it may be the best in the history of the district. Mrs. Haughton always plans so wisely and well for her meetings, having a deep love for her women and the cause she represents. God grant that she may have just the meeting she is expecting!

"I DON'T SUFFER ANY MORE."

"Feel Like a New Person," says Mrs. Hamilton.

New Castle, Ind.—"From the time I was eleven years old until I was seventeen I suffered each month so I had to be in bed. I had headache, backache and such pains I would cramp double every month. I did not know what it was to be easy a minute. My health was all run down and the doctors did not do me any good. A neighbor told my mother about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it, and now I feel like a new person. I don't suffer any more and I am regular every month."—Mrs. HAZEL HAMILTON, 822 South 15th St.

From the Field

Longview, Miss.

Dear Bro. Meek: I have been thinking I would write you ever since we got to our new work, but I have just put it off. This, however, has not been because I am ashamed of my work or my people. I find plenty of work to be done, and among a very fine people—some as fine as Mississippi or any other State can afford. The outlook for the year is fair. We are praying, and will work to the end, that we may have a great year. We have been held back by the bad weather and roads; but the sky has at last cleared and the mud has dried up, and I pray that we may go on now to victory. I will remember the Advocate along the way.—R. G. A. Carisle.

Wiggins, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Apropos of the prayer meeting attendance in a small town, when a show comes along, I want to report. One Wednesday night about a month ago, one of our "movie" shows gave a special on that night, but we had 102 persons present at our prayer meeting. Two weeks ago, a tent show came here to spend all the week, having a fine band and making a strong pull for patronage. We advertised a patriotic service for our Wednesday night prayer meeting and had 200 small flags to give away. We had five leading men make short talks, had special prayer offered for the President and Congress, and made a really religious service of it. The result was 225 present, and 150 at the show. So tell Brother J. D. Simpson of Guntown that we are running him a close race anyway. Next.

JAMES L. SELLS, P. C.

Indian Bayou, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: Last Saturday and Sunday brought to a close our second quarterly conference. It was one of the most enjoyable and profitable conferences that I have been connected with for many years. Brother May is an efficient, painstaking presiding elder. He preached and wept himself into all our hearts. Doctor, I would have shouted if there had not been so much business on hand. I have no patience with a dry-eyed presiding elder. Brother May preached three fine sermons and baptized seven babies, and I could have persuaded him to stay over and marry a couple Tuesday night. I have the best charge and the best board of stewards in the Louisiana Conference. No man in Southern Methodism is more fortunately situated than this chap. I really think if it were not for the honor connected with the elder's office Brother May would trade with me to-day. Doctor, I love you and appreciate you, from the fact that you jump on the devil in high as well as low places. Some men in high places know that you are editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate and they are learning to let you alone. The work here is great. I am preaching to immense crowds and each service brings a larger audience.—G. D. Anders, P. C.

Shannon, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Perhaps some would like to hear a word from the Shannon charge. Our second quarterly conference has just been held at Shannon, Miss. On Sunday night, April 22, our presiding elder, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, delivered a thoughtful and impressive message from the text, "For me to live is Christ." As the mind of the audience was held to the interrogative, "For me to live is—?" thought after thought was analyzed, and a spirit of inspiration prevailed. In regard to the general state of the Church, I wish to say: (1) There is manifested an encouraging degree of spirituality on the part of our people; (2) this is evidenced by their loyalty to the Church and their pastor.

The work that is being done in all four of our Sunday schools is very efficient. We think the Sunday school is auxiliary to the Church; we think the Church is an institution of God, ordained as a means of grace to bring the world to Christ. If this be true, between the world and the works of the Church—between the power of darkness and the light of God's love, there is no "middle"—no tertium quid.

So then, notwithstanding the fact that we face the high cost of living, with a loyal people, though their crop last year was almost an entire failure, we hope to be able to stand for every claim of our great Church, and be thankful that she, as an institution of God, is shedding divine lustre over a thousand fields.

Brethren, as every one knows, time produces changes. We now no longer fill another's place, but our own. As you read, may you breathe for us this prayer: that we may have wisdom of head and knowledge of heart in the deep things of God; that we may have power with God; that we may have power with men to influence them for Christ. Amen! No work is too laborious to perform; no problem is too difficult for us to solve, when we fully realize that, "For us to live is Christ."

WM. I. WHITE, Pastor.

THE MUSIC OF THE HEART.

True piety is the harmony of the soul with God. His will becomes the will of his loving and obedient child, and such a Christian finds his happiness in the chime of his own desires with what God bids him to do. This is the fountain of genuine music of the heart. God's hand is on every string and chord of this wonderful instrument which a loyal believer carries in his or her breast. It is a harp of a thousand strings, and yet they all respond to the same divine touch. The great apostle in writing to the early Christians tells them that they must not merely sing, but that they must "make melody in their hearts to the Lord." This signifies the music of the soul. If it be religious music it must come from a religious heart. It must be the breathing of sincere love and grateful adoration. The most marvelous of all instruments is the harp of the human heart.—The Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler.

BARKING DOG SAVES MANY LIVES.

The barking of "Topsy," a collie dog, awoke the superintendent of the Scottish Old People's Home in Riverside, Illinois, March 18, so that the alarm could be given in time to save all but four of the inmates from perishing in a fire which completely destroyed the building.—Our Dumb Animals.

CALOMEL MAKES YOU SICK, UGH!

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Better Than Calomel and Can Not Salivate.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for 50 cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the net day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

KEEPING SUNDAY SCHOOL CHILDREN IN THE CHURCH.

the regular service of worship and preaching was not so much as dreamed of, and for the church to he a party to such an arrangement now would be to "divide its bouse against itself."

2. Children do not understand the sermon, say others, and, therefore, it is useless for them to attend the preaching service.

Neither do they understand their "Now I lay me down to sleep" prayers; nor why they should obey their parents; nor all that their day school teachers say. But does not the average pastor preach and pray in language about as intelligible as does the average Sunday school superintendent or public school teacher? Most of the songs that we sing in Sunday school are written in the every-day language that preachers use, and there is no objection raised to children singing these songs; and but few teachers are extra specialists in the language of child-lore, and we can see but little advantage that they have over the average pastor in teaching children. And besides this, the sermon and worship in the church are not designed so much to cause the worshipers to know as to cause them to feel; their mission is more to the heart than to the head, and the whole arrangement of the worship services in the church is given to this special end, and the best proof that it has the same effect upon children as upon adults is that those who have been brought up under its influences are the ones who are doing the work of the church to-day—their first seat in church was a pallet at their mother's feet, and the next a seat on a high hench by their father's side. Whether they understood all the praying and weeping and shouting and exhorting or not, they became Christians, and that is enough.

3. "Children should not be forced to do what they do not want to, and so should not be required to stay to church unless they of their own volition so choose," is one of the gushy sentimentalisms that we sometimes hear from some of our modern "liberal" Christians. This heing so, children need no parents at all, nor any control over their lives, and if carried out in consistency, they would certainly stay away from dentists, doctors, schools, and from all manner of laborious work. Children who are allowed to do as they please generally become public nuisances and problems for society. If they had not needed parental guidance, the Lord would have given them the extra instincts and ability for self-preservation of the lower animals. But since he made them to need it, and, has given their parents the authority to "train them" in the way in which they should go," their religious habits are as much a part of this scheme as are the educational or the hygenic.

4. Another difficulty brought forward as a justification of the large number of children who attend Sunday school, hut who do not attend the preaching services, is that the two services keep the children in church too long; and we are willing to admit that there is some foundation for this objection; but when we have pressed the objector for a definite age at which children should be required to attend both services, he has invariably refused an answer, and the fact remains that the children who have been started out on the basis of this program are lost to the church, and after they have left the Sunday school, as they generally do in the teen age, they must be re-won to Christ almost as if they had never been to Sunday school—if they ever develop to be useful Christians. But to remedy this defect of too long services, we are convinced that the program must be rearranged and shortened. Why, for instance, should there be two opening services of worship, one for the Sunday school, and one for the church? The Sunday school superintendent leads in prayer, the Sunday school repeats the Lord's prayer, and then the pastor leads another prayer, and the church congregation again repeats the Lord's prayer. And the same duplication is involved in the responsive readings and hymns. And if these programs are to be repeated twice each Sunday morning, would it not be better for the Sunday school superintendent to use the regular order of worship of the church and let the children learn the church hymns and how we, as a church, worship, rather than leaving the arrangement of the Sunday school's order upon a hard worked, and many times untrained, superintendent? If our everyday Sunday school superintendents can make hetter orders of worship than has the church through its special commissions, then they should be employed to make a hetter order of worship for the church. if one is to be substituted for the other for a large part of the constituency. Or if the ones used in our Sunday schools have a tendency to create a distaste for the order of worship used in the church, the conflict should in some way be done away with. If the service of worship used hy the Sunday school superintendent is hetter than that authorized hy the church, then it should be at such an hour as to allow the whole membership to be hlessed hy it—that is, if the one is to he used as a substitute for the other. The same would he true of the average teacher as suhstituting for the pastor as a religious instructor.

But we are convinced that the solution can come in such a union as that there will he no suhstituting in a united service where the pastor leads the worship—thirty minutes; he then preaches thirty minutes; the teachers then teach in their classes twenty-five minutes, the Sunday school superintendent being in charge; then the regular Sunday school officers conclude with reports and other Sunday school features, including music. This program cuts out all duplicates and shortens the combined program from two hours to one and a half, and so meets the difficulty of the two services being too long.

In the years that are past the pastors were privileged to preach to the children, and while there was a great lack in the element of teaching, the people were converted, and learned to honor the Church, and some reformation is necessary that will insure them that opportunity again. The Catholic priests have it, and in spite of the weakness of their system, they succeed to a remarkable degree in at least making their constituency loyal to their Church. The evil of this weakness is upon us, and it must be faced, and the sooner we get at the solution of it the better. In spite of all the scholars and consecrated teachers in our Sunday schools, and the Christian parents in our homes and trained pastors in our pulpits, we are having only a nominal increase in our permanent church membership, and the defect herein discussed is one at least that needs serious consideration at the hands of those who make the order of worship and the programs of our Church.

THE ONLY "ADEQUATE GOD."

Elijah's challenge to the prophets of Baal upon the heights of Carmel was, "The God that answereth by fire, let him be God." The priestly devotees of Baal, when put to the test, cried long and frantically, but there was no answer from above—the heavens were as brass. But when Elijah called upon "the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Israel," quickly the fire fell and consumed the prepared offering; and the people there assembled fell on their faces and cried, "The Lord, he is God!"

The cry of humanity is still for a God that answereth—not necessarily by fire, but by the manifestation of a power to help burdened and struggling human souls. The God of the pantheists, spread out into some attenuated force or influence, will not meet the longings of men and women amid the sorrows, sufferngs, and problems of life, with the open grave before them and the mysteries of eternity beyond it; nor will mankind be satisfied with the God of the scientists, which has largely become the God of the new school of theologians—who is, so to speak, the slave of remorseless laws, which must go grinding inexorably on, and who never speaks to human beings or puts forth any special effort to help those who pray to him—who may not be consciously known by any finite spirit or be expected to give any one person assistance of any kind which he does not give to all. The Father God—the God with a loving heart, with a seeing eye, with a listening ear, and with an answering arm—is the only Deity that can meet the deep needs of the sin-stricken and helpless millions of earth, who are surrounded by mightier forces than human strength can cope with and who are steadily marching to the tomb. And blessed be His holy name, the God of the Bible is just such a God. Shall we not find Him, and live in communion with Him, and serve Him, and make Him known to other benighted ones groping in darkness? "And this is life eternal that they might KNOW Thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou didst send." "He that hath My commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth Me; and that he that loveth Me shall be loved of My Father, and I will love him and will MANIFEST Myself to him."

A VAST DIFFERENCE.

There are those who are fond of declaring that Jesus taught little that is new; that even his most striking utterances were but a setting forth of truths that others had expressed before him. These asseverations, however, will seldom bear a careful inquiry into them in any particular case. As an illustration of this statement, we quote the following from Dr. A. H. Tuttle in the Biblical Review (New York):

"We are often told that Confucius spoke the Golden Rule, thus anticipating Christ by five hundred years. But there is a difference. Confucius said, 'Whatsoever ye would not that men should do to you, do ye not to them.' Jesus said, 'Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them.' There are two points of difference: The rule of Confucius is negative, and therefore only partial. That of Jesus is positive, and therefore the fulness of the truth he states. Not to do the bad does not include the doing of the good; but the doing of the good excludes the bad. The other point of difference is, that Confucius makes the law a rule of restraint, while Jesus makes it an impulsion of life from within. Both in form and substance Jesus' statement is immeasurably beyond the statement of the great moralist."

THE PRESIDENT'S SERIOUS VIEW.

In his address last Saturday at the dedication of the American Red Cross Headquarters in Washington City, a handsome structure erected by the Government at a cost of $800,000 in honor of the heroic women of the Civil War (North and South), President Woodrow Wilson made the following sobering and thought-provoking utterance:

"I believe that the American people hardly yet realize the sacrifices and sufferings that are before them. We thought that the scale of our Civil War was unprecedented, but in comparison with the struggle into which we have now entered, the Civil War seems almost insignificant in its proportions and in its expenditure of treasure and of blood. And, therefore, it is a matter of the greatest importance that we should at the outset see to it that the American Red Cross is equipped and prepared for the things that lie before it. It will be our instrument to do the works of alleviation and of mercy which will attend the struggle. Of course, the scale upon which it shall act will be greater than the scale of any other duty that it has ever attempted to perform."

Is our National Chief Executive correct in the view here expressed? We have not been disposed to think until recently that there was much prospect of our country being drawn largely into the great European conflict except in a financial way and in the use of our navy; but the uncertain situation that has developed in Russia makes the question of the extent to which we may become involved in the war a difficult proposition to pass upon. If internal strife should largely destroy the fighting strength of that country, it is doubtful whether France and England and their other Old World allies could defeat the Central Powers, even weakened as they undoubtedly are; and the result might be that the United States would have to send millions of men to Europe to save the day.

President Wilson unquestionably has sources of information at his command such as no private citizen could have, and this solemn statement from his lips is entitled to much weight, though, of course, no finite mind can foretell definitely the future. At any rate, this deliverance, emanating from the official head of the Nation, ought to have the effect of awakening our citizens to the importance of dispensing with all needless self-indulgences and doing their utmost to get ready for what the coming months and years may have in store for them. We have noticed in the public press that a number of announced public gatherings have been called off in the interest of economy, and with a view to avoiding any scattering of energies now, when a concentration of effort is needed in the work of preparing for the ordeal which confronts our beloved country. This, we think, is well. This is no time for gaiety or self-gratification of any kind. The food question is already getting to be an acute problem with not a few people—even in the South.

NEW ORLEANS METHODIST UNION REVIVAL.

The wise man of old said, "There is no new thing under the sun;" but there is, and we have tried it—a union revival meeting in New Orleans, with all our Methodist churches co-operating. This is not the first time, however, that we have felt the need of a union revival. The difficulties in the way have been so great that faith staggered before the task. In the first place, the people in New Orleans do not believe in the Methodist revival meeting. I think it a fair statement that at least ninety-nine per cent of the people in New Orleans have no sympathy at all with revival services as they are usually conducted. Many of our Methodist people are among this number. Again, the distances are so great in New Orleans, and our churches so far apart, that it is not easy to bring the people together in one place. New Orleans is a large city, but the Methodists are few, and it is not easy to reach the masses of the people. To attend the services in a Methodist church is regarded as a "mortal sin" by two hundred thousand people. In spite of our many difficulties, we have had a gracious revival. Dr. D. L. Coale and his helpers came to us on April 22 and remained with us three weeks. From the beginning the congregations were large—probably averaging a thousand a night during the week and taxing the church to its utmost capacity on Sunday nights, with many people being turned away. Dr. Coale preached a strong, sympathetic, uncompromising gospel. Brother Hawkins was mighty in prayer and personal work. Brother Spindler stirred the hearts of the people as he brought the Christ message in song. These brethren work well together, and together they constitute a great force in winning men to Jesus Christ and the higher life. God is wonderfully blessing their ministry.

During our revival here several hundred acknowledged Christ as their personal Savior, and a goodly number have already joined the Church. Several have felt the call to preach and have responded to the call. Some have offered themselves as missionaries.

Our New Orleans Methodism has had a great revival and all of our churches have been blessed.

THE REFINER'S FIRE.

He sat by a furnace of seven-fold heat,
As He watched by the precious ore,
And closer He bent with a searching gaze
As He leaned it more and more.

He knew that He sat as the refiner must sit,
And He wanted the finer gold
To mold as a crown for the King to wear,
But with gems of a price untold.

So He let the gold in the burning fire,
Though we fain would have said Him "nay,"
And He watched the dross that we had not seen,
As it melted and passed away.

And the gold grew brighter and yet more bright,
But our eyes were as dim with tears,
We saw but the fire—not the Master's hand—
And questioned with anxious fears.

The pure gold shone out with a richer glow,
As it mirrored a Form above,
That bent o'er the fire, for love drawn by love,
With look of unfailing love.

Can we think that it pleases His loving heart
To cause us a moment's pain?
Ah! no; but He saw in the present cross
The loss of eternal gain.

So He waited there with watchful eye,
With love that is strong and sure,
And His gold lit not suffer a wait more hear
Than was needed to make it pure.

Dear child, when God shall make time one,
Resting not from the furnace near,
Will only the dross from your heart remove
And leave it pure and sweet.

YET A MIRACLE WORKER.

It is not written of our Lord that He went about saying good things—though that is true—but that He went about doing good. And the miracles of old are no more wonderful than the miracles of our day. That the blind, the crippled, the leper, who met Christ by the wayside, should be healed, is no more marvelous than that the drunkard and the criminal we meet today should suddenly rise up from their wickedness and go away to a new life among men. That is the standing miracle that runs through the ages.—The Presbyterian.

THE RIGHT VIEW OF DEATH.

The principal fact about death is not death, but life. If the temporal closes, the eternal opens. Why should we weep when the painful ends and the painless begins? when darkness breaks into dawn? when hope becomes sight? Why should we elaborate the dead clay when the real thing to remember is the eternal beauty of the living spirit? What pain we should escape if we could get into the habit of thinking of our friends not as dead, but as alive? How eager would be our forward look if we saw in death the triumph of life, the door to immortal liberty?—Christian Endeavor World.

GATHERED SPARKS.

"Let us fail in trying to do something rather than sit still and do nothing."

"Nothing is eternal but that which is done for God and others. That which is done for self dies."

"Anywhere, any time, anything, for the Son of God, and the sons of men."

"God will not look you over for medals, degrees, and diplomas, but for scars."

"With God go over the sea; without him not over the threshold."

THE NEED IN THE CHURCH.

Our Lord needs in his Church to-day disciples with the clearness of mind, the steadiness of faith, the balance of judgment which his Spirit gives. He needs in his service men and women whose faith rests on sure foundations, who believe intelligently and, therefore, firmly, all the glorious truths contained in the creed—who accept the teaching of the Scriptures as interpreted by the Church and believe this with all their minds as well as with all their hearts and souls and strength. It is this spirit in us, and this firm faith in our Lord and His work, that makes us witnesses of his resurrection.—Dr. Wm. Manning.

SOME UNIFICATION PLANS REVIEWED.

By Col. R. C. Beaver.

Whether it was wise or otherwise for members of the Joint Commission to give public expression to their views on questions which will be before them for determination at the next meeting of the Commission is not now material, for Commissioners from both sections have entered into a public discussion of some of these questions. Were not the president set, I would remain silent. Editors of church organs and contributors, not at all improperly, have freely discussed publicly the pending problems involved in the effort to unify the Methodist Churches. "The war is on" in moving to mold public sentiment into the views of the individual writers. I have not so much desire to obtrude my personal ideas on the public as to combat some of the publicly expressed views of others to which I cannot subscribe. I will therefore, as a rule, in this article confine myself to a review of some features of unification plans formed and given to the public by two members of the Joint Commission.

Dr. Blake, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, delivered an oration, which was published in full, or in part, by most of the Methodist Advocates, North and South, in which he sought to find a basis for the Negro IN the proposed united Church. It antagonizes both in letter and spirit the status sought to be given the Negro by the Oklahoma General Conference, which declared in favor of the Negroes of Methodist bodies being organized into an independent Church. The learned Doctor, in his plan, provides for the Negroes to become members of the united Church, but with limited rights and privileges. To make classes of church members, as to rights and privileges, would be an anomaly and cannot be sustained in reason. It would make a condition the Negro could not accept without humiliation and a surrender of manhood. But the Negro could accept the Oklahoma plan—an independent Church for the Negro—and retain the dignity of manhood, and increase it evermore. Anyway, Dr. Blake, by the retention of the Negro as a member, or as a half-member, or as a member at all of the united Church, ignores, or antagonizes, the Oklahoma plan touching the Negro problem, which problem just now seems to be the crux of unification, and points out no feasible way for its solution.

But would the colored contingent of the Methodist Episcopal Church accede to the Dr. Blake plan? "Not until the day of doom," says Dr. Jones, one of the two colored Commissioners, who is the editor of the Southwestern Christian Advocate, an official organ of the M. E. Church. His elaborate reply to Dr. Blake's plan to discriminate against Negro members, is vigorous, and withal logical. And in reason, the Negro must be in as a member enjoying all the rights of any other member, or be out and as independent as any other human, black or white. I see no other way to reconcile the conflicting ideas of the two brothers only that their antagonistic views be relegated to innocuous desuetude by abandonment, and by both getting on the Oklahoma platform that does not give any status to the Negroes IN the unified Church, but recommends that they be clothed with as full and ample churchly powers, in an independent Church organization, as any white member could be invested with in a unified Caucasian Church. That would be a happy way to solve the Negro problem for both races.

The weakness of Commissioner Jones' editorial is in attributing race distinction to prejudice. In that he limps badly, for it is a patent fallacy, though strangely that idea largely obtains outside of the Negro body, among the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Northern part of the country. In another article, I will recur to this unwarranted belief.

Dr. DuBose, one of the Commissioners of the M. E. Church, South, has formulated an elaborate tentative plan for the solution of the "Negro Problem," which has been published in church papers throughout both connections. Dr. DuBose is recognized at home and abroad as an able writer, and, being a member of the Joint Commission of two of the leading Protestant Churches of the world, which fact reinforces his influence, his deliberate views publicly expressed on the Negro problem carry a deal of force when not specifically controverted and shown to be impracticable and erroneous. So far as I am advised, no one has controverted the correctness of the views of the learned Doctor. He claims, aliunde, that his plan squares with the Oklahoma platform as touching the Negro question, and that he stands on that platform and will continue to there stand. Therefore, my review of his plan will be, largely, a comparison of his plan with the Oklahoma plan, which the Doctor helped to construct, and to the impracticability of its scheme.

In the Oklahoma platform, after declaring in favor of the unification of the several Methodist bodies, the General Conference unanimously said:

"However, we recommend that the colored membership of the various Methodist bodies be formed into an independent organization holding fraternal relations with the reorganized and united Church."

The DuBose plan embraces seven sections, and I quote:

"1. The reorganized Church shall consist of two divisions or connections, bearing the same name, and organically related as hereinafter to be designated.

"2. The reorganized Church shall be known as the Methodist Episcopal Church in America; but the second division shall be additionally designated as the Associate Connection of said Church. This connection shall be composed of the present colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and of such other bodies of colored Methodists as may unite with the Associate Connection," etc.

"3. The Associate Connection shall be considered as in every way an organic part of the reorganized Church, and shall be governed and administered under the following plan.

"4. The Associate Connection shall have the same constitution as the Reorganized Connection, and shall make no changes in the Restrictive Rules to be adopted as a basis of government for the reorganized Church without the concurrent constitutional consent of the General Conferences of the two connections," etc.

"5. The Associate Connection shall have an independent General Conference, enjoying full powers of legislation under the constitution of the reorganized Church."

Before quoting more I will subject sections 1 to 5 inclusive to an analysis.

Sections 1 and 2 would make the unified Church consist of "two divisions or connections," and "organically related." The first division would embrace the white Methodists, the second division would be composed of the Negro Methodists, which division "shall be considered as in every way an organic part of the reorganized Church," thus making the unified Church a mongrel organization.

Now, as the unified Church is to consist of two divisions organically united into a unit, in the name of reason, how could the Negro division be an "independent organization" as provided in the Oklahoma deliverance? Furthermore, as the Negro division is not to be permitted to select its own name, nor to make its own constitution, nor to adopt its restrictive rules, nor to change them without the consent of the first division, or its General and Annual Conferences, nor to legislate only under the constitution of the first division (which suddenly and mysteriously singly becomes the "reorganized Church," enshrined to the dimensions of the original first division), would not the second, or Negro division, surnamed the "Associated Connection, be a very dependent, instead of an independent, organization?

The Oklahoma provision opens, in terms, "the door to the colored membership of the various Methodist bodies." Can Dr. DuBose for a moment entertain the belief that the African Methodist Episcopal Church, with its membership of 620,000; or that the African Methodist Zion Church, with its membership of 570,000; or the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, with its membership of 240,000, each being absolutely independent—that these Negro churches, or either one of them, would surrender their, or its, independence, put their necks under the yoke and be driven at the will of the unified Caucasian Church? As reasonably expect the ocean tides to reverse themselves as for those Negro churches, having tasted of the sweets of liberty, to deliberately enter into bondage. Dr. DuBose must perceive that in this his plan is unworkable. And more: there is clearly an irreconcilable conflict between sections 1 and 2, which make the two divisions an organic unit, and the remaining sections which ignore that unity, and recognize what, in the outset, was only a part of the "reorganized Church" as the whole thing.

In the sections quoted, and quoted from, as seen, the second, or Negro division, is made a shuttlecock flying from the unity of the whole into a state of dependency on the sweet will of the first division. Then the kaleidoscope changes the scene in section 7, where it is provided that "there shall be one general publication administration for the two connections," etc. And "the Associate Connection may maintain at its pleasure a quota of publication officials at, or in connection with, one or more of the publication houses of the Church," etc. And "the publication house, or houses, designated for the joint use of the Associate Connection shall be administered by a special Book Committee composed equally of members selected by the two connections," etc., which is to report to the General Book Committee; "and when the affairs of the joint publication houses are under consideration the two Book Committees shall sit as one body."

How Dr. DuBose can think he dug all that hostile stuff out of the simple declaration, "We recommend that the colored membership of the various Methodist bodies be formed into an independent organization holding fraternal relations with the reorganized and united Church," is a puzzle more difficult for me to solve than is the Negro problem.

After referring to the interests of the Associate Connection, or Negro Church, "in the funds of the Book Concern" and "in the Superannuate Preachers' Fund and other joint endowments of the Church," section 10 provides: "At the time of reorganization, and as a condition thereof, the reorganized Church shall pledge, and give constitutional security for, the complete protection of all these interests."

Of course the M. E. Church, South, has no connection with those interests, but by the terms of the DuBose plan the Southern Church would not be eligible to enter into the unified Church until it consents, as a condition precedent, to give "a pledge and constitutional security" for the protection of the Negroes' rights in those funds and properties. How would that strike the now unfettered membership of the M. E. Church, South?

But the unified Church is to be further bound in advance to be burdened on a scale immeasurably larger. Sections 12 and 13 provide: "The Reorganized Connection by this plan and agreement shall contribute generously and faithfully, so long as there may be need for it, to the maintenance of the causes of education, extension and general evangelism in the Associate Connection," etc.; and then further provides that the Annual Conferences of the unified Church shall be assessed to meet those sums; and "as a binding nexus between the two connections there shall be created an administrative commission to consist of thirty members to be appointed by the two connections in equal numbers," etc. "The membership of this commission shall consist of three Bishops, six ministers and six laymen from each connection."

That mixed Commission is to fix primarily the several amounts for the said several purposes named, which may be changed by the General Conference of the Reorganized Connection, but the expenditure shall be made by the Associated Connection under the advice of all the Bishops of both bodies—sitting in joint meeting. That is the nexus Dr. DuBose substitutes for the fraternal nexus provided by the Oklahoma General Conference.

No such extraordinary power for taxation, I confidently assume, was ever given any such insignificant minority in any organization, religious or commercial. And that such a proposition should be made seriously by a strong member of the Commission is astounding to me. Why, the fifteen Negroes on that taxing committee would represent only about 310,000 members, while the fifteen whites would represent about six millions, for, as we have shown already, none of the independent Negro bodies would surrender their independence by going into a dependent Church. Would there be any equity or common business sense in such a copartnership as that? It does seem that it would be just and right, if the whites have to do all the paying, that they should do all of the assessing. Dr. DuBose thinks otherwise.

Is it not something "new under the sun" in the creation of a new church to bind it in its organic law "to contribute generously and faithfully" to another Church for educational and other purposes?

In my own State of Tennessee, like in other Southern States I assume, every Negro child can acquire a good common school education at the expense of the State. The Negro children receive as much school money, per capita, as do the white children. The public school fund is raised by taxation, which is almost all met by the whites. Should not the parents of the Negro children supplement the amount received from the State and counties when they wish their children to receive a higher education than can be obtained in the public free schools? Why treat the Negro at the start as a mendicant and make him a mendicant to the finish? Why not put him on his mettle and have him develop his manhood, and help him only after he has tried to help himself and is worthily in need? And why not trust the proposed unified Church to do its duty in giving as the necessity may require, and assume it would not unless it gives "constitutional security" to do so? Why not leave to the Negroes a free hand to organize their own church—to give it a name, to make their own constitution, and to enact, unhampered, their own laws, as other Negro Methodists have done, and wisely too? The Oklahoma General Conference contemplated nothing more, nor anything less. The DuBose plan counters all that.

Moreover, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, about a half-century ago, once for all settled the Negro problem by the mutual separation of the two races. The separation proved a blessing to both races. Why try to unsettle the problem by entering into a complex partnership, or lop-sided combine with the "Associated Connection," which is to "be considered in every way an organic part of the Reorganized Church?" Why such an entangling alliance?

In section No. 15 of this most remarkable plan is to be found this:

"Nothing in this plan is to be construed as a discrimination against the doctrine of the freedom and equality of all men in the Church of God. The doctrine of religious equality is fully and completely affirmed, and there shall never be enacted in the reorganized Church a law or rule denying these rights to any believing child of God."

That is indeed a fine rhetorical flourish, but its application is beyond my ken. Have not both Methodist Churches always proclaimed a free salvation for all mankind? Why should it be deemed necessary to insert into the organic law of their united Church "a law or rule" prohibiting an enactment clearly at variance with what has ever been a cardinal doctrine of the two Churches which are to compose the unified Church? Is it necessary, or proper, for a virgin, as pure as the morning dewdrop on a spear of grass, as she trips along the street, to wear a placard having written thereon, "I am virtuous?"

Furthermore, Who ever heard of inequality in the Church of God? That Church is in the hollow of the hand of Omnific Power, far removed from the reach of puny men, or of any organization they may make by whatever name called.

Were the assertions in section 15 intended to "make assurance doubly sure" as to whites? Or was it meant to apply to the Negro? I beg pardon—Dr. DuBose will never so far break from the instructions of his Church as to include outright the Negro in the unified Church. I just do not comprehend the meaning of section 15.

Dr. DuBose is sincere and honest. I hold him in high esteem. Heretofore, running through almost a quarter of a century, we have been at one on all important Church questions. I do regret that we do not now see eye to eye; or, putting it in another form, that he does not see as I do touching the matter under consideration. Believing that his article, in every section, except the last one which I do not understand, antagonizes the deliverance of our General Conference on the Negro question, and that his plan is misleading to the Northern mind, as well as to the minds of the Negroes, and that it is inequitable, unworkable and harmful, I regret that some one more capable than I has not reviewed it and shown its errors in a stronger light than I have.

I have neither purposely nor knowingly said an unkind word, nor dealt unfairly in this discussion, though I have sought to make my blows effective. The Doctor dealt with fundamentals, and his plan is primarily for the consideration of the members of the Committee. I have duly considered it and give herein my views.

DISRAELI AND THE CHURCH.

By Albert L. Berry.

Disraeli was the greatest Jewish statesman the world has produced for centuries. In the biography of this Earl of Beaconsfield, recently completed, by George Earle Buckle, the world was startled to learn that the leading statesman of England was a firm defender of the faith as handed down and derived from his own race. For himself, he says: "I look upon the Church as the only Jewish institution that remains, and irrespective of its being the depository of divine truth must ever cling to it as the visible means which embalms the memory of my race, their deeds and thoughts, and connects their blood with the origin of things."

Speaking of the criticism of the German scholars known to us as higher criticism, Disraeli said: "Will these opinions succeed? My conviction is that they will fail. First having examined all their writings, I believe without exception whether they consist of fascinating eloquence, diversified learning, and picturesque sensibility—or lastly, whether it be the provincial arrogance and the precipitate self-complacency which flash and flare in an essay or review; I find that the common characteristic of their writings is that their learning is always second-hand."

In a speech at Oxford, he emphasized the necessity of the Church being held together by a strong creed. He said: "It is not our iron ships, it is not our celebrated regiments, it is not these things which have created, or indeed really maintained our empire; it is the character of the people. Now I want to know where that famous character of the English people will be if they are to be influenced and guided by a Church of immense talent, opulence and power without a distinctive creed." His remarks may well apply—as he proceeds—to our own country and time, as we witness the gradual loosening of faith in the divine Word of God, and the multiplying of nebulous isms. He said: "You have in this country accumulated wealth that never has been equaled, and probably it will still increase. You have a luxury that will some day peradventure rival even your wealth, and the union of such circumstances with a Church without a distinctive creed will lead, I believe, to a dissoluteness of manners and morals rarely equaled in the history of man, but which prepares the tomb of empires."

When Disraeli was at the height of his career, it was quite fashionable and considered a mark of learning to be familiar with the theory of Evolution, as presented in Darwin's "Origin of Species." Disraeli in his speech at Oxford said: "The question is this, 'Is man an ape or an angel?' My lords, I am on the side of the angels. I repudiate with indignation and abhorrence the contrary view, which is, I believe, foreign to the conscience of humanity. More than that, even in the strictest intellectual point of view, I believe the severest metaphysical analysis is opposed to such a conclusion, but, on the other hand, what does the Church teach us—what is the interpretation of the highest nature? It teaches us that man is made in the image of his Creator—a source of inspiration and of solace, a source from which only can flow out every right principle of morals and every divine truth. It is between these two contending interpretations of the nature of man and their consequences that society will have to decide. Their rivalry is at the bottom of all human affairs. Upon our acceptance of that divine interpretation for which we are indebted to the Church, and of which the Church is the guardian, all sound and salutary legislation depends. That truth is the only security for civilization and the only guarantee of real progress."—The Presbyterian.

CENTENARY COLLEGE SUBSCRIPTIONS.

At our recent Conference session at Baton Rouge, in response to an earnest plea from Bishop Hoss, a subscription of about $2000 to meet the immediate needs of Centenary College for the present session was taken, with the understanding that it was to be paid by June 1. These amounts will be needed in full by the end of the session, or within the next week or two. Up to this date less than half of them have been paid. The campaign now in progress in Shreveport for $100,000 will very greatly help in solving the problems of the future, but in the nature of the case, being endowment to be invested, will not begin to bring returns for a year. And so Dr. Wynn has the big problem of providing for the current expenses of this session, for which he is depending upon these subscriptions. Let every subscriber pay up as promptly as possible.

ANOTHER VOICE HEARD.

The Michigan Christian Advocate is authority for the statement that of fifty-eight books in the course of study for undergraduates in the Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, "ten or twelve are objectionable on the score of not being Methodistic." That is a serious matter. Isn't it time now that so many books are being made, that more attention be given to the matter of doctrine by our Church as well as by all of the others? Is it any wonder that we hear so little emphasis on the doctrines of the Church when the young ministers are compelled to read books which do not teach them? If doctrines are not important enough to be in the course of study for young ministers, are they important enough for the young ministers to take time and thought and expound them to the people?—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

REV. H. B. WATKINS—A REJOINDER.

In his last effusion, Rev. H. B. Watkins says he does not care to compete with me in personalities, which is inexplicable in view of the fact that if personalities have heen injected into this controversy the fault is his.

My statement that Methodists pay 75 per cent of the hudget of the Interdenominational Association was no mere assertion, as he would have his readers helieve; hut it was what I regarded as a fair estimate hased upon the comparative numerical strength of the Methodists and Baptists and the admitted loyalty of the latter to their denominational institutions. He tries to wave aside my estimate, though hased upon this strong consideration, by affirming that his figures are hased upon information obtained from the books of Mr. Z. D. Davis of Jackson, Miss. I reply that any one knows that verbal testimony is of little value in our civil courts when documentary evidence is accessible. Hence, if he offers the hooks of Mr. Davis as evidence in this controversy, I demand that he produce the books or a certified copy, showing the contributions of the various denominations of the State. Otherwise, I shall still regard his statement simply as an assertion. I wrote Mr. Davis asking him the following questions: 1. How is it possible for you to keep an accurate record of the denominational sources from which you secure your funds? 2. What per cent do the Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, and other denominations of the State contribute? Mr. Davis has not yet replied to my enquiry. When the manner in which the collections are taken is considered, I do not believe it possible to keep an accurate record of the denominational sources of the International Association's budget. But granting for a moment that Brother Watkins is correct in saying that Methodists give 48 per cent to that work, I maintain that this is too large a percentage for our Church when it is known that the Baptists in this State are as strong numerically as we are and should, therefore, give as much. If they do, then Baptists and Methodists together give 96 per cent, leaving only 4 per cent for the Presbyterians and all other denominations of the State. This ratio I am not ready to believe to be correct, so I say again, Brother Watkins, "help thou mine unbelief" hy the production of the documentary evidence. Until this is done, I shall maintain that Methodist people give approximately 75 per cent of the interdenominational hudget. This has been my contention for four years, and these figures have been published in the Advocate several times and no one denied them till Brother Watkins hroke the silence of all these years. Now, let him quit talking and produce the documentary evidence. I seek only the truth. The public wants the facts. But if he should succeed in producing the proof of his statement, I shall still maintain that we are giving too much when we give anything at all, considering the great need of our own work.

Brother Watkins denies saying anything ahout anyhody heing an "utter failure." No, he did not say so in so many words, hut that was the implication, and it was a thrust at the vast majority of the hrethren of the Mississippi Conference, which I resent. If he could see some of the letters which have come to me from the faithful pastors serving their Lord in difficult fields, he would know that he has lost his chance of ever becoming a Bishop, if his election depends upon their votes.

I offered Brother Watkins a challenge, proposing to pay into the treasury of the Sunday School Board $50 if he would accept appointment to a charge which I would name and succeed in raising the collections in full. Instead of facing the challenge squarely and either accepting it or rejecting it, he evades it hy retorting that he will accept it when I am elected Bishop. A wise and sensihle man is Brother Watkins, for he knows that neithor he nor I will ever he a Bishop. My proposition was no jest, hut I am in earnest in wanting to see the matter tested out, once for all, hy a successful man like Brother Watkins. Believing that his presiding elder will be ohliging enough to recommend his appointment, I hereby renew the challenge and make it perpetual, so that if he does not accept it now it will face him as long as he is a member of the Mississippi Conference.

Brother Watkins expressed himself as willing to stand any test with me, hut when I propose the number of souls led to Christ as the test, he declines with becoming humility and says that he is not willing to boast of the souls saved under his ministry. But his humility quickly vanishes as he proceeds to boast of his success in collecting money. Very accommodating humility! Hocus, pocus, presto! et cetera. He is as elusive in meeting his own proposal as he is in accepting my challenge. However, if he had hut few conversions under his ministry to make his heart glad, it is well that he can rejoice in his success in raising the collections.

Brother Watkins admits that "in this Sunday school movement there ought to be adjustment." When such a stanch supporter of the interdenominational work as he was at the heginning of this controversy makes such a large admission, I feel hopeful that through investigation and the acquisition of further information he will yet become a "convert" and develop a genuine case of denominational "spinality." As for myself, I propose to be loyal to the Sunday school work of my own Church.

I did not evade the fact that I was using the interdenominational uniform lessons, as Brother Watkins intimates, hut admitted it and said that I did so because I had nothing else. However, he is attempting to make something out of nothing, for the interdenominational committee furnishes nothing except the selection of the lesson Scripture text—a very simple matter—while the comment, the important feature, is supplied hy each denomination.

In closing, I repeat that the Interdenominational Association is a positive menace to our denominational work; and that if our people will stand hy the work of our own Church we can put two men in the field. Otherwise, our Field Agent will soon have to be withdrawn. Mark my prediction!

THE DEATH OF CHARLES W. BLAIR.

Editor of the Advocate: The First Church in Shreveport, and the Methodist Church in Louisiana have lost a generous friend in the death, on the 5th instant, of Mr. Charles W. Blair. Mr. Blair was a native of Alahama, hut had lived a long time in this section of Louisiana. Most of his life was spent in Mansfield, and his hody was taken there and huried with impressive ceremonies by the Church and the Masons. He was unmarried and left no immediate family. He loved the Methodist Church, and gave liberally to its institutions, particularly to the Sunday school of the First Church in this city. I will send you a fuller account of Mr. Blair's life and benefactions later.

S. A. STEEL.

Shreveport, La.

The death of this excellent man is indeed a great loss to the Methodism of this section. The Advocate extends sympathy to the hereaved.

MR. W. T. BOSWELL DEAD.

The New Albany (Miss.) Gazette of April 26 contained an extended account of the death and obsequies of Mr. W. T. Boswell, a leading young citizen and business man of the town in which it is issued. Referring to the deceased, that journal says: "Mr. Boswell came to this place six years ago from Kosciusko, where he had been in business with his father. Opening a furniture store here, he hegan his life among our people. As a result of his conscientious business dealings, his store soon hegan to grow and his acquaintance spread throughout the county. Truly, New Albany and Union County have lost one of their hest citizens. Never perhaps was there a man who took an active part in life's work who had fewer enemies. * * * Though in had health for the past several years, he could always be relied upon to perform any duty asked of him hy his fellow-men." Mr. Boswell died of hright's disease at Vossburg, Miss., where he had gone with the hope that he might there improve. He was an official in our church at New Albany, and his pastor says, "one of the best to be found anywhere." He was 33 years of age. The funeral service was held in the Methodist Church at New Albany and was in charge of Rev. S. L. Pope, who spoke beautifully of the deceased, as also did Revs. J. A. Goad and C. A. Northington. A number of touching tributes were also spoken by lay members of the congregation with which he was connected. Mr. Boswell is survived hy his wife and two small sons; hy his father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Boswell; hy three hrothers—Dr. Boswell, a well known physician, Mr. J. S. Boswell, and Mr. H. H. Boswell, and hy two sisters—Mrs. Lillie Jackson, and Miss Bettie May Boswell. To these sorrowing loved ones we extend sympathy, and pray that the Divine grace may comfort and sustain them.

NOTES.

The number of newspapers in the United States that will not carry liquor advertisements is between 8000 and 9000.

It is stated that under one year of the prohibition regime in Georgia the chain-gang of that State was reduced from 700 to 200, and the number of homicides from 24 to 10. An excellent showing!

The R. M. Rose Company, an inter-state whiskey firm of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Jacksonville, Fla., went into bankruptcy a few days since. An officer of the concern thus accounted for its failure: "The restrictions recently imposed on the sale of whiskey in Georgia cut off more than two-thirds of the company's income and made it impossible for it to meet its obligations." We predict that there will be many more such failures throughout the country in the near future. Let the good work go on!

BEER NOT SAFER.

The fallacy that beer is a safer drink than whiskey because it contains a smaller percentage of alcohol is shown up by a report from the United States internal revenue commissioner. We quote from the statistical abstract containing this report for 1914, wherein figures are given showing the per capita consumption of distilled spirits and beer, with their respective alcoholic contents for that year:

Distilled spirits—number of gallons used per capita	1.46
Gallons of pure alcohol	.584
Malt liquors—number of gallons used per capita	20.51
Gallons of pure alcohol	.820

It will be seen from these figures that the per capita consumption of alcohol by beer drinkers in 1914 was 40 per cent greater than that consumed by whiskey drinkers. While it is true that a given quantity of beer contains less alcohol than the same quantity of whiskey, it is also true that ten times more beer is consumed than whiskey, which brings the alcoholic content of beer consumed up to and in excess of the amount contained in whiskey.—Richmond Virginian.

HE WAS AMAZED.

The following is taken from a recent issue of The Times-Picayune:

"The eyes of Senor Alberto Duran, wine salesman, opened wide in amazement Monday night when he learned that New Orleans was 'closed tight' on Sundays and there was such a thing as a prohibition movement in the United States. He is registered at the St. Charles Hotel, en route to Latin-American countries. He is not selling wines to local jobbers, the California wine business proving too much a competitor for Spanish wines. A Times-Picayune reporter talked to Senor Duran in his room at the St. Charles Hotel, speaking through Martin J. Elkan, the St. Charles foreign agent and interpreter. 'A prohibition movement, such as is in progress in the United States, is an utterly unheard-of thing in Spain; I never heard of such an idea until I was in Porto Rico recently, and there I thought it was some peculiar kind of revolution,' said he. 'I never expected to find such a thing in a free country like this one.'"

We venture to predict that there are many other surprises in store for the liquor vendors of the Old World as well as the New. And we dare say that Spain will wake up to the necessity of safeguarding her population from the use of intoxicants in the future not remote.

"ET TU BRUTE!"

When Cæsar fell under the daggers of the assassins, he turned his head and saw the face of his friend, Brutus, among the men who stabbed him, and exclaimed, "Et tu, Brute!" And thou, too, Brutus! I have just read a report in Zion's Herald of an address recently made by Bishop Joseph F. Berry at the semi-annual conference of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Grand Rapids, Michigan. I quote: "As Bishop Berry declared in his address, we will hold to the doctrine of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man." This deliverance was made in connection with his remarks on the proposed union of the two Methodisms, North and South, and the plain implication is that in her attitude toward the Negro the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, does not hold to the doctrine of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, and that if the Methodist Episcopal Church should make any concession on the Negro problem it would be tantamount to a surrender of this cardinal truth of the Gospel.

Such statements as this show us the vast distance that really separates the two Churches. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was preaching the Gospel to the Negroes before the now venerable Joseph was born, and while he was a squalling Canadian brat, waking the household with his racket for his morning nourishment, faithful men of God, my father among them, were telling the good news of salvation to the slaves in the South. When the war for the Union liberated the slaves, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, organized those Negroes who still adhered to us into a Church of their own, and we have helped them, and are now helping them, to realize the highest things God has for humanity. We have not done all we might have done, but what we have done is enough to settle the question of our interest in the religious welfare of the Negroes. Yet Bishop Berry, whom we who know him love and esteem very highly for his work's sake, before a great representative body, deliberately insinuates that we do not believe in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

Better keep separate from those folks. When such big-hearted, liberal, and fraternal men as Bishop Joseph F. Berry thinks that way about us, what are we to expect from those who are not as religious as Joseph used to be! I say used to be, for when I was editor of the Epworth Era and he was editor of the Epworth Herald, Joseph had religion. I know that, because I was with him a good deal, and, he being a Yankee, I kept my eye on him, and in spite of my prejudice against the "Yankee," I felt in my heart that Berry had religion. I don't mean that he is not as religious now. God forbid! But that is just the reason why we had better not unite. When such good men, as I hope my old friend Joe Berry is, think that we do not hold to the doctrine of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man because we do not intend to put ourselves under the control of a "supreme General Conference" that might attempt to force Negro equality upon us, it is plain to me that we had better drop the whole "union" business.

I am not going to discuss the subject further than to say that there must be a fundamental confusion of moral ideas in the mind of any man who holds that it is necessary to believe in "equality" between the white man and the black man in order to believe in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. The position of Sonthern Methodism on the Negro is unassailable by either reason or Scripture. Let us stand by it. Let us continue to practice that kindly spirit toward the Negro which made him our fast friend during a war that involved his freedom, and not be betrayed into a "union" which preaches a fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man in theory, but does not practice it. And it is time to stop this diplomatic dodging of the truth, and tell our people plainly that the reason we cannot "unite" is because the Northern Methodist Church insists on Negro equality. That is the truth in a nut-shell. None of it for me. Yet I love old Joe Berry all the same, and wish he would come to see me and his whilom companion, O. A. Wright, who teaches my Wesley Bible Class every Sunday, and knows a few things too. My, how I would love to have Berry and Wright out at Bonnie Briar Bush farm for a few hours! We would enjoy the "brotherhood" part of the thing, anyhow.

THE BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Brookhaven District Conference convened at Crystal Springs, Miss., on Tuesday, May 1, at 2:30 p. m.

Rev. L. L. Roberts, conducted the opening devotional exercises. In his unique style of exposition he brought out spiritual truth, new and old, from Acts 6:1-4.

Rev. J. T. Leggett, the presiding elder, was not a stranger in the district, nor in the chair at a district conference. He dispatched the business with a deftness that revealed tried experience and an intelligent interest in every department of Church work.

All of the pastors were present for two or more sessions. Several local preachers and a goodly number of delegates were in attendance. It was a benediction to have with us Rev. M. L. Burton, who spent quite a number of years of his active ministry in this district.

The connectional brethren, to the delight of the Conference, were with us early and late. Rev. M. M. Black, opened for them in the beginning Tuesday afternoon, and the rest of the time was interspersed with addresses by Revs. J. L. Neill, J. B. Randolph, Robt. Selby, and Professors Huddleston and Harrell. Rev. H. M. Ellis preached a heart-searching sermon on the last day about "Laying up Treasures in Heaven." All of these brethren brought us messages of vision and inspiration.

The following committees did faithful work: Admission on Trial, Local Preachers, Quarterly Conference Records, Sunday Schools, State of the Church, Publishing Interests, and Social Service. There were no applicants for license to preach. It was the consensus of opinion that the report of the Committee on Quarterly Conference Records evinced more painstaking and accurate investigations than usual. The Conference gave Rev. H. K. McKee and his committee a special vote of appreciation.

The pastors in making their reports were optimistic, and it was evident that Zion is making progress in this part of His vineyard. Careful plans are being made for revivals and we are expecting a gracious harvest.

The following brethren conducted Institutes: Rev. W. H. Saunders, for the preachers; Rev. W. H. Saxon, for Epworth Leaguers; and Mr. V. D. Youngblood arranged the program for the laymen. These Institutes were informing and inspiring.

Cole Younger Higginbotham was unanimously recommended for admission on trial into the Annual Conference.

V. D. Youngblood was re-elected District Lay Leader. Rev. W. H. Saunders was appointed District Secretary of an educational fund to assist Rev. E. A. King in completing his college work at Millsaps. W. D. Davis, W. T. Denman, P. H. Enochs, and Prof. J. E. Carruth were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, with W. W. Godbold and M. B. Starnes as alternates.

The Committee on Publishing Interest submitted and the Conference adopted the following: "We recommend that the Nashville and New Orleans Christian Advocates, The Review, and Missionary Voice be more widely circulated and read in our district; and we wish to express our hearty appreciation of the loyal and heroic stand that Dr. R. A. Meek, Editor of our Conference Organ, has taken in defense of our doctrines and all questions confronting our great Church."

In 1889 the lamented Bishop Galloway held the Conference at Crysals Springs, and of the class which was admitted then there are five laboring within this district now, and they were all present during the Conference: Revs. J. T. Leggett, J. C. Ellis, R. H. Barr, C. W. Crisler, and H. L. Norton. Long live the Class of '89!

The preaching of the Gospel was of a high order. Revs. C. W. Crisler, R. H. Kleiser, W. H. Saunders, H. M. Ellis, and C. A. Schultz were the preachers.

Hazlehurst was unanimously chosen as the next meeting place.

Resolutions full of thanks were adopted as an appreciation of the untiring efforts and many acts of courtesy of our capable and genial host, Rev. H. L. Norton, and the old-time, genuine Southern hospitality of the splendid homes of Crystal Springs.

The writer, assisted by Rev. W. N. Thomas, did the work at the Secretary's table.

On Thursday afternoon, about 4:30, the Conference adjourned sine die. We turned our faces homeward with new courage and a fresh enduement of power for the tasks before us, resolving to more fully "present ourselves a living sacrifice unto God."

THE GOLDEN RULE.

By Rev. W. S. Harrison.

"Just as you would that men serve you,
To them do you the very same."
This Golden Rule is Wisdom's due
To life's true work and proper aim.

This Rule explains the love of God—
"Love thou thy neighbor as thyself"—
This is the path that Jesus trod,
And lived the life unstained by self.

Make Golden Rule the law of home,
Then peace and love come trooping here,
And joy becomes the crowning dome;
Thence sweetest pleasures banish fear.

'Tis bliss that children have a part,
In such a home of sweet content;
The angel in the baby heart,
Assumes the form by Heaven meant.

This law of love that Jesus gave,
Obeyed by husband, wife, and child,
Makes home a paradise to some,
From rudeness low and wild.

BILLY'S LESSON.

Billy Browne frowned at his book and told himself over and over: "I never can learn that old lesson! I know that I can't!"

Every time Billy said this, the lesson seemed to grow more hard and hopeless. It would have been easy in school, but it is tedious work for a boy to make up in vacation lessons he has missed while away on a visit.

The real trouble, you see, was not that the lesson was hard, but that part of the time Billy's mind was out on the street where Dick and Allen were playing, and the rest of the time it wouldn't work because Billy wouldn't let it. He kept discouraging it all the time.

"What's the use trying to understand a lesson when you can't?" he grumbled.

Just then Mr. Beach came down the street with his family of goats—Billy, Nanny and Kiddie. At once Billy dropped his work and rushed out to see the goats. Dick and Allen joined him, and all began asking eager questions, for none of them knew goats well.

Mr. Beach was leading Billy Goat by a halter. At an order from him, the goat stood proudly on his hind legs.

"He's like an old man with long beard and his sober eyes," said Billy.

"He's like a small boy in many ways," answered Mr. Beach. "He likes to climb and he's full of fun and tricks."

"That's like a boy," agreed Dick.

"And he seems always to be hungry," Mr. Beach added.

"That's like a boy, too," laughed Allen.

"If he's left in the yard," Mr. Beach went on, "he eats everything green in sight—grass and leaves and shrubs. Even the flowers do not escape him. I shut him and his family up in a pasture with a wire fence around it, which I knew he couldn't climb. One day I found him outside it, nibbling a young tree. You see, the fence was braced at the corners with long poles, and he climbed the inside one and walked down the outside one."

"Just like a boy!" again laughed Dick. "Was it hard to train him to do tricks like standing up in this way?"

"No," answered Mr. Beach. "Goats, as a rule, are easily trained. At first Billy didn't want to stand on his hind legs, but that was only because he thought he could not. Even a goat can't do a thing till he gets rid of that notion. He hadn't found out then how very easy it is."

Right here Billy Browne might have said: "That's like a boy, too!"

It was very much like a boy Billy knew. He said nothing, but he was thinking busily, and his thoughts ran like this:

"I'm not going to let Billy Goat beat Billy Browne. I can learn that lesson, and I'll do it, too!"

And Billy did learn it. He laughed when he was through to think how easy it had been.

The next day, when he passed Mr. Beach's pasture, Billy Goat looked at him with a wise air, as if he would say: "Didn't you learn a good lesson from me, Billy Browne?"—Unidentified.

A LITTLE GIRL'S PRAYER.

Among the loveliest things that the missionaries are doing is taking poor, homeless, sad little children into their homes and helping them to grow up and be strong, happy, good men and women. In one of these homes in India was a sweet little girl six years old. One day two new little girls were brought in. They had been whipped and hurt and treated unkindly and never had known what it was to have anyone love them and take care of them, so they were just as dirty and unlovely and cross as they could be.

The little six-year-old girl who lived there wanted to be kind and loving to them, but it was as hard for her as it would be for you if two very dirty, unpleasant little children suddenly came to live in your home. But she was a very wise little girl, and she knew about a dear Friend who could help her, and her teacher heard her praying aloud, off in a corner, all by herself. This was her prayer: "Help me to love the two new little girls as if they were nice."

Perhaps the next time you have to be with some one whom you do not like, you can think about that prayer, and I'm sure that it will help you just as it must have helped the little girl in India.—The Sunbeam.

HOW AN ESKIMO KNOWS HIS AGE.

Open to your map of Greenland, and far up in the northwestern part of that country live the little Eskimos of which a writer says:

The people have no books. They can neither read nor write. But they can tell you right away how old each fat little Eskimo playing about the hut in the snow and cold is, by looking into a bag.

"What a funny bag," you say, "to be able to tell anybody's age."

This is the way it is:

When a baby comes to an Eskimo's house, or "igloo," a fur bag is given to the little one. He is to keep this bag as long as he lives.

Every year when the sun comes once more after the long, cold Greenland night, a bone is put into a little bag. So when you look into the bag and see seven bones, for instance, you know that the little owner is seven years old.—The Christian Register.

PORT GIBSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

By Rev. Jno. D. Ellis.

The Port Gibson District Conference was in session at Port Gibson, Miss., April 26-28, inclusive, with Rev. M. B. Sharbrough in the chair.

Brother Sharbrough is still giving satisfaction as a preacher and presiding officer, and conducts a district conference in a way to make its affairs interesting and profitable. Business is attended to, programs pulled off, lagniappe permitted to occupy the floor, and every fellow who has something to say is given a chance. There is no disposition to rush, or to lag, but things are expedited, without overlooking anything of importance.

Every pastor was present, and each circuit and station was represented by at least one lay delegate. Rev. Ira B. Robertson, a superannuate, came as usual, and helped to make the conference a success. The local attendance was good, notwithstanding "The Birth of a Nation," a moving picture exhibition, was presented in the town one afternoon and two nights.

Several visiting brethren magnified their offices, and made speeches which showed the importance of the lines of work represented by them, viz.: Robert Selby, J. L. Neill, J. B. Randolph, M. M. Black, and G. L. Harrell.

It would take a great deal of space to report all the details of the Conference. The work usually done by a district conference was attended to, various committees were appointed, and they read written reports. Many subjects were discussed, in which many participated.

B. W. Lewis and J. H. Foreman preached gospel sermons, O. S. Lewis and J. D. Ellis made missionary addresses, while C. F. Emery and W. W. Graves stayed over to preach on Sunday.

One resolution passed by the Conference is worthy of notice.

"Whereas, the cost of living has so materially increased that the salaries fixed for our pastors are inadequate,

Resolved, That the presiding elder be and hereby is authorized to appoint committees in each pastoral charge to collect and transmit to the pastor such complements of foodstuffs, etc., as may be obtainable, to supplement the salary."

Two young men were licensed to preach—M. L. Trevillion, and G. W. Garrison. M. M. Satterfield was re-elected lay leader.

A telegram was read from Hon. Jas. K. Vardaman, the Junior Senator from Mississippi, pledging co-operation toward the abolition of the whiskey traffic.

Delegates were elected to the Annual Conference as follows: M. M. Satterfield, T. B. Butler, J. G. Parham, and J. E. Cammack. Alternates, J. K. Sessions, and J. D. Ireland.

The chair appointed an Ad Interim Licensing Committee as follows: H. W. Featherston, T. J. O'Neil, O. S. Lewis, and J. O. Ware.

Fayette was selected as the place of meeting for the district conference of 1918.

The people of Port Gibson are hospitable, for which the Conference extended thanks. They also believe in smooth, safe-going edestrianism, which is evidenced by new concrete sidewalks.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, President of Port Gibson Female College, and the musical talent of his institution, delightfully entertained the Conference one evening with a program.

This scribe was the guest of Mr. Robert J. Durr, where a Jersey cow gives a bucket of milk, where chickens crow and are slaughtered at the usual hour, and where 'hard times' seem yet to be a stranger. A thriving garden at the back of the dwelling seemed a happy response to the slogan: "Plant more foodstuffs."

Some war talk was indulged at Port Gibson, and some of Uncle Sam's soldiers were seen on guard.

"America, America,
If heaven asks of thee
Once more to pay the heavy price
Of sacred liberty,
Oh, all thy faithful sons will take
The road to Calvary,
And every son and daughter drink
The Bitter Cup with thee."

TO THE POINT.

On the wall of a Southern real estate office hangs this bit of what is plainly more truth than poetry:

"It is not the thing you do or say;
It is all in the way you do or say it.
What would the egg amount to, pray,
If the hen got up on the perch to lay it?"

A REMARKABLE UTTERANCE.

Zion's Herald (Boston), which is considered by many the foremost weekly journal of the Northern Methodist Church, under the caption, "No Longer to Cultivate Racial Differences," carried in its issue of May 9 the following editorial utterance, which is of such significance that we are moved to print it on our editorial page:

"Some time ago we suggested that one of the important steps that should be taken at an early date by the Methodist Episcopal Church was that of eliminating all racial Conferences in the United States. The work conducted in languages other than English should be related, we maintained, to the American Conferences within which it is located. The idea, we are pleased to note, is gaining. It is grounded in pure Americanism and we are certain will make for the efficiency of the Methodist Episcopal Church in its relation to the many races that now compose our social and political body.

"There is no better time in which to lay emphasis upon this very important question than the present. The war is drawing together the polyglot populations as probably nothing else could. The Methodist Episcopal Church cannot afford to be a divisive force. It must help in every way possible to bring about the fusing of these many races into one. And one of the most important steps that can be taken in this respect is to break down the middle wall partition which at the present time sets up in special entities of their own certain groups of our fellow members.

"We are well aware that such a step will meet with considerable opposition in certain places. There are traditions of race that hold long and tenaciously. But after all has been said and done, these are not to be continued at the expense of things which are more fundamental and therefore more important. This is one country and eventually all must become one in every sense of that term. While the love of the old home will continue, and while the mother tongue of the old land will be cherished and conserved, there must be a coming together of these many races as one. And everything which will help to bring this about is to be encouraged.

"We can well understand the advisability earlier of separate Conferences for those who were working in particular tongues. This was probably very desirable at the beginning of this work. That necessity, however, no longer exists. To maintain these special racial Conferences is to maintain racial divisions among us, to weaken the work and to make necessary large home missionary appropriations which could be used to better advantage in some other way.

"In a recent article in the Methodist Review, Dr. O. S. Baketel, editor of the Methodist Year Book and of the General Minutes, takes up this question under the head, 'A New Unification.' With the official data at hand, he draws attention to the fact that of the 118 Annual and Mission Conferences and Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States, ten are German and eight are Scandinavian. We had up to a few months ago an Italian Mission. Taking counsel of their better judgment, those in authority eliminated the Italian Mission and related each mission station to the Conference where it is located. The result is that the Italian missionary in any given territory is in official relation to his American brethren, and the Conferences themselves feel a special responsibility for that work. The proposition now is to do away with the Conference boundaries of the German and Scandinavian groups and place the German, Swedish, and Norwegian and Danish work in each given community within the bounds of the American Conference where it is located.

"Dr. Baketel in his article draws attention to the scattered condition of the work in these groups. Take, for instance, the Eastern Swedish. It has 'one church in Maine, eleven in Massachusetts, three in Rhode Island, five in Connecticut, nine in New York State, six in New Jersey, one in Pennsylvania, and one in Delaware—thirty-seven charges divided into four districts. The East German has all the work east of the Alleghany Mountains and reaches from Lawrence and Boston, Mass., to Baltimore and Buffalo. Yet in all this territory there are only forty-eight pastoral charges. The Central German has the German work in Ohio, West Virginia, Michigan, most of Indiana, Western Pennsylvania, and goes south from the Ohio River to Nashville, Tenn., where there is one church.'

"These figures are sufficient to indicate the difficulties of administration which prevail in such Conferences. The work is scattered from Dan to Beersheba, involving large expense, the isolation of preachers in any one of these groups from others of the same group, and likewise making impossible that official comradeship which ought to be developed between those who are working in these racial churches and their brethren who are working in the English-speaking churches.

"The question goes even deeper than that. It makes for the segregation of the laity in these particular churches. They are members of different Conferences and therefore do not come into intimate official touch with the members of the English-speaking churches in the communities where they are located. This is more than unfortunate—it may even be disastrous in some cases—as it encourages the permanence of separate racial groups in our social body.

"We do not ignore the fact that the same argument which makes for the elimination of the racial Conferences could be pursued for the elimination of the racial churches. Eventually this will come to pass also. The time must come when every one of these churches shall be American in every sense of the word. The first, and perhaps the second, generation has need of these churches in our larger centers. So long as the tide of immigration continues in any considerable numbers, therefore, these churches will be needed. But we must not deceive ourselves. We shall never be able to evangelize and Americanize all those who come from foreign lands entirely through their racial churches. It is only as the American churches themselves, as we have said so often, only as these churches are friendly to the non-English speaking races, and work with them and for them and make them feel entirely at home, that we shall be able to solve this very perplexing problem.

"But this whole phase of the question is entirely aside from, although logically connected with, the subject under consideration at this time. What we are anxious to emphasize most just now is that the Methodist Episcopal Church should set on foot a movement for the absolute elimination of all racial Conferences in this country. We do not care to go into the details of the matter as it relates to home missionary expenses and to the duplication of work in many communities. There is much to be said on these phases of the problem. The important thing, however, upon which we lay emphasis is that the time has come for the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States of America, in the interest of Americanism, to do away with its racial Conferences, and to be one in every sense of the word. This will make incidentally for economy of administration. It will result, we firmly believe, in the elimination of some churches where there is now duplication of effort. But more than that, it will make for Americanism.

"We must not be misunderstood. These words must not be interpreted to mean that those who form these foreign-speaking Conferences are in any way encouraging anything which is not American. Such is farthest from our thought. But the very fact that these preachers and congregations are racially isolated into separate Conferences, meeting in an official way only those of their own race, in the nature of the case, emphasizes and encourages racial demarcation, whereas the ideal must be the elimination of this demarcation as rapidly as possible in the interest of the unity of the American people."

There are only a few things that we care to say in connection with this very remarkable deliverance.

1. Though Zion's Herald does not specifically mention the Negro Conferences of the Northern Methodist Church, we infer that it means for its remarks to apply also to them. Its spirit is too well known to imagine for a moment that it would make an exception of the colored brother and draw a discriminating line against him which would not apply to any other race. Our contemporary seemingly argues (at least in effect) in favor of a consolidation of white and black Annual Conferences, especially where geographical expediency may seem to demand it.

2. We would also call special attention to the following statements: "The idea (that of doing away with racial Conferences), we are pleased to note, is gaining. * * * We do not ignore the fact that the same argument which makes for the elimination of the racial Conferences could be pursued for the elimination of the racial Churches. EVENTUALLY THIS WILL COME TO PASS ALSO." * * * What we are anxious to emphasize most just now is that the Methodist Episcopal Church should set on foot a movement for the absolute elimination of all racial Conferences in this country."

3. In view of what has been the apparent attitude of Zion's Herald toward the movement for the unification of American Methodism, this pronouncement is surprising, and, we think, quite significant. It seems to us to indicate that this insistent advocate of "union" has virtually abandoned hope of any such consummation—at least at any time in the near future.

4. It is fortunate for Southern Methodists that this disclosure of the spirit of the Church, North, as thus set forth by perhaps its ablest exponent, has been made before our Church has become in any way organically connected with that denomination. Unless the Northern Methodists shall generally and emphatically repudiate the position now taken by Zion's Herald, surely the time has come to end the union negotiations. A few weeks ago we were told that the solution for nearly all the problems of world-wide Methodism was to be found in racial Regional Conferences; but now we are told that the path of progress lies in precisely the opposite direction. Why this sudden and complete reversal? Can Southern Methodists risk all their sacred and delicate interests in a union with a much larger body which, according to Zion's Herald, so indefinitely knows its own mind?

5. We scarcely need to say that we do not concur in what is apparently Zion's Herald's view, that Christian unity and the national welfare demand a blending of Churches into one organization and an indiscriminate gathering together therein of all races. If this be true, all denominationalism is wrong; the Protestant Reformation was a mistake, and the Methodist movement, in so far as it broke away from the Established Church of England, was a blunder. The history of State Churches is a sufficient refutation of such a theory. Nearly all of the leading participants in the European conflict are nations largely dominated by a single ecclesiasticism. If a oneness of Church ORGANIZATION could not save them, what good reason is there to think that it would do so much more for our country than our Churches are now doing? We make bold to affirm that the best type of Christianity to be found beneath the stars is that in the United States, where a healthy, Christian denominationalism has prevailed from the foundation of our government up to the present time.

We do not desire to do our distinguished contemporary the slightest injustice, and if any of our inferences and suggestions as to its meaning and attitude are erroneous, we shall be glad to make correction if only our attention is called to them.

MAY BE REALLY COMPLIMENTARY.

A Portland (Oregon) dispatch states that Mike Gibbons, a prize-fighter, announced a few days ago that his property holdings are worth more than $170,000, and that his earnings from boxing last year amounted to $36,000. This is all right for a pugilist, but if it were an evangelist whose finances were so prosperous, there would be a great ado made over it. But, after all, is it not really a compliment to the ministry, that the world insists upon an exacting standard for it? There is too much need for money in these stirring times for a man whose soul is on fire with a love for God and humanity to be content to pile it up for his own selfish use.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Burke Culpepper has for some days been leading a revival campaign at West Point, Miss.

The Louisiana State Normal (Natchitoches, La.,) will graduate 244 students at its approaching Commencement. The Baccalaureate Sermon will be preached by Dr. S. H. Werlein of New Orleans.

"All goes well with us." Such is the laconic message of Rev. F. H. McGee, of Cockrum, Miss., in a business communication bringing us 6 subscriptions to the Advocate. Brother McGee is serving a good people.

Rev. C. E. Fike, of Rayne, La., writes: "Will the pastors in the Lafayette District please send me the names of delegates who will attend the District Conference which will convene here on June 9? We are looking forward with much pleasure to this occasion."

Rev. J. J. Baird, of Ripley, Miss., who is one of the most promising young ministers in the North Mississippi Conference, has lately favored us with a list of 7 renewal subscriptions to the Advocate. Of course, the work is going forward encouragingly in Brother Baird's charge.

Rev. S. A. Neblett, of Matanzas, Cuba, has lately been on a visit to the United States, having come to attend the meeting of the Board of Missions in Nashville in the interest of our Cuban work. Brother Neblett is one of the most capable missionaries in the fine field in which he labors.

Mrs. V. M. Millsaps, of Harriston, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, says: "I do not want to miss a single copy. You are certainly giving us a good paper. I agree with you on most of the issues before the Church, and am entirely in accord with you concerning the question of unification."

In a "personal" kindly sent us hy Rev. H. W. May, presiding elder of the Lafayette District, last week he was made to say that "Brothers Shankle and Joyner were holding a meeting at Lafayette." It should have been Brother Schuhle, the pastor, and Brother Joyner. The office force apologizes to all concerned for this error.

Rev. R. P. Neblett forwarded us several renewal subscriptions from Como, Miss., a few days since. In his communication was contained the following statement: "I am to be in a meeting with Rev. R. A. Clark at Covington, Tenn., May 20-28, but I hope to be ahle to spend one day at Millsaps College during the Commencement."

In his reference to Dr. Goodell, of New York, in his announcement concerning the Seashore Divinity School last week, Rev. H. M. Ellis wrote as follows: "Rev. Charles LeRoy Goodell, the greatest evangelist-pastor on this continent, will be there." We regret the typographical errors in the mention made of this distinguished minister.

A minister acquaintance, who is sojourning in New England, in renewing his subscription, writes us as follows: "You are giving us an excellent paper—one which rings true on all questions from union to orthodoxy. Up here Unitarianism, unionism, Christan Science, and Universalism have nearly emasculated Christianity."

Rev. R. H. Bamburg, of Mangham, La., has recently held a meeting within the bounds of the West Texas Conference. He will tell us briefly of his trip and of the revival services in which he was engaged, in the next issue of the Advocate. Brother Bamhurg's letter brought us some subscriptions, for which we extend to him our thanks.

Rev. C. B. Carter, Jr., a son of Rev. Briscoe Carter, who for some time has been a member of the National Guard, and who within recent months has seen service along the Mexican border, has come to New Orleans to connect himself with the First Regiment of Louisiana Infantry. He is now with that body of troops at Camp Nicholls, in this city.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, was in New Orleans last week, and found his way to the Advocate office. He was looking well and was in fine spirits. He stated that his recent district conference was an occasion of much interest, and that the preachers associated with him in the work are rendering faithful service.

In a business communication to our office, which hrings us two subscriptions, Rev. J. T. Abney says: "We are moving along well on the Scooba charge. While we are not making the progress we should like to see, there aro evidences of advancement. Before the end of the year, we hope to be able to report conditions very much improved along all lines."

From the local paper at Coffeeville, Miss., we take the following: "Revival services are in progress at the Methodist Church here. Rev. J. A. Bowen, the noted evangelist, is doing the preaching, and some excellent messages are being delivered at both the day and night services." Rev. W. L. Storment is the popular pastor of this worthy congregation.

From Pickens, Miss., Rev. W. M. Langley, our faithful pastor there, sends us this note: "We are spending $1000 on our church at Pickens. We are building an annex that will take care of our growing Sunday school. The walls are up and the roof is on." Brother Langley is not permitting his many duties to cause him to lose sight of the interests of the Advocate.

Within the past few days, the following friends, to whose kindness reference has nowhere else been made, have favored us with two or more subscriptions to the Advocate: Rev. J. H. Brooks, Senatobia, Miss., 3; Rev. W. N. Duncan, Winona, Miss., 3; Rev. J. B. Conner, Arkabutla, Miss., 5; Rev. J. T. Lewis, Greenville, Miss., 2; Brother F. A. Howell, Durant, Miss., 4; Rev. T. H. Porter, Lamar, Miss., 2; Rev. H. M. Young, Vaiden, Miss., 2.

The gifted pastor of one of the leading churches in the Advocate's territory thus writes us: "I preached a straight and uncompromising sermon on worldliness last Sunday night. If we do not do something to check the present tendencies, the devil is going to get many of our young people." It is a healthful sign when a preacher thus begins to become concerned for any part of his flock. This is a time when we need true and brave men in our pulpits.

Rev. Ira B. Robertson, an esteemed member of the Mississippi Conference, has been spending some days with relatives in New Orleans and cheered our sanctum with his presence for a brief time last Tuesday. Though on the "Honor Roll" of his Conference, Brother Robertson serves as a steward of our church at McNair, Miss., one of the appointments of the Fayette charge. He spoke in terms of high appreciation of the pastor of that work, Rev. J. O. Ware.

Rev. C. A. Powell, of Plain Dealing, La., writes: "Will you please state that I expect to begin a meeting here on the 4th Sunday in May? The preaching will be done hy Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, of Yazoo City, Miss., and the singing will be conducted by Mr. A. W. Steward, of Pittshurg, Tex. We are expecting great things from the Lord. Will you kindly pray that we may have a great revival? Things in general are very good with us—I might say prospering."

The many friends of Bishop E. E. Hoss will regret to know that it was recently adjudged necessary to have his beloved wife, who has been in a poor state of health for some time, to undergo a serious surgical operation. Let the readers of the Advocate remember this stricken household in Muskogee, Okla., at the throne of grace. A letter written by Bishop Hoss on May 8 stated that he was cherishing the hope of being ahle to meet all his official engagements during the year.

Miss Ruby Walker, of Bogalusa, La., who is a certificate graduate of Meridian College, Miss., would he pleased to secure a position as a pianist in evangelistic work. She has lately finished her course at the institution mentioned, and as to her ability as an accompanist she refers anv persons who may be interested to President J. W. Beeson, Mrs. Christine Conrad, and Mrs. J. M. McDonald, all of Meridian College. Miss Walker should be addressed at Bogalusa, La., in care of Lear's Drug Store.

Rev. W. W. Nelson, writing from Wesson, Miss., says: "Things are moving along smoothly on the Scotland charge, which I serve. The people are standing bv us and we are looking for some good meetings this summer. The camp meeting at Caseyville will begin on July 27, and will close on August 5. The helpers will be Rev. C. M. Crossley, of Philadelphia, and Rev. J. A. Wells, of Oak Ridge." We make grateful acknowiedgment to Brother Nelson for 4 renewal subscriptions to the Advocate.

Through the courtesy of Miss M. L. Gibson, the distinguished President of that institution, we have received an invitation to attend the Twenty-fourth Annual Commencement exercises of the Scarritt Bible and Training School at Kansas City, Mo., May 11-15, 1917. This year witnesses the sending forth from this excellent school of fifteen young ladies. Rev. C. N. Clark, pastor of the Melrose M. E. Church, South, of Kansas City, was scheduled to preach the Commencement Sermon, and Bishop Hendrix was announced to give the Annual Address.

A correspondent having recently asked us as to the Church relation of the late Dr. Booker T. Washington, we made inquiry of Prof. Monroe N. Work, of Tuskegee Institute, Editor of the Negro Yearbook, and the following is his reply: "Dr. Washington was a member of the Baptist Church and was closely identified with the Baptist National Convention (an independent colored organization). Almost every year after the organization of this Convention, he attended its annual meetings and delivered addresses."

Sister S. F. Harkey, the wife of our pastor at Hesterville, Miss., has brought us under obligations to her for 4 new subscriptions. We take the following from her much prized letter: "Brother Harkey has appointed me 'Advocate Agent,' and this is my first list. Others will follow. We havo had our second quarterly conference, and we need your prayers that my husband and I may do more for God during the next two than the first two quarters." Blessings on these energetic young itinerants, and may their labors for the Master be largely fruitful!"

Rev. T. B. Winstead of Burns, Miss., gives us two names for our mailing files, and sends along with them the following cheering message from his field: "Things are moving along very well in the Trenton charge. Owing to high prices and the scarcity of things, the times are hard; but my stewards are making a faithful effort, and as a result the report at our second quarterly conference, which was held a few days ago, was a record-breaker. God is blessing us, and we are planning great things for him this year."

Rev. W. W. Mitchell, presiding elder of the Durant District, writes: "Please announce the following Committees for the Durant District Conference: License to Preach and Orders, S. A. Brown, W. M. Langley, and Chas. D. McGehee; Recommendation for Admission into the Annual Conference, C. P. Moss, B. P. Jaco, and J. T. McCafferty." Brother Mitchell also states that Rev. J. F Watson has been appointed pastor of the Bellefontaine charge for the remaining part of the year, Rev. T. L. Houston having been released at his own request by Bishop Murrah.

Mrs. Leah E. Barrentine orders her Advocate sent to Hemet, California, instead of San Antonio, where it has been reaching her for some weeks. She says: "We left San Anfonio on April 28 and arrived in Hemet on May 1, the trip being a very pleasant one. We like California very much. There are a fine class of Methodists in this little city. They are very friendly and know how to treat strangers. 'Tis an unusual pleasure to a Mississippian to look out of the window and see snow-capped mountains. They are most beautiful to behold. I am enjoying every moment of our stay."

Rev. H. M. Whaling, Jr., who holds a place in our connectional University west of the Mississippi River, sends us the following note: "The School of Theology of Southern Methodist University is pleased to announce the gift of $100 a year, for a long term of years, from Mrs. W. M. Gunnell, of Marlin, Texas, the income of which is to he devoted to books on missionary preparation There are in Southern Methodist University a number of student volunteers, and this gift will enable the Department of Missions to put in the Library, year by year, a considerable number of volumes dealing with the fields for which these volunteers are preparing."

Rev. J. T. Lewis, of Greenville, Miss., delivered his new lecture, "Universal Democracy" (the correct name of it), at the Mississippi A. & M. College, near Starkville, last week. Brother Lewis also recently volunteered as a chaplain in the Army, and went to Jackson hoping to secure such an appointment, but did not succeed, being past 40 years of age, the limit fixed by the Government for the acceptance of ministers in this capacity. Chancellor Powers, of the University of Mississippi, has announced that Brother Lewis will preach the Commencement Sermon of that noted institution, and that Hon. A. H. Stone, of Dunleith, Miss., will deliver the Annual Address.

Rev. W. V. Shearer, pastor of our Central Church at Columbus, Miss., sends us the following good news: "We have just closed one of the most glorious meetings that I have ever been in. Central Church has had a truly wonderful spiritual awakening. It was aroused from a state of luke-warmness and lethargy to one of great zeal and fervor. Hence sinners were born into the Kingdom. We had about 150 reclamations and 55 names were added to our Church register. Praise the Lord!" Brother Shearer had with him in this excellent revival Rev. J. H. Bell, one of the evangelists of the North Mississippi Conference. Columbus is Brother Bell's home city, and it is much to his credit that so successful a revival was conducted under his ministry and leadership there. We rejoice with him and Brother Shearer.

DR. STEEL ITS AUTHOR.

In some unaccountahle way, the name of Dr. S. A. Steel, the brilliant pastor of our First Church at Shreveport, La., was omitted from the article entitled "Et Tu Brute," which appears on Page 6 of this issue of the Advocate—a part of the first side of our paper which is already entirely off the press. We greatly regret this error, and take this means of correcting it—the best that we can do now.

The spirituality of a congregation is not nearly so well tested by what its members do on gala occasions as it is by what they do when a revival is on.

SUFFERING CATS!
GIVE THIS MAN
THE GOLD MEDAL

Let Allen step on your tee terrier, wear three a size smaller if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this Cincinnati authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freezone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out.

This drug is a sticky ether compound, but dries at once and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue.

It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of freezone obtained at any drug store will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Cut this out, especially if you are a woman reader who wears high heels.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. Otherwise the obituaries will, without correspondence about them, be edited down to 200 words. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

Mrs. E. F. LAND (nee Earle Mayben), was born on January 11, 1851, and fell on sleep at Clarence, La., on March 1. Sister Land was converted early in life and became a member of the Presbyterian Church; some years after she united with the M. E. Church, South, and remained a member of the same until death. It was the writer's pleasure to know Sister Land for many years and to be her pastor for two years, and to know her was to appreciate her. She had many relatives and a large circle of friends who loved her dearly. She was self-sacrificing for her own family and the pleasure of others. She was not as demonstrative of her religious experience as some, but lived a quiet, good Christian life, seeming to possess at all times the peace of God that passeth all understanding. She was attentive to the sick, always ready to lend a helping hand. She will be sorely missed in the community. Sister Land leaves a husband, three daughters, and three sons, besides many relatives to mourn their loss; but they sorrow not as others who have no hope. We believe she is forever with God. May God comfort the bereaved ones!

E. L. CARGILL.

Mrs. MAGGIE WINSTEAD, wife of H. G. Winstead and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. L. Caughman, was born on August 31, 1877, and departed this life on February 6, 1917. After funeral services, the pastor being assisted by Rev. M. L. Wilds, she was laid to rest in the Burns Cemetery. She gave her life to Christ when quite young and connected herself with the Lutheran Church, but later in life she joined the Methodist Church, of which she lived a consistent member. She loved her Church and was a regular attendant upon all the services when able to go. She was especially interested in the weekly prayer meeting, and her prayers and bright testimonies were calculated to stimulate the weakest faith. In the home she was an ideal wife and mother to the husband and children. The relatives and neighbors will long feel the loss of her. Back of Sister Winstead's bright, smiling countenance was the indwelling Christ, and from his life within emanated the light that shone in her face; for the true element in the formation of character proves what is within. "Out of the heart are the issues of life." As every force in nature carries with it its atmosphere, so does every man and woman. The atmosphere of her home was pure and congenial, and you could have only pure thoughts while in conversation with her. To the bereft loved ones—the husband, two small girls, and four boys, permit me to say only God can ease and calm the disturbed soul amidst such sorrows in life. To Him I commend you, and pray that there may be another family reunion some day—a day which is not followed by night, and a coming together never to be separated one from the other. Her pastor,

T. B. WINSTEAD.

Mrs. ANNA JOHNSON WEISSINGER, the beloved wife of J. M. Weissinger, departed this life on April 6, 1917, aged 69 years. She was born in Perry County, Ala., was reared since early childhood in Winston County, Miss., and was married to J. M. Weissinger near Winona, Miss., in the year 1867. In 1876 they moved to De Soto County, Miss., where they had ever since resided. The subject of this sketch was truly one of God's noblest women. She was a member of the Methodist Church, and since early childhood had labored earnestly for the good of all those with whom she was associated, and for the advancement of the Kingdom of God on earth. Modest and unpretentious, she was always sincere and faithful in the exercise of Christian virtues. She had been afflicted with an incurable disease of the stomach for two years, but she bore this affliction as only could one whose faith and hope are stayed in Christ, whom she trusted implicitly. Her devoted husband, children and grandchildren, and a large circle of relatives and friends mourn her death, not as those without hope, but as those who trust the risen Savior's words: "Whither I go ye know the way and There ye shall be also."—(Commercial Appeal.)

(Her home was one of the few nowadays where the minister of God is always welcome. Her life lost none of the freshness and brightness of youthful hopes with the passing years. Her religion was of that rare variety which makes life not so frail a thing as to be worthless when shorn of the vestures of youth and health. Ripened in the full light of a faith and an experience of God and his love, her life was an appeal to the young, and a stimulant to our faith in a heaven and in a God who is able to raise us up at the last day. A Christian saint has passed from us, and following her to the brink of life, those who were close to her and who loved her felt themselves drawn nearer to the borders of light, and seemed to see more clearly the gates beautiful.—Her Pastor.)

IN MEMORIAM.

On the morning of April 1, 1917, the soul of Mrs. W. B. BAKER was called by her Savior from the joys of the home below, to the transcendant joy and bliss of the home above.

In this sorrow, the Woman's Missionary Society of the Sherman M. E. Church, South, feels most keenly the void caused by her departure.

Mrs. Baker was endowed with rare gifts of mind and heart, which ripened under the transforming power of divine grace. She gladdened all who touched her life by her radiant cheerfulness; she was the kindly and tactful almoner of all who needed her generous bounty; the kind and sympathetic friend of all who were in distress. In all her Master's work she was an active worker, loving His sanctuary—a faithful Sunday school teacher; but the missionary cause lay closest to her heart, because it was closest to the Master's heart, and to this cause she gave most enthusiastic support.

Whereas it pleased our Heavenly Father to lay His omnipotent hand upon our dear sister; therefore be it

Resolved: That, while we bow in humble submission to His will, we recognize the fact that the husband has been bereft of a loving and devoted wife; that our society has lost an ideal member, and that our community has sustained an irreparable loss.

Signed: Mrs. Philips, Mrs. Livingston, Mrs. Holmes, Committee.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas death has removed from our ranks our beloved co-worker in the Master's vineyard, Mrs. W. B. BAKER, wife of the Rev. W. B. Baker, of Sherman, Miss.; and

Whereas we realize with keen regret the loss to our cause, and the infinitely greater loss to the stricken husband, and to his dear little children of a former marriage, to whom she was a mother indeed, therefore be it

Resolved by the Woman's District Missionary meeting of the Corinth District, in conference assembled at New Albany, Miss.:

That we make this public expression of the deep sorrow we feel in the loss of this sweet-spirited handmaiden of the Lord; that we lay anew upon our own hearts the sacred cause which she loved, pledging ourselves to deeper earnestness and fuller consecration in advancing the Savior's gospel through the channel of missions.

That we tender to Brother Baker and all the bereaved loved ones our loving sympathy, praying God's sustaining grace in richest measure upon each bruised, bleeding heart, and pointing them to the glad day when they shall meet the loved one gone on before, and when God shall wipe away all tears from every tear-dimmed eye.

Signed: Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, Booneville, Miss.; Mrs. S. L. Pope, New Albany, Miss.; Mrs. C. M. Murry, Ripley, Miss.

MR. A. W. ATWOOD, AND DAUGHTER.

Mrs. W. C. DAVIS, the daughter of Mr. Atwood and wife of Mr. W. C. Davis, was born in Jasper County, Miss., in 1856; joined the Methodist Episcopal Methodist Church, South, in early life, and remained a consistent member until death. She was married to Mr. W. C. Davis in 1873, and of this union were born 13 children, 9 of whom are living to mourn the death of their mother. She left her husband, and three boys and six girls. She was a good woman and reared a good family, all of whom are church people and most of them church leaders. She enjoyed the old-time religion that makes one shout when one's emotions are stirred. May the Lord comfort the loved ones with his promises and the assurance that all things work together for good to them that love Him. Sister Davis died suddenly in Meridian, Miss., to which place they had moved, on February 4, 1917. Her remains were brought out to Beatrice on the N. O. & N. E. R. R., and from Beatrice out to the Pleasant Grove Church, where the body was laid to rest in the family and community graveyard in the presence of a host of friends and relatives.

Following her obsequies, upon our return to the parsonage at Rose Hill, about 3 miles from the family graveyard where Sister Davis was buried, we found that her father, Brother A. W. ATWOOD, who had been sick about 10 days, had died about the time we were laying Sister Davis away. Brother A. W. Atwood was born in October, 1832, and died on February 5, 1917; so he was a little over 84 years of age. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life and was a member of the same organization or some church all of his life. He was married to Miss Martha Lovett in 1849, and of this union were born 8 children, of whom only 5 are left to mourn the loss of their father. This union was broken by the death of his first wife, and he married Mrs. Eliza McKinnon in 1903. She too is left to mourn the loss of a husband. An interesting and an uncommon bit of history was connected with the Atwood family. At the time of Brother A. W. Atwood's death (who was only 84 years of age) there were 5 generation of the Atwood family living on the paternal side. Brother Atwood served four years in the Civil War in General Bragg's army and belonged to the 8th Mississippi Regiment. It is said that he made a splendid soldier. He was a licensed exhorter in the Methodist Church and was faithful all of his life in the service of his church and his Master—never complaining or murmuring. He loved to talk about the providence of God. He was able in prayer and an intelligent exhorter. The writer had known him for over two years, and to know him was to love him. May all the children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren not weep as those who have no hope, but may they strive to meet him in heaven! H. R. McKEE, P. C.

CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS, AND LIVER DISORDERS.

Cleanliness is the first law of health and it means more than keeping the hands and body clean. It demands that the inside of the body shall be kept clear of impurities. It demands that the waste products be not allowed to stay any longer in the body than Nature normally provides.

The importance of keeping your bowels normal is seen when it is remembered that there is not a solitary disease in the entire list that does not demand as one of the first requisites in its treatment the thorough elimination of waste matter from the bowels.

Two of the commonest causes of constipation are wrong diet and irregularity in going to stool. The liver failing to secrete enough bile is another potent reason.

Dr. Miles' Liver Pills are an ideal remedy for such a condition. They gently stimulate the action of the liver and the bowels, and with careful attention to habits of stool and diet, insure their proper and regular action.

The following are some of the reasons why we so strongly advocate the use of Dr. Miles' Liver Pills in cases of torpid liver, biliousness, constipation and indigestion: Because they do not cause griping or other unpleasant sensations like ordinary pills. Because their use does not derange the stomach, liver or bowels. Because they are a very gentle laxative and if properly used cause natural movements of the bowels. Because they are small, mild and sure.

Scientific Treatment For Rheumatism.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a salt combination scientifically prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood, and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says: "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." MERIDIAN DISTRICT NOTES.

By Rev. Elmer C. Gunn.

Rev. J. D. Newsom, a superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, whose home is in Meridian, has been seriously ill, but is much better now.

East End, Seventh Avenue, and Fifth Street churches have been holding revivals for the past ten days. That at East End closed Sunday night because of the condition of Evangelist Arch Holder, who has been on the verge of a breakdown in health for several months past and who has been forced to rest for a time. The services at Seventh Avenue and Fifth Street will continue throughout the week. Brother Jack Smith of Pachuta is with Brother Westhrook at Seventh Avenue, and our presiding elder is doing the preaching for Brother Wiley Ferguson at Fifth Street.

Bishop Murrah visited Meridian, April 7 and 8, preaching at Central at 11 o'clock and East End at 7:30 on Easter Sunday. His visit was a blessing to us all.

Brother Thompson, our popular presiding elder, is in great demand as a revivalist.

Yesterday, May 6, was a red letter day for the Sunday schools of Meridian. It was "Go to Sunday School Day" for us, and more than 5000 attended Sunday school at the different churches. Central Methodist reports 1320, which easily leads the churches of the city, and doubtless leads the State for attendance.

Brother Thompson's first Quarterly Bulletin has attracted a good deal of attention, and is looked upon as being a progressive step in church work.

The district conference was especially fine this year. Every pastor in the district was present, and an unusually large delegation of laymen. Brothers Sutherland, Ferguson, and Watkins preached able sermons to appreciative congregations, and Brothers Neill for the Sunday school, Black for Millsaps and Selby for Emory University were present and represented their causes with most interesting talks.

Brother Sutherland is out of the city this week, helping one of the Alabama brethren in a meeting.

Brother Peebles keeps busy doing personal work and distributing his pamphlets, all of which are interesting and instructive.

Like a Boy at 50 Bubbling Over With Vitality—Taking Iron Did It

Doctor says Nuxated Iron is greatest of all strength builders—Often increases the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous folks 100 per cent. in two weeks' time.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret he said was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 45 he was careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 after taking Nuxated Iron a miracle of vitality and his face beeming with the bouyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak or run down, instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants and alcoholic beverages I am convinced that in this way they could ward off disease, preventing it becoming organic in thousands of cases and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous maladies. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prizefighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.—E. Sauer, M. D.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. E. Sauer, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 100 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

The Composition of Coca-Cola and its Relation to Tea

Prompted by the desire that the public shall be thoroughly informed as to the composition and dietetic character of Coca-Cola, the Company has issued a booklet giving a detailed analysis of its recipe which is as follows:

Water, sterilized by boiling (carbonated); sugar, granulated, first quality; fruit flavoring extracts with caramel; acid flavorings, citric (lemon) and phosphoric; essence of tea—the refreshing principle.

The following analysis, by the late Dr. John W. Mallet, Fellow of the Royal Society and for nearly forty years Professor of Chemistry in the University of Virginia, shows the comparative stimulating or refreshing strength of tea and Coca-Cola, measured in terms of the refreshing principle:

Black tea—1 cupful (hot) (5 fl. oz.)	1.54
Green tea—1 glassful (cold) (8 fl. oz. exclusive of ice)	2.02
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (fountain) (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.21
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (bottlers) (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.12

From the above recipe and analysis, which are confirmed by all chemists who have analyzed these beverages, it is apparent that Coca-Cola is a carbonated, fruit-flavored modification of tea of a little more than one-half its stimulating strength.

A copy of the booklet referred to above will be mailed free on request, and The Coca-Cola Company especially invites inquiry from those who are interested in pure food and public health propaganda. Address

Sunday School

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. C. V. Breithaupt.

First Church, Alexandria, is making history. If you don't believe it, finish this paragraph. The remainder of the block facing Jackson Street has been bought for $5000 and the plan is to build immediately beside the stately church a modern Sunday school structure costing about $30,000. This congregation raised $100 on Children's Day, and the R. F. White class has gotten a list of all Sunday schools within reach of this city by automobile, and they are visiting these schools as fast as they can for the purpose of organizing all classes in the teen age, after which we will form the Alexandria District Wesley Bible Class Federation. About 50 young people gathered in the church parlor last week for a social gathering, at which a class of young people of the Pineville church were the guests of honor. Let's take our hats off to the pastor, officials, and congregation of First Church of Alexandria!

The Campti, Boyce, Melder, and Pollock charges deserve honorable mention for reporting new Sunday schools organized this year. Brother W. W. Perry of Glenmora, who is never happy unless he is doing something, reports a Home Department and Cradle Roll for his charge, and Brother J. O. Bennett, the man who wants to know the very chapter and exact verse from which a text is taken, reports another class of seniors organized at Jena—this makes two for him this year. Lack of space forbids mention of a number of other charges throughout the State which are doing splendid work, as the minutes will show at the next session of the Conference.

That Federation — Did you know that five of our elders were in attendance; that sickness prevented the sixth, and pressing engagements made it impossible for the seventh to be here for our meeting? We had registration cards made out by 64 different parties coming from all over the State representing that number of different Sunday schools with delegations here. I feel perfectly safe in saying that there has been no Sunday school gathering within the bounds of the State at which a greater number of our pastors, or more individual Sunday schools of our denomination, were present. Now, to get the results we should from that Federation meeting and to get in trim for the one we are to have at Mansfield next year, it will be necessary for you to do something very definite—PLEDGE YOURSELF TO BE RESPONSIBLE FOR ORGANIZING ONE WESLEY BIBLE CLASS within the next ninety days. You may go where you will and when you find a good attendance of adults in the Sunday school you will find the school doing good work all down the line. Our boys and girls had rather go to Sunday school, where mother and father go, and then to stay for Church with them, than to be sent to Sunday school and have father and mother follow them later to attend the Church service. If you don't think I know what I'm talking about, give it a trial.

Write Rev. Jno. W. Shackford, D. D., 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., and ask him to place you on his mailing list for the Junaluska Training School for Sunday School Leaders, Lake Junaluska, N. C., July 24 to August 5. If it is impossible for you to go, you will learn something about the Blue Ridge Mountains from the literature, and you will be advised as to the splendid spread made ready for the hungry Sunday school workers who will be fortunate enough to be there and sit at the feet of our leaders for that ten days. If you are a Methodist and want a real treat this summer plan to spend your vacation at Lake Junaluska.

Have you observed Children's Day in your school? Did you send the money to Hon. T. W. Holloman, Alexandria, La.? Don't forget that this is the one Sunday school offering for Sunday school betterment in Louisiana.

Never Put a Croupy Child to Bed Without Giving a Dose of

Foley's Honey and Tar

Mothers know it stops croup because it cuts the thick choking mucus, clears the throat of phlegm, stops the hoarse metallic cough, eases the difficult breathing, then quiet sleep.

Mrs. T. Neureuer, Eau Claire, Wis., writes: "Foleys Honey and Tar completely cured my boy of a very severe attack of croup. We know from experience that it is a wonderful remedy for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough."

Freckles

The fairer the skin the more ugly it is when marred by freckles; and they are not necessary at all. As soon as the warm sunshine or the hot winds bring them out, and with the natural embarrassment that every woman feels, get a package of Kintho; this is the easy way to remove them. If Kintho is used at the first sign of the ugly spots, they'll sometimes disappear overnight. Any druggist has or can get Kintho for you. Use Kintho soap too. It's astonishing how it helps keep the freckles away once Kintho has removed them.

For Worm-Ridden Children USE Brown's Vermifuge Comfits or Worm Lozenges.

Children often look pale and sick from no other cause than worms in the stomach and bowels. Parents are too apt to overlook the symptoms and allow worms to do their hurtful work in children. In fact, much sickness, attributed to other causes, is occasioned by worms.

Brown's Vermifuge Comfits or Worm Lozenges

will entirely eliminate worms from the system without the slightest ill-effect to the most delicate child. The combination of ingredients used in making Brown's Vermifuge Comfits, is such as to give the best possible effect with perfect safety. Physicians everywhere prescribe these tablets because they are absolutely safe with all children and they completely destroy the worms. For sale by druggists. 25c a box.

Watch the Baby!

If he is fretful, restless and out of sorts, you can trace the cause to his stomach and liver. If the bowels do not act regularly there is a possible danger of serious illness. Constipation, if allowed to continue, may produce self-poisoning or auto-intoxication, and this condition should be promptly rectified. The best general tonic for the baby or for the older folks is Plantation Chill and Fever Tonic and Liver Regulator, a purely vegetable compound. It contains no Calomel or other injurious drugs. Highly recommended for babies and growing children. It excites and invigorates sluggish livers and puts you on your feet again. Buy a bottle and keep it handy. Price 50c. Backache? Rheumatism? Run-Down?

Those of us who are past middle age are prone to eat too much meat and in consequence deposit lime-salts in the arteries, veins and joints. We often suffer from twinges of rheumatism or lumbago, sometimes from gout, swollen hands or feet. There is no need of this, as the new prescription, Anuric, is bound to give immediate results as it is many times more potent than lithia in ridding the impoverished blood of its poisons by way of the kidneys. Simply ask for Anuric for kidneys or backache, the discovery of Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. It will overcome such conditions as rheumatism, dropsical swellings, cold extremities, scalding and burning urine and sleeplessness due to arising from bed.

TO BUILD UP both the flesh and strength of pale, puny, scrofulous children, for young or old people, get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It's the best thing known for a wasted body and a weakened system. It thoroughly purifies the blood, enriches it and makes effective every natural means of cleansing, repairing, and nourishing the system. In recovering from fevers, pneumonia, or other debilitating diseases, nothing can equal it as an appetizing, restorative tonic to bring back health and vigor. Always benefits in nervous and general debility. Sold in tablet or liquid form.

Purify and rid your blood of the taints and poisons that make it easy for disease to fasten its hold.

Doctor Pierce's Pellets were first put in ready-to-use form nearly fifty years ago, and will always relieve the inactive liver and biliousness. Insist on getting Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets—there is none so good.

"BILLY" SUNDAY
THE MAN AND HIS MESSAGE

By William T. Ellis, LL.D.

AUTHORIZED BY MR. SUNDAY

Contains the heart of Mr. Sunday's message, arranged by subjects, including his vivid utterances, his startling epigrams and his homely, Lincoln-like illustrations that add to his tremendously earnest appeals. Also tells the story of Mr. Sunday's eventful life, gives a keen analysis of his manner and methods and traces his remarkable success as the most conspicuous Christian leader in America. A source of help and inspiration to every one interested in religious welfare.

THE SPIRIT IN AFRICA.

"In Ten Years" a what the Spirit of God in Africa will be Ten Thousand Years Will Not Efface" is the inspiring theme. Miss Jean Mackenzie a returning missionary from Africa. "Each theme," she describes the dilemma she met with which have people that call the "Spirit," but how to practice them. They all that want is make a place in their minds for the power of Jesus to enter in. "Pray with me," a woman will say, "that I may earn this Spirit." "Here I can learn nothing about the Father's love will fill me."

What struggle it cost her to explain it might take her time to follow the commandments of Christ! Miss Mackenzie records some wonderful stories of how unselfishness became sensitive and richly developed through the action of God's Spirit. Here is a woman who walks three days—leaving two sisters by the way—in order to minister to the missionary's wife if moral uncertainty alone among the villages the strongest is "the wife of God." "We are watching the walking that you walk," say her neighbors. "If it is right to walk walking and it is a straight path we too will arise and follow after you." But we can found in the villages in the forest. "Is it right for a Christian woman to wear it in the house?" "Does it not spoil the native dress?" Before the long journey to the missionary for moral guidance. Missionary Review of the World.

MODERN METHODS INVADING THE MOUNTAINS.

Mrs. C. S. Everts, Gulfport, Miss.

At Canyon Falls, in the Kentucky mountains, is a mission, formerly of the Soul Winner Society, founded by Rev. Edward O. Guerrant, and now maintained by the Executive Committee of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church. It is twenty years ago and again as written I spent several months here and was impressed by the great improvement not only in the schools and related organizations but even more in the home life.

A helpful factor is the radius accomplished in the Mothers' Club organized August, 1916, with 5 members which has grown to 35, with a regular attendance of from 10 to 15. It is so unusual in the mountain mountain women for any one to be interested in a woman and to try to give her pleasure and help that the appreciation of these meetings is pathetic. One woman said, "My man growled some I went to the meeting, but I told him he went what he pleased, if he didn't do him is good and I went to go for that is no good and the whole family, too."

On my first visit I was joined by the lack of ambition, the lack of completeness in the faces of the women. But their expression is changing. Cheerfulness, hope and ambition are clearly shown, and these qualities in time will assume more and more tangible forms in the homes.

It is difficult to describe the material lives of most of these mountain women. They rear large families in the hilling, "tucker," gardening and much of the regular farm work. Two members of the Mothers' Club—mothers—had not been each other for twenty years, though their homes are only four miles apart. One lives at "the head of the creek," the other "down the creek." Their lives after marriage had become so filled with hard work that even "big meetings" failed to take them from home, until the novelty of the Mothers' meetings attracted them, and the news of what the members were doing induced them to attend. Now they are among the most interested members.

The members of the club have pieced and quilted three quilts, and are now making rag rugs. From the sale of these will be purchased a decoration for the pleasure and benefit of the school and community.

Three years ago the day school was carefully graded for the first time. At the close of last session eight pupils were graduated from the grammar grades into the high school, and one high school pupil was promoted to the eleventh grade. There were appropriate exercises, and it was a time of great interest to the whole community-side. In addition to the diplomas and certificates of promotion given the pupils at the recent Commencement, six medals were awarded for perfect attendance and punctuality; seventeen Testaments were given for reciting the Child's Catechism, and one Bible was presented for perfect recitation of the Shorter Catechism.

The Bible and the Catechism are regularly taught, and it is most interesting to hear the primary pupils name perfectly the divisions and books of the Bible, recite the Commandments, the Creed, the Beatitudes, numerous Psalms, and many chapters of the Old and New Testaments.

The regular systematic Bible study, conducted by a graduate of the Bible Teachers' Training School, New York, is proving a safeguard to the older pupils against the perverted teachings of ignorant leaders, and is building them up in truth and doctrine.

No recital of bare facts, however, can give an adequate idea of the heart of the work. The effect upon the shut-in people of the mountains of the daily personal association with the refined, consecrated Christian womanhood of the workers is seen in the new and higher ideals of life and of living, arousing ambition, and inspiring to effort and development.

Health for Sick Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been Woman's Most Reliable Medicine —Here is More Proof.

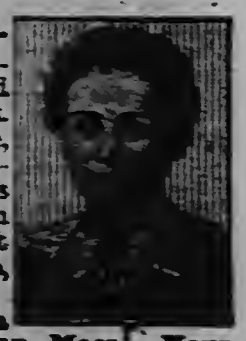
To women who are suffering from some form of woman's special ills, and have a constant fear of breaking down, the three following letters ought to bring hope:—

North Crandon, Wis.—"When I was 18 years old I got married and at 19 years I gave birth to twins and it left me with very poor health. I could not walk across the floor without having to sit down to rest and it was hard for me to keep about and do my work. I went to a doctor and he told me I had a displacement and ulcers, and would have to have an operation. This frightened me so much that I did not know what to do. Having heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would give it a trial and it made me as well as ever. I cannot say enough in favor of the Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. MAYME ASBACH, North Crandon, Wis.

Testimony from Oklahoma.

Lawton, Okla.—"When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I seemed to be good for nothing. I tired easily and had headaches much of the time and was irregular. I took it again before my little child was born and it did me a wonderful amount of good at that time. I never fail to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ailing women because it has done so much for me."—Mrs. A. L. McCASLAND, 509 Have St., Lawton, Okla.

From a Grateful Massachusetts Woman.



Roxbury, Mass.—"I was suffering from inflammation and was examined by a physician who found that my trouble was caused by a displacement. My symptoms were bearing down pains, backache, and sluggish liver. I tried several kinds of medicine; then I was asked to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has cured me and I am pleased to be in my usual good health by using it and highly recommend it."—Mrs. R. M. Osgood, 1 Haynes Park, Roxbury, Mass.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

From the Field

Campti, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: Please give me a little space in the Advocate for a short report of tho work on the Campti charge. This is my third year here and I am glad to say the outlook is good for a good year's work. We have some faithful workers at each church on the charge, people who love God and the Church, and they stand by their pastor, which is very much appreciated. Our missionary societies are active and doing some good work. We have organized one new Sunday school since Conference, which gives us one at each church. I think our Sunday schools are better organized; therefore the work is more thorough. Sunday was a good day for us here at Campti. We observed Children's Day, carrying out the program, which we think was very good. We expect to observe Children's Day at one or two other points on the work. We are planning for our revival meetings, which will begin in June. We hope to see many souls saved, and believers sanctified and built up in a most holy faith. Yours in Christ,

E. L. CARGILL.

Oxford, Miss.

Dear Advocate: We have just closed a most helpful meeting in our church here, with Brothers Hanes and Waltermire leading. They were with us only twelve days, but the meeting made a deep impression upon the community. We regretted not getting hold of the university life more largely, but the boys were busy with their regular work, and 400 of them were drilling an hour each afternoon. But the congregations were large and in full sympathy with the meeting. None came to look on just to see what might happen. The meeting left a most helpful feeling behind. People think more kindly of one another and of the Church. Seventeen were received on profession of faith, and 4 by letter, and 4 others have given their names for membership. That gives us a total of 40 since the first of the year. Our congregation last Sunday was unusually large and the Sunday school attendance the second largest for the year. We feel that to forfeit [illegible] was a great blessing to us much we thank God for such splendid helpers as Brothers Hanes and Waltermire.

E. S. LEWIS.

First Church, Shreveport, La.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., had the pleasure of having Miss Annie Bell Willams of Oita, Japan, with them for a visit on her way home from the Council Meeting in New Orleans. Miss Williams talked to the children of the primary department in the Sunday school, and to the young people at the League service on Sunday. She met the women of the Church in a reception given for her at the church on Monday afternoon. Miss Williams told the women of her work in such a pleasing and impressive way that they pledged themselves anew to pray and work more for this field than ever before. After her address, there was a reception in the church parlors. Besides the women of First Church, there were visitors from the Noel Memorial, Texas Avenue, and tho Queensborough Churches. After all of the ladies had met Miss Williams, Mrs. Wiltz Ledbetter in a few appropriate words gave her a purse and a love-gift in gold. In giving the gold, they were but trying to show the trueness of the love that went with the gift—pure gold, no alloy. There were 150 women who heard Miss Williams. Many said it was the best missionary talk they had ever heard. It will mean much to the women of this church to know Miss Williams personally and to have had the pleasure of social intercourse with her.

Miss GRACE GATEWOOD.

UGH! A DOSE OF NASTY CALOMEL

It salivates! It makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful to-night. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel to-day and to-morrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.

Cleanliness.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness." We are too prone to think that "cleanliness" refers only to the exterior of our bodies. But unless your bowels are kept open and your liver active, you cannot expect to keep your body clean. The perspiration through skin pores is forced to carry off more than its share of the body's impurities. Do not allow constipation to poison you. Cleanse your entire system with Van Lax, which contains no calomel and no habit-forming drugs. It is pleasant to the taste and produces pleasant results. For sale by the best dealers everywhere. In bottles—price 50c. Manufactured by the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

A SAD OCCURRENCE.

On the evening of May 1, 1917, W. W. Worthy, of Ethel, La., was instantly killed by a kick from a horse while attending to the feeding of the same, and was buried on the afternoon of May 2. For many years Brother Worthy was a subscriber and reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. He was for twenty years a steward in his church, for a number of years superintendent of the Sunday school, and was also for a time president of the Epworth League. His home was truly the home of the preachers, and any preacher finding his way to Brother Worthy's was assured of a warm and cordial reception. May God's grace sustain his life-long helpmeet in her loneliness!

May 8, 1917. H. W. BOWMAN.

A MOTHER'S INFLUENCE.

Dear Dr. Meek: The Hazlehurst Methodist Church observed Mothers' Day, Sunday, May 6. The service was well attended by old people, as well as young, and Brother Roberts preached a good and appropriate sermon. I thank God for a praying mother, and I thank God for her Christian influence and prayers that have followed me all these years, urging me to love and serve God.

My mother died in May, 1855. I was sick at the time of her death, and was carried to her bedside, but she said to me, "Reuben, we will soon be there."

Mother has been in Heaven more than sixty years, and I have been as long trying to get there. The nearer I approach the end the brighter the way becomes. I am only waiting and trusting. With the eye of faith, I behold the cross with the outstretched arm and nail-pierced hand beckoning me on.

THE JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Jackson District Conference, of the Mississippi Annual Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in the Methodist Church at Madison S ation, Miss., at 9:30 a. m., Tuesday, April 24, 1917, with Rev. J. M. Morse, presiding elder, in the chair. After the usual devotional exercises, the Conference was called to order and organized for work. From then until the close of the final session at Thursday noon following the date of opening, there was not a dull nor an idle moment during the Conference sessions.

The attendance of the pastors and delegates was good—every preacher in charge was present during the entire time of the Conference, or for a part of the time. Altogether there were 79 in attendance. Brother Morse had a carefully prepared program, which was largely followed. The reports of the pastors showed progress along all lines. The work of the Church throughout the district was shown to be in good condition. Pastors and delegates were all hopeful for a successful year. No phase of the work of the Church was omitted. Various topics of interest to the Church and to the preacher, other than the routine of reports and committee work, were presented by those to whom subjects had been assigned. The work of the Woman's Missionary Society was well and favorably presented by Mrs. Ewing and Mrs. B. F. Lewis.

Rev. M. M. Black secured from the Conference $100 in cash and subscriptions for the new dormitory at Millsaps College. W. M. Buie, J. A. Lindsey, G. R. Bennett, and C. L. Ray were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, and J. M. Sullivan and G. L. Harrell were elected alternates. Minor Loftin Bott was licensed to preach, and Irl Hendrix Sells was recommended to the Annual Conference for deacon's orders. Eden was selected as the next place for the holding of the district conference. Brother Morse presided over the sessions of the Conference with ease and grace, and dispatched in a business-like manner the work of the Conference, with courtesy and consideration for all.

Too much cannot be said in praise of our host, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., and his people. The entertainment of the Conference was everything that could be desired. Every visitor had the best home. Dinner was served each day at the Church under the shade of the oaks after the manner of the country church at protracted meetings. The preaching was well and ably done by Revs. A. S. Oliver, B. F. Lewis, J. F. Campbell, and J. S. Duke.

It has not been the privilege of this scribe to attend a more profitable or a more deeply spiritual session of a district conference than the one just held at Madison Station.

W. J. DAWSON, Secretary.

SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Seashore District Conference was held in the handsome auditorium of the new First Church, Gulfport, Miss., May 1-3, 1917.

With the affable presiding elder, J. R. Jones, to preside and the courtly and thoughtful Dr. W. H. LaPrade as host, it does not need to be said that the business of the Conference was dispatched with dignity and ease, and that the entertainment was cordial and delightful.

It was regretted that owing to sickness in their families and other causes a few of the pastors were not present. The attendance of lay delegates was not full, but on the whole a fair showing was made, considering the unrest incident to the existence of war.

Notwithstanding the financial stringency prevailing in certain parts of the district because of the destruction of last year's crops by the storm, the reports of the pastors were encouraging and hopeful.

The various interests of the Church were carefully looked into in the open sessions of the Conference, and the usual committees made thorough and detailed investigation of the different departments of Church activity within the district.

Resolutions were adopted urging upon President Wilson and Congress the importance of conserving for food purposes the millions of bushels of grain usually consumed annually in the manufacture of spirituous liquors, this end to be attained by the prohibition of such use of grain, at least as long as the war may last.

The following were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference: T. F. Smith, Col. R. B. McGeehee, J. C. Ross and George Carley; Dr. W. T. Bolton and S. A. Tomlinson, alternate delegates.

Several visitors representing various institutions and enterprises of the church were present at some time in the session and gave an account of their work: Dr. J. M. Sullivan of Millsaps College; Rev. Robert Selby, Commissioner for Emory University; Rev. J. L. Neill, Conference Sunday School Field Secretary; Miss Hasler, deaconess in charge of the Wesley House, Biloxi, and Mrs. R. E. Johnson, President of the Conference Woman's Missionary Society.

The pulpit was occupied at the preaching hours by Revs. J. L. Sells, B. F. Jones, D. D., C. C. Evans, and J. A. Moore.

Wiggins was chosen as the place for the holding of the next session of the Conference.

J. A. MOORE,
Secretary.

GOOD MEETING AT KENTWOOD.

Dear Dr. Meek: I closed a meeting on the third Sunday in April with Brother Sholars at Kentwood. In spite of the declaration of war, which came right at the beginning of the meeting, cold weather, with an abundance of rain, and sickness, which overtook me while there, we had a good meeting. A large number of people were converted and quite a few united with the Church.

Brother Sholars is doing a splendid work at Kentwood, and doing it in a systematic way that will guarantee a strong church there for us in the future. He is a hard and very earnest worker. We have never seen a pastor love his people more than he. He has a very valuable assistant in Sister Sholars. She does work in almost every department of the church, but best of all is her work in the Sunday school. Nearly every one in her large class was converted in the revival.

We went to Jonesville from Kentwood to assist Brother J. O. Bennett in a revival there, but after preaching a few days, we had to close, as the storm (sickness) that had been brewing for several weeks broke on me with all its fury. After a little more than a week in bed, I feel better and hopeful, and expect to begin a meeting at Mooringsport with Brother Henderson next Sunday, May 13.

"Not duty left undone, but duty done, Raises up enemies for the true man."

* * *

Happy is the church that has even a few members that really know how to pray! They are to it an unfailing source of strength.

* * *

There must be something wrong with preaching that never brings any one to penitence or into the Kingdom through the gateway of the new birth. Whatever men say of it, we may be sure that it does not please the Master. Better try another kind, brother.

* * *

Every disciple of Jesus is called to be a saint, and the opportunities to be such are wide-open to all. How one may deepen and enrich one's experience by feeding upon God's Word, by earnest prayer, and by consecrated work for the Master! The rapidity of the Christian's spiritual growth is largely a matter of his own determining.

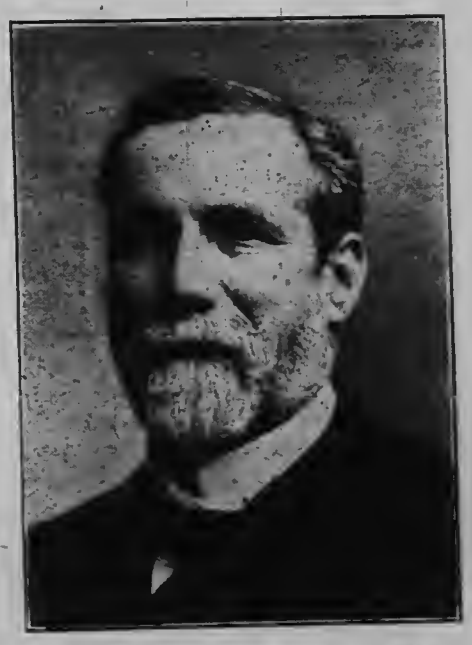
* * *

There were seven thousand nameless ones in Israel who had not bowed the knee to Baal at the time when Elijah thought that only he was left. Let us not be discouraged. There is undoubtedly much counterfeit Christianity in this day, but there is also much that is genuine. Likely there is more of both kinds than the world has ever known before. The wider the fields of wheat are, the more opportunity there is for the "darnel," as Mr. Wesley called it, to spring up among the golden grain.

THE MILLSAPS QUARTO-CENTENNIAL.

The approaching Commencement of Millsaps College, which will begin Friday night of this week and continue through the following Wednesday morning, will mark the close of the twenty-fifth session of that institution, and its quarto-centennial is to be celebrated with appropriate exercises, the leading features of which were announced in the Advocate some two or three weeks ago. Of the founding of this school, Dr. Dunbar Rowland, the accomplished Director of the Mississippi Department of Archives and History, in his "Encyclopedia of Mississippi History," gives a very interesting account, from which we take the following:

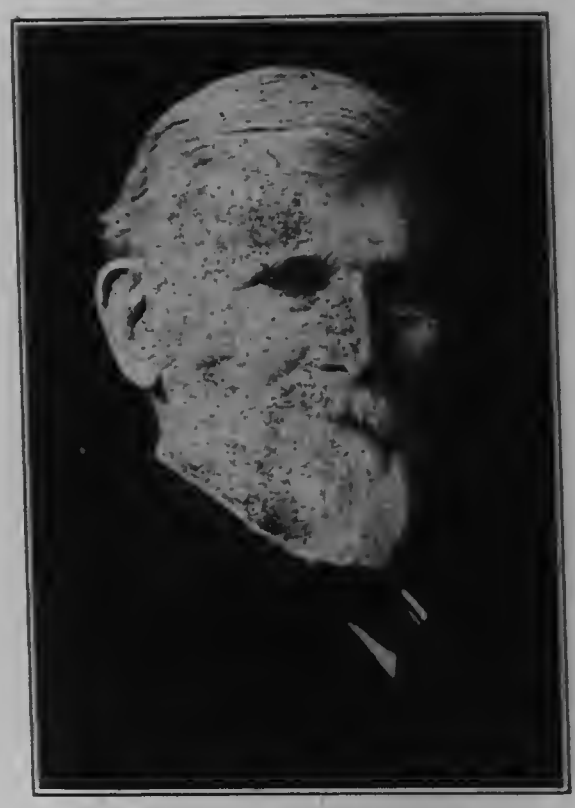
"After the removal of Centenary College in 1843 from Brandon Springs, Miss., to Jackson, La., the need was felt among the Methodists of the State for a college under the control of the Mississippi Conferences and located within the confines of the State. Several attempts were made to establish higher institutions of learning, but none of the movements were successful, until in December, 1888, the Mississippi Conference and the North Mississippi Conference resolved that "a college for the education of young men and boys" should be established in the State. Three preachers and three laymen were appointed from each Conference to take immediate steps in that direction. (The following composed these committees: from the Mississippi Conference—Rev. T. L. Mellen, Dr. W. C. Black, Dr. A. F. Watkins, Major R. W. Millsaps, Col. W. L. Nugent, and Dr. Luther Sexton; North Mississippi Conference—Dr. J. J. Wheat, Rev. S. M. Thames, Rev. T. J. Newell, Hon. G. D. Shands, Captain D. L. Sweatman, and Mr. J. B. Streater.) This Joint Committee met in Jackson in January, 1889, and Major Millsaps offered to give $50,000 for endowing the proposed college if the Methodists of Mississippi would give a like amount This proposition was enthusiastically approved, and Bishop C. B. Galloway was invited to take charge of the campaign for raising the proposed sum. In December of the samo year, Dr. A. F. Watkins was appointed a special agent to work with Bishop Galloway, and in 1890 $25,000 was reported collected. This amount was supplemented with $25,000 from Major Millsaps, making $50,000 for the endowment. In 1893 $50,000 more was secured upon the same conditions, and the endowment stood at $100,000. In 1890 the Board of Trustees, under the presidency of Bishop Galloway, secured a charter from the Legislature of Mississippi, naming the college for its distinguished benefactor. (The following were the charter members of the Board of Trustees of the College: J. J. Wheat, S. M. Thames, T. J. Newell, G. D. Shands, D. L. Sweatman, and J. B. Streater, of the North Mississippi Conference; T. L. Mellen, W. C. Black, A. F. Watkins, C. G. Andrews, M. M. Evans, Luther Sexton, W. L. Nugent, and R. W. Millsaps, of the Mississippi Conference—and Bishop Charles B. Galloway.) The Board met on May 20, 1891, and decided to locate the college at Jackson. Flattering offers were made by many towns, but the people of Jackson contributed $21,000 for the grounds and buildings, and Major Millsaps added $15,000 to this sum. By the spring of 1892 the main building was nearly completed, and the Board of Trustees organized the first faculty. Dr. W. B. Murrah was elected president. He was at that time Vice-President of Whitworth College."



BISHOP CHARLES B. GALLOWAY,

Without whose inspirational leadership the establishment of Millsaps College would not have been possible. He was the President of its Board of Trustees from the time the institution was chartered until his lamented decease on May 12, 1909; and during that period he was the shining magnet which more than any other one influence attached the people of Mississippi to it and commanded for it a generous patronage. His name is inseparably linked with the College, and an oil painting of him appropriately hangs in its beautiful new Chapel. More than words can tell, he has been missed since he went away; but his noble spirit yet seems to pervade the halls of the institution.

The career of Millsaps College from its opening session up to the present time has been one of steady progress. It was resolved in the outset that none but high-class work should be done in its various departments, and this standard has been rigidly adhered to. The young men who have gone forth from its halls have been a credit to the institution and have taken high rank in all the walks of life. This remark applies to the graduates of the Law School, which was established in 1896, as well as to the other Alumni. The value of this institution to Mississippi Methodism has been beyond calculation.



MAJOR R. W. MILLSAPS,

The distinguished founder of the institution which bears his name. Reared a poor boy and having had to struggle to secure an education, which he had to go North to obtain, he determined to make possible the establishment of a college in his native State that would be within the reach of needy and aspiring youths. He gave to Millsaps College between $500,000 and $600,000, and what was quite as valuable, his unsurpassed business management for 24 years. He fell asleep in Jesus last June at the ripe age of 83 years, and his remains and those of his beloved wife repose in an attractive marble mausoleum that he had had prepared for the purpose on the beautiful campus.

Though one of the youngest of the colleges of

LEAN HARD!

Child of my love, lean hard!
And let me feel the pressure of thy care.
I know thy burden, for I fashioned it—
Poised it in my hand and made its weight
Precisely that which I saw best for thee.
And when I placed it on thy shrinking form,
I said, "I shall be near, and when thou leanest
On me this burden shall be mine, not thine."
So shall I keep within my circling arms
The child of my own love; here lay it down,
Nor fear to weary Him who made, upholds,
And guides the Universe. Yet closer come;
Thou art not close enough. Thy care, thyself,
Lay both on me, that I may feel my child
Reposing on my heart. Thou lovest me?
I doubt it not; then, loving me, lean hard.

—Southern Churchman.

A MEANINGFUL WORD.

The Hebrew word translated "consecrate" is full of suggestion. It means to fill the hand. "Who then is willing to fill his hand this day unto the Lord?" To fill the hand is to take the most notable instrument of service and to occupy and engross it for God. The hand which is filled for God can touch nothing unclean, can be filled with nothing else, can be busy only in some service for God.—Dr. W. M. Claw.

NOT PEACE, BUT A SWORD.

Christ's statement that He had come to bring strife and a sword on earth did not mean that He wished any such results to accompany His coming and His work, but that these results were inevitable. Christ sets up a standard that arouses the antagonism of evil-minded men. He tells people to be unselfish, helpful, self-sacrificing, and because people are naturally greedy and selfish and self-seeking, they not only refuse to accept His standards, but oppose and attack those who do. Every moral reform is opposed by those who do not wish to be just and right, and whose self-interests will be injured by the triumph of righteousness. Christ has come to bring peace, but before peace can reign wrong must be overthrown, and wrong cannot be overthrown without a struggle.—Christian Herald.

HOW LUTHER FOUND PEACE.

He writes: "With a burning desire to understand, I took up the Epistle to the Romans. But in the very first chapter there opposed me the word: 'The righteousness of God is revealed in the gospel.' (Rom. 1:16, 17.) You see I hated the word, 'the righteousness of God,' for, owing to the teaching of my former professors, I held it to be that attribute of a holy God according to which He punishes the sinners. Though I lived a blameless monk, my restless conscience nevertheless told me I was a sinner before God. And for that reason I hated a righteous God punishing sinners. I rebelled against God. * * * My conscience was wounded, I gnashed inwardly, and yet ever came back to that verse, for I would by all means get the sense of Paul. At last, thinking over the matter for days and nights, God showed me mercy and the connection of these words with the sentence following: 'The just shall live by faith.' I began to understand that the righteousness of God here is the one a pious man receives from God by faith as a gift. I saw the meaning of the verse to be: 'Through the gospel is revealed the righteousness of God by which the merciful God declares the believers righteous. For that is the sense given it by the words following: 'The one justified by faith shall live.' Now I felt myself new-born and in Paradise. All the holy Scriptures looked different to me. And now I ran through them and sought similar expressions to confirm by them my understanding of the words, 'righteousness of God!' Ere this these words to me were hateful; now I embraced them with the intensest love. This passage in Paul appeared to me as the gate of Paradise."—The Lutheran.

"There is no hardship ahead of us in life that may not be made easier by our doing the hard thing of to-day with unflinching faithfulness."

A SERMON ON REPENTANCE.

(This sermon was submitted by Rev. F. B. Hill to one of the Examining Committees of the Louisiana Conference, and is published by request of a member of that Committee. Brother Hill was born and reared in England and has been in the United States for only a few years.—Editor of Advocate.)

Text: "Repent ye, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." Matt. 3:2.

John the Baptist was a wilderness trained man; he lived "out in the sticks." Let us look at him: rough, rugged, dressed with a camel's hair coat, girded with a leathern girdle about his loins, fed with locusts and wild honey. When he speaks, maybe he will speak honeyed words. If so, only in his speech to self-satisfied men will there be less honey than locusts. A man who can live in the wilderness, who reads the literature of "the everlasting hills" and deciphers the poetry of the skies, asks for no favor, can stoop to receive none. His is a marvelous independence of all social patronage and help.

If one had said, "Do not offend the Pharisees—conciliate them; conceal as much as you can; they have it in their power to do great things for you"—if you had spoken thus to this man "fed on locusts and wild honey," he would have hurled the suggestion back again in shattering accents of scorn.

So the religious teacher has it in his power to lift himself high above the line of patronage, and the line of obligation. Every true teacher should have bread to eat that the world knoweth not of, so that when men who misunderstand his mission, come to him and say, "Let us hear your sermon, and then you shall have the loaf," he should be able to decline the loaf, to preach his discourse, and vanish into the wilderness.

The Gospel of Jesus Christ has never sought to make itself a popular religion in the sense of bowing down before thrones, on which were seated Kings that could confer advantages upon it. When the Pharisees and Sadducees came to the baptism of John, he said, "You are a brood of vipers." He called them by their right name. We dare not use such names now, because we live in a city. We are not clothed "with camel's hair and a leathern girdle about our loins;" we have now bands and gowns and a silken girdle about our loins; we must be complacent with the Pharisees and Sadducees, and with people who are socially tall. I knew a man, a wealthy and prosperous man, who once entered an English Church, to take offense because the preacher called some person who had acted mean and vile, "a wretch." For that reason, he left the Church and said, "I have closed my Bible." I have read of one who called the most respectable men of his day, "vipers—a progeny of serpents—a nest of evil things." I know the same man who called a king a fox; others he called "whited sepulchers"—hidden graves—hypocrites, actors, masked men. We are afraid to do that.

Though I said the Gospel has never endeavored to make itself popular in the sense of conciliating those who might confer patronage upon it, yet it has always welcomed with infinite pathos the hearts that felt their need of redemption. No broken heart was ever turned away from the Cross; no weary and overborne soul was ever discouraged by the Son of God. No poor bent woman, having nothing left but her touch of faith, was ever spurned by God's dear Son. He resents our fulness, not our poverty. It is when we are great He has nothing to say to us—not when we are little in our own esteem.

"In those days came John the Baptist saying, "Repent ye, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." The cry of all widening civilization has been "Repent." Do not be startled by the word, as if it were a church term, and a Bible word only. It is a word you cannot do without. Do not sneer at the preacher when he says, "Repent." What is the meaning of this word "repent," as used in this connection? The meaning of it is "change your purpose"—alter your mind, turn round, face about; you are on the wrong road, return. It is the utterance of men who have a new proposition to make in politics, in commerce, in all the ways and processes of advancing life. He who corrects the thinking of his age, having verified his own conclusions in private, comes forth and says to his hearers, "Repent; you are wrong, change your mind—alter your standpoint.

In the sphere of religion it still continues its first significance, and enhances that signification with other meanings, deeper and grander still. When a man repents of his sin, he knows the bitterness of inward sorrow; his heart weeps blood; his soul is affected with grievous distress on account of sin. Then the repentance expresses itself in an outward change of attitude, standing and relationship, coming up out of an inward conviction wrought through infinite pain, and by ministries for which there are no words.

"'Tis not enough to say, 'I'm sorry and repent,'
And still go on from day to day
Just as I always went.
Repentance is to leave the sins I've done before
And show that I in earnest grieve
By doing so no more."

When a scholar in a Wesleyan Methodist school I learned two answers to the question, "What is repentance? One was, "Repentance is sorrow for sin, with sincere purpose to forsake it." The other was, "Repentance is a grace of the Holy Spirit, whereby a sinner from a knowledge and sense of his sin, turns from it to love and serve God." That implies that the Holy Spirit gives us the desire to repent, and that it is not merely sorrow for sin, "but a "godly sorrow that worketh repentance." In simple language, it is a turning from "sin to God."

No wonder then that John the Baptist urged his hearers to bring forth fruits "meet for repentance." John's ministry was not a very cheerful ministry, or a very popular or comfortable one. It is pleasanter for me to stand before an assembly and say, "I approve your doings; I confirm your proceedings; I endorse your policies; Heaven's blessing rest upon you like a summer day"—he who comes with a message like that to a congregation, will for the time being be the popular idol. But to come into the midst of a city, or to go up and down the land saying, "REPENT—REPENT," is to excite the most desperate prejudice. The man whose little sermon is "REPENT," sets himself against his age, and will for the time being be battered mercilessly by the age whose moral tone he challenges. There is but one end for such a man—"Off with his head." You had better not try to preach repentance until you have pledged your head to Heaven.

Consider well what it is to preach the gospel of repentance. I would rather preach the gospel of comfort; it would suit me better to say to every man who hears me, "You are altogether right; all you need is comfort; cheer up; it will be "well with you." But to stand before any man, and say to him. "Before you can do any solid work, we must begin with the fact that you are as bad as you can be," is to excite prejudice and create difficulties. Here is the disadvantage of the preacher; he has always to challenge his hearers and charge them with want of integrity. His indictment is heavy; his impeachment grave.

The lecturer comes before his audience with kid gloves and scented arrangements, and tells you how delighted he is to meet you, and to have the opportunity to stand before such an enlightened and influential assembly. The preacher stands and says, "REPENT," and who likes to listen to a man whose voice is a charge and rebuke? Yet, through the ministry of repentance, we must all pass, ere we can enter into a ministry of reconciliation, and enjoy the infinite calm of God's own peace.

Nor was John's ministry wholly negative. If he said repent, he did not leave us there. He added a reason, "For the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." Having brought a man to his knees in penitence, and broken his heart with contrition, and left him without a peg to hang up his righteousness on, or a rag to cover the nakedness of his iniquity, he tells him, that "the kingdom of heaven is at hand," intimating that his repentance is a sorrow that brings joy—that it endures for a night, but joy cometh in the morning, ushering in a day that never needs dip into the darkness of eventide.

So this heroic preacher, so severe, so terrible in aspect, so piercing and rending in voice, has a sweet and tender tone—"The kingdom of heaven is at hand." The morning cometh, the summer dawns, the rain is over and gone, and "the voice of the turtle is heard in the land."

A challenge of moral integrity should always be associated with the presentation of a great opportunity. Tell a man to repent, and add that the kingdom of heaven is at hand, with all its light and healing and redemption, and you preach to him something like a complete gospel. Tell him to repent only, and leave him there, and you put a dart into his breast.

What was the result of this man's preaching? "There went out to him Jerusalem and all the region round about Jordan." See the power of one consecrated, burning heart. John was one. Believe in the individuality of labor—believe that you, solitary preacher, teacher, reformer, that you in your solitariness may have the power given you of God, of moving a whole age, and inspiring a whole nation! Let us take a large view of our mission; not be behind the very chief of the apostles—not in our own conceit, but in the grandeur of the Divine call, and the interpretation of its true breadth. Everywhere do I read of great results attending one man's ministry. One man is sometimes an army, is sometimes a congregation. Despise not the twos and threes. To-day we call for thousands to hear us, and if the thousands are not there, we think but little of the few who gather in the house of God. If we were in the right mood of heart, we should see in every child an opportunity for preaching with the fire that could burn in the heart of the most consecrated patriot, or twice anointed minister of God. It is my joy and privilege to proclaim that "the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." The Word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth. Some of you are not far from the kingdom—quite near. Do the terms alarm you? There is but one road: "Repent and believe." It is in every sense a Kingdom—wealth unlimited, peace, and joy. Be wise and enter.

"Happy the man who wisdom gains;
Thrice happy who his guest retains,
He owns and shall forever own
Wisdom and Christ, and Heaven are one."

"My Jesus to know, and to feel His blood flow,
'Tis Life everlasting, 'tis Heaven below."

Patterson, La.

THE TEST OF OPPORTUNITY.

Watch the man who is facing a great opportunity! He is about to expose his real character. His sense of obligation to duty will be revealed, his value as a factor for social regeneration recorded. And this is specially true of those opportunities for the deepening and enlarging of the life, and its better equipment for fulfilling its mission. The greater the preacher, the more will he feel the bigness of his task, and the more eagerly will he seize every help to qualify himself for it. A preacher's worth to the Kingdom is measured by his effort to make himself worth all that is possible to the Kingdom.

Now look at the opportunity the preachers of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana have from June 26 to July 5, 1917. On one program of nine days, amid most delightful associations and surroundings, will be heard three of the Church's greatest living leaders:

Bishop William Alfred Quayle, D. D., LL. D.
Rev. Charles LeRoy Goodell, D. D.
Rev. Henry Churchill King, D. D., LL. D.

These men need no introduction to one who has ever peeped out of the window of his own little cell. To attempt to describe them in a brief article would be foolish. Theirs are world-names, and their coming together on one platform offers an opportunity unprecedented in this section.

One of the finest preachers of Mississippi said to me: "The Seashore Divinity School has a marvelous program for 1917. It can never be excelled."

Another said of it: "I could not imagine a better program for our preachers." And all speak or write in this way.

Now what will the preachers do with this "chance?" Never mind that "prices are high," that "money is scarce," that "times are hard," that "salaries are small." In this connection it might be worth while to remember that dividends come only from investments, and reaping ever follows sowing. The harder the times the more is the dividend needed. The more essential, therefore, is wise investing at this time. Times rarely get too hard for most of us to adhere to some useless indulgences—indulgences that stand as absolute contradictions to our "Can't afford it" concerning great educational opportunities of life.

But few will have to resort to such extremes; but why not put the cost of that intended excursion, or that coveted new suit, or this year's tobacco bill into the life-helps the Divinity School provides? This session of Seashore Divinity School should mark an epoch in your life and ministry. The rich program is a challenge to the intellect and heart of every Methodist preacher within reach.

The opportunity is here, and with it has come—the TEST.

Do the Methodist preachers of these Conferences really want enlarged life and increased capacity for service?

The register of Seashore Divinity School, June 26 to July 5, 1917, will answer. H. M. ELLIS.

ANNUAL MEETING NOTES.

By N. B. P.

The Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held its Thirty-fifth Annual Meeting in the chapel of the Church Extension Building, 1115 Fourth Avenue, Louisville, Kentucky, May 5-7.

* * *

Twenty-eight of the thirty-seven members of the Board were present at the Annual Meeting.

* * *

The next Annual Meeting will be held in Atlanta, Georgia, immediately preceding the General Conference.

* * *

The Board, by unanimous vote, declined to request the General Conference to change the date of the close of its fiscal year, which is March 31.

* * *

The report of the Corresponding Secretary showed that about 7,000,000 pages of printed matter have been distributed during the year throughout the Church.

* * *

The second $25,000 contribution of Mr. James B. Duke, of New York, for use in North Carolina, was recognized by the Board in the form of a suitable resolution.

* * *

Rev. John M. Moore, D. D., Home Mission Secretary, while not a member of the Board, was present at all the sessions, participating in its business, having been granted, by vote, the privileges of the floor.

* * *

The pulpits of Louisville and neighboring towns were filled on Sunday by members of the Board and visitors, in the interest of Emory University, Atlanta, Georgia.

* * *

Dr. Daniel Morton, of St. Joseph, Missouri, presented to the Board a bound volume of the annual reports from 1882 to 1898, the period covered by his father's administration, the late Dr. David Morton.

* * *

The Board considered the possibility of the need of tents for the use of chaplains of the Army and Navy, and committed the work of providing same to the Executive Committee.

* * *

The plan submitted for the development of the Department of Architecture was adopted by the Board, and the Executive Committee was authorized to employ a competent man to assist the Corresponding Secretary in this work.

* * *

The Board completed its work in less than two days, adjourning Monday afternoon, May 7, about 5:30 o'clock. Arrangement had been made for luncheons with the ladies of the Fourth Avenue Church, which enabled the brethren to economize time.

* * *

Dr. W. F. Boggess, a prominent physician of Louisville, Kentucky, and the son of a Methodist preacher, was elected to membership in the Board and placed on the Executive Committee, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Presley H. Tapp.

* * *

The new $60,000 church property in Oakland, California, will be ready for dedication by July 1. The Board unanimously endorsed every step taken by the Executive Committee during the year looking to the completion of this property.

* * *

The total receipts for Church Extension during the year is $618,206.81, which exceeds the total receipts of last year by $77,599.02; there being an increase in receipts on assessment, specials, contributions to the Loan Fund Capital, etc.

* * *

The Board from the beginning in 1882 has aided 9749 churches, with an average of $489.53 to each; and 2636 parsonages, with an average of $202.76 to each, making a total investment in churches and parsonages of $5,306,806.20.

* * *

With "great gratification" the Board noted the increase in the Loan Fund Capital for the year of $171,832.91, and congratulated the Corresponding Secretary on the near attainment to the $1,000,000 goal. The Loan Fund Capital at the close of the fiscal year was $976,161.99.

* * *

The several sections of the Corresponding Secretary's report, which was printed in pamphlet form, 92 pages, were properly grouped and referred to seven committees, as follows: (1) Memoirs; (2) Loan Funds; (3) Special Publications; (4) Organization; (5) Pacific Coast; (6) Miscellany; (7) Washington City Representative Church.

* * *

Among the distinguished visitors at the meeting were Rev. S. A. Neblett, of the Cuban Mission Conference; Rev. W. Asbury Christian, D. D., of the Virginia Conference; Rev. W. B. Beauchamp, D. D., of the Virginia Conference, the new Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, and Rev. C. C. Selecman, D. D., of the Los Angeles Conference.

* * *

Mrs. Lydia Clark, of Vinita, Oklahoma, a three-fourths blood Cherokee Indian, and a devout and influential member of our Church in Vinita, was a visitor. Her brief address to the Board touched the hearts of all present. A stenographic report of this address will appear in the Church Extension Hand Book of 1917.

* * *

The publication of a Bishop A. W. Wilson Memorial volume, which volume will contain a record of the Bishop's life and some of his greatest addresses and sermons, was authorized. The volume is to be prepared by Rev. C. D. Harris, D. D., of the Baltimore Conference, under the supervision of Bishop Collins Denny, Bishop John C. Kilgo, and the Corresponding Secretary.

* * *

The exchange of lots in San Francisco, to secure a better location for the new Fitzgerald Memorial Church, and the plan to retain the old Valencia Street lot for the use of the women about the Bay in the establishment of an institutional church in San Francisco, were approved. It is expected that the San Francisco church will be built this summer.

* * *

The sessions of the Board were presided over by Mr. T. L. Jefferson, of Louisville, Kentucky, who has filled the office of President since 1906. Mr. Jefferson is a most agreeable and efficient presiding officer. Under his guidance the business moved rapidly and harmoniously, and the four sessions were marked by the absence of all things not vital to the work in hand.

A report was adopted providing that, with the beginning of the next quadrennium, the By-Laws of the Board be changed so as to provide for the consideration of applications by a Committee on Applications; this Committee to consist of the Executive Committee and two additional members, to be selected from the Board, and to meet for the consideration of applications in the months of January, April, July and October.

* * *

Strong ground was taken by the Board in the interest of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Executive Committee was authorized to place on the calendar from time to time, for consideration, such applications from that Church as it deemed particularly meritorious; and to accomplish this end, if it developed that any change in the Discipline is necessary thereto, the next General Conference was requested to make such change.

* * *

The total number of applications before the Board was 512. The amount asked for in donations was $288,407.61, which was $81,072.83 more than last year; and the amount asked for in loans was $385,256.93, which is an increase of $106,838.33 over last year. The Board granted donations amounting to $142,927.96, and loans aggregating $260,025. It referred to the Executive Committee for further consideration urgent applications numbering sixty.

* * *

The Board approved the plan of Rev. C. C. Selecman, D. D., pastor of Trinity Auditorium, Los Angeles, California, to raise a fund of $100,000, to be known as the "Trinity Church Extension Endowment Fund," the income from which is to be used for paying rent on Trinity Auditorium for the time being, and ultimately, if such course becomes necessary, in building a church for the use of that congregation. The fund is to be handled by the Board of Church Extension.

* * *

Two members of the Board have died during the year: Bishop A. W. Wilson, the last of the charter members of the Board, on November 21, 1916; Mr. Presley H. Tapp, Louisville, Kentucky, for twenty-two years a member of the Board and a member of its Executive Committee, on Friday, May 4, 1917. The funeral services of Mr. Tapp were conducted from the Fourth Avenue Church on Saturday afternoon, May 5, at 3:30 o'clock, and the Board adjourned to attend the service. Suitable memoirs of these faithful servants of the Church were adopted, and will appear in the 1917 Hand Book.

EPWORTH LEAGUE ANNOUNCEMENT.

Due to the unsettled condition in the State over the war situation and the heavy drain upon the young men for war service, it was decided in a conference between Dr. F. S. Parker, General Secretary, Rev. W. E. Thomas, Conference President of the Epworth League Board, and the State Cabinet to indefinitely postpone the conference at Lake Charles, announced to convene on June 14 next. This action is taken only after deliberate consideration, but is deemed to be for the best interests of the work at this time. A large number of our leading young men are now in training camps and quite a number expect to go shortly, thus drawing heavily on our working force. It is planned to hold a general cabinet meeting at an early date, to be announced later, at which time it is expected to meet in a central place and have officers present from each chapter. This meeting will be more in the nature of a cabinet advisory meeting, and will be comprised principally of persons officially connected with the Leagues.

The condition of the Leagues throughout the State continues to improve, and had it been possible to hold the meeting in Lake Charles, it might have been the greatest conference ever assembled in Louisiana. The Leaguers must realize now the increased burden placed upon them by the war. Conscription will take from our midst the very best of our young manhood, while those of our young ladies of the same age will doubtless be engaged in the Red Cross branch of the National Service. This war, if won, must be on spiritual grounds, and all Christians are called upon to attend more closely to their religious duties. Our officers in authority, especially President Wilson, need more than ever Divine guidance, and we should "pray without ceasing," asking God, in his wisdom, to lead us safely through such a crisis. Plans are being made for increasing the activities of the First Department, but until we are working collectively on this matter, each Leaguer must feel his own responsibility and do his "bit." American ideals must be preserved, and that means that the Christian young people must begin in earnest to uphold the principles of our Church and adhere closely to our daily devotions.

THE CENTENARY CAMPAIGN RESULTS.

The short-term campaign for raising an endowment for Centenary College, which was conducted by Rev. A. E. Clement of Nashville, Tenn., closed on Tuesday, May 15. The original proposal was to raise $50,000 in Shreveport, but it was decided to estimate the value of the Louisiana Conference educational pledge at $25,000, and by including this amount to make the goal $100,000. On the closing day the figure of $82,000 had been reached. A Commencement barbecue on the college campus is now being planned, at which time it is hoped that the full amount asked for will be realized.

Considering all the circumstances, the campaign has been a glorious success, and while there is much more hard work to be done, the future of Centenary is now assured.

Dr. Geo. S. Sexton gave much valuable assistance in the work, as well as Rev. W. W. Drake, our Conference Educational Secretary, and others.

PRESIDING ELDERS, PASTORS, EPWORTH LEAGUE PRESIDENTS AND EPWORTH LEAGUERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

My Dear Fellow Workers: This is to remind you that the fifteenth Annual Session of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League will be held at Columbia, Miss., June 7-10. We are very anxious to have as many of our presiding elders and pastors and League Presidents to attend as possible and would like to have two or more representatives from each local chapter of both Senior and Junior Leagues.

We not only ask pastors, who have no leagues, to attend, but also to bring as many young people as they can from their charges.

I wish to urge all local chapters to pay their $2.50 assessment to the General Office, Nashville; also their $2.50 for Conference assessment; both may be remitted to Rev. L. F. Alford, Treasurer, Enterprise, Miss.

Please see that the pledge of the African Special is paid as soon as possible, at least by the time the Conference meets. This is very important.

We will have with us at Columbia Dr. C. G. Hounshell and A. C. Tippins, from Nashville. Rev. W. B. Hogg will conduct the devotional periods. Dr. W. G. Henry will have two Bible periods. Rev. J. R. Jones will administer the communion, and Rev. H. B. Watkins will give us "the social message of the Bible."

The above is a part of the good things we are to have besides the very royal entertainment that is being provided by the local League chapter at Columbia.

I covet your prayers and co-operation to make this the best Conference we have ever had.

Yours fraternally,
W. D. HAWKINS,
Pres. Miss. Conf. Epworth League.

COME ALONG!

Were it practicable, I should like to load on a special train the entire membership of the North Mississippi Conference, together with a sufficient number of active, intelligent laymen for chaperons, and take them in a body to a mountain assembly or a seashore resort for a month of study and recreation. But purses are thin, the time is short, the summer revival season approaches with its weeks of strenuous service for pastors, and we cannot avail ourselves of the coveted privilege. However, we can all come together on a lovely spot that is all our own and within our own bounds, hang up our hats, pull off our coats, feel perfectly at home and have four days of instruction, inspiration and good fellowship at the Efficiency Conference in Grenada College, June 5-8.

Here we can attend a conference not given to committee meetings and cabinet sessions, nor filled with the tedium of business and trying routine. What a joy to grasp the hand and feel the heart-throb of our fellow laborers at this noon-day hour of the Conference year! The planting and sowing has been done, round by round cultivation has proceeded, and exactly six months have passed since our fields were assigned us. We face trying times fraught with tremendous possibilities. Come along, let us spend a few days together in prayer and communion, and go out with renewed courage to toil till the November shadows shall call us from our reaping. Surely every pastor will wish to come, and surely many laymen will find it in their hearts to bring or send their pastors.

Brothers Woollard and Duren have provided for the intellectual and spiritual interests of the conference by securing Bishop Murrah and Drs. DuBose, Howard, Stuart, Chappell, and Pinson as speakers. My own part on the Program Committee is to supply the wants of the physical man. To that end, I have provided a practical demonstration against the H. C. L. nightmare by arranging for the members of the Conference to browse from the College gardens three times a day and sleep under a good roof at night for the sum of $2.25 for the entire session. Single meals will be 25 cents. Guests must provide their own towels and toilet articles, as the College is not equipped with these.

Brethren, let us rally at least 150 strong and try so to spend our time that we may go back to our places strengthened in mind, refreshed in body and with hearts aflame for the salvation of men. As the foundations of human society are being broken up, many souls are turning to serious things. May we prove faithful and efficient guides! Send your name now for a room.

Fraternally,
Grenada, Miss. J. R. COUNTISS.

THE CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Corinth District Conference will convene at Rienzi, Miss., on June 19 at 3 o'clock p. m., and will close on the night of the 21st. A full attendance is expected. The following Committees are appointed:

License to Preach and Recommendation to the Annual Conference—S. L. Pope, J. D. Simpson, J. A. Goad.

On Orders—J. E. Cunningham, J. J. Baird, J. M. Wyatt.

Local Preachers—L. A. McKeown, A. L. Davenport, C. A. Northington.

THE MILLSAPS QUARTO-CENTENNIAL.

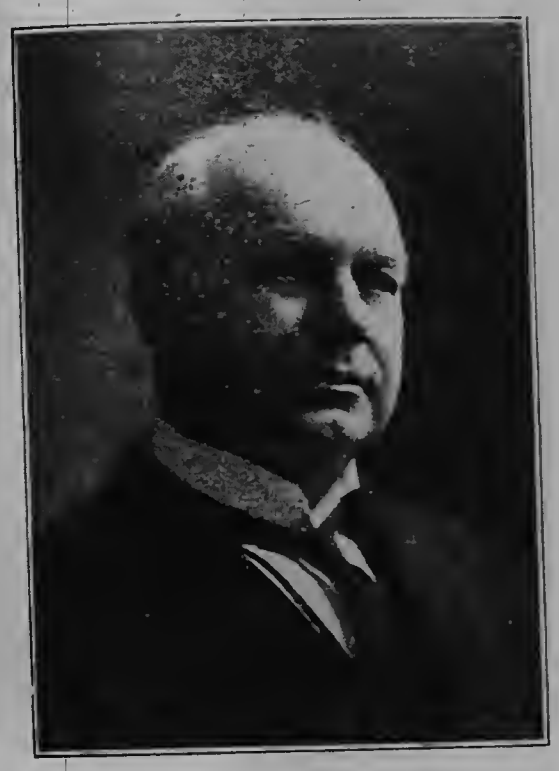
Southern Methodism, Millsaps stands next to Trinity College in the amount of endowment actually in hand, the total of this being $552,000; and besides this, the value of its other property is set down at $280,000, bringing its total holdings up to $832,000. The endowments of the other leading colleges of the Church are as follows: Randolph-Macon (Virginia), $405,445; Hendrix College



BISHOP W. B. MURRAH, D.D., LL.D.,

Who was the first President of Millsaps College, serving in that capacity for eighteen years. His fine judgment and admirable administrative ability contributed largely to its success. Bishop Murrah is now President of the Board of Trustees of the College.

(Arkansas), $287,515; Central College (Missouri), $280,000; Wofford College (South Carolina), $204,436; Southwestern University (Georgetown, Texas), $272,890; Trinity College (North Carolina), $1,600,306. (These figures are from "The Minutes of the Annual Conferences of the M. E. Church, South, for the year 1916"—the latest.)

Having been cradled under the watchful care of Bishop Galloway, Major Millsaps, and Bishop Murrah, and having for years had their masterful leadership in all its affairs, Millsaps College has been favored as have but few institutions in the land. Nobly these wise and strong men wrought, and well have they laid the foundations of this splendid educational plant. Its future administration, and the duty of carrying it forward to yet larger things, constitute for the Methodists of Mississippi a solemn and most weighty responsibility. If kept thoroughly true to apostolic Christianity and loyal to the lofty ideals cherished for it by its founders, this institution, which has so auspiciously begun its work, will doubtless grow with the passing years, blessing increasingly succeeding generations until the end of time. It is one of the few colleges of the Church with trustees that are entirely selected by the two Annual Conferences that own it, without any restrictions whatever from an outside source. This is a valuable feature of its government, upon which no encroachments of any kind should ever be permitted.

May we say that, in our humble judgment, the two things that Millsaps College now most needs are some facilities that will make possible the lessening of the expenses of students, and a helpful course of Bible instruction for all young ministers attending it? The campaign for a new $60,000 dormitory, which is now under way, and for which the citizens of Jackson recently pledged $30,000, is a movement which has as one of its aims the meeting of the first of these needs, and we think that steps should be taken to provide for the other with the least possible delay.

We congratulate Millsaps College upon the twenty-five years of noble history which it has made, and we earnestly pray that it may accomplish vastly more for God and humanity in the decades to come.

FIRST CHURCH, ALEXANDRIA.

Dear Dr. Meek: The pastor has been too delightfully busy to say much about what has been going on in the Methodism of this growing city. But, believing that our people are doing some things worth mentioning, he is hurriedly writing these lines.

We are having large congregations. I was informed that some came yesterday and turned away because they saw no room; but more seats could have been provided.

The growing interest in the Sunday school has been constantly making the necessity of building additional rooms more evident until, notwithstanding the war conditions, our brethren recently purchased a very valuable corner lot adjacent to the church at a cost of about $5000, thus giving us the entire front of the block on which our church stands. And at our regular monthly stewards' meeting last Monday evening they decided to raise immediately the amount to pay for the lot and to procure plans for a model Sunday school building, to be erected on said lot as soon as conditions warranted the raising of the necessary funds. Whereupon one of our big-souled laymen, Dr. W. D. Haas, endorsed the plan and offered to help pay for the lot and to contribute $10,000 toward the erection of the building. Therefore, we are planning to go right ahead until the entire enterprise is completed.

At our recent Children's Day celebration our superintendent asked for an offering of $100, but received only about half that amount. A good man who is not a member of our Church, but whose sweet little girl is a member of our Beginners' Department in the Sunday school, asked the superintendent if he received the amount asked for. Upon learning that he had not, he wrote his check for the remaining $50. The superintendent says that this is a good illustration of the Scripture, "A little child shall lead them."

Our people here are a noble, big-souled people, and the pastor is very much in love with them. They are surrounded by much that is sinful and evil, but they are growing in grace and more and more becoming an effective phalanx for God in this city, and we are expecting to see His cause gloriously triumph over every foe.

Dr. Thurston B. Price, of St. Louis, is to help us in a revival from June 10 to 24. Pray for us.

We are to have a banquet in the interest of our Sunday school building proposition on the evening of Friday, May 25. Come and be with us.

W. H. COLEMAN, Pastor.

REV. A. F. WATKINS, D.D.,

President of Millsaps College, who was elected in 1912. He was a charter member of the Board of Trustees, and has been connected with the institution from its earliest incipiency.

ENDOWMENT STARTED FOR WHITWORTH.

On yesterday the Board of Trustees of Whitworth College held its annual session previous to the Commencement exercises of 1916-17. There were present T. B. Lampton, P. H. Enochs, C. S. Butterfield, W. D. Davis, L. L. Roberts, J. M. Morse, J. T. Leggett, W. M. Williams, M. B. Sharbrough and C. W. Crisler, the latter representing the Mississippi Conference Committee.

At the meeting, notable in the history of our great educational institution, a plan for a $100,000 endowment was inaugurated and a committee to confer with the Mississippi Conference with regard to it was appointed as follows: T. B. Lampton, P. H. Enochs, J. M. Morse, L. L. Roberts, W. D. Davis.

A change was made in the lease system under

of the class of 1902, who will be the principal speaker for the Alumni of Millsaps College during the Quarto-Centennial Celebration. He is the gifted and popular pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of Columbus, Miss.

which Dr. I. W. Cooper, President, has administered the affairs of the College. Dr. Cooper was again elected President. He guaranteed all running expenses of the institution and was given a salary.

This places Whitworth on the same basis with respect to its relation to the Church as Millsaps College and insures an absolutely safe position.

Dr. Cooper has distinguished himself by his able service for Whitworth College during the past fifteen years. In that time more than $75,000 has been expended upon new buildings and equipment.

There is no doubt in the minds of the Trustees that the endowment can be raised. That it should be is certain.

Mr. W. M. Buie was elected to succeed Major R. W. Millsaps, deceased, on the Board of Trustees. —Brookhaven (Miss.) Leader of May 16.

NOTES.

The Florida State Senate has passed a memorial calling upon Congress to enact a national prohibition law to be effective during the war.

The Southern Baptist Convention, lately in session in New Orleans, unanimously declared for immediate prohibition throughout the United States.

We notice as a flaming headline above a press dispatch in a local paper the following: "American brewers at Wilson's Service." The best service that the brewers could render the nation would be to shut down their plants.

THE MAILS AND LIQUOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

The following press dispatch deals with a matter of much interest:

"Washington, May 16.—Postmaster General Burleson has announced that the territory to which it will be unlawful to mail letters, postal cards or publications containing liquor advertisements under the so-called Reed amendment embraces at least twenty-four States in their entirety and portions of two others, while data is incomplete as to four more. The ban is effective July 1, except where otherwise stated.

"The absolutely barred States are: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Utah, Virginia, Washington, and West Virginia. The area also includes Kent County, Delaware, and 91 towns in Connecticut. The ban is effective in Utah, August 1, next; Indiana, April 3, 1918; Michigan, April 30, 1918; New Hampshire, May 1, 1918, and Montana, December 31, 1918."

THE TEXAS SITUATION.

Texas, in spite of unusual obstacles, seems at last destined to achieve the State Prohibition which the majority of its citizens have long desired.

A provision in the Texas constitution orders the regular submission to the counties and lesser units of the State of the question of prohibiting the liquor traffic. Because the vote is on prohibiting and not on licensing many able dry lawyers in Texas believe this constitutional provision would not prevent the enactment of statutory prohibition by the Legislature, but other able lawyers think not. The only sure way to get State prohibition, therefore, has been to fight for the submission of a prohibition amendment to the constitution.

The Democratic party is supreme in Texas, but a peculiar provision of law forbids a political party recommending any specific legislation unless a majority of the party has first endorsed it at the primary. A petition from 10 per cent of the last gubernatorial election strength of a party may force the submission of such a specific legislation proposal in the party primary.

Last summer the drys in the Democratic party secured such a petition on the question of submitting a State prohibition amendment in the Democratic primary. In the primary the drys mustered a majority of 2000 votes and so instructed the Democratic members of the Legislature to vote for the submission of such an amendment. Amendment proposals require a two-thirds majority in both Houses of the Legislature. Enough Democrats bolted the party's instructions to make two votes less than the required two-thirds in one House, and so defeated the submission.

But the drys did not give up. Taking advantage of an agitation already on for a State constitutional convention, they put themselves behind that project and carried the submission of such a call to the people; and this fall the people of Texas will vote both on calling a constitutional convention and on electing delegates nominated to it. It will only take a majority on the floor of the constitutional convention to put prohibition into the document the convention drafts, and a majority of the voters can adopt it. The drys of Texas have shown themselves well able to take care of mere majority problems in the State.—The American Issue.

SHOULD WE HAVE UNION?

(Apparently an effort is beginning to be made to start an agitation for the union of the Northern and Southern Presbyterian Churches. Dr. Summey, the brilliant editor of The Presbyterian Journal, of this city, discusses this issue in his paper of May 16 in a plain and straightforward manner, and we give below his somewhat extended utterance both because it deals with a matter of interest to all Southern people, and because it shows how a distinguished leader of another Church views questions closely akin to those which for some time have been disturbing Southern Methodism.—Editor of the Advocate.)

Ought we just now consent to or seek a union between the Southern and Northern Presbyterian Churches? That is putting the question plainly, but not improperly. That is the precise matter before us. However much we may try to cover it up with words and praises, that is the issue.

It is an intensely practical question. Many think we should unite. Many think we should not. The question ought to be faced squarely, and plainly. There is no need for beating about the bush. Nothing will be gained by evasion. Diplomacy on either side will do no good. It will lead to insincerity and concealment or suppression which may be regretted later. Regardless of the accusation of boldness of treatment, let us deal with the matter with exceeding plainness. It is better at times to speak out just what is in the mind and heart directly and frankly. If it is wrong, it will thereby be the sooner corrected. If it is right, it will thereby be the sooner effective. The time is past for over-delicate treatment of a sharp issue.

Let us love our brethren of the same name on the other side. Let us give them full credit for their splendid achievements, their testimony, their power. Let us feel genuine pride in them. But let us ask them to help us in this love and credit and pride by carefully watching against anything that will cause our side to think differently of them.

The following may be given as practical barriers in the way of union between our two Churches:

Union is not necessarily unity. It does not make unity. It takes hold upon externals. It pays slight attention to the philosophy or the internal principles of organization. Neither does true unity necessarily demand union.

Union depreciates witness-bearing. It is itself testimony to oneness, if the latter exist, and makes it more effective perhaps, but it does not take into account or uphold cardinal principles for which separate existence stands. It exalts bigness, large names, spectacular effects.

Union would pronounce wrong and unjustified all the distinctive principles for which our Church has stood, and would depreciate them, and would dishonor the historic position and testimony of past years. True, our testimony may not have been uniform. Here and there lapses may have been made. But in the main our body has kept herself sound as to the principles of the spirituality of the Church, the Church's direct control of her agencies, her obligation to maintain her standard of doctrines.

Union would compel our acceptance of a revised Confession. The present doctrinal position of our sister Church is not such that we may be sure of it. With a confession so revised that the strongest advocates of the Cumberland belief could say that its modification brought it to their views, and unable to stay the tide without its own bounds setting in towards a denial of the integrity, authority, and infallibility of the inspired Word, of the virgin birth of the Incarnate Word, of the veritableness of the Lord's resurrection, that church might not prove a safe refuge for those who wish to stay anchored by the truth as we believe it.

Union would take no account of the homogeneity in our Church's constituency, of the harmony in its organization, of the unusual unanimity in its principles and testimony. All these would be jeopardized by it.

Union would not help our efficiency but tend to lessen it. Our Church is unparalleled in its activity. Its separate existence has seemed to stir it to a most vigorous life. It gives more per capita to foreign missions, and at less cost of administration, than any church but one, and that one not the Northern Church, in all the land.

The Southern Church has sentimental and temperamental conditions of its own. They are not sinful. The projection of work upon such lines is not evil. On the contrary, they conduce to denominational loyalty, solidarity, and efficiency. They help the work for the one great cause. The Northern Church would simply swallow ours, and it knows it. The bigness would be helped. The numbers would be swollen, and that is what is wanted. Union without unity is better, according to the creed of most of the unionists, than unity without union.

And now for another class of objections, all of a very practical nature:

Our Northern sister Church has not shown herself kind in her methods of propagandism. She has been far more ready to push in where our Church is already occupying the ground than to go to her own most destitute and crying fields in the North and Northeast. She has fostered disaffection amongst us here and there. She has made quick use of the needs of the struggling churches to open the way, always so speciously as never to be thought to be initiating it, to make the disaffected and the struggling know that they will find refuge and substantial aid. She invites in disgruntled ministers and congregations, fosters them, and uses them as far as she can to push herself further into territory already well occupied and faithfully served by our Church, and knowing that the aggressive work produces unhappiness and friction. She joins in comity agreements and then ignores them. As one of her own papers lately put it, "the teeth" of her agreement with our Church last year were drawn, by herself, while our Church was innocently and unsuspectingly accepting the agreement in the form in which it was delivered to us. For every one of these statements specific cases and facts can be given.

Our Church has, by her history, proved her right to a separate existence. All she asks is to be let alone in her work and in the territory she is trying faithfully to serve, asking that her sister go to the fields elsewhere which are crying for aid. She resents the cry of "nationalism" as a warrant for intrusion and un-neighborly acts, for fostering of complaints, for making refuge for renegades and ecclesiastical tramps. She resents the charge lately reiterated, renewing the worst features of the obnoxious deliverances and ipso facto acts of fifty years ago, that she was guilty of schism and disloyalty and irregularity in her legal and well principled separation from the larger church.

If there were anything great for the Kingdom to be gained by union, or anything in the way of unity beyond what has already been provided for in the federation made in the Council, we might be willing to lay aside many of the difficulties named above and to pardon the unfriendliness and encroachments that have been made. But who will show any such gains sufficient to warrant the total setting aside of our Church's historic position, testimony, and effective lines of work, and executive organization?

THE EDITOR COMMENDED.

Dear Dr. Meek: I want to commend you for giving to the Church a splendid paper in the Advocate. I have been taking it for some thirty-five years, and, in my humble opinion, it was never better (if as good) than at the present time and since you have had charge. I endorse your position on unification, and also your course in the Vanderbilt matter.

I spoke to our quarterly meeting last Monday, urging the importance of all Methodist families taking our Church paper. (We have two stewards, Doctor, who do not take it, and they are both heads of families.) I told Brother Harmon since, that I think our preachers ought to bring the matter of taking the Church paper before their people from the pulpit.

I am your friend and brother,

B. F. GOZA,
Treasurer Board of Stewards.

THE RABBIT.

By Elenor Allen Schroll.

I have a pretty rabbit,
With fur as white as snow;
Of course it isn't "really,"
It's just a toy, you know.

It holds a tiny carrot
Between its teeth so white,
It looks so like a real one
You'd like to take a bite.

Its head keeps nodding, nodding,
As cunning as can be,
As if to say, "Good-day, good-day,"
To all the company.

A CASE OF CONSCIENCE.

"He's paid me too much."

Ned's fingers were rapidly turning over two or three bills.

"Yes—three dollars too much. He must have thought this five-dollar bill was a two."

The boy sat for a few moments in deep thought.

"I don't care. It's no more than my rightful due—only I don't get it. Twelve dollars a month for my whole time out of school. It doesn't begin to pay for all I do, and I wouldn't stand it if I could help myself. Everybody says Curtis is a real grind. Of course, I'll keep this. He gave it to me. If he has made a mistake, that's his own lookout. That matter is all settled; what shall I do with this lucky windfall? I'm to have a half-holiday the last Saturday in the month. This would give me a run down to the shore. I never get out of the city. It seems as if this had come just to give me a chance."

Carefully laying the money in a safe place, Ned quickly absorbed himself in study. All the week he took little time for thought. It was easy to avoid it, for between work and study few boys were so busy as he. Night found him so "dead tired" that the sound sleep which blesses labor was his rich reward. There came a night or two in which he had to fight hard against a troublesome intrusive thought.

"Ned Harper, you're a thief."

Pausing for a moment, as if to familiarize himself with the sound of his self-accusation, he resumed:

"You are, and you know it; that is, you are as long as that money is in your hands. It is not yours, and all your fine talk can't make it yours. You're on the right side now, but in one day you would have been on the wrong side. You would have been a thief, thief, thief in your life. Nothing could ever have put you back where you are now by the grace of God."

"You made a mistake in your last payment," said Ned, going with the money to his employer.

"Ah, did I? When did you find it out?"

He looked keenly at the boy's painful flush as he asked. Ned had hoped he would not ask. For a moment he thought of evading the question by half-truth. Then came the thought: "Because I came next door to being a thief I needn't come next door to being a liar."

"I—saw it soon after," he said.

"Like enough he'll discharge me," was Ned's conclusion in the matter.

He was not discharged. Little by little, Mr. Curtis placed more important work in his hands, and by slow degrees led him to a position of trust and confidence.

"I have kept him," he explained to a friend, "because I like a young fellow who has a conscience."

—Southern Churchman.

THE HIGHER LAW.

The young man who had been examining the row of shining instruments that lined the operating room turned abruptly to the great surgeon:

"Of course, you do not believe in the foolishness of prayer," he said.

"And why not?" the surgeon asked, as he held a delicate instrument critically to the light.

"What! A man with your scientific training," the younger man exclaimed in surprise.

"And why not?" the keen-faced elderly man repeated.

"Oh come now, doctor," the young man said, smiling. "Surely you cannot believe that God would upset all the laws of nature to grant the request of some one of his creatures. You know how inexorable are the laws of nature.

"That's exactly why I believe so strongly in the efficacy of prayer." The words were spoken quietly, but with evident seriousness.

"Explain the riddle, please," the other demanded, and his manner was grave now.

"Why, that's easy enough to do," the surgeon said. "Prayer—or rather faith, which is the motive of prayer—is just as much a force of nature as gravity. The skeptics seem to think that if a prayer were answered all the laws of nature would be smashed to pieces. That is not necessarily the case. Let me illustrate. Why does this instrument that I hold in my hand not fall to the floor?"

"Why, because you are sustaining it."

"Exactly. And yet the law of gravity is not wrecked or denied. It is merely superseded for the moment by a higher law—the law of life.

"Now, as we ascend in nature we find this—the basic laws of a higher plane have just this power of overruling some of the laws of a lower plane.

"Gravity is a great law in the inorganic world. It is still a law in the organic world, but the great law of the organic world—the law of life—is superior to it. The plant thrusts its stem upward in the face of gravity; man walks about in defiance of it.

"Then why may there not be a law in the next plane of nature—the spiritual—just as naturally, superseding some of the laws of the organic world? The plant reaches down into the inorganic world, and, grasping the dead atoms there, endows them with life and the ability to rise superior to the force of gravity. May not the spiritual world do as much for the material world without outraging a single law of nature?"

"Why—why, I guess it could," the young man stammered.

"It not only could—it does," the surgeon declared, emphatically.

"Then there is something in prayer after all?"

"The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much," the doctor quoted. "I tell you, my friend, prayer changes things." And the young man knew from the light on the older man's face that here was one man at least for whom prayer had changed things—many things.—The Presbyterian Journal.

THE SAVING HAND.

A five-year-old boy, Ivan Ashcraft, whose home is in Folsom, a little hamlet in Delaware County, Pa., is hailed as a true hero. He and his playmates were sporting about the edge of a pond covered with thin ice, when little Davy Ward, aged three, saw some object upon the ice which he desired, and reached out to get, and, losing his balance, he fell and broke through the ice. When his older brother saw it, he began to cry. A larger boy hastened to the rescue, but broke in himself and barely escaped with his life. Then it was that the little hero with great skill and caution crept out to his little friend, and, using his own words, "When I saw Davy bobbin' up and down I jes' reached out my hand and grabbed his'n." Thus a life was saved, and thus honor was gained. We may not all have opportunity or ability to save a boy from drowning in a deep pool, but there are boys and girls, men and women, perishing all about us, and their going down means an eternal ruin. What is needed in those who would rescue is a mind to appreciate the peril, a heart of compassion for the perishing, and a hand ready to reach out and save. The words of this little child tell it all: "When I seen Davy hobbin' up and down I jes' reached out my hand and grabbed his'n."—Presbyterian.

"He that serves God with gladness in the morning will find in God his peace when the day is far spent."

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK.

No one questions but that we are living in the day of marked Sunday school advancement. And next to pulpit ministration, the Sunday school is undoubtedly the field of the most far reaching service.

Here we are trained in righteousness. War Commissioners say that to place untrained men in the trenches is criminal! The purpose of the Sunday school is to bring the pupils to Christ, then, through instruction in His Word, train them to effectively use the spiritual forces He places at their command.

In order to assist the schools of our Conference in accomplishing this laudable purpose, the Sunday School Board has our efficient secretary, Rev. J. L. Neill, constantly in the field. He does a prodigious amount of work, and deserves the sympathy and co-operation of all our people. However much he is doing, the task is too large for any one man.

To maintain the work on the high plane we have placed it, and even make the progress necessity demands, our resources must be increased. The Sunday school cause is worthy, and not infrequently does the flower of success in the Missionary or Educational cause have its source in the germinal soil of the Sunday school.

To neglect the interests of this department of the Church is calamitous. Here the purpose of other interests is placed at the very center of unfolding life and gives the Kingdom a life-product which has all along been nurtured in the powers and privileges of the Church in all its departments.

I mean to say that Missions, Education, Church Extension, or any other cause fostered by the Church, as great and worthy as they are, have no more claim on an adequate and appreciative provision for their support than has the Sunday school. Too long for our good, we have left this generic interest to a single annual Children's Day exercise, which, at its best even, has been insufficient.

Such a high-souled and generous layman as Hon. P. H. Enochs, who caught the vision of Sunday school possibility from the International Sunday School Association, has rescued and saved this interest to the Church more than once. He now, with another godly layman, Hon. James Hand, are so supplementing the Children's Day offerings as to make our present work possible. These brethren ought not to be expected to keep this up, and they should not, through their generosity, garner all the blessings that the extra work produces. Think on these things ere we come to Vicksburg.

Our Board's policy has been a strenuous effort to make our work worth while, with appreciative recognition of the good others were doing—with a good will to all and ill will to none. We hope for unity of purpose and harmony of action in the great work committed to our hands.

J. LOYD DECELL,
Treasurer Miss. Conf. S. S. Board.

Editorial

IMMEDIATE ACTION NEEDED.

"SHALL THE DENOMINATIONAL PAPER LIVE? IF SO, HOW?" These words were stretched across the platform of the hall in which the Southern Baptists held their late convention in New Orleans. All denominations recognize this question as a pressing problem. Brethren, in these depressing war times, the New Orleans Advocate needs your help. Subscriptions are expiring in every charge, and unless these are renewed disaster will overtake us next fall, if not sooner. This is not a mere cry of "wolf," when there is no "wolf." We are stating sober facts. Will you not AT ONCE take this matter up from your pulpit and in your pastoral work, and lend us a helping hand? It will be too late to retrieve the situation if things are allowed to drift along for the next two or three months. DO YOU THINK IT A MATTER OF NO CONSEQUENCE TO HAVE THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE CRIPPLED AND WEAKENED AT THIS CRITICAL TIME? Let us hear from you, brethren and friends.

THE SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION.

The Southern Baptist Convention, which met in this city Wednesday of last week, adjourned last Monday, after what was pronounced to be one of the most satisfactory sessions of this organization ever held. Dr. J. B. Gambrell, of Dallas, Texas, who is well known in Mississippi, where he resided for many years, was elected President, and presided skilfully over the deliberations of the body, though he is 78 years of age. He is still remarkably strong physically, is alert and capable, and possesses a quaint humor that served him well in meeting the tense situations that sometimes arose in the proceedings of the convention. It was stated that 1706 regular delegates to the convention were registered, and that, including the delegates to the Woman's Missionary Union and visitors, the number of persons brought to the city by this gathering was about 6000.

The convention impressed us as being much more loosely organized than our Methodist General Conference; hence business was transacted with much less order and dispatch. But, on the other hand, there may be some compensation in the probability that the body is more truly deliberative and representative of the people. It seemed to us, however, to be unwieldy to a considerable extent, and we thought that we could detect in the reports submitted a decided trend toward giving the various boards and committees a larger measure of power—toward a general tightening up of the supervisional machinery of the Church. We make this statement notwithstanding the fact that the movement to consolidate the several boards failed, a nexus, instead, being established between them.

Some of the most notable things done were the following: The starting of a plan to raise a $4,000,000 pension fund for retired ministers; the conclusion to establish a Bible-training school in New Orleans, somewhat on the type of the Moody institutions; the enactment of a provision to see that all General Boards are legally chartered and operated, and the launching of a movement to strengthen and better equip the numerous schools of the denomination, which have surprisingly little endowment.

The Southern Baptists are a wonderfully virile, aggressive, and evangelistic people. Though we do not see some things as they do, we cannot but honor them for their great earnestness and their ardent loyalty to the common fundamentals of Christianity. They apparently have no notion of surrendering to the pernicious unbiblical teaching called Christian, which is so widespread in this day, and which constitutes, in our opinion, the greatest existing menace to the Church of Christ.

A REMARKABLE PREACHER.

Learning that Dr. L. G. Broughton, the well known Baptist minister, was to preach at the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of this city, last Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, we resolved, if possible, to be present. Many of our readers doubtless know that Dr. Broughton was instrumental in having erected the famous Baptist Tabernacle in Atlanta, Ga., the pulpit of which he occupied for some time; and that subsequently he was called to Christ Church, London, succeeding Dr. F. B. Meyer as pastor of that noted congregation. Two or three years ago, because of the unsatisfactory state of his health, Dr. Broughton returned to the United States, and, amid a number of calls, accepted one to Knoxville, Tenn., hoping that the climate there would prove beneficial to him physically.

When we reached First Church, though Dr. Truett, of Dallas, Texas, who is said to be a man of unusual pulpit gifts, was to preach in the Athenaeum (just across the street), where the sessions of the Baptist Convention were held, we found a great audience gathered for the service. Dr. Broughton soon made his appearance. He is tall, anguiar, and thin—his presence being very striking and impressive. One would never take him for an ordinary man. There seemed, however, to be a lack of physical robustness about him which one could not hut note.

After a number of spirited and helpful songs, the speaker's text was announced. His theme was "The Two Judgments"—that of "assignment," which, it was affirmed, places one in heaven or in hell immediately after death (irrevocably), according to whether one has faith in Christ or not; the other being the "general judgment." which will fix the measure of one's reward or punishment at the end of time.

Dr. Broughton had not spoken long until it was evident that he is a master of assemblies. His voice—rather a deep tenor—was clear and well modulated; his gestures were appropriate and most expressive, but not showy; his language was chaste and concise—not a word being wasted; his manner was earnest and direct, but never stormy; his experiences were frequentiy referred to, hut always with a beautiful but not paraded humility; there were a few flashes of humor, but not enough to weaken the speil of seriousness that had taken possession of the audience. Everything about the speaker was natural, simple, and straightforward—what we might term a realizable genuineness seemed to be outstanding. The plan of the discourse was well wrought out; the propositions were clear-cut, there being no overlapping; they followed in orderly succession and were cumulative in their effect. There was an impact about the preacher's utterances that made them grip and move his hearers—a subtle power which, without any straining, brought all under its magnetic influence.

Before we were aware that the end was near, the sermon was closed, and the choir director was told to lead in singing "When the roll is called up yonder." No proposition was made, but many pressed forward to speak to the minister. Throughout this song they came; then through a second, and a third. It was much like an old-time Methodist handshaking service; and if the discourse that had been delivered had been preached at an Annual Conference there would likely have been much shouting.

We count it a rare privilege to have heard Dr. Broughton; his searching message will go with us to our grave. Such preaching—so ohviously sincere and artless—awakens in one a disposition to despise the wretched pedantry that struts far too much in the pulpits of to-day. Clerical peacocks can never be true ambassadors of Christ.

It may seem to some who heard him years ago that we have not correctly described the preaching of Dr. Broughton; but he is said to have undergone a considerable change in the style of his pulpit work within the last decade. A Baptist minister sitting in front of us made this ohservation, and Dr. Broughton himself remarked in his discourse that some one had lately said to him, "You are not like you used to be," to which affirmation he stated he replied, "No, I am not; one could not pass through the great Welsh revival (which he had described in his sermon that morning, with his companion in the audience), and remain the same." There was something in the quiet, spiritual power that seemed to emanate from Dr. Broughton that reminded us of Dr. F. B. Meyer, his distinguished predecessor in the pastorate of Christ Church, London; but we think the personality of the American is such as to make him the much more effective preacher of the two.

To the readers of the Advocate we would say, hear Dr. Broughton if you should ever have an opportunity.

THE EXTRA SESSION AND "THE JUNE ROSES."

In reporting the proceedings of the Northern Methodist Book Committee, at its recent meeting, the Western Christian Advocate of Cincinnati says:

"On Thursday morning the question of providing for a commission for the special or adjourned session of the General Conference of 1916, to he heid in 1918, if the movement for unification between the two Episcopal Methodisms should warrant it, was discussed, but because of the discouraging situation in this movement it was not deemed advisabie to make any provision at the present time. However, according to established custom, the commissiou on entertainment of our next General Conference, 1920, was elected with the following men honored with a place on the list: Joe Bell, W. F. Conner, Ezra Tipple, Silas Peirce, E. E. Shipley, Joseph Ulland, Herbert Scott."

So the wild notion of an extra session, held simultaneously with the General Conference of our Church in 1918, for the consummation of unification, seems to have been exploded. "Organic union before the June roses fade" seems to have been a sort of "pipe dream." Men are awake now.

How could our Church have organic union with a body whose Bishops talk like Bishop Quayle fumed at the anniversary of their Freedman's Aid Society on April 10? How can we harmonize with such utterances as the following from the Central Christian Advocate (Kansas City), whose editor, commenting upon Bishop Quayles eruption, said:

"The Negro certainly will not be bound to the altar of fagots and sacrified to any god of caste. No cords, no chains, will tie him hand and foot to throw him on any such pyre, even though the stake bears a very popular name. The Methodist Episcopal Church will not entertain any motion that will sacrifice the Negro simply because he is weak, because he is hlack, hecause he cannot stand alone, because we are his superiors. To us personally is beyond understanding a Christian logic, a Christlike ethic, which would force the colored membership out of the Church, on the ground that it is weak and not fully developed, thus making it swim or drown, crawl or fall, hecause in our superiority we do not wish the race to learn to stand and climb, and achieve, by its fellowship with a stronger and more developed and clearer visioned race."

Who wishes to sacrifice the Negro? Does giving him a church of his own and giving him brotherly aid in maintaining his church sacrifice him?

How about keeping him in a white church for his quadrennial vote in the General Conference, but always denying him election to the office of a Bishop?

How about setting him off in Colored Annual Conferences? Does that sacrifice him to any god of caste?

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Seashore District, is assisting Rev. J. E. Gray in a revival at Logtown, Miss. The meeting will continue through the present week.

Governor Pleasant, of Louisiana, has placed Rev. J. L. Sutton on a Commission to establish for the State an institution for the training of deaf, dumb, and blind Negroes.

Mrs. B. E. Meigs, wife of our pastor at Saucier, Miss., is at home again, on the way to health, after a serious operation and a four weeks' stay in the King's Daughters' Hospital at Gulfport, Miss.

We acknowledge ourself indebted to two of the students of Millsaps College, Rev. Claude A. Parks and Mr. Rufus G. Moore, for a beautiful invitation to the Commencement exercises of that institution. They will both receive the B. A. degree at the close of the present session.

Rev. C. A. Battle, of Baton Rouge, La., spent a portion of last Thursday in New Orleans en route home from Amite, La., where he had been attending the Baton Rouge District Conference. While here, he took time to look in on the great Baptist Convention in session at the Athenaeum.

We make grateful acknowledgment to Rev. W. F. Rogers, of Oakland, Miss., for 3 subscriptions from his charge and some commendatory words. Though a quiet and unostentatious toiler, Brother Rogers always gives a good account of himself in the Master's service. Blessings on him and his flock!

Rev. F. W. Tinnin, the Baptist pastor at Natchez, Miss., was a pleasant caller at our office Monday. He was an employee of the Advocate a number of years ago. Rev. and Mrs. S. A. Smith, of Vidalia, La., also did us the kindness to call while they were in New Orleans attending the Southern Baptist Convention.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, our pastor at Franklin, La., visited New Orleans last week, and while in the city favored our office with an appreciated call. He spoke encouragingly of the work of his charge, and commended highly the work that his presiding elder, Rev. H. W. May, is doing on the Lafayette District.

We make grateful acknowledgment to the following friends, whose kindness has not been elsewhere mentioned, for two or more subscriptions, received within the past few days: Rev. T. B. Cottrell, Mt. Olive, Miss., 6; Rev. Melville Johnson, Hernando, Miss., 5; Rev. S. E. Flurry, Philadelphia, Miss., 2.

Dr. Isaac L. Peebles, of Meridian, Miss., has lately had issued another pamphlet, entitled "The Love of God—Its Meaning, Nature, Regulation, and Greatness." It is a strong and vigorous discussion of a great theme, and is well worth a careful reading. It may be had of the author at 10 cents a copy.

Rev. John L. Carter, pastor of the Americus charge, Mississippi Conference, and Miss Lillie Olivia Wilkerson were married on May 8, at the home of the bride's parents, at Daisy, Miss. The bride is an accomplished young woman. Brother Carter is one of the promising young men of the Mississippi Conference.

The article entitled "Et Tu Brute," which appeared in last week's number of the Advocate, was written by Dr. S. A. Steel. The unaccountable omission of his name from his communication was discovered before our paper was off the press, and a statement telling who the writer was was inserted in the latter part of that issue.

Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, preached the Commencement Sermon of the Water Valley (Miss.) High School last Sunday, and is booked to make the Annual Address for the Byhalia (Miss.) School on Thursday of this week. Brother Countiss has lately spoken at three other schools on the occasion of flag raisings.

Rev. H. W. May, presiding elder of the Lafayette (La.) District, sends us the following note: "May I state through the Advocate that the Lafayette District Conference will convene at Rayne, La., on June 12, instead of on June 9, as was stated in a former announcement. Rev. J. D. Harper, of Opelousas, will preach the opening sermon."

In a letter renewing his subscription and ordering the address of his paper changed, Rev. S. R. Steele says: "I have been transferred from the Montana to the Baltimore Conference and stationed at Waynesboro, Va. Your paper is of interest to me because of your editorials and your loyalty to Southern Methodism. I do not know many of your constituency."

Rev. Felix G. Hocutt, an esteemed superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, has the sympathy of many friends in the loss of his beloved wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Bryan Hocutt, whose death occurred at Biloxi, Miss., some weeks ago. We have in hand a tribute to the deceased which will appear in the next issue of the Advocate. May the Heavenly Father comfort the sorrowing ones!

Rev. E. N. Evans, who for some time past has been financial agent for Henderson-Brown College at Arkadelphia, Ark., has returned to New Orleans, where he will spend the summer. Brother Evans is a forceful and able preacher, and while he is in these parts the brethren should use him as much as he will permit them. His present address is 1628 Milan Street, New Orleans, La.

The friends of Rev. J. E. Sampley, pastor of the Ingleside Methodist Church, Macon, Ga., who reside in the Advocate's territory, will be pleased to hear the following cheerful message from him: "I am about acclimated to Georgia, but I still have a very warm place in my heart for Mississippi. I have about regained my health and am doing my best for the Church and our Lord."

Brother H. S. Swayze, of Benton, Miss., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, says: "My little granddaughter handed me the mail today, and said: "Grandfather, here is a letter from the Advocate. Are you going to take it again?" I replied, "I would do without all my papers before I would drop the Advocate." Such an attachment to the Church paper is by no means as general as it should be.

The Commencement exercises of Meridian College, Meridian, Miss., will be held May 25-29. The Commencement Sermon will be preached on Sunday, May 27, by Rev. J. A. Smith, and Dr. Marvin F. Beeson will deliver both the Alumni and Baccalaureate addresses. President J. W. Beeson states that this is to be a "Home-coming Commencement," and that a large number of the Alumni are expected to attend.

Miss Ellen Portia Bradley, whose address is 412 McTyeire Street, Jackson, Miss., would like to make some engagements for singing and playing in revival meetings this summer. Miss Bradley is a graduate in voice and a splendid pianist. She will gladly furnish references upon application. We trust that many brethren will find it practicable to use this accomplished musician in their evangelistic work.

We have noted in the Memphis Commercial Appeal a criticism of Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Secretary of the Methodist Hospital, for refusing to accept for that institution $100 donation secured by means of a dance. Brother Ellis is to be heartily commended for the position that he has taken. The acceptance of money raised by wrong methods would be a reflection upon the Church and hurtful to its interests.

Through the kindness of Rev. R. O. Brown, the popular pastor, we have received a copy of the "Directory of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Clarksdale, Miss., for the year 1917." The matter is finely arranged and it is in every respect an interesting and attractive publication. The frontiespiece is a beautiful picture of the new $65,000 house of worship which this congregation is now erecting.

We have learned with regret that Mrs. Dora Costley Guice, widow of the late Rev. George Guice, died at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Bell, in Brookhaven, Miss., on May 11. We have in hand some resolutions from the Woman's Missionary Society at Brookhaven concerning the death of this faithful servant of the Master, which will appear in the next issue of the Advocate. We extend sympathy to the hereaved.

From a letter from Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Drew, Miss., bringing us 5 subscriptions, we take the following items: "Next Saturday, May 19, our second quarterly conference will be held at Sandy Bayou, with dinner on the ground—you know what that means. The Winona District Conference will meet in Drew, June 12-14, and on the Sunday following, June 17, Bishop Murrah will dedicate our handsome church here."

Rev. S. L. Pope, our pastor at New Albany, Miss., was recently in a revival with Rev. J. E. Stephens at Coahoma, Miss. While there, Brother Pope wrote us as follows: "We are having a very pleasant meeting here. Brother Stephens is in good favor with his people. Brother Curtis, the presiding elder of the Greenville District, was with us yesterday. He is certainly 'on to his job.' The whole district is on his heart as if it were his pastorate."

Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, writes: Owing to the disturbed condition of the public mind, and the desire of parents to get their daughters home early, we will close our school rather informally on Monday, May 28." The Commencement sermon will be preached on Sunday, May 27, by Rev. G. A. Stoves, and, by request of the graduating class, which this year numbers 10, Brother Countiss will deliver the Annual Address.

According to a statement in a New Orleans paper, the St. Charles Street Methodist Church (Northern) has been sold for $16,000, with a view to erecting another house of worship in a more eligible part of the city. There was some talk of such a project three or four years ago, but for some reason it was abandoned or deferred. We are not yet informed where the new church will be situated, though the paper stated that it would be located "up-town."

Guntown, Miss., where Rev. J. D. Simpson is the efficient pastor, has just had an excellent revival meeting. The opening sermons of the campaign were preached by Rev. T. H. Dorsey, presiding elder of the Corinth District, after which Rev. J. H. Bell, of Columbus, Miss., one of the evangelists of the North Mississippi Conference, did the preaching. Great good was accomplished. Brother Simpson's note concerning these helpful services will be published next week.

Rev. A. C. Searcy, of Mullin, Texas, sends us a copy of a paper issued there, from which we extract the following: "A revival is now in progress at the Methodist Church, being conducted by the pastor and Rev. R. H. Bamburg, of Louisiana. Mr. Bamburg is quite an interesting talker and his messages are soul-stirring and effective." Brother Searcy says that he has a very fine people to serve and that he is much pleased with the progress that his work is making.

From a column in The Panolian (Batesville, Miss.), conducted by Rev. E. H. Mohler, we take the following: "We had a splendid district conference at Hernando, spiritual and well attended. Brother Holder had planned, and planned well. His wise and patient hand was on the conference from beginning to end. * * * The work of the district was gone carefully over, and for the remaining months greater activities and more honest work was planned. In every heart there was a determination to achieve victory this Conference year."

Rev. H. M. Whaling, of the Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex., writes: "Major Ira H. Evans, of Austin Texas, a Congregationalist and descendant of the Pilgrim Fathers, has made a handsome donation to the Library of the School of Theology of the Southern Methodist University for the purchase of books dealing with the early history of New England. No study of American Christianity is complete without a thorough investigation of the influence of the Pilgrim Fathers and of the Puritans on the life of the American Republic. This gift is greatly appreciated."

Rev. F. L. Applewhite, of Sharon, Miss., writes as follows: "Mrs. M. P. Muse, who for many years has been a faithful worker in the Sharon Church, has been confined to her room by serious sickness the greater part of this year. Many Methodist preachers who have come this way and received her ministries in the past, will doubtless be interested to know this, and will unite with us in our supplications in behalf of this devoted servant of Christ." We pray that the blessings of the Heavenly Father may be vouchsafed to this stricken one, whose illness we regret to chronicle.

Rev. T. M. Bradley, of Cleveland, Miss., writes: "Bishop Murrah preached the Commencement sermon of the Agricultural High School here on May 13. His discourse was a masterpiece. We let the contract for a $20,000 Methodist church at this place last week. It will be a convenient and beautiful structure. Brother Curtis, our presiding elder, was here on May 6, and his sermons elicited much favorable comment. Indeed, his stirring messages aided me greatly in getting the new church enterprise started. He is the right man in the right place." We heartily congratulate Brother Bradley and his worthy flock upon this forward movement.

Through the courtesy of the presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Mitchell, we have received a copy of the program of the Durant District Conference, which will be held in Kosciusko, Miss., May 29-June 1. It is a most interesting order of exercises, and we dare say that the occasion will be a highly instructive and profitable one. In this day, when there are so many meetings, we have been forced to adopt the rule of not printing detailed programs, since what we do for one body, we have to for all Church gatherings if requested to do so. We are moved, however, to give the members of the following committees: On License to Preach and Admission into the Annual Conference—S. A. Brown, W. M. Langley, Chas. D. McGehee; Deacon's and Elder's Orders—C. P. Moss, B. P. Jaco, J. T. McCafferty. The presiding elder urges a full attendance.

GO-TO-SUNDAY-SCHOOL SUNDAY IN MERIDIAN, MISS.

A grand total of 6867 men, women and children attended Sunday school in Meridian last Sunday (Go-to-Sunday-School-Day) and the number, while under that of last year, is regarded as excellent, owing to unsettled conditions, change in weather and other adversities with which those at the head of the movement were not compelled to combat last year.

Total attendance last year was 7626, which was the greatest in the entire State, and while there is some disappointment as to the result of Go-to-Sunday-School-Day yesterday, superintendents were well pleased at the manner in which everybody turned out. A mark of 10,000 was set and worked for faithfully, and had it not been for the concerted efforts of workers, especially members of the men's federated Bible classes, the attendance Sunday, in all probability, would have been considerably less.

A great deal of interest centered about the Baraca classes of the Central Methodist and First Baptist churches, as these two organizations have always entered into a friendly contest on this day. The Central Methodist Baracas had an attendance of 377, against 273 at the First Baptist Church. Figures for Sunday's attendance were as follows:

Epworth League

NEW EPWORTH LEAGUE OFFICER.

By action of the Epworth League Board at its recent meeting in Dallas, Tex., Miss Phala Hawkins, of Charleston, Mo., was invited to the Junior Secretaryship made vacant by the resignation of Miss Trawick. It is announced by the General Secretary that Miss Hawkins has accepted the office, and will begin her work June 1.

Miss Hawkins is an accomplished young lady, the daughter of the Rev. C. M. Hawkins, of the St. Louis Conference, and a granddaughter of the late Dr. John Mathews, in his day without question the greatest pastor in Southern Methodism. It may be expected that Miss Hawkins' contribution to the work of the Central Office will be of great value.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The New Orleans Epworth League Conference, comprising the Leagues of the Methodist Churches, South, in the New Orleans Presiding Elder's District, including Covington, Bogalusa, Slidell, Plaquemine, Donaldsonville, etc., in addition to the city churches, will hold a district meeting at the Parker Memorial Church, this city, May 25 and 26, consisting of three sessions. On Friday night Mr. W. O. Hart will speak on "Patriotism and Love of the Flag," and Mr. W. H. Black, the District Lay Leader, will talk on Missions, especially in connection with Africa. On Saturday afternoon Rev. A. W. Turner, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Louisiana, will talk on "Prohibition." On Saturday night, Col. Fegley, of the Volunteers of America, will discuss Rescue Work, and Mr. J. D. Saint, State President of Epworth Leagues, will talk on League Work, emphasizing the work of the First Department.

The meeting will be opened with a communion service in charge of Rev. W. W. Holmes, the presiding elder. Each League and pastor in the city will have some part in the program and there will be an elaborate display of helps along all lines of League activity. The Christian Endeavor Societies of the city have been extended an invitation to attend the sessions, which has been accepted, and an exceptionally large attendance is expected.

L. R. BOCK,
President New Orleans Epworth League Conference.

HOSPITAL—HOI

Dear Brother Meek: Did you ever have an unexpected thing to happen to you? If not, I am ahead of you. I am in a hospital. I didn't mean to do it, but did it anyhow. I never expected to be a patient in one, but am now, nevertheless. It happened on this wise. Having grunted a good deal for several weeks, my physician concluded, I presume, that the best way out of trouble for him was to get me away, so he advised me to go to Allison's Wells for ten or twelve days. I promised him that I would go after the work of the second Sunday. Sunday school, two sermons, receiving five members by certificate, two members by vows, and administering two adult baptisms made out a busy Sunday yesterday.

This morning at 9:40 I boarded the G. & S. I. train en route for Allison's Wells. Having to wait about an hour and a half for the I. C. train, and feeling uncomfortable, I went to Dr. ———'s office. He asked me a whole lot of questions, which I answered promptly and candidly, and proceeded to ask him a few questions. He told me not to ask him "leading questions." That struck me as not altogether fair. I have always thought that "turn about is fair play."

The doctor said he proposed to examine me for about three days, so as to make a complete and good job of it, but that it would do no good if I would not promise to carry out every direction of his for the rest of my natural life. Now, Doctor, I am not a promising man. I am mighty careful about making promises. I hate awfully to break them. However, the doctor took me on faith, jumped me into a jitney, and rushed me to a hospital. The lady manager met me as I entered, having been notified that a very sick man was being sent, and with a great deal of tenderness got hold of my arm and was just about to assure me of her support while I ascended the stairway to my room, when I emphatically asseverated that I was not a decrepid invalid, and she immediately withdrew her support. I wanted it distinctly understood that my presence at the hospital was to settle a little controversy between Dr. ——— and myself. He thinks that I am a very sick man, and I want him convinced that I am not as sick as he thinks I am.

But the climax was capped, Doctor, when I was shown to my room, and my nurse asked me if I was able to undress myself. I was tempted to yell with laughter. The thing struck me as funny. Can you imagine anything more incongruous? It reminded me somewhat of the joke on me at Hattiesburg. In one of the Court Street homes there is a bright little girl, a little more than two years old. One Sunday morning, her mother, in coaching her for Sunday school, said, "Now, who was the first man God made?" The little one quickly answered, "Brer Adams."

This is my first night in a hospital, and the sensations are uniquely queer. I can't sleep a wink. I feel like I am in the wrong pew. I have already become familiar with all the chairs, curtains, curtain-poles, etc. It is a mighty nice room and everything is mighty comfortable, but I am persuaded that I wouldn't like to stay here indefinitely. They gave me a good supper, but the doctor informed me that the pabulum would be cut off abruptly, and that they would treat me tough. I told him that they had a tough patient to handle.

Doctor, I'll drop you a card later and tell you who was right about my being a very sick man, Dr. ——— or I.

Cordially,
T. W. ADAMS.

Protection Against Infection.

If you bruise, cut, or burn yourself or get a splinter in your flesh, do not neglect the wound just because it is slight. Many deaths from blood poison have resulted from neglecting just such slight wounds. For nearly a century Gray's Ointment has been used as a protection against such infection. You will find a box of this ointment in thousands of homes. It costs only 25c and will last indefinitely. You cannot afford to be without it. Get a box from your druggist to-day. For allaying pain and healing abrasions and eruptions of the skin, boils, sores, cuts, bruises, burns, etc., it has no equal. For a FREE sample write W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

Freckles

The fairer the skin the more ugly it is when marred by freckles; and they are not necessary at all. As soon as the warm sunshine or the hot winds bring them out, and with the natural embarrassment that every woman feels, get a package of Kintho; this is the easy way to remove them. If Kintho is used at the first sign of the ugly spots, they'll sometimes disappear overnight. Any druggist has or can get Kintho for you. Use Kintho soap too. It's astonishing how it helps keep the freckles away once Kintho has removed them.

Pays 25c a Month for Perfect Health

For 15 years, E. A. Little, Bessemer, Ala. has paid 25c a month to keep in perfect health. Read what he says:

"I desire to add my endorsement of Granger Liver Regulator. I have not used any other medicine for fifteen years. I know it is the best for all liver complaints, and will cure any case of indigestion known. When I first commenced to take your Granger Liver Regulator the Pegram-Patton Drug Co. was buying it by the dozen. Now I am told they buy it by the gross. I use one box each month and would not be without it for anything."

TWO GOOD REMEDIES

WORKING TOGETHER, PRODUCE MARVELLOUS RESULTS.

For instance, Hood's Sarsaparilla, the standard blood purifier, is recommended for conditions that are scrofulous or dependent on impure blood.

Peptiron Pills, the new iron tonic, are especially recommended for conditions that are radically or characteristically anemic and nervous.

Many persons suffer from a combination of these conditions. They are afflicted with swellings of the glands, bunches in the neck, cutaneous eruptions, and sores on different parts of the body, limbs and face, and are besides pale and nervous.

If these patients take both Hood's Sarsaparilla (before meals) and Peptiron Pills (after meals) they are reasonably sure to derive fourfold benefit. These two great medicines supplement each other, and the use of both, even in cases where only one may appear to be indicated, is of great advantage. Get them from your druggist.

IT SOUNDS LIKE SAM STEEL TO ME.

Dear Doctor Meek: I have just read in this week's Advocate the article headed "Et Tu Brute." No name is signed to it. I take it that the author was omitted by oversight. But I think I can detect its ear-marks. I see it is from Shreveport. That is "circumstantial evidence." But the "style" is what makes the proof "conclusive" to me. Who but Steel could sling the ink that way? Who but him could write so pungently? There is always a vein of humor, a streak of sarcasm, a wealth of reason, and a peculiar charm accompanying what Dr. Steel writes. In this article he tells the tale in this expression: "The Northern Church insists on Negro equality." That is a barrier which can not be passed over. No use in considering the "unity" question any further. For when we come to that point, as will always be done in discussing this subject, we have "reached the end of the limit," as Mrs. Katzenjammer would say. Let us thank Dr. Steel for this article.

COURT STREET REVIVAL.

Dear Doctor Meek: We closed our meeting at Court Street Church, Hattiesburg, on Sunday night, May 6. It continued 11 days. It was more than an ordinary protracted meeting—it was a revival. I am a poor hand at estimating the spiritual results of a meeting. The numbering of those who join the Church is an easy matter, but it is almost, if not quite, impossible to say how many were converted.

I was asked by one brother if I thought there were 75 conversions and reclamations. I answered at once "fully that many." Fifty-five were received, and eleven applied for membership who were not received, not being present on the occasion of the reception of members. Two of the latter number were baptized and received the following Sunday, and four came by certificate. Of the 55 who joined, only 6 were by certificate. Forty-nine assumed the vows, and of these 32 were baptized.

The preaching was done by Rev. J. A. Bowen and the music was led by Rev. J. S. Duke. Both the preaching and music greatly charmed all of our people. I have never seen or heard any preacher who looked after, in his preaching and work, every interest of the kingdom as did Brother Bowen. He lays himself out at his very best to strengthen the hands of the pastor. He helpfully touched and sprung every department of the work of the Church. He was sweet in spirit, and thoroughly religious in the pulpit and homes of the people. He won all of our hearts, particularly the parsonage family. He was the parsonage guest, and we shall remember always the pleasure and profit of his stay with us.

Brother Duke was not new to us, as he rendered us the same service last year. However, one of our strongest leaders remarked to me that he didn't preach and sing last year up to the level of this year.

I know of no brethren I would as soon have to conduct a spiritual movement in my charge as these two.

BACKACHE—KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Cut This Out—It Is Worth Money.

DON'T MISS THIS. Cut out this slip, enclose with 5c and mail it to Foley & Co., 2837 Sheffield Ave., Chicago, Ill., writing your name and address clearly. You will receive in return a trial package containing Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, for bronchial and la grippe coughs, colds and croup; Foley Kidney Pills, for lame back, weak kidneys, rheumatism, bladder troubles; and Foley Cathartic Tablets, a wholesome and thoroughly cleansing cathartic for constipation, biliousness, headache and sluggish bowels. You can try these three excellent remedies for only 5c.—Adv.

FROM HOUSTON, MISS.

Dear Advocate: A word from Houston Station. We have just closed a good meeting at Houston, which lasted 14 days. Brother T. W. Lewis was with us five days and did the preaching—the rest of the preaching was done by the pastor. There were 27 additions on profession of faith, and 2 by letter, making 41 this Conference year. The charge is in a good condition, and all departments of the work are moving on nicely. We have a fine body of men and many good women, and it is a real pleasure to serve this charge. The Sunday school is exceptionally good, being led by Brother P. W. Shell, the faithful and efficient superintendent. We also have a very good Epworth League composed of a fine class of young people. The Woman's Missionary Society is composed of many consecrated, good women.

The Young Ladies' Missionary Society is composed of some of the finest young ladies and girls in the land, and the Juvenile Missionary Society is very interesting and profitable to the children.

The mid-week prayer meeting is good, but not as largely attended as it should be. On the whole, we think the work is above the average, for which we thank God and take courage.

We will finish looking after the interests of the Advocate in the next few days.

PANAMA HATS HAND WOVEN

New Discovery Brings Costly Panama Within Reach of All.

New York, N. Y., Special.—It is now proven that the stylish Panama, up to now only worn by the best dressed people, can now be sold for $1.00. You don't have to be skeptical about the low price, as it gives service like the $5.00 and $10.00 kind, but not so fine a weave, and by this new discovery of weave one can hardly tell the difference. A Panama gives a man or woman distinction and at the same time comfort. Mr. Geo. J. Bungay, 28 South William Street, of New York City, is backing up his discovery by sending a real hand woven Panama, any size, trimmed, blocked, with silk band, to any one for $1.00 postpaid. Fitted with Russian leather sweat band 25c extra. Furthermore, his policy is that if you are not entirely satisfied he will return your money.—Adv.

No. 666

What is Anuric?

A harmless remedy that if taken before meals will carry off the uric acid lurking in the system. Most eminent physicians agree that rheumatism is caused by uric acid.

Send 10 cents with name of this paper, to Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., for a large sample package of Anuric. It will convince any one suffering from kidneys, bladder, backache, that it is many times more active than lithia, and dissolves uric acid in the system as hot water melts sugar; besides being absolutely harmless, it preserves the kidneys in a healthy state by thoroughly cleansing them. Anuric sweeps from the blood the uric acid which causes rheumatism, lumbago, gout, sciatica. Anuric is an insurance agent. Send now to Dr. Pierce, for free book on Diseases of Kidneys or any disease you ask for.

AT AN END—the "female complaints" and weaknesses that make woman's life a misery. They're relieved by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. For all the derangements, disorders, and diseases peculiar to the sex, this is the only remedy certain to benefit.

It's a legitimate medicine for woman, carefully adapted to her delicate organization, and never conflicting with any of her conditions. It regulates and promotes all the proper functions, builds up and invigorates the entire system, and restores health and strength.

Are you weak, nervous and ailing, or "run-down" and overworked? Then it will bring you special help. It's the mother's friend. It lessens pain and insures life of both mother and child.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has a record of years of cures. It is the most potent invigorating tonic and strengthening nervine known to medical science. It is made of the glyceric extracts of native medicinal roots found in our forests and contains not a drop of alcohol or harmful drugs. Sold in Tablet or Liquid form by dealers.

THE BILOXI WESLEY HOUSE.

Through the Eyes of a Visitor.

Will Carleton said:

"God bless the men and women of noble brain and heart
Who go down in the folk-swamps and take the children's part,"

and to even the most casual or disinterested visitor at the Wesley House, Biloxi, it is evident that "the children's part" is being taken daily by those noble souls, our deaconesses, who labor among the "folk swamps" of Point Cadet.

As one leaves the street car on the beach among the numberless oyster houses, small shops, and closely crowded tenements of the foreign population who live and work there, the first glimpse of the Wesley House is refreshing indeed. Nestling on the top of a little knoll, among large oaks and elms, and surrounded by a shady, restful green lawn, it is ideally situated for the purpose it fills. Nature had already done much for the spot, and loving care and tireless work on the part of those who are interested in this grand work, have made it a veritable haven of rest—as well as work—for the cosmopolitan community among which it stands. Although there is still room for vast improvement in house and premises, the money which has been expended has been wisely used, and with the addition of a second story in the last year or two, the work has been greatly facilitated and the value and appearance of the property greatly enhanced.

On a balmy day in early January, the writer went with a party of friends to spend the morning at the Wesley House, and observe the general work of its little household, and the kindergarten in regular session. We found thirty or more little fellows, of almost as many different nationalities it seemed, in the midst of songs and games directed by Miss Hasler at the piano and a visiting teacher from Biloxi. Their lusty, happy voices rang out through the open windows as we entered the room; and their bright faces told the story of constant and loving training by those who are giving their whole time and efforts to these little foreigners.

We could see that they were handicapped for room, for during the games which took them out of the ring, the little fellows could hardly move around among the desks and seats of the schoolroom proper; and a space twice the present size would hardly be large enough for the number of children who come every day to the morning kindergarten. But a most beautiful work is being accomplished there, in spite of such drawbacks, and the training would do credit to a similar department in any city school. There was hardly a dry eye among the visitors in the room when those little Austrians, Russians, and "Dagoes" (as we Christians style them) broke forth into singing "Old Time Religion" and "Happy on the Way" with all the earnestness and enthusiasm of a Methodist camp-meeting. This enthusiasm, even in tots like them, was not hard to understand when we glanced at the face of their leader at the piano.

Reluctantly we saw them finish their songs and games and dramatized stories, and file out in order after little hats and wraps had been sorted, and good-bye waved to their teachers.

The next feature was equally interesting; for we were carried into the Day Nursery where Mrs. Pettis and her dozen or more babies were getting ready for their noonday meal. Some little ones, less than a year old, were just waking from naps in the little white beds in one room, while those who could toddle around were having a good time out on the adjoining porch. They were happy and contented, while their mothers worked in the canneries all day; but there was no mistaking the twelve-o'clock look on their faces as the tempting smell of soup from the little kitchen was wafted out in the breeze. Soon they were seated around the low tables with a bowl of soup, a glass of milk, and good, big slice of bread with butter and jam in front of them; and little heads were bowed in thanks from grateful little lips.

We were genuinely surprised at the splendid work being done among the older girls of the sewing classes under the direction of Miss Leuth, as she took us upstairs and showed the piles of garments laid out on the table in the sewing room. Middy blouses, dresses, aprons and underwear which would do credit to the home science department of a much more fully equipped school were shown, besides piles of other work cut out for the class which met in the afternoon. Many of these girls of sixteen and seventeen are mothers themselves, with absolutely no previous training in cutting and sewing the plainest garments; and the inspiration they receive here goes back into their rude homes in better and more comfortable clothes for themselves and little ones.

Miss Hasler showed us her "Exchange Closet" in one corner of the hall, where she keeps all the clothes, shoes, hats and everything sent to the Wesley House which cannot be used for the children. These she readily sells to the men and women for very small amounts, just by way of letting them feel that they are paying for what they get, and are not objects of charity.

Next we were invited into her bedroom and office combined, made large and roomy by the addition of the extra story; and the order and neatness which prevailed here were in keeping with the rest of the house and with the character of the inmate. We were glad to see a well-stocked wardrobe of towels, bed linen, etc., in neat rows on the shelves; but there could hardly be a surplus of these articles, for besides those used in the house, a supply is kept for renting to those who have sickness in the family and are too poor to buy.

Our hearts were stirred within us when we heard that the wages of the men and women who work in the canneries, and whose families live eight and ten in one room, were ten cents a gallon for shucking oysters, and that in many cases five cents of this had to go back to their employers for railroad fare from northern points to Biloxi! Think of this, in these times of the high cost of living! Miss Hasler told us, with tears in her eyes, that they buy sugar by the cent's worth, and pay a day's wage for a little flour or meal. The settlement houses and the yards around them looked fairly clean and well-kept, thanks to the influence of these noble women, but the poverty of the people is appalling.

One could hardly conceive of a community more in need of this kind of work, where the men and women—and often children—work from four o'clock in the morning until after dark in the dirty oyster and shrimp sheds, and then go home to sleep in such crowded quarters. No wonder they look on the deaconesses as angels of mercy, for such they are, as they go in and out of these homes, ministering to the sick, encouraging the downhearted, and inspiring to efforts of cleanliness and better sanitation. The work in the school, day and night, and in the day nursery is but a part of their labors; for they are ready to be called in the middle of the night if need be for sickness or other emergency.

If one is indifferent to this branch of our missionary work being carried on by the Council, through its faithful representatives, or if ignorant of the nature and need of the work in general, one needs only to go and spend part of a day watching the labors of the deaconesses as they minister to these needy ones of the Kingdom, to be convinced of its value. The result is sure to be a brighter and broader vision of what the Master meant when He said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto Me."

To Drive Out Malaria And Build Up The System

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS chill TONIC. You know what you are taking, as the formula is printed on every label, showing it is Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form. The Quinine drives out malaria, the Iron builds up the system. 50c.—Adv.

You want to be true, and you are trying to be. Learn these two things: Never be discouraged because good things get on slowly here, and never to fail daily to do that good which lies next your hand. YOUNG WOMEN MAY AVOID PAIN

Need Only Trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, says Mrs. Kurtzweg.

Buffalo, N.Y.—"My daughter, whose picture is herewith, was much troubled with pains in her back and sides every month and they would sometimes be so bad that it would seem like acute inflammation of some organ. She read your advertisement in the newspapers and tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She praises it highly as she has been relieved of all these pains by its use. All mothers should know of this remedy, and all young girls who suffer should try it."—Mrs. MATILDA KURTZWEG, 529 High St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Young women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this root and herb remedy.

If you know of any young woman who is sick and needs helpful advice, ask her to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Only women will receive her letter, and it will be held in strictest confidence.

From the Field

Sulphur and Vinton Charge, La. Conf.

We have just closed a very successful meeting at Vinton, where Brother M. Hebert did the preaching, and in his usual way, he presented the truth of the gospel in such a manner that it took hold of the hearts of men and women, causing the Christian people to realize their duty more fully, and the sinner to stop and think on his ways. There was a deep interest manifested from beginning to end, and at the close we received 17 into the Church, all of them on profession of faith. Twelve persons were baptized.

The preaching of Brother Hebert was of such a high order that he was unanimously chosen by the graduating class here, composed of Methodists, Baptists, and Catholics, to preach the Bacalaureate Sermon. The service will be held in the Methodist church on the fourth Sunday of this month.

The presiding elder, Brother May, came to us Sunday, and preached both in the morning and evening to large and attentive congregations, and, as our local editor said, it was a red-letter day for our Church. His visit was a blessing to our community, and we shall expect great things at each visit that he makes over here. The quarterly conference was held in the afternoon, and the elder complimented our people on the splendid report that was made. For instance, the pastor's salary was overpaid. We are serving a loyal people, and there is a tone of spirituality that makes glad the heart of him who serves them. Pray that we may measure up to our responsibility.—L. Hoffpauir, P. C.

McDonoghville, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: The work done by Rev. H. T. Young in our revival meeting held in March has proven to be lasting. At the close of the meeting the outcome seemed small, only 2 joining the Church as a result of the meeting; but a number accepted Christ, and many more received a larger vision of the Christian life and their duty as Christians. Brother Young believes the Gospel and preaches it with power and without fear. His sermons were very instructive and helpful to the Church. As a result of the meeting, the attendance at both the 11 o'clock service on Sunday morning and the prayer meeting Wednesday evening has greatly increased. Brother Young won a warm place in the hearts of the people. They want him to come again. He is in a position to do a great work for our Church and the Lord, and no pastor will make a mistake in securing his help in revival work. We have a very loyal congregation, which is a great inspiration to any pastor, as he feels that he has a force with him that he can depend on when the testing time comes. The pastor and his family are being well cared for. Just this evening the congregation came in a body to the parsonage, each one bringing something in the line of groceries, this being the time set by Dr. Coale for the city pastors to receive a pounding; but as McDonoghville is outside of the city, this pastor did not think the announcement of Dr. Coale applied to him. Any way, we appreciate the loyal spirit of our people. When it comes to doing things for the advancement of the Church work, the McDonoghville people take their place in the lead.—W. A. Mangum, P. C.

Coarse Hair

doesn't become you and it is as unruly as it is unbecoming. The hair should be soft and light and should hold its original luster when it is healthy. The quickest and surest way to deprive the hair of its original luster is to leave it alone to look out for itself. Each separate hair is an individual delicate structure in itself and every hair on your head, in order to contribute its share of beauty should be perfectly fed with the natural hair oil, which comprises its food. Starve your hair and, like anything else, it will die. Feed your hair with nature's hair food, "La Creole." This excellent hair food, first discovered by the Creoles of Louisiana fifty years ago and preserved by them, proved a treatment from which sprang their reputation for beautiful hair. It has since been offered the public and has served to beautify the hair of thousands of the tasteful and fastidious.

Strength comes from well digested and thoroughly assimilated food. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the digestive organs, and thus builds up the strength. If you are getting "run down," begin taking Hood's at once. It gives nerve, mental and digestive strength.

FROM BROTHER BAMBURG.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have just gotten home from a trip to the West Texas Conference, where I assisted Rev. A. C. Searcy in a meeting at Mullin, Texas. Mullin is a nice little town on the Santa Fe Railroad, surrounded with high hills and small mountains. The scenery is great, especially to one from the Louisiana Delta. The air is light and refreshing. Brother Searcy has a really nice people to serve, and he and his wife are doing a great work, and are in high favor with their flock.

Mullin has a population of about 1500—all white. It is one of the cleanest towns that it has been my privilege to see. The Baptists seem to be the stronger there, but we have a good church, a good Sunday school, and an excellent board of stewards.

Doctor, it is a mistaken idea that the people of Texas have horns—instead they have hospitality and church loyalty; and some of them have religion. Well, I like the people of Texas. This man was born there.

There are a number of German people in that part of Texas, and they seem to be loyal to the United States. They are industrious, contented, and happy.

Doctor, if the world is as big in the other directions as it is West, it is certainly a whopper.

Mangham, La. R. H. BAMBURG.

STOP! CALOMEL IS QUICKSILVER!

It's mercury! Attacks the bones, salivates and makes you sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when 50 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and does not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

The following press dispatch was sent out from the University of Mississippi on May 12: "The University Faculty, at a meeting held yesterday, unanimously voted to dispense with the formal Commencement exercises. With the largest finishing class in the history of the institution—140—it was planned some time ago to have a great homecoming of the Alumni to celebrate with the class the prosperity attending the University; but when war was declared all these plans were changed. More than 150 students, including a great number of Seniors, are now in training camps or on farms preparing to do their part. It is the opinion of the Faculty and of the student body that the young men who are ready to make a supreme sacrifice for their country can best be honored by foregoing the festivities attendant upon a Commencement occasion. The diplomas will be mailed to the members of the Senior Class immediately after the examinations."

SEWARD'S FOLLY.

It is fifty years ago since Alaska was purchased from Russia, at a cost of $7,200,000, which equaled two cents an acre. This purchase was sneeringly called "Seward's Folly." Now Secretary of the Interior Lane has issued a statement showing just what this piece of "folly" has returned to the United States. In a half-century, Alaska has yielded $750,000,000, and its wealth in minerals, such as coal, gold, copper and others, has barely been touched. Its forests, its fisheries, its fur-bearing animals, all will yield increasingly valuable supplies. Seward's Folly was, after all, one of the wisest things to which Uncle Sam has ever given consent.—The Presbyterian.

WHY THE PASTOR NEEDS A GOOD SALARY.

The demands on a minister's purse are legion. He must dress well; he must keep up with the literary and the social world; he can not, because of public sentiment, engage in common tasks which would often save expense; he must entertain and lead in many forms of benevolent offerings and charity work. All this costs. As a pastor's wife recently said: "It is hard for the membership to appreciate the demands made on a pastor's purse. In our family, all of us contribute to the church expenses and the benevolences, Sabbath school, young people's society, and two or three of us contribute to all the other organizations of the church—in this day and generation their name is legion. If there is a special collection or a public subscription, the pastor leads, or is among the first to be called upon. The pastor knows almost better than anyone else that "the poor we have always with us." A man of large experience in the financial world recently said: "I take off my hat to the pastor as a financier; he can make $1000 go further and accomplish more than any man in America." In these days of advancing prices and higher cost of everything, it will be quite timely for church people to consider the question of voluntarily seeing to it that there is about 25 per cent advance in the cost of religion in favor of the salary of their pastor.—The Lutheran.

THE PLACE OF VAST OPPORTUNITY.

"There is a place where thou canst touch the eyes
Of blinded men to instant, perfect sight;
There is a place where thou canst say 'Arise'
To dying captives, bound in chains of night;
There is a place where thou canst search the store
Of hoarded gold and free it for the Lord;
There is a place—upon some distant shore—
Where thou canst send the worker or the Word.
Where is that blessed place, dost thou ask,
'Where?'
O soul, it is the secret place of prayer."

Editorial

"Christ leads us through no darker room
Than he went through before."

* * *

He must feed constantly on Christ who would be able to feed others on him.

* * *

The whole way to God, to high spiritual attainments, and to heaven is along the path of sincerity.

* * *

There are resources enough within the reach of every human being for him to fashion a good character and win a fadeless crown. God's best opportunities are withheld from none.

* * *

There is such a thing as "fool's gold" in the spiritual realm, and Satan deceives many with it. Meretricious success is the snare with which he often defeats the achievement of true success. He has ever been an artful dealer in counterfeits.

* * *

The following is from Bishop Berry: "'I never jump at conclusions,' said the preacher. 'No,' remarked the elderly member of the congregation, who is very frank, 'I have noticed from your sermons that you reach a conclusion very slowly.'"

* * *

A true and deep piety is any minister's best asset. If that be lacking, whatever may be his gifts and attainments, he is in the wrong calling. Doubtless there are plenty of Greek and Hebrew scholars and skilled metaphysicians in the land where chilling winds never blow.

* * *

It was by men who trumpeted abroad the claim that they were the evangels of progress in thought and learning that Germany was led into her present ruinous plight, and the same alluring tune is now being piped by not a few imitators of the German theologians in the United States. It is for a lack of simple, Scriptural Christianity, faithfully lived and taught, that the world is to-day suffering.

* * *

The following words of Mr. Balfour, the head of the English War Commission to this country, are worth carefully noting at this time when there is talk of having our Nation to commit itself to various kinds of compacts with the Old World powers after the present conflict is over: "I am told that there are some doubting critics who seem to think that the object of the Commissions from France and Great Britain is to inveigle the United States out of its traditional policy and to entangle it in a formal alliance, secret or public, with European powers. I cannot imagine any rumor with less foundation, nor can I imagine any policy so utterly unnecessary." Since she has entered the present war, we hope to see our country nobly do her duty toward bringing it to a speedy and successful termination, but we lack much of being convinced that she should break away from the Monroe Doctrine and become permanently involved in the stormy politics of the Eastern Hemisphere.

THE IMPORTANCE OF CONGREGATIONAL SINGING.

Though a good deal is said about the importance of congregational singing—perhaps not so much now as formerly—it is doubtful whether its true significance and value are fully appreciated by many. It is a well known fact, frequently commented upon, that the great spiritual movements of the world have been signalized by impressive outbursts of sacred song; and when a revival is under way in any church the singing of the people is certain to be strikingly influenced by it. The pastor who permits a choir or any small group of persons to monopolize this indispensable function of public worship exhibits poor generalship as a leader and makes a serious and costly mistake. In looking over the volume, "Music in the Church," the Hale Lectures of the Western Theological Seminary (Protestant Episcopal), by Peter Christian Lutkin, a short time since, rather to our surprise we came across the following sound utterance which bears pertinently on this subject:

"Hymn singing is essentially and fundamentally a congregational function. It is equally deplorable whether this function be taken over by a trained choir, or whether through general apathy or indifference it degenerates into a lifeless and listless practice. Nothing is more inspiring than good, hearty congregational singing, nothing attracts and holds people so effectually, and nothing creates in so large a measure religious zeal and fervor. The hymn singing of a congregation is almost an unfailing barometer of its spiritual condition. Good hymn singing is a sure indication of a wide-awake and energetic parish, while, on the contrary, poor hymn singing is an index of spiritual indifference and stagnation. With such a powerful agency at hand for the promotion of genuine religious feeling and enthusiasm, it is singular that hymn singing is not assiduously and systematically cultivated."

BISHOP GALLOWAY PLACED FIRST.

"H. G. H.," writing in a recent issue of the Texas Christian Advocate of an Annual Conference held in Seguin, Texas, a number of years ago, says:

"An audience in Seguin has heard Pierce, Kavanaugh, Doggett, Hurst, Bowman, Fowler, Marvin, McTyeire, Key, Parker, Duncan, and Ward, but Galloway thrilled their hearts as no other man has ever done."

Bishop Galloway was undoubtedly one of the greatest orators that the South has produced. His impassioned oratory when he was from 35 to 45 years old was well-nigh irresistible. We recently heard Mr. Bryan speak on the subject of prohibition, and while listening to him we could not but think of how far short of Bishop Galloway's brilliant utterances on that subject his address was. To hear Bishop Galloway on that theme on some great occasion was to be lifted to lofty heights and given an impression that one could never forget. In his new History of Methodism, Dr. DuBose, who was a warm, personal friend of Bishop Galloway, and who pays him therein a beautiful tribute, says: "His voice matched well his frame and his eye, and, though not of unusual compass, both its undertones and full notes were extraordinarily musical and persuasive." We cannot agree to the statement that Bishop Galloway's voice was not of "unusual compass." We were present at the dedication of the beautiful new Capitol of Mississippi, on which occasion he was one of the two principal orators. It was a rainy day and the vast throng in attendance was forced into the new building, the floors of which are tiling and in the center of which there is a circular open space from the first floor to the golden dome that crowns the magnificent structure. The exercises were conducted on the second floor, facing this open space, and when Bishop Galloway spoke his eloquent voice rang through the long corridors and held the standing thousands entranced and perfectly quiet, except when they broke forth into enthusiastic applause. The other speakers, though some of them were gifted in public utterance, could scarcely be heard at all, and when they were holding forth there was confusion everywhere. We doubt when he was in his physical prime if Bishop Galloway ever faced an audience, no matter how large, over which he could not make himself heard with comparative ease.

BISHOP MORRISON'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

This is a volume of 256 pages, neatly printed and bound, having been issued by the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It was brought out under the superintendence of Rev. George H. Means, D. D., of Kentucky. It has as a frontispiece an excellent picture of the well known author, and the dedication reads as follows: "TO MY DEVOTED WIFE, who has shared my labors for half a century and who has been my severest critic, and therefore my greatest help in my ministry, this volume is affectionately inscribed." The first nine chapters are devoted to the many-sided life of Bishop Morrison, the various phases of which are set forth in a simple, but very interesting and entertaining manner. Chapter IX, entitled "The Episcopacy," contains a concise but candid account of some of the writer's experiences as one of the General Superintendents of the Church. It refers specifically to what took place during the General Conference at Asheville, N. C., in 1910, and gives the able discussion pertaining thereto from the pen of Dr. Means, which subsequently was written for the Church press. The last hundred pages of the book are made up of "Gospel Talks," a series of bright and suggestive short sermons by the Bishop.

We are glad that Bishop Morrison has found time to give us this story of his life and these stimulating Scriptural messages, which we feel sure will be welcomed by many throughout the Church. There is not a dull page in the volume; the attention is at once gripped, and is tenaciously held as the narrative progresses. It is wholesome, heartening, and strengthening in its influence. We wish for it a wide circulation. The price is $1, and it may be had of Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., Richmond, Va., or Dallas, Tex.

THE ABIDING ROCK.

"There's naught on earth that does not change;
All things are shifting on the stream;
Whatever comes within our range seems
Just as fleeting as a dream.
There is no rest but in thy Word,
No settled hope but in thy Name;
Root thou our souls in thee, O Lord,
For thou art evermore the same."

THE WAY TO WIN.

"A Church which does not go out, in the spirit of the Master, to save the lost cannot become a spiritual power. It may win the applause of a few easy-going conventional souls, but it will never gain even the respect of the masses, who will wander farther and farther away from the things of God."

THE GREAT PROOF.

When old Samuel Wesley lay dying in 1735 he turned to his illustrious son John, saying: "The inward witness, son, the inward witness! That is the proof, the strongest proof of Christianity!" It is ever true. The strongest proof of the resurrection is the risen life we live in Christ.—New York Christian Advocate.

THE BEST SUSTAINING POWER.

Fellowship with Jesus Christ is the best possible means of preventing depression, discouragement or worry. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength." When a man's mind and heart are full of faith he is in a healthy condition. It is a matter of common observation that despair and suicide prevail more among the utterly irreligious and the infidel than among those who with all their short-comings still have trust in Christ.—Presbyterian Journal.

MAKE ME A HELPER.

Son of Man, let me join the league of pity. Let me take the place of the angels in the ministry of human souls. I have borne the heat and burden of the day; I have been tried in the furnace of pain. I have trod the dusty plain, I have descended the deep valley. I have climbed the arduous steep. I know the path of the weary, I can guide where the celestials never go. Make me a helper in Thy ministrant band.—G. Matheson.

HOLINESS NOT ALL SWEETNESS.

Sometimes when holy men are urged to do things of a doubtful character they are found to be very stubborn for the right. This quality of character is likely to make the person who wants them to join in questionable things very uncomfortable. The next step is to discourse on the sweetness and affability of real holiness, and follow this by accusations against the professor of holiness who will not yield the point and do doubtful things. The fact in every such case is that holiness is not entirely sweetness. There are other elements in it, or it would not be worth anything. There is backbone in it, strength of character and tenacity of purpose in it, vigorous opposition to sin and to all questionable things in it. The flabby or soft character which never differs from any one is not the holy man or woman. Holiness would do a mighty work of improvement for such soft and worthless persons.—Central Christian Advocate.

LITTLE DEEDS.

Little deeds of kindness
All along the way,
Mark the shining pathway
To the perfect day.
Little deeds of kindness,
Little duties done,
Will make a mighty showing
In the world to come.

—Mary Everly.

PAINE COLLEGE FOR NEGROES.

Paine College, at Augusta, Ga., is the only school owned and operated by the M. E. Church, South, for the training of Negro teachers and preachers. Besides, it gives courses in farming, gardening, cooking, sewing, laundering, etc. It has been in operation thirty-three years, and has sent out in round numbers 500 graduates. These are exemplary citizens wherever they live. They are never involved in inter-racial troubles, court scrapes, and the like. They fill acceptably all the walks open to them, from the gospel ministry to the cook pot. No money spent to redeem a race at home or abroad has ever gone so far or done so much in the achievement of its end. The graduates of this institution have been, in many instances, leaders of their race. One, Rev. R. A. Carter, is a Bishop of the C. M. E. Church. Another, Rev. C. H. Tobias, is one of the International Y. M. C. A. Secretaries. Another accompanied Bishop Lambuth on the pioneering trip into Congo, Africa, to establish the Mission at Wembo-Niami. Many others are filling, or have filled, several general offices in the C. M. E. Church, not to mention scores of leading preachers, pastors, and teachers throughout the connection. More than 50 are now studying for the ministry, and some are preparing for the work in Africa. Two of our graduates are missionaries in English missions in South Africa. They graduated and returned before our Mission at Wembo-Niami was opened. The women graduates are engaged in all sorts of honorable work suited to their sex and are the makers of some of the purest homes in the land and mothers of some of the best children in their respective communities.

But this great work for my race is on the verge of ceasing altogether for the lack of $15,000 wherewith to meet its indebtedness. I do not believe that the great M. E. Church, South, will let this, the only school it has for Negroes, a school second to none in the results of its labors for a lowly people, go out of existence because of its need of only $15,000. If so, my faith in our parent Church, which used to give $100,000 per year before the Civil War for the maintenance of "Missions to the Slaves," has been misplaced. I refuse to believe it. I feel that if the Church knew our condition it would come readily to our rescue. Hence, I am making a canvass, asking that any individual, church, Sunday school or missionary society, send at once any sum, however small it may be, to keep life in a worthy institution. It would be a sad reflection upon the white Southern Church, as it seems to me, to abandon this great work, which was born of such Christian saints as William Capers, Atticus G. Haygood, Morgan Calloway, George Williams Walker, Moses U. Paine, and very many others. We colored people have ever counted it our good fortune to have those who were once our masters and their descendants show the operation of the grace of God upon their hearts by helping this needy, lowly race to a knowledge of God and the true life. But what has seemed our good fortune becomes our misfortune and operates against us to our grave hurt when our boasted school must fail because of the lack of a little money wherewith to conduct it. Our good fortune (that of being a product of Southern white Christians) operates against us when we ask, as we have often done, Northern whites to help us. They tell us to let the Southern white Christians help us, that the Northern whites have many Negro institutions throughout the land to support, etc.

Now, as Commissioner of Paine College, elected by the Board of Trustees and endorsed by the College of Bishops of the M. E. Church, South, I make this appeal. God grant that it may not find an unresponsive heart. I, who was the first one to matriculate in Paine thirty-three years ago, still have faith. Yours most fraternally,

UNITARIAN DOGMATISM.

Recently, Dr. Charles W. Eliot has given himself to creed-making, and this in the face of the cry of liberalism against creeds and against definitions. His creed begins: "We believe in a living God who inspires and vivifies the Universe." It closes with this intense dogmatism: "We believe that mankind would get along better than they do now, if it were positively known that the heaven of Revelation had been burnt and hell quenched." This is "the full corn in the ear" of Unitarianism and liberalism, and it is well to see the nature of the crop in its full growth. Thus it appears that full-fledged Unitarianism as set forth by this representative scholar and man of culture, with one fell sweep strikes out all immortality, destroys all hope, and takes away all sense of final accountability, and thus returns to the barren desert of heathenism—"Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow you die." Every man who turns away from the infallible revelation of God sets his face toward this awful conclusion. It is only a matter of drift and degree, unless there be an absolute conversion, an about-face. The man who says he believes all the evangelical facts, but they can either be ignored or regarded as subsidiary, joins this company, and is rushing toward the precipice beyond which there is no stop, save at the lowest bottom. Utterances like Dr. Eliot's which have been spread over all the nation warn Christian people to the effect that they must stand, and stand by their testimony, in order to save themselves and others.—The Presbyterian.

THE BISHOPS' MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH.

(No copy of this address was sent us. We are late in publishing it, and the time designated as a day of prayer has passed, but we think the general matters touched upon therein merit attention.—Editor of Advocate.)

To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Dear Brethren:

Moved by the sore distress which has come into our own land, as it has come into all the earth, we, your brethren in Christ and chief pastors, set to watch over the souls of those for whom we must give an account, address to you a message of admonition and exhortation, and we trust you will receive our words in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ whom we endeavor to serve with unfeigned faith and love.

With you we give ceaseless thanks unto God for the great grace with which He has at all times and in manifold ways blessed our Church. By many infallible signs He has set His seal upon the faith and labors of our fathers and upon our labors even until this day. Truly He has been pleased to make us a great people who were not a people, and we call on all our people to join with us in giving unto Him continual thanks for His marvelous mercies unto us and to our nation. With true repentance we make confession unto God of all our misdoings, out of our hearts acknowledging that we have been too prone to indulge a sense of self-sufficiency, not looking unto Him as the only giver of good gifts.

We are happy when we recall the record of our own Church in all the strains and burdens which hitherto have come to our nation. In every instance our people have illustrated patriotic devotion and faithful service to their country, and now that we are forced into war with a foreign nation we feel certain that they will follow the heroic example of their fathers.

Americans had vainly hoped that wars had ceased in the earth, but against all the efforts of our rulers we have been driven to take up arms. Out of the homes of our own people many sons will go into the military service of their country, and we have good hope that they will do well their duty to the nation. We exhort all our ministers and people that continual prayers be made unto God in behalf of these young soldiers and seamen, as for all their companions in service, that their faith in the Lord Jesus Christ fail not amid the temptations of the camp and perils of the field, and the dangers of the deep. And likewise we commend to the earnest prayers of the Church the homes out of which these sons may go forth to the service of their country.

While it becomes us as Christian citizens to obey loyally our rulers, and render our service in the physical preparation for warfare, we wish to remind you that upon the Church of Christ rests the supreme duty of leadership in making that religious preparation without which no people is fitted for the ordeal of war. Some trust in horses and some trust in chariots, but our trust must be in the Lord our God. Yet there are many unmistakable proofs that our age is weakened by widespread worldliness and the unrestrained lusts of the flesh. Material prosperity and ease, we fear, have silenced the voice of God in the consciences of men and made them forgetful of God. The Holy Scriptures and the universal experience of mankind show that the sin of forgetting God has brought upon such sinning nations divine judgment.

Again we exhort you to labor with all diligence and prayer to bring not only our own people, but all the people of the land, into the knowledge and reverent fear of God. We insist with all possible urgency that this is the supreme need of our nation at all times, whether in seasons of ease and prosperity, or in times of distress and warfare; and we call upon all our people to join us in constant and prayerful efforts to turn the thoughts of all men unto God. Let our people turn away from frivolity and worldliness and ungodliness, and let them live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. Let all our homes become scenes of devout worship, fervent prayer and simple living; and let them be adorned with holiness that God may have mercy upon us and abundantly pardon us.

We remind you that a sound and vigorous faith in God is the one vital necessity in personal and national life; and that when it decays, every other force in a civilization must degenerate, and hence, all the virtues which give solidity, strength, and steadfastness to individual and national character have their beginning in that type of evangelical faith which establishes a real and intimate fellowship with God. Nations are strongest when their faith in God is soundest.

Let us not forget that patriotism is not a political passion or a passing enthusiasm, but a virtue which grows out of a holy fear of God and a living faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. Israel was strongest when David was on its throne and Nathan was the prophetic guide of the nation. When in captivity the remembrance of Mount Zion was the soul of their devotion to their deserted land.

As shepherds of the flock of Christ, we should exert ourselves with all faithfulness and diligence to preach the Word of God in all plainness and sincerity, setting aside the vain philosophies of men and the empty wisdom of the world, and showing ourselves in all things true ensamples of faith and consecration.

We would remind you further that during a time of war, morality and religion decline more rapidly than at any other time. In such a day vice becomes bold, and shameless; men and even women become degraded; the weak are overthrown and some of the strong are led astray. Let us therefore strive more earnestly, pray more importunately, warn more lovingly, yet more faithfully against drunkenness, gambling, licentiousness, and the whole black brood of sins which so often in the history of mankind have dishonored nations and defeated armies. Let us keep before our people and all our fellow-countrymen those wise words of our Revolutionary fathers which were written in our fundamental laws and which are still retained therein: "No free Government, nor the blessings of liberty, can be maintained by any people but by a firm adherence to justice, moderation, temperance, frugality and virtue, and by a frequent recurrence to fundamental principles." Let us keep our hearts free from hate; for hate blinds intellect, hardens sensibility, and deflects the will from paths of righteousness. Let us deal firmly but kindly, lovingly and unsuspiciously, with the multitudes of our fellow-Christians and fellow-citizens of foreign birth and descent. They should receive our sympathy and our brotherly kindness in this trying hour; for their hearts are torn by the woes that have fallen on their friends and kindred in other lands. Hate and passion do not inspire courage, but they nourish weakness and cowardice. In this dreadful war, our country can be victorious, our liberties can be defended, our civilization can be preserved, and our Christianity can be promoted only by the maintenance of the highest Christian manhood, whose crushing hand is reserved for all that is wrong, while its healing touch is given to those who are sorely wounded in spirit. Let us leave in our hearts no smallest place for unholy bitterness which would plague us at the end. Let an astonished world look upon a people whose courage rises above calamity, coming off from the conflict conquerors but without the smallest loss in Christian character.

For these reasons, as your chief pastors, we earnestly request our ministeres and people to observe as a season of special prayer unto God, May 27. On that day let us make special and frequent supplication for the President and all associated with him in the Government and for all public servants of every relation and degree that God may guide them with His unerring counsel in these days of perplexity and anxiety. At that time let us also examine our own hearts whether we be in the faith. May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost be with you, and love be with you all in Christ Jesus.

A BEAUTIFUL EARTHLY LIFE ENDED.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bryan Hocutt was born in St. Landry Parish, La., in 1855, and died at Biloxi, Miss., in 1917—a few weeks ago. In early childhood the family moved to Baton Rouge, where Mrs. Hocutt attended Miss Reed's school for young ladies, graduating from that institution at the age of 18.

Mrs. Hocutt was always a great worker in the Master's vineyard. At the early age of 10 years she united with the Church, and when only 7 or 8 years old she would visit the sick, carrying them flowers or some dainty token of her tender sympathy. As soon as she could read, she would call regularly upon a number of old ladies who enjoyed hearing her read the Scriptures, or the sweet, childish voice praying to the Father. She seems to have belonged to his kingdom always; and had no recollection of her conversation.

She came early in life for many years to the Seashore Campground. It was here that she first met her husband, whom she helped through the forty years of his faithful ministry. Though she had no children of her own, she mothered and loved all children. They ever found in her a true friend. In fact, her large pockets were as endless as her generous heart, and always held something for the children.

For fifteen years Mrs. Hocutt lived near the campground—a place she dearly loved. During those fifteen years, no family ever came to the grounds that she did not speak with them, visit them, and take them flowers. She loved flowers, and no service was ever held at the tabernacle that she did not bring some to the church of God. In fact, we seldom saw her that she was not carrying flowers to some one to help brighten life. None of us who live on the campground ever think of her without thinking also of beautiful flowers. We called her "Our Lady of Flowers."

Many good deeds were strewn along the pathway of her life. She was never known to fail in her duty. She organized the Campground Woman's Missionary Society, and was a great worker in the Ladies' Aid, and also the missionary society of her church in Biloxi. Every summer she gathered the little folks of the campground together and had Sunday school. Hers was an active, busy life, full of noble self-sacrifice, good deeds, and lasting achievements.

She leaves a brother, Mr. W. Robert Bryan, of Nashville, Tenn., and her devoted husband, Rev. F. C. Hocutt, who, with other relatives, and many, many friends, will sadly miss her.

Our friend dear has gone to a far, far country,
But her message ever will come back to me;
Whenever a neighbor needs another's tender care,
Her messages whisper, "Take my place, my place, there."
Yes, she has left us—her own mission complete,
For she has taught us we can make life very sweet.

Think you of her and not think of love?
Hers reached out like the Father's above,
Seeking, ever seeking for something to do
That would cause you to love her Father, too.
And should a soul from sin turn away
And come to you for help to-day,

Her message would come silently through the air:
"Here in my place plead with God in prayer."
Weary travelers, finding the way too long,
A soft message says, "For me sing a song.
Were you here and I there I'd sing one for you.
Ah, friend, it's not much for some one to do."

To-day tired eyes may need a long rest;
Her message comes with a thought that's blest:
"Be eyes and read in my place to-day,
Then they'll forget I am so far away."
And so I am reminded thro' the sunshine hours
Of something to do for "Our Lady of Flowers."

CHURCH SCHOOLS AND SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D. D.

In the May number of the Bulletin of the Board of Education of our Church, I find a most excellent and suggestive article by W. E. Hogan in which, under several heads, he presents the need of the Church college. Paragraph 9 emphasizes the study of the Bible and says, "Much is now being said and written about Bible study and courses in religious education having a more important place in our schools and colleges." That such has not always been the case with our Church schools has seemed almost a contradiction to me, for, as the writer says further on, it has been clearly apparent that the State schools can not and have not given this branch of training the place it should have, and only the denominational college can avert this peril; therefore says the writer, "Not for sake of tradition and sentiment, but to meet a definite present need, must our Church colleges be maintained."

It is a fact greatly to be deplored that the State institutions give emphasis to the intellectual and utilitarian above the spiritual in education. The bread and butter question must be answered, but it remains ever true that "Man does not live by bread alone." From the county high schools to the universities of this day, we have the specialists for music, expression, and domestic science, and farm instructors, but where do we find the instructor for Bible study or more efficiency in the Sunday school work? For lack of funds the Sunday school can not keep pace with these departments of education, but in the matter of importance it occupies first place—being the chief corner-stone in character building. There seems to be a shrinking from the idea that because a college is denominational, it must, therefore, be sectarian; and, while I would deplore as much as any one the pressing of sectarian teachings in the narrow conception of the term, I fail to see why a school should not stand squarely for the tenets of the Church from which it seeks its support and patronage.

In the face of the present day custom of letting the children go home after the session of the Sunday school, thereby depriving them of the teaching that comes from the study of the Bible by the ministry, it is, at least to this pastor, a question of vital importance as to who shall teach our children the great truths of Christianity, and how far they are capacitated for this most important work?

On my desk is a slip headed, "Pointed Questions," in which, under the division, "What of the Teachers of the Future?" I find the following:

1. Are the teachers of the Sunday school being selected with care, such as becomes so IMPORTANT an office and ministry in the Church? To this my answer, after much thought, must be, "No, for lack of material."

"2. Are they being selected in advance and given the preparation that they ought to have before entering upon their work?" Again, I must answer in the negative, because of inadequate provision for preparation.

"3. Is the Sunday school policy in the selection and training of teachers adequate to insure a sufficient number of prepared teachers for the future work of the school?" To this I must give like answer, in the negative, because I do not believe that the teacher-training classes can meet the demand, be they ever so faithful.

Then what must be done? Let every institution of learning under the control of the Church put into its curriculum a course of Bible Study of equal units with other branches, and impress the pupils that their preparation is to fit them for Church work in the Sunday school.

At the recent Commencement of Port Gibson College, it was my pleasure to give a medal to some member of every college class for proficiency in Bible Study during the session, which I verily believe will mean more than any other study in the years to come as a preparation for greater usefulness.

DR. BLAKE'S PROPOSED REGIONAL CONFERENCES IN THE UNIFICATION OF METHODISM.

By Judge E. V. Hughston.

From the recent contributions to the Church papers on the question of unification, there appears to be a general impression that the greatest and almost sole difficulty in the way of agreement is the Negro question. Almost all of the communications have treated of some phase of the relation the Negro should bear to the unified Church, whether he should be organized into a separate Church, or retained in the Church either with full or limited representation in the General Conference and on the General Board of the Church. The General Conference of the Southern Church has spoken its views on this question, and this view is an expression of the entire Church, whose membership would be unwilling to enter into any agreement as to union until the Negro is eliminated.

While the foregoing is a great problem, and one that will be difficult of solution, the attitude of the two sections of the country being so diametrically opposed on it, it is not the only question involved—in fact, it is not the one most difficult of solution, since it is not basic, but dependent on a deeper cause for its foundation, and before this or any other problem can be solved it is necessary to find out the primary cause underlying the difficulty and lay the ax at the root. The two Churches stand to-day as they did in 1844, with the same causes dividing them, and the same obstacles in the way. The Negro was not then the primary cause of difference, but the question relating to him was only the outgrowth of a deeper cause, and that was a difference in construction of the powers vested in the General Conference and in the Bishops. The rock on which they split was then governmental in its character—it was whether supreme power in all branches of government should be vested in one central body.

The same is true of the two Churches to-day, as can be gathered from the pronouncements of their General Conferences and the expressions of the leaders. The chief difficulty in the way of unification is not the Negro, and what shall be done with him; it is where the various powers shall be vested for the government of the Church both generally and locally, and what kind of government should be organized. All points of difference lie in a difference of ideas and ideals. One section desires a strong centralized government, with the legislative, executive, and judicial powers vested in one body, under constitutional restrictions; while the other insists on giving to this central body only full legislative power in matters connectional, and upon vesting full power of local legislation in a more local body.

Again, there is a difference of view as to the extent of the power of the Church as re-organized, whether it shall be world-wide in its power, having dominion over all peoples of every clime and race who come under its care and protection, or whether it shall be only local in its government, with a world-wide influence and service. One wants world-wide power and dominion, while the other only aspires to world-wide service; one is imperialistic, the other is democratic; one is Hamiltonian in its government, the other is Jeffersonian.

This difference in ideas of government is accentuated in the suggestion of the General Conference of each Church of the number and kind of regional conferences and their representation in the General Conference. The Southern Church suggested as one of the bases of unification, in effect, that in the new Church the two Churches maintain their autonomy and constitute each a regional conference, with equal representation in one chamber of a two-house General Conference, while the Northern Church insisted that the General Conference consist of only one house, and suggested that the number of regional conferences be increased so as to provide more adequately for the needs of the work at home and abroad.

Dr. Blake, in his Boston address, throws considerable light on the Northern view and the expression, "To provide more adequately for the needs of the work both at home and abroad." In this address he offered a solution to the Negro question, but his suggestion has been repudiated by the other leaders of his Church, including its Negro contingent. In addition, he offered a suggestion for the division of the Church into Regional Conferences, which, having taken well in certain quarters, requires a more careful study than seems to have been given it. He adopted the suggestion of the Saratoga Conference, and says:

"While the fixing of the number and boundaries of the Regional Conferences may not be as difficult of adjustment as some of the other problems that the Joint Commission must consider, it is doubtful if there is any phase of the whole question that will be more crucial in its outcome than this one. The success of reorganization will depend in a large measure upon our ability to arrange the Regional units so that they shall not become a divisive factor, but shall make for real unity. Success here means everything. Failure is fraught with peril. "How many Regional Conferences should there be and what should be their boundaries? Two or three principles should be kept in mind—first, the regional unit should, as far as possible, represent a homogeneity of interests; second, it should be sufficiently compact to facilitate successful administration; and, third, it should do away with sectional solidarity. If you divide the territory east of the Mississippi into four jurisdictions, a northeast, a southeast, a north-central, and a south-central, and then divide the territory west of the Mississippi river into two jurisdictions, a northwest and a southwest, you will have six regional conferences, each reasonably homogeneous, fairly compact in area, and with sectional solidarity eliminated. The advantage of such a regional arrangement as I have suggested is in the fact that the two Churches are placed on a parity in the control of the reorganized Church. Sectional solidarity is eliminated, and we have one great, united Church, knowing no North, no South, no East, no West. You have an arrangement that would make for mutual confidence and for genuine unity."

It will be noted that the Doctor here gives no definite boundaries of his proposed regional units; he asserts, however, in this connection that the Southern Church would have the majority of membership in three, and the Northern Church would have the majority of membership in the other three of these regional units. Before accepting this assertion as true, it would be necessary for him to give the boundary lines, since a division, properly meeting the principles laid down by him, would give the Northern Church a majority of the membership in three of the four units east of the Mississippi, and in one west of the river. According to the census of 1910, the population of the States east of the river was 65,000,000; of these 48,000,000 were in the territory occupied by the Northern Church, and only 17,000,000 in that territory occupied by the Southern Church. If the territory of each section should be divided into two sections, there would be a population of 24,000,000 in each of the two Northern units and only 8,500,000 in each Southern—a ratio of practically 3 to 1, and with the Negro eliminated the ratio will be greatly increased. To give to each of these units equal representation in the General Conference and on the Official Boards of the Church would be unjust and unfair, and would likely engender a deeper-seated prejudice in the mind of the North than now exists. This would strengthen the cry of the North so frequently heard in national campaigns, "The South is in the saddle again." If this territory is to be divided under the principles announced, the proper and just division would be as follows: The New England States and New York, having a population of 16,000,000, to constitute the Northeast unit; Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, and North Carolina, with a population of 17,000,000, the Southeast unit; the States north of the Ohio, with a population of 18,000,000, the Central-North unit; and the other States south of the Ohio, with a population of 13,000,000, the South-Central unit.

It will be observed that this division meets all three principles announced by Dr. Blake. It represents, as far as possible, a homogeneity of interests; it is sufficiently compact to facilitate successful administration; and, ignoring sectional lines as they now exist, it does away with sectional solidarity; and, in addition thereto, it does not subject one section to the charge that it has too large a representation. A division of this eastern territory in any other way would not accord with the above principles, and would be open to the charge that the division was the result of a gerrymander in order to give one section more power than it was entitled to.

But we must not deceive ourselves or the brethren of the North. Such a division will not be, and ought not to be, approved by Southern Methodism, especially when the avowed purpose is to break up the solidarity of the South. Why this intense desire to destroy sectional solidarity? If there were true unity between the two sections, there would be not only a sectional solidarity, but a national solidarity. If there were such a unity between the two Churches as would justify unification there would be no cry against sectional solidarity, but such a condition would be welcomed, and the two Churches would be welded together by the fires of holy love and form one complete whole. Solidarity means an entire union or consolidation of interests and responsibility. Sectional solidarity in matters spiritual should not be condemned, but should be commended and encouraged. It is only when such a consolidation is effected in an unholy cause that it deserves the condemnation of a just people.

Besides, homogeneity of interests produces solidarity. The first and third principles stated by the Doctor are, therefore, antagonistic and cannot exist together; for, when homogeneous interests exist in any section there will necessarily follow a solidarity in that section on every question affecting those interests. Such has been the case with the South—when its interests have been touched it has been a practical unit. In matters of doctrine and religion it has always been divided; so in matters of local interest. In only one field has it solidified, and that is in national politics. It seems that her attitude in that particular has been misunderstood by the North, and that section has time and again fought the South most bitterly, and has solidified under the "bloody-shirt" banner. The last instance that we had of this was only in the last national campaign, and is not yet ancient history. The political solidarity of the South is the result of conditions affecting her social and institutional life, which has been endangered. Rev. J. H. Light has most admirably stated the cause of this solidarity, in saying "The truth is, the solidarity of the South is not due to a crust of aristocratic sentiment; it is due to the pressure of several thousand atmospheres of racial, moral, and institutional danger that surrounds us at every turn." Such being the case, it is evident that the South will never consent to a destruction of this solidarity until this danger is removed. Yet brethren of the North propose to break up this solidarity not by removing this pressure, but by dismembering the Southern Church, and rendering it unable to resist this danger.

Again, this condition exists only in party politics, and the Southern Church has never, as a church, taken part in party politics, and has never had anything to do with this solidarity, and should she now consents to unify with a Church whose avowed purpose is to enter politics and break up the solidarity of the South, as it now exists, she would reverse the principles by which she has heretofore been governed and be untrue to her traditions. If she does so consent, the good white people of the Southern States will reject her and cast her out of the land, and Methodism will have no influence with them.

It is to be hoped that the Southern Church will not be an Esau, selling her birthright of purity, liberty, freedom from politics, and of service to the people of this land, for a mess of pottage, consisting only of dismemberment, for the purpose of attacking the social, political and institutional life of our Southland. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

PICNICS AND FESTIVALS OUR SPECIALTY

RELIEF FOR THE VANGUARD.

Rev. W. W. Pinson, D. D.

Contributions are coming in for War Relief for Missionaries. It is not to be wondered at that people respond to so worthy an appeal. It would be strange if they should fail to do so. The $20,000 asked for should be in hand in thirty days. The rate of exchange and the high prices in China have stopped building enterprises. These must wait. They have waited long already. They are sadly needed, but they do not suffer hunger, nor cold, nor embarrassment, and distress. We are pleading now for men, women and children, who, though far away in space, are very near to our hearts. There are 351 Americans involved, besides many native workers. The usual allowance has been made them, up to the limit of available resources. This is barely sufficient under normal conditions. Under the extraordinary war conditions, it is hopelessly inadequate. Missionaries in the Baptist Convention recently declared that even bare necessaries of life were beyond their reach. As for clothing, they must needs go without, except for making over and sometimes turning the old ones inside out. A missionary of another Church who has seen service and endured untold suffering in the war area, wrote me the other day: "Our allowance is about half sufficient. We must have relief, and are trying to raise it." One of our own missionaries on furlough offered to resign his salary and remain at home for the relief of his brethren in China. Another said to me: "I have spent $1500 savings—all I had. I do not know how I am to manage now." This same missionary wrote some time ago from Mexico: "I have just paid $10 for a box of soda crackers," and added with characteristic missionary spirit, "I do very well on oats and crackers." One of our missionaries wrote from China that work would have to be closed unless relief came soon, though he knew not where to begin and it was like breaking one's heart to think of doing it.

With the relief we are asking, promptly furnished, the missionaries can manage till we can increase our regular appropriations or conditions change. But the pinch is on now and relief must come, and come at once. If each one will do his "bit" and do it now, the remedy will be quick and easy. "Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give—not grudgingly or of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver."

THE NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Newton District Conference convened at Montrose, Miss., May 15, 1917, under the presidency of Rev. W. L. Linfield, presiding elder. Dr. Rolfe Hunt, President Mississippi Conference Training School, was elected secretary, and Rev. W. A. Hays of the Decatur charge, assistant secretary. Brother Linfield opened the services by reading the recent address of the Bishops.

The Preaching.

The introductory sermon was preached by Rev. J. C. Chambers, of Newton. He dealt in a practical way with the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, after which the sacrament was administered to the large congregation present.

At eleven o'clock on the 16th, Rev. J. H. Grice, of Bay Springs, preached thoughtfully and effectively on the mission of the Church to the local community. At 3 p. m., Rev. H. R. McKee presented a carefully prepared sermon on the "Claim of the Church on the Individual." At 7:45 p.m., Rev. M. L. White of Homewood spoke directly to the unsaved on "The Value of the Soul." He gave an opportunity for penitents to come forward for prayers and a number came.

At eleven o'clock on the 17th the preaching was done in a humble and devout spirit by Rev. M. R. Jones, of Raleigh, on "The Divinely Called Ministry of the Church." Rev. W. A. Hays had been announced for a sermon at 3 p. m., on "Christ the Savior of the Church;" but, owing to pressure of business, that service had to be dispensed with, to the regret of all. The closing sermon was by Rev. J. M. Corley, of Lake, on "The Prodigal Son." The discourse was especially directed to the unsaved and showed careful preparation, as well as prayerful delivery.

The Connectional Interests.

Rev. Robert Selby, who was reared in the bounds of the Newton District and is held in high esteem by our people, made an address and took a collection in behalf of the Lamar School of Law of Emory University.

Prof. G. L. Harrell of the Millsaps Faculty, who is Conference Lay Leader, spoke concerning Millsaps and the work of the laymen.

Rev. M. M. Black, Commissioner for Millsaps, spoke in behalf of the dormitory fund for that institution, saying some illuminating things on kindred matters as well.

Rev. J. L. Neill, Sunday School and Missionary Secretary, who is a native of Montrose and an alumnus of the Mississippi Conference Training School, was present with his valuable helpmeet, with his abounding vitality and energy, and of course handled well the interests of his two departments.

Mrs. J. C. Clark of Laurel, representing the woman's missionary interests of the district, spoke briefly but impressively, and she was followed by Mrs. Walker, president of the local society at Laurel.

At the request of the presiding elder, the President of the Mississippi Conference Training School spoke briefly of that institution. He was followed by Rev. W. B. Hogg of Laurel, who spoke eloquently of the work already accomplished and especially of the possibilities of the institution if present plans are carried out. He was thanked by Mr. P. L. Blackwell and Mr. C. F. Neill, who are zealous members of the Board of Trustees. These were followed by Rev. J. L. Neill, who made an appeal for subscriptions to the institution, which met with a hearty response, notwithstanding hurried conditions, and resulted in a subscription of $337.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, superintendent of the Orphanage, looked well after the interest he so nobly represents; and our brotherly Rev. H. M. Ellis of Memphis was present to remind us of the Hospital which he hopes we will get nothing out of. His appeal was impressive and sound.

Boards and Standing Committees.

As the record had been lost for some time, the offices of District Trustees were, by resolution, declared vacant, and the presiding elder appointed as successors to the old board, J. L. Crawford, C. L. Neill, and J. R. Mitchell. G. R. Nobles of Raleigh was elected District Lay Leader. G. R. Nobles, W. C. Mabry, P. L. Blackwell and R. C. Pugh were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference, with W. A. Lewis and C. M. Langford as alternates.

The presiding elder appointed as a Licensing Committee: Revs. J. C. Chambers, H. J. Moore, J. G. Galloway, and J. M. Corley.

Bay Springs won out as the place for the next meeting of the Conference.

A resolution of thanks was offered to the pastor and community and also to the officers of the Conference. Messrs. J. T. Gammage and P. J. Abney rendered appreciated service in getting delegates and visitors about in their automobiles. There was manifested a general feeling that the presiding elder carries his people on his heart and strives to advance their interests fairly and impartially. In fact, good fellowship abounded to a rare degree and all feel that lasting benefits will follow the meeting of this Conference.

A CASE OF SELF-RESPECT AND RESPECT FOR THE CHURCH.

Dr. J. A. Macdonald, editor of "The Globe," Toronto, will deliver the "Cole Lectures" at Vanderbilt College, beginning April 29. There was a time when the announcement of these lectures was of great interest to Methodism. But since being kicked out, the Church has been too busy "building a better one" to care very much what goes on at the institution that so dishonored the Church that gave it birth.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

Our Bishops were right in taking steps to sever their relation to the Cole Lectureship. Respect for the Church requires such a course. We can not see how any loyal Methodist preacher, to say nothing of a faithful Bishop, can have any color of participation in the Vanderbilt immorality of robbery of the Church.

A. METHODIST.

CAN THEY DO IT?

The Methodist Episcopal and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Poplar Bluff, Missouri, have decided not to wait on the results of the joint commission for getting together. They have already agreed to unite and decided on the name for the united Church—"Methodist Church"—and have referred the matter of adjusting property rights, etc., to Bishops Quayle and Hendrix. Bishops have very great power in Methodism—some people think they have entirely too much—but it is doubtful even if two Bishops can change the name of a Methodist Church or settle property matters where two of them unite. Of course, any number of people have the right, if they see fit, to form a church, and we suppose they can call it by whatsoever name they wish; but whether they can take the property of the Methodist Episcopal and of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and use it for the new church, is very questionable. Nor have the Bishops the right to dispose of property in either of the Churches named; certainly, our Bishops have not that right so far as our Church property is concerned. What right will the Bishops of either Church have to appoint ministers of our Church to "Methodist Church"? It looks very much like the enthusiasm for union on the part of the Missouri brethren has got them into a right bad fix. We sincerely hope that the Methodists nowhere else will undertake what the brethren at Poplar Bluff have tried to do.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

THE POPLAR BLUFF FEDERATED CHURCH.

It is due to state that the two Methodist Churches of Poplar Bluff, Missouri, have sought counsel of the two Bishops concerned, Bishop Quayle and myself, and have been visited by both. They simply gave their blessings without consenting to pass on the property question, waiting until such time as the two General Conferences shall act. One of the church buildings, much out of repair, has been sold and the two congregations are worshiping together, each contributing to the benevolences and the pastoral support of its own Church, under a purely private understanding which has thus far proved quite satisfactory, so reported, and they seem willing to continue the present arrangement indefinitely while the two pastors are seeking to develop the work of the kingdom in a neglected part of the city. They are not calling the present work a United Methodist Church, but simply a Federated Church, after the example of many communities where there is not room for two or more Churches.

EUGENE R. HENDRIX.

FROM THE TEXAS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

However, we wish to say in the second place, it requires a rather liberal interpretation of our General Conference provision for "federation" if we would justify the procedure at Poplar Bluff. The General Conferences of the two Churches have made provision whereby one Church may not enter the territory of the other and erect a church where the sister Church is already meeting the demands of the situation. And under this provision exchange of properties has been made possible and such exchanges actually have been made, as when the Church, North, surrendered its work in Cuba and we surrendered our work in the Philippines. * * *

Should the example of Bishop Hendrix be followed by our College of Bishops, and should "federated Churches" be organized in every community where real unification is demanded, the result might be the disintegration of large sections of our own Church. And should unification fail these "federated Churches" would constitute a new family in our already too largely divided Methodism, or else one or the other of the parent Churches would suffer the loss of such organizations. We are opposed to "federated" Churches after the order of the Poplar Bluff Church, and we appeal to our Bishops, not for "their blessing," but for strict conformity to the law and usages of our Church.

A COLLECTION OF BREWERY OBITUARIES.

(From the American Issue.)

In the obituary section of the American Brewer for May is a striking commentary on what beer and the brewery business do to their devotees. The article contains obituaries of five brewers. Note the ages at which they died.

Frederick Max Huber, 41 years old; died from apoplexy after an illness of nearly two years.

Gustave Mostler, 53 years old.

John Pope, one day after reaching his 55th birthday.

Arnold Schoenegg, 41 years old, dropped dead in his home from heart trouble.

Christian Schmidt, aged 59 years.

(This obituary collection leads us to recall the words of Henry Ward Beecher: "What harlot weeps for a harlot? What debauchee mourns for a debauchee? They who join with you in evildoing, will shed few tears when disaster and ruin overtake you."—The Editor)

THE LIQUOR DEALERS IN ERUPTION AGAINST METHODISM.

"The Menace of Methodism" is the title under which the Liquor Dealers' Journal in its current issue pays its respects to Methodism in general. Methodists have long suspected that they were not in favor with the liquor folks. It seemed that nothing Methodistic was just right—allowing the periodicals and organizers of the liquor forces to be the final arbiters in morals and religion, as well as in law and social life.

The Journal seems at last to have made the discovery that there is some sort of connection between Methodism and the Anti-Saloon League, and the favorite alibi of the liquor men is upset by this discovery. Too slow-witted to be aware that the anti-saloon propaganda, under whatever name, is simply the Church in action against the saloon, their contention has been that the temperance movement is carried forward by a set of designing politicians, only remotely connected with the Churches and in the pay of wealthy men to advance certain isms to the detriment of legitimate business.

They have persistently contended that the Churches would not stand for the methods and the work of the Anti-Saloon League, and it gives them a distinctly rude jolt to stumble on the fact that the Churches are the wicked partners in the business, the Methodist Church in particular, being even something worse—a kind of deus ex machina.

Listen to this particular howl:

So flushed is the Methodist Church with its domination of affairs in the United States that at last it has come out from under cover and openly flaunted itself in the faces of the people and the churches which still believe that this should be "the land of the free," that citizens should have liberties and that there should be no unison of Church and State.

The "menace" is to be met by stirring up the other denominations against the Methodists, after this fashion:

What think ye of this, ye Roman Catholics, Episcopalians, Lutherans, Unitarians, Jews, and members of other liberal churches and denominations? * * * Are you all ready to bow down and acknowledge the Methodist Church as the supreme power in the United States to-day * * * and supinely permit it to rob you of your rights and liberties * * * and impose upon you the results of its Puritanism and fanaticism, such as will be the case if it is permitted to go on and establish here the Methodist idea of Eden?

The Journal man has got one eye open, but the miracle is recent and he is confused. By and by he will get the other eye open and will be still more astonished. He will see what has been going on for years past—Roman Catholics, Episcopalians, and all the rest, sitting in the innermost councils of the Anti-Saloon League, taking prominent a platform part in the great conventions, and being officially appointed to this work by their respective Churches.—The American Issue.

No man can produce great things who is not thoroughly sincere.—Lowell.

DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE, MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

Second Session.

Dear Brethren: I give below the dates and places for holding the Second Annual District Sunday School Institutes for our Conference. The enrollment last year was indeed very creditable, but it should be more than doubled for this year. Let's make it not less than 1500.

The universal consensus of opinion last fall was that the first sessions of these Institutes were by far the best Sunday school meetings of any kind ever held in our State. Certainly this was true for Methodist workers. They each dealt with the practical, every-day problems of the local schools.

The program for this year will be superior to the one of last fall in every respect. I say this before you have heard it, and I feel that after you have heard it you will say more, and in stronger terms.

Cut out this schedule and keep it before you so that no other engagements will be allowed to interfere.

Places and Dates.

Port Gibson District, Fayette, Miss., September 3 and 4. Time of sessions: Monday night, Tuesday morning, afternoon, and night, and Wednesday morning. Hon. J. G. Parham, Rolling Fork, Miss., chairman. Rev. J. O. Ware, Fayette, Miss., host.

Jackson District, Flora, Miss., September 6 and 7. Rev. M. F. Adams, Flora, Miss., host. Hon. Virgil R. Howie, Jackson, Miss., district chairman. Time of sessions, Thursday morning, afternoon, and night, and Friday morning and afternoon.

Brookhaven District, Brookhaven, Miss., September 10 and 11. Rev. C. W. Crisler, Brookhaven, Miss., host. Mr. J. M. Wood, Brookhaven, Miss., district chairman. Time of sessions, Monday afternoon, and night, and Tuesday morning, afternoon, and night.

Newton District, Newton, Miss., September 12 and 13. Rev. J. C. Chambers, Newton, Miss., host. Mr. G. W. Mars, Philadelphia, Miss., district chairman. Time of sessions, Wednesday morning, afternoon, and night, and Thursday morning, and afternoon.

Meridian District, Meridian, Miss., September 13 and 15. Rev. H. B. Watkins, Meridian, Miss., host. Dr. T. K. Barefield, Meridian, Miss., district chairman. Time of sessions, Thursday night, Friday morning, afternoon, and night, and Saturday morning.

Hattiesburg District, Hattiesburg, Miss., September 17 and 18. Rev. P. D. Hardin, Hattesburg, Miss., host. Hon. W. F. Cook, Hattiesburg, Miss., district chairman. Time of sessions, Monday afternoon, and nigbt, and Tuesday morning, afternoon, and night.

Seashore District, Biloxi, Miss., September 19 and 20. Rev. H. F. Tolle, Biloxi, Miss., host. Mr. W. H. Wainwright, Gulfport, Miss., district chairman. Time of sessions, Wednesday afternoon, and night, and Thursday morning, afternoon, and night.

Who Shall Attend?

The presiding elder, each pastor, Sunday school superintendent, departmental officer, other officers, and all teachers and others interested in better Sunday school work. Every presiding elder, pastor, officer and teacher will be expected to be present.

The Speakers and Workers.

Each district officer will have charge of that department under his or her care. (See list of District Officers in Conference Journal, page 91.)

Mr. C. J. Nugent, Louisville, Ky., Divisional Secretary for the Middle Division.

Mr. A. L. Dietrich, Meridian, Miss., Divisional Secretary for the Gulf Division.

Mr. E. E. French, Nashville, Tenn., successful Sunday school superintendent, and manager Supply Department of our Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

A representative of the General Board of Missions. (Not yet selected.)

Rev. J. C. Chambers, Newton, Miss., member of Conference Sunday School Board, and successful Sunday school pastor.

Other Board members for part time, if not all time.

Note to Pastors and Sunday School Workers.

Your Field Secretary will appreciate it very much if you will send him list of subjects that you would like to hear discussed at your district meeting. Do this right away, please.

Pray, plan, and work that these meetings may be for more efficient Sunday school work in the bounds of our Conference, and altogether for the glory of God. Sincerely your servant.

J. L. NEILL, Field Secretary.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE CLOSING EXERCISES

Interesting and Creditable Exercises End a Successful Session for 1916-17.

Bishop J. H. McCoy, D.D., of Alabama, preached the Commencement sermon for Whitworth College Sunday, May 20, to a congregation which completely filled the lower floor of the Auditorium and overflowed into the balcony.

Rev. C. W. Crisler, pastor of the local Methodist church, presided at the service, which was an ideal Commencement occasion. In addition to hymns, the Creed, Scripture reading and prayer, special musical numbers were given as follows: Violin solo, Miss Adele McNair; vocal solo, Miss Cordelia Brister; voluntary and recessional by the entire student body of Whitworth. Miss McVoy served as accompanist. The musical portion of the service was directed by Miss Shannon, Whitworth's able teacher of vocal music.

The procession of white-clad students which entered the auditorium singing Faure's "Sancta Maria," and at the close of the service departed singing "Hark! Hark! Angelic Songs," was beautiful and impressive. On the stage were seated the Seniors and leading singers.

Bishop McCoy preached from Isaiah, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint." He said that the great heroism of life was shown, not in single acts of courage or generosity, but in faithful discharge of prosaic daily duties and adherence to Christian principles under the constant temptations of weariness, financial distress, etc. He cited the strength, bravery and trials of the man who finds his salary hardly equal to the support of his family in these days of heavily increased expenses.

Bishop McCoy told the graduates that they were now going into a school whose reward would not be a visible diploma, but a strong and well-rounded character, if they did their parts well in the struggle. He spoke of famous characters, among them of Paul the Apostle, and John Wesley, whose faith and determined effort had given them power to overcome the effects of infirmity and trials, and to develop extraordinary strength of character because of them, and said that no material disad-

HOW MARIAN SHARED.

By Paul V. D. Hoysradt.

"I don't like Mary Gray one bit," said Marian, coming into the house one day with a big pout on her small face.

"Why, what is the trouble now with my little daughter?" asked mother.

"She plays with all my dolls just as if they were her own. She does just as she pleases with the dishes in my play-house. I won't ever play with her again!"

Marian brought her little foot down with an angry stamp, and mother at once looked up from her sewing.

"I guess my little girl doesn't know very much about Mary," she gently said.

"Why, mother, what do you mean?" Marian's eyes were wide open with surprise.

"You didn't know dear, did you, that your playmate's father and mother were too poor to even buy their little girl a doll?"

"Mary has no doll at home!" exclaimed Marian. "Why, how awful that must be."

"Yes, dear, it is. She hasn't any of the nice toys you have, and she can't cuddle any lovely dolls in bed with her like you do Susy and Jane."

When Marian heard this she was almost ready to cry. She thought of the unkind things she had just said about her little playmate, and she made up her mind to go back to the play-house right away and tell Mary she could play with anything she liked.

Without saying a word to mother she started on a run for where she had left her little friend playing happily by herself. In a few minutes she came back, however, with a very long face.

"She's gone home," wailed Marian to her mother almost crying, "and I never had a chance to tell her how sorry I was for being so unkind. She won't be back to-day."

"Gone home!" exclaimed her mother. "Why that makes it all the better. Listen, dear, if you really want to share your nice things you might give Mary one of your dolls. There's Mary Ann that Uncle Tom gave you, and you've never had time to play with. Don't you want to give that doll to Mary?"

"Why, that will be perfectly lovely, mother," cried Marian, "you always do think of the best plans."

Both mother and Marian then became very busy. Mary Ann was brought down from the nursery upstairs, looking as beautiful as new. Mother then wrapped her up in tissue paper and brought out a little card.

"What message do you wish to send with Mary Ann?" asked mother.

"Tell her that I send her to be Mary's very own doll, and she must bring her over to-morrow to take tea with my dolls in the play-house."

The card was written, and with a happy face, Marian watched Tad, the errand boy, start out with the soft parcel.

The next day brought more joy. After the tea party was over and Mary had at last gone home with Mary Ann, her new treasure, hugged tight in her arms, Marian told her mother, "She's the happiest little girl I've ever seen, mother, and just think how happy I am too, now."—Christian Intelligencer.

A BIRTHDAY TOWN.

One day, about three years ago, Dick and Dorothy paused at the railway crossing while on their way home from down the street. Old Uncle Hiram, the gateman, whom everyone in Belton knew and loved, was sitting at the door of his little house as they came along.

"My," said Uncle Hiram, "what big parcels for little folks to be carrying!"

"Well, you see," Dick explained, "we have been shopping for the birthday party."

"What birthday party?" asked Uncle Hiram, as he looked up and down the track.

"The baby's," spoke up Dorothy. "Our little Billy, you know. He's three to-morrow, and we're going to give him the finest birthday party that ever was."

"Yes," said Dick, "we have a lot of toys, and there's going to be a big frosted cake with three candles."

"Think of that, now!" cried Uncle Hiram, slapping his knee. "It makes me wish I could have a birthday party myself."

"Why can't you have one?" asked Dorothy. "Everyone in town would love to come, I know."

"Yes," added Dick, "of course everyone would. Don't old folks—I mean, don't grown-up folks have birthdays?"

"Oh, yes, we old folks have lots of birthdays," chuckled Uncle Hiram. "We have them much more often than you young folks, too; but somehow we get out of the habit of having parties."

"That's too bad," said Dorothy. "What fun you miss! Now, if you will just tell us when your next birthday comes, we'll plan a real party for you."

Uncle Hiram did not laugh this time, but looked down hard at the bright eyes raised to his.

"I can think of something better than that," he said at last. "Do you know Aunt Lizzie Wheeler, who lives almost out at the North Road schoolhouse, with only a housekeeper for company? Well, she will be eighty years old next Monday. She has been too lame for years to get out of the house. If you want to make an old person happy with a birthday party, just take her up some flowers or a cake, or any little thing, to show her that some one remembers and cares."

"We'll do it!" cried Dorothy. "And I know that Bessie Fuller and her brother Joe, and Madge Bowman, and Ted Rust, and a lot of others will go with us."

Then she and Dick hurried home, so full of the idea of a birthday surprise for Aunt Lizzie Wheeler that they almost forgot the morrow's party for little Billy.

That was how it began. Dick and Dorothy and a dozen of their young friends promptly formed a sort of birthday club, and their parents have gladly helped them in their plans. Uncle Hiram seems to know, or to have ways of finding out, every time any old person or sick person in the village is going to have a birthday, and no one can measure the happiness of the bright days that the birthday club has brought into the lives of such persons in the past three years. That is how Belton came to be known as "a birthday town."—Irving Palfrey, in Youth's Companion.

RECENT GIFTS TO EMORY UNIVERSITY.

Rev. J. B. Trawick, of the Upper South Carolina Conference, has given to the School of Theology of Emory University a rare relic. It is a chair made by Robert Walker of Chester District, South Carolina, in the year 1795, for the special use of Bishop Francis Asbury. Robert Walker was a devout Methodist and a well-beloved friend of Bishop Asbury. His son, Robert Walker, Jr., received the chair from his father and in turn gave it to his daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Hardin, with whom he made his home during his last years. In 1914 she died at the advanced age of 92 years. From his grandmother, Mrs. Hardin, Mr. Cauthen Simpson inherited the chair and he gave it to Rev. J. B. Trawick. It is a stout hickory chair, with arms, and was always occupied by Bishop Asbury when he visited the Walker home. The chair will be placed in the beautiful new chapel of the School of Theology, along with the pulpit made for and used by John Wesley in his open air preaching at Winterbourne, Wales.

Dr. C. C. Woods, Editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, has sent to the Library of the School of Theology at Emory University several very rare volumes of early Methodist literature. Among the volumes are the "Wesley Banner," "Primitive Methodist Magazine for 1838," and "The Minutes of the Methodist Conferences held in America from 1773 to 1813, inclusive."

Mrs. T. J. Dodd of Covington, Ky., has presented to the library of the School of Theology of Emory University some most interesting and valuable manuscripts left by her distinguished husband, the late Dr. Thomas J. Dodd. Among them are "A New Course in Hebrew and Aramaic," and "Vocabulary to Prometheus Vinctus." Along with these books, Mrs. Dodds sends also a collection of interesting letters, among which are letters of Dr. Abel Stevens and Dr. T. N. Ralston.

Rev. E. E. Wiley of the Holston Conference, at the request of Bishop Candler, has presented to the School of Theology of Emory University an excellent portrait in oil of his distinguished father, Rev. E. E. Wiley, D. D., who so long served as the President of Emory and Henry College. In connection with the School of Theology is to be a portrait gallery of great Methodist preachers. This collection of portraits is already large and is growing rapidly.

Misses Mary and Mattie Reynolds of Booneville, Miss., have presented to the "Lamar School of Law" of Emory University the fine law library of their distinguished father, who passed away some years ago. It is an unusually fine collection of legal authorities including many of the Reports of Supreme Courts of several States, the United States and the Reports of the Appellate Courts of Great Britain.

The library of the Law Department of Emory University is easily in the front rank of the law school libraries of the country. That Department of the University is well equipped and is doing excellent work.

A WORD FROM BISHOP MURRAH.

It unfortunately be often it be Lord's decision make an observation to the busy ministers he does han the text of prayer increasing be observation of our Church papers. This a subject matter of paramount importance. It a people, interests all who involves all of the other enterprises of the Church. We are not going to succeed as we ought unless we

Our people must be informed. The success of the Church at such an important time, and of the assistance of the masses with respect to many things that in our doctrines and polity is unattainable. However, we do not suffer as the matter in comparison with other sections. The condition referred to is widespread.

Many of our people are misinformed about matters of the gravest moment. The sources from which they derive instruction often supply inadequate and misleading information. We are now within less than a year of the General Conference session. There are reasons to believe that this will be one of the most influential Conferences in the history of our Church. We simply cannot overestimate the importance of clearing sentiment that will save us from the effects of unwise legislation.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate admirably meets our needs throughout the bounds of the territory embraced in the two Conferences in Mississippi. Its influence is recognized in all parts of our widely extended Connection. A large increase in its circulation just now would add greatly to its efficiency in promoting our interests. Let me, therefore, urge our presiding elders, pastors and official members to improve every opportunity to bring about this result. I trust that emphasis will be given to this in a way that will yield immediate fruit.

ANOTHER BEARING OF BISHOP CANDLER'S UTTERANCE.

We hope that the article from the pen of Bishop Candler, entitled, "The Devil Perceived," which we published in the Advocate some weeks ago, was carefully read and considered by all who receive our paper. Bishop Candler is easily one of the ablest men in the South and has had large experience as an educator. Very few have so accurate an insight into things and so far-reaching a vision as to their significance as has he. What he says is, therefore, entitled to great weight."

There is no reason to doubt that the Carnegie and Rockefeller Foundations have exerted a large influence upon the State schools and secular education in general. But to state it as fact that we believe the Church institutions have yet their largest field in which to work. Because of their greater power, they are perhaps more susceptible to criticism from this quarter. As a well-known writer, a number of denominational colleges have as a secondary function, preparing men who enter the ministry. A study of the relation of the religious bodies in the United States is better and more discriminate manner than that conducted by the struggle of these institutions to break away from the obligations and moorings of the past and stabilize new and different relations.

This question which Bishop Candler has so instructively brought to the public attention has a new pertinency now, by reason of the recent announcement of Rockefeller endowment. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has not recently emerged from a great conflict to determine whether the instruction of her youth should be conducted in institutions which she herself owns and controls, or in schools owned by independent agencies. That struggle took the Church from border to border, and the spirit it evoked and the interest it aroused is challenged the admiration of high-minded men throughout the nation. Stripped of its many accretions, the issue was just about building up there to form centers for our educational system, and the success that has been achieved in this undertaking has surpassed the expectations of the most sanguine. On the other hand, the Northern Methodist Church has allowed her institutions of learning to be much influenced by these foundations and other sectarian agencies, and to pass very largely from her control, and the question is, in the event of the union of the two bodies, what part of an educational system would the Church then have? It is now but we are not at all misrepresenting matters in this connection, we quote the following statement made by Rev. Thomas Nicholson, D.D., Secretary of the Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in address at the Uniting Conference of the Union of American Methodism, held at Evanston, Illinois, in February, 1916 (italics ours):

"There is another question of rather serious import. It arises out of the somewhat different ideals of college government in the Northern and Southern half of the country. The question of the government and control of these Church institutions is a very large one. The present speaker recently interpreted the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has been quite noticed within recent years to raise from a very loose denominational control of its colleges. The Methodist Episcopal Church has been inclined more and more to the liberal policy. MANY OF THE COLLEGE BOARDS ARE ENTIRELY SELF-PERPETUATING BODIES. We recently examined the charters of all the colleges of that body. We found in uniformity. There are almost as many forms of charters as there are colleges. * * * It is the judgment of the present speaker that no form of government and control yet devised a entirely satisfactory * * * in many cases there is not sufficient permanent guarantee for that liberty of thought and academic freedom which are indispensable to higher education. On the other hand, it is our conviction that in many colleges founded and fostered by the Church there are not adequate safeguards in the matter of control and direction. There are no proper assurances that when these colleges become fairly rich and amply endowed they will not utterly secularize and almost entirely lapse from the high purpose for which they were created.

"The proper procedure would appear to be to have a representative commission appointed which should study with care the charter of every existing institution, note the differences and similarities, the strength and the weaknesses, and which should report, if possible, in what forms of charter seem to be producing the best results, and give the Church such further suggestions as they could gather in the study of every available fact. But of that study we might hope to evolve TWO OR THREE, POSSIBLY FOUR OR FIVE, DESIRABLE FORMS OF GOVERNMENT AND CONTROL. In my judgment, there must necessarily be flexibility. I do not think it would be wise to place all our colleges in all parts of the country under exactly the same form of direction and control. * * * These, however are measures or administrative policy to be settled from within after union rather than antecedent to it."

We will not at this time discuss this important utterance of Dr. Nicholson, but it may be well for Southern Methodists to consider it in the light of the unification proceedings. Whether in the light of the past history of their Church, they are willing to reopen the question as to what the relations of its educational institutions are to be. In most of the schemes that have been submitted it has been proposed to let each Annual Conference decide for itself. Differences in this quite possible that some denominational may follow that would not be altogether pleasing to some of the brethren who have been moving with a seeming willingness to risk the almost any kind of union. And certainly our Commissioners need to be on watchful guard in this point.

The following press dispatch may prove of interest in this connection: "New York, May 24.—A new donation by John D. Rockefeller of $37,000,000 to the endowment of the Rockefeller Foundation was announced last night by Dr. George E. Vincent, formerly president of the University of Minnesota, who assumed the presidency of the Foundation at a meeting of the Board of Directors. The new gift increases the resources of the Foundation to $185,736,000." Dr. Vincent, the new President of the Rockefeller Foundation, is a Northern Methodist.—Editor of the Advocate.

CALLED TO THE CHURCH TRIUMPHANT.

On Wednesday, May 23, after our paper was off the press, we received from Rev. A. J. McKelvie, our pastor at Byhalia, Miss., the following note bearing date of the 21st inst.:

"Rev. R. M. Davis died Saturday morning, May 19 at 4 o'clock, after a long period of suffering well-nigh. He was buried from the church here yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, the funeral service being conducted by Rev. J. W. Dorman, Rev. R. A. Tucker, and myself."

It is with a deep sense of personal bereavement that we send forth this brief message. Brother Davis was on the "Honor Roll" of the North Mississippi Conference, and was one of its most loved and appreciated members, having been connected with that body almost from the date of its organization in 1870. He was in every respect an unusual man—impressive in personal appearance, large in intellect, and great in heart. His mind was naturally metaphysical in its bent. He had a wonderful grasp of theology, and possessed a most remarkable philosophic insight into men and things. He was truly a thinker, original, profound, masterful. If he had had ambition and self-assertion, we do not doubt that he would have become widely known, but these elements were conspicuously lacking in the make-up of his personality. Probably nothing appealed to him less than the glamor and applause of the world—he preferred the quiet to be found in the modest charge, with the opportunity it furnished for communion with the high priests of thought, to larger places that would have annoyed him with their exactions. We dare say that no one ever heard him complain of an appointment. His thinking and preaching were upon too high an intellectual plane for the average man and woman—hence he could not be called a minister of popular pulpit gifts; but we have never known his superior as a conversationalist, and his charms in the social circle were irresistible.

But, best of all, Brother Davis was a man of deep piety—pure in heart, clean in thought, reverent in spirit, high-minded, noble, and honorable. There was about him no trace of envy, foolish pride, or littleness of any kind. He was outstandingly good-natured, and there ever beamed forth from him, like light from the sun, a sincere love for his fellow-men. In him there was a marvelous blending of strength and gentleness. The fragrance of the Rose of Sharon hung all about him.

It grieves us to think that we shall see him on earth no more, but we shall cherish the hope of renewing fellowship with him in the skies, where the pang of separation will never more pierce kindred hearts. We assure the bereaved loved ones that they have our sympathy and prayers.

BLOWING DOUBLE BLASTS.

Only a few days ago Zion's Herald was almost furiously inveighing against "racial Conferences," proclaiming them to be unchristian, divisive, and hurtful; but now it is arguing in favor of creating and perpetuating them all over the earth. This in less than a fortnight is some somersaulting! The Northwestern Christian Advocate also has done a pretty good reversal "stunt." Well may Southern Methodists beware of forming an alliance with a Church whose leading representatives hold to what they affirm to be their principles and convictions so loosely that they can be taken on or thrown off "in a jiffy," as they may think expediency demands. They might change again after we were involved so that we could not retreat. A constitution would be a very unsatisfactory protection against a capricious and discordant majority, which could at least keep up a continual disturbance. The record of the Northern Church as a "treaty-keeper" is not one to inspire confidence.

Organic union, unless the two Churches were really in accord as to their true convictions concerning all important matters, would likely prove a curse instead of a blessing. What is worse than a wrangling household?

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Theo. Copeland, D.D., has just closed a fine meeting in his church at Pine Bluff, Ark., in which there were 30 additions.

Bishop Morrison has stated in his "Autobiography" that he will request to be relieved from active service at the next General Conference.

Rev. S. H. Caffey asks that the address of his Advocate be changed from University to Victoria, Miss., as he has returned to his charge for the summer.

Rev. and Mrs. T. S. Randle, after an absence of six years, are again in Louisiana, and they desire their friends to know that their address is Farmerville, La.

We acknowledge with thanks the reception of an invitation to attend the Commencement exercises of Trinity College, Durham, N. C., June 3-6. The program is an inviting one.

The proposal to raise $100,000 endowment for Whitworth College is a movement in the right direction. Good for Dr. Cooper and the Board of Trustees of that historic institution!

Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, of New York, delivered an address in the Athenaeum, this city, last Friday night in the interest of the "Liberty Loan."

From McCall Creek, Miss., Rev. T. M. Ainsworth writes: "The spiritual interest of our charge is growing, and we are looking for a great revival of Christianity in the near future."

Rev. R. I. Collins, of Courtland, Miss., has been active in the interest of the Advocate, he having just sent to the Publisher eight renewal subscriptions. He reports that his work is doing well.

Brother B. C. Lee, of Coushatta, La., sends us 2 subscriptions from his community, and adds the following note: "The paper makes its visits regularly and meets with a glad welcome in our bomes."

We are grateful to Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., of Madison Station, Miss., for 6 subscriptions to the Advocate. Brother Lewis may be depended upon to take care of all the interests of the Church in his field.

Rev. Paul H. Grice asks us to state that his address in the future will be Wiggins, Miss. He writes that he is giving his best efforts to the circulation of the Advocate. The prospects for a good year are bright.

Our congregation at Macon, Miss., observed the "Day of Prayer" designated by our Bishops last Sunday, having arranged therefor a special service. Rev. E. Nash Broyles is the brilliant young pastor of this church.

On next Monday evening, June 4, at 8 o'clock, Mrs. Kato Davis Raymond, organist, assisted by Mrs. T. O. Adams, soprano soloist, will give a recital in the Carrollton Avenue Church, this city. The public is cordially invited. An offering will be taken for the music fund.

The Annual Address of Whitworth College was delivered by Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of the Parker Memorial Church of New Orleans. The Brookhaven papers referred to Brother Harper's message as a scholarly and polished one that was highly creditable to the occasion.

The meeting just closed at West Point, Miss., resulted in great blessing to the church there. Rev. L. P. Wasson writes: "More than a hundred people were definitely touched for a better life. There will be at least fifty to go into the different churches. Brother Culpepper was with us. He is a great preacher and evangelist."

The Bulletin of St. Mark's Hall (this city) for May shows continued activity and gratifying achievements in the service of the Master. The new workers there, Miss Ruth Byerly, Miss Emma Vogel, and Miss Frances Denton, are in place and busy with their respective duties.

Read the appeal in behalf of Paino College by Dr. Gilbert, which appears in this issue of the Advocate. Let our pastors, congregations, and Sunday schools AT ONCE lend a helping hand to this worthy cause. Southern Methodism cannot afford to let this institution suffer for a lack of funds.

Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor of the Gibson Memorial Church of Vicksburg, Miss., sends us 4 subscriptions, appending in his letter the following note: "We are making gratifying progress at Gibson Memorial. All departments of the church are growing. The Sunday school especially is showing a marked gain."

We acknowledge the reception of an invitation to the marriage of Miss Alma Whitehead to Rev. James Frederick Sparks, at the residence of the bride's parents, Rev. and Mrs. H. Whitehead, in Birmingham, Ala., at 8:30 o'clock on June 6, 1917. We extend to the happy couple congratulations and all good wishes.

Rev. A. O. Evans, D.D., a prominent member of the Little Rock Conference, died at Arkadelphia, Ark., on the 23d inst. Dr. Evans was a cousin of our Brother E. N. Evans of Louisiana, and had succeeded him as financial manager of Henderson-Brown College. His death is a great loss to that institution and to the Church.

The Center Point (Miss.) Church recently gave Rev. W. W. Murray a pounding, and he writes that his "pantry looked like a little grocery store." Brother Murray has a teacher-training class of 15 at the Pleasant Valley Church, and the work in general in his charge is prospering. He has our thanks for three subscriptions.

We are indebted to Rev. Francis R. Power, our pastor at Pelican, La., for a printed invitation to the Commencement exercises of Centenary College, which will be held June 3 and 4. The Graduating Class this year numbers five, and Brother Power's name is included in the list. We sincerely wish that we could be present.

Under date of May 21, Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of Macon, Miss., writes: "Rev. Robert Selby was with us yesterday in the interest of Emory University, and he delivered, I believe, the greatest educational address that I have ever heard. I have for Brother Selby, both as a man and as a Commissioner, a very high appreciation."

Rev. W. N. Dodds, our faithful pastor at Verona, Miss., has our thanks for 6 subscriptions from his charge. From Brother Dodd's letter, we take the following: "Things are progressing nicely with us. We have a choice people to serve. Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, our new presiding elder, is moving about much and doing his work well."

We are indebted to Rev. James M. Lewis, of Prentiss, Miss., for 5 subscriptions to the Advocate. Brother Lewis reported that a gracious revival was in progress among the people at Prentiss. He was being assisted in the services by three of his brothers—B. W., H. P., and O. S. Lewis. This quartet make a fine team in evangelistic work.

Rev. W. T. Woodward, our pastor at Oak Grove, La., has, we regret to state, lately been ill. We trust that he will soon be quite himself again. Brother Woodward's letter brought us 3 subscriptions, for which he has our thanks. He will be the host of the Monroe District Conference, which will be held at Oak Grove, June 19-21. He states that this occasion is being looked forward to with much interest.

Rev. C. A. Northington, pastor of the New Albany (Miss.) Circuit, sends us a notice of the death of Miss Maggie Tate, which occurred on April 28, after an extended illness, along with a copy of her farewell message to her home church. These will appear in the next issue of the Advocate. We have learned with sorrow of the demise of this faithful servant of the Master, who in her lifetime exercised a wide influence for good. The bereaved loved ones have our sincere sympathy.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere for two or more subscriptions, sent in within the past few days: Rev. J. Hendrix Mitchell, Boyle, Miss., 6; Rev. S. N. Young, Satartia, Miss., 4; Rev. T. B Cottrell, Mt. Olive, Miss., 2; Rev. C. H. Ellis, Lintonia charge, Miss. Conf., 2; Rev. D. W. Babb, Crawford, Miss., 6; Rev. C. H. Herring, Harrisonville, Miss., 3; Rev. J. G. Galloway, Forest, Miss., 7; Rev. A. B. Barry, Meadville, Miss., 3; Rev. W. S. Selman, Olive Branch, Miss., 4.

The Course of Study of the Northern Methodist Church, recently discussed in the Advocate by Dr. Ridout, of Taylor University, has been approved by the College of Bishops of that denomination, with the exception of Prof. Soares' book, which Dr. Spencer, of the Central Christian Advocate, declared to be as "rationalistic" as Renan's life of Christ. This last volume was endorsed, being put out merely "in the interest of peace." This action seems to have practically committed the Church, North, to the new theology. This alone is, in our opinion, reason enough for opposing organic union with that body. We shall have more to say on this subject in the near future.

At its recent meeting in Birmingham, the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church adopted a resolution declaring that it considered union with the Northern Presbyterian Church as "impracticable," but named a committee to hear the representatives of the latter body. There was in the resolution a suggestion about "federation" that looked as if the Southern Church would like to stop, if possible, the wastage of men and money that is being caused by the efforts of the Northern Church to invade the South.

Rev. N. L. Loftus, our energetic pastor at Perth, Miss., writes us as follows: "Our quarterly conference met to-day, May 23, and I reported 6 new and 2 renewal subscriptions to the Conference organ from the Nebo charge." Brother Loftus is resolved to see that the Advocate is circulated among his parishioners, and we highly appreciate what he is accomplishing in that direction. We trust that our paper will prove a blessing to the homes into which he is enabling us to send it. There are many good people within the bounds of his work.

The following telegram from Dr. James Cannon, Jr., Chairman of the National Legislative Committee, should put every friend of national prohibition on the alert: "The great effort being made to put the country on a beer and wine basis is exceedingly dangerous, being calculated to retard real national prohibition many years. If the prohibition leaders and the people press upon Congress complete national prohibition, without compromise, urging the abolition of the liquor revenue, the victory is near and the future is assured. It is no time for compromise."

Rev. J. B. Randolph, of Jackson, Miss., was awarded the B.D. degree at the recent Commencement of Millsaps College. Brother Randolph was graduated from the Iuka (Miss.) Normal College with the A.B. degree in 1897, and subsequently attended Millsaps for a time. Later he went to Vanderbilt University, and there brought up his academic standing sufficiently to secure the B.D. degree. The filing in which he has done at Millsaps this year has been accomplished without interfering with his duties as Superintendent of the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage.

Rev. John L. Williams, of Shreveport, La., has been appointed by Governor Pleasant on a commission, composed of five members, to consider the advisability of establishing an institution for the instruction of the deaf, blind, and dumb of the Negro race. Brother Williams is the Superintendent of the Louisiana Child Finding and Home Society. He informs us that he will attend the National Children's Home Convention, to be held at Pittsburg, June 4-6. While away, he will also visit St. Louis, Philadelphia, and New York, to study the institutions in those cities which care for homeless waifs.

In referring to some articles that he has lately been printing, Dr. T. N. Ivey said in the Nashville Advocate of last week: "In all this there is much to strengthen the Southern Methodist conviction that the Negro should have his own separate General Conference, as well as separate Annual Conferences." We beg to remind our distinguished confrere that the conviction of Southern Methodism, as it was expressed by its General Conference, was in favor of an "independent Church." Dr. Ivey may have meant this, but it is rather noticeable that he did not say this—especially at this particular juncture.

We have regretted to learn of the death of Mrs. Emily Clower, which occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. R. Gadberry, near Black Hawk, Miss., some three weeks ago, at a ripe old age. She was the widow of Mr. Green B. Clower, an uncle of Major R. W. Millsaps, who preceded her to the grave many years ago, and a daughter of the Rev. Stephen Johnson, of Carroll County, Miss. She was a devoted Christian and was ready for the Master's summons when it came. Among her surviving children is Mr. G. B. Clower, of Morgan City, Miss., who is well known for his faithful service to the Church in his community.

Dr. Edgar Blake, of the Northern Methodist Church, has submitted through the press what is termed a new plan to arrange for the colored contingent in the proposed unified Church. It leaves the Negroes IN the Church, on all the General Boards, with a proportionate representation in the Supreme Court of the Church, and with a vote on all questions of a constitutional character affecting the entire new organization, and, along with this, it would entangle the Southern Methodist Church in a world-wide arrangement in which it would be literally overwhelmed. It would merely take the Negroes out of the white General Conference (this was proposed in Dr. Blake's other plan), leaving the way open for the political Northern Methodist Church to carry on its intermeddling work among the colored people of the South upon a still larger scale. That Southern Methodists will fall in with any such plan, we do not for one moment believe.

Laugh When People Step On Your Feet

Try this yourself then pass it along to others. It works!

Ouch! ? ! ? ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn stops soreness at once, and soon the corn dries up and lifts right out without pain.

He says freezone is an ether compound which dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding tissue or skin. A quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callous from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. Otherwise the obituaries will, without correspondence about them, be edited down to 200 words. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

SARAH LOUISE, daughter of the Rev. C. M. Crossley, pastor of our church at Philadelphia, Miss., was born on July 23, 1896, and departed this life on April 6, 1917. Louise was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when eight years old, and ever afterwards exemplified the power of Jesus Christ to save, and to keep that which she had "committed unto Him against that day. Following a severe spell of typhoid fever in early life, she was left afflicted and grew worse until the end came. For eight years I have known the family, and for three years was a frequent visitor in the home, and during all this time I never knew her to murmur or complain about her lot in life; but she was ever bright and cheerful. She was always anxious about the progress of church work, the salvation of the lost, and had a deep interest in everything that pertained to the Master's Kingdom. Her voice is hushed, her roller-chair is empty, her place in the family circle is vacant—Louise has gone to be with Jesus. May God bless the bereaved father, mother, and each of the children, who did all they could to make life worth while to a "shut-in."

Her friend,
J. E. SAMPLEY.
Ingleside Church, Macon, Ga.

The subject of this sketch, Miss SARIAH AMANDA PIERCE, was born in the year of our Lord, 1833, and was married in early life to Mr. William Isaac Hilton. Of this union there were born 11 children. They were blessed with a large family and many close relatives, having 48 grandchildren and 68 great-grandchildren. Mrs. Pierce was converted in childhood, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Harrisville, Miss., of which she was ever afterwards a faithful member. Her children are all Christians and they rise up and call her blessed. Two of her sons are superintendents of Sunday schools on the Harrisville charge. The father and six of the children had preceded her to the better world. She died on January 26, 1917, at the home of one her sons. The funeral was conducted the next day at the M. E. Church, South, by her pastor, in the presence of a large congregation of friends and relatives, after which the body was laid away in the family cemetery to await the resurrection of the just. So, dear friends, let us not weep as those who have no hope, but let us commit our ways unto the Lord, and trust also in him, and He will bring it to pass. Then will He say unto us at the resurrection of the just, "Come unto me—inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the World."

C. H. HERRING, Pastor.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. T. W. HOLMES (nee Lulu R. Conerly) was born on September 10, 1855, and was married to T. W. Holmes on December 22, 1882. To this union were given seven children, now grown, who, with the devoted husband, are left to mourn her absence. On April 18, 1917, in her home at Tylertown, Miss., after several months of suffering and patient waiting, she fell peacefully on sleep to wake in a better world. Sister Holmes was converted and joined the Methodist Church in youth, and lived a consistent Christian life. She loved her Church and responded willingly and gladly to its calls and demands. The writer received much good by association with her as her pastor for three years. It was her own request, as he bade her good-by on leaving for his present pastorate, that he write a tribute to her memory when the end came, which she felt was near. Her devotion and faithfulness in service to her husband and children were beautiful. Their attachment to wife and "Mamma" was tender and noticeable by all. Her quiet, gentle, unassuming disposition and faithful service won for her many friends. A good woman of many virtues and a strong character has gone. The home, the community, and the church will miss her, but their loss is her eternal gain. May God bless and sustain the sorrowing ones! T. B. COTTRELL.
Mount Olive, Miss.

RICHARD T. BAILEY was born in Lexington, Miss., on May 4, 1850, and fell on sleep at his home in this place on May 14, 1917, after a distressing illness of several weeks. He was married to Miss Addie F. Bailey on May 30, 1882. To them were born two sons and four daughters, all of whom are living, save one daughter who died in infancy. His wife and three daughters were with him when the end came. One son, Prof. Bailey, of Charleston, Miss., came at once. The other son was with the U. S. Army in the Philippines. Brother Bailey joined the M. E. Church, South, when quite young, and enjoyed its fellowship, attended its services, and aided in its work to the close of his life. My first meeting of this good man was upon the occasion of a visit to his Sunday school class, whose recitations he enjoyed richly. He was a good citizen, doing well his part in building up his community. He was a faithful companion and father, and thus secured the devotion of his family, every member of which delighted to minister to his wants in his illness. His patience under suffering was beautiful. He expected to die at almost any moment and was not surprised, I am sure, when he tried to take a step in his room and instead moved into the other world. After appropriate services at the church, his family and a host of friends accompanied his body to the cemetery, where it was placed beneath a flower-covered mound.

BEN P. JACO, P. C.

IN MEMORIAM.

Whereas, God in His wisdom has seen fit to call from her earthly walks, to walk with Him and His redeemed, one of our beloved members, Mrs. DORA COSTLEY GUICE, relict of the late Rev. George Guice, who died on May 11, 1917, at the residence here of her son-in-law, Mr. Bell, we, the Brookhaven Methodist Missionary Society, offer the following resolutions:

1. That we give expression to our feeling of sorrow in the removal from us of this gentle, refined, Christian coworker.

2. That we shall miss her kindly greeting and the influence of her consecrated life.

3. That we extend to her children and the members of her family the earnest, heartfelt sympathy that springs from communion in sorrow in this bereavement.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our deceased sister; also that copies be furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate and our local papers for publication, and that these resolutions be spread upon the minute book of our Society.

Signed: Mrs. Charles W. Crisler, Miss Carrie B. Terry, Mrs. L. S. Prohy.
Brookhaven, Miss.

TAKE YOUR MEDICINES

REGULARLY—Hood's Sarsaparilla Before Meals—Peptiron Pills After.

This combination is having wonderful success everywhere.

It is sweeping poor health and fear of mental and physical breakdown out of many homes.

It is restoring lost appetite, giving the glow of health to the cheeks, making faces bright and complexions clear, and literally giving worn-out, brain-fagged people the strength of iron.

For it combines that most useful of all metals—iron—in a course of medicine that is peculiarly effective.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is made from an unsurpassed formula of blood-purifying and stomach-toning remedies, including sarsaparilla, mandrake, dandelion, yellow dock, wild cherry, gentian and other valuable alteratives and kidney and liver remedies.

Peptiron Pills, named from pepsin and iron, include these with nux and other blood and stomach tonics—just what physicians prescribe.

ECHOES FROM OXFORD AND ELSE.

By Mrs. A. F. Callaway.

Dear Dr. Meek: Perhaps some of your readers would be interested in a message from Oxford, Miss., at this time. Our people here are not unlike others all over our great country, in that they are somewhat disturbed over the war situation. Several Oxford boys and a number from the University have volunteered. Some have gone to training camps, and others to the farms, according to their several ideas of patriotism; while the older and more conservative of our citizenry are "staying by the stuff," and lifting their hearts daily to God for an early and comforting end to these distressing times, which we believe would never have come to pass had all the leaders of all the nations concerned been meek and lowly followers of Jesus, "the Prince of Peace," who came into this battle-scarred world "that men might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly," his very advent being ushered in by a legion of angels singing as no earthly choir can ever hope to sing, "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Our pastor, Rev. E. S. Lewis, has just closed a very successful two weeks' meeting at our church here, under the leadership of Rev. J. O. Hanes and Mr. Waltermire, of Birmingham, Ala., with all the churches of Oxford co-operating; and we feel that much and lasting good was accomplished. Brother Hanes preaches the old-fashioned gospel in the old-fashioned way—a way that has never been improved upon. His simplicity and earnestness touched the hearts of the people. Christians were edified—numbers joining in public prayer and testimony, who had not hitherto tasted such sweetness in religion. We received into our Church twenty-odd persons on profession of faith, and several by letter. In all, we have received this year up to date more than forty.

Mr. Waltermire is being gloriously used of God in the singing of the gospel. Like David, "the sweet singer of Israel," the harmonious melody of his divinely musical voice arrests all who come within its reach.

The meeting closed with an old-fashioned love feast, in which hundreds participated, regardless of creed or social standing, and the atmosphere that pervaded the auditorium, from the rear pew to the chancel, was permeated with a refreshing sweetness akin to heaven.

Brother Lewis is pushing the work of repairs upon the church building, making ready for the Annual Conference this fall, which we are all looking forward to with a deal of interest and pleasure, while mingled with it is also a feeling of sadness over the separation at that time from our pastor, who has served us capably and faithfully for four years, and endeared himself not only to his own flock, but to every one whose life he has touched. God has certainly rewarded his consecrated walk and Christ-like conversation in Oxford, and though his person will be removed from her midst in a few short months, his influence will linger as a fragrant aroma, silently whispering of Jesus whom he has so earnestly preached through the years. We felicitate the people who shall have him for their pastor in the future.

It was my great privilege a few weeks since to attend for the first time the State Sunday School Convention in the city of Jackson, and to me it was a season of religious instruction and helpfulness. What a feast to the soul to touch lives with such characters as constitute the interdenominational workers,—the cream of all denominations gathered together for the glory of God and the extension of His Kingdom in the earth!

As I sat in the beautiful auditorium of the Galloway Memorial Church and listened to the messages of faith and hope, and rich experience from the lips of men and women who have given their very lives unreservedly in the Master's service, I could but exclaim in my heart with David, "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

Dr. Meek, I love the Methodist Church, and am just as loyal to it as I know how to be; and I think this is the true reason why I appreciate genuinely all Christian endeavor, regardless of denominational lines. Usually those who love their own the best have great capacity for loving others too, for the brighter and steadier the light, the farther out it will shine.

The Sunday school business is a big business and is receiving the attention of our greatest men and women the world over, who have found out the secret, that the majority of our most consecrated Church supporters come into the Church through its influence. Words are inadequate to express, and money could not buy, my Sunday school experience—what it has meant for me and what I have seen it do for others through the years. It is indeed and in truth, as some one has expressed it, "The Church in swaddling clothes," "The recruiting station of the Church," etc. God's richest blessings have been profusely showered upon it, and to-day it is recognized as the Church's fairest child. If I had a thousand lives to live, I'd give them all in active Sunday school service, and if I had a thousand children to rear, I'd place them all under its influence, and confidently expect them in due time to line up in the Church and develop into useful Christian men and women. So here's a glad hand and an admonition of good cheer to all Sunday school workers everywhere: Many of you are giving your very best service for Christ and humanity's sake, regardless of monetary consideration. May I whisper in passing, "God bless you?"

"Let's labor on; spend and be spent—
Our joy to do the Father's will;
It is the way the Master went;
Should not His servants tread it still?

Let's labor on; tis not for naught;
Our earthly loss is heavenly gain;
Men heed us, love us, praise us not;
The Master praises — What are men?"

"The secret Christian will either fail to be a secret, or he will fail to be a Christian."

NERVOUSNESS AND DISORDERS OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.

The energy that gives life to the body is known to be nerve force. It is this hidden energy that creates the difference between the living and the dead body. It is the indefinable something that the body is robbed of in death.

Irregular distribution of the nerve-force is responsible for many of the disorders of the system. Consequently any remedy that has the power to soothe the irritated nerves, thus regulating the supply of nervous energy, is of incstimable value.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is such a medicine. It not only soothes the irritated nerves, but it induces a more regular distribution of the nerveforce, and thus assists the bodily organs in performing their proper functions. Furthermore, it induces a natural sleep, which is nature's greatest tonic and strengthener.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is especially recommended in cases of Sick, Bilious and Nervous Headache; Epilepsy; Fits; Irregular, Profuse and Painful Menses; Neuralgia; Sciatica; Sleeplessness; Melancholy; Backache; Nervous Irritation and Nervous Dyspepsia.

For more than 25 years Dr. Miles' Nervine has been largely used, and the success that it has met with on all sides is the best proof of its merit.

If you think that Dr. Miles' Nervine is suited to your case, procure a bottle from your druggist, take it according to directions, which you will find wrapped around the bottle, and then if you are not benefited return the empty bottle, one only, to your druggist and he will return your money in full. The Miles Medical Co. repays him the full retail price, so there is no reason why he should not return your money promptly.

Freckles

The fairer the skin the more ugly it is when marred by freckles; and they are not necessary at all. As soon as the warm sunshine or the hot winds bring them out, and with the natural embarrasment that every woman feels, get a package of Kintho; this is the easy way to remove them. If Kintho is used at the first sign of the ugly spots, they'll sometimes disappear overnight. Any druggist has or can get Kintho for you. Use Kintho soap too. It's astonishing how it helps keep the freckles away once Kintho has removed them.

If Your System Is Poisoned with acids, you cannot know what it is to be healthy. Acids poison the blood and are the source of many diseases affecting the heart and arteries, skin and mucous surfaces, joints and muscles, and the brain and general nervous system. Some of these diseases are Rheumatism in various forms, Catarrh, Eczema, Pimples, boils, rashes, and other skin diseases, Malaria, Scrofula and general blood troubles. In order to restore yourself to a healthy condition, you must drive these acids from your system and purify your blood.

S. S. S. has been purifying and revitalizing the blood of thousands for fifty years. It is a purely vegetable remedy, and is the most efficient agent known for cleansing the blood and building up the system.

Ask for it at your druggist's, and don't accept a substitute. For special medical advice write to Medical Department, Swift Specific Co., 308 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga.

The Composition of Coca-Cola and its Relation to Tea

Prompted by the desire that the public shall be thoroughly informed as to the composition and dietetic character of Coca-Cola, the Company has issued a booklet giving a detailed analysis of its recipe which is as follows:

Water, sterilized by boiling (carbonated); sugar, granulated, first quality; fruit flavoring extracts with caramel; acid flavorings, citric (lemon) and phosphoric; essence of tea—the refreshing principle.

The following analysis, by the late Dr. John W. Mallet, Fellow of the Royal Society and for nearly forty years Professor of Chemistry in the University of Virginia, shows the comparative stimulating or refreshing strength of tea and Coca-Cola, measured in terms of the refreshing principle:

Black tea (hot)	1 cupful (5 fl. oz)	1.54
Green tea (cold)	1 glassful (8 fl. oz. exclusive of ice)	2.02
Coca-Cola (fountain)	1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.21
Coca-Cola (bottlers)	1 drink, 8 fl. oz. (prepared with 1 fl. oz. Syrup)	1.12

From the above recipe and analysis, which are confirmed by all chemists who have analyzed these beverages, it is apparent that Coca-Cola is a carbonated, fruit-flavored modification of tea of a little more than one-half its stimulating strength.

A copy of the booklet referred to above will be mailed free on request, and The Coca-Cola Company especially invites inquiry from those who are interested in pure food and public health propaganda. Address

MRS. CATHERINE MILLSAPS.

The passing of dear ones whom you have known always makes this old world feel very poor and makes the world beyond very near. Such have been my thoughts as, one by one, the faces in a splendid oid circle in old Cane Ridge Church have passed beyond.

The latest of these to go was Mrs. Catherine Millsaps, affectionately known to us all from childhood as "Aunt Catherine." She was born on March 11, 1825, at Clifton, in Jefferson County, Mlssissippl, being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson B. Shaw. She was reared and educated among the simple but refining scenes of the old plantation days and came to a splendid young womanhood with those graces of culture, dignity, and religion that marked our mothers of the "old South."

On January 5, 1848, she was marrled to Mr. Armstrong E. Flowers, who died on March 31, 1859. In 1860 she was married to Judge Jackson Millsaps, who had moved from Copiah into Jefferson County, and who was for many years one of the stanchest citizens and best men of the "Clifton" community. He was an uncle of the late Major R. W. Millsaps, of Jackson, Miss., and was very much loved by him. For more than forty years their home was the center of a delightful hospitallty, and they themselves were the beloved recipients of the affection of the community. Happy memories come to me now of "spending the day" at their house and of the cluster of beloved forms in a circle totally transferred to the great beyond. I am sure no "drawing room" scenes in all the earth ever knew a more joyous fellowship. These home scenes, multiplied many times, characterized the old church gatherings, where in the happy services and in the fellowship of the churchyard this couple were enthusiastic participants.

With no children of her own, Mrs. Millsaps' home was the home much of the time the children of kindred, who revere her memory now, and who tenderly ministered to her needs in old age.

On March 29, 1904, Judge Millsaps, in his ninetieth year, passed from earth, and now side by side the husband and wife sleep in the old churchyard, hallowed by so many sacred associations. She died on February 21, 1917, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. Frank Baker, where her last years were spent—not far from the old homestead. I say died, but I simply mean going home where the loved ones of long ago are the loved ones forevermore—Mrs. Mary Watkins, Mrs. Georgie Arnett, Mrs. Esther Jones, Mrs. Katherine Millsaps, and a hundred others! "What a gathering that shall be." Mrs. Millsaps, of Harriston, her niece, writing of her, says: "This is the last one of the dear old ones we loved from Cane Ridge." Yes, but if we are faithful we shall see them all in the sweet bye and bye.

FROM REV. D. W. BABB.

Dear Brother Meek: We had our new church dedicated by Bishop Murrah last Sunday. He preached a fine sermon. The Bishop looks well. We are glad indeed to have him preside over our next Conference.

Brother Woollard was with us, holding our second quarterly meeting, Saturday last. He was at his best. Brother Woollard grows in efficiency as he grows older. So ought we all to do.

We are living in perilous times from many standpoints—but little money in circulation, and foodstuffs unreasonably high. In consequence of the signal failure of almost all crops in this prairie country last year, and the ravages of the boll wevil the two years preceding, we are facing serious times. However, our people are working as never before and economizing, so that if we make a good crop this year the outlook will be more hopeful. Our financial success depends on the kind of crop we make.

Our people, as a rule, are loyal to the Church. Spiritually, we are in as good condition as we have been in for years. Our Sunday schools promise well, and we are proud of our new church, which we hope will stand 50 years and more.

I see that our dear Brother R. M. Davis is dead. It will not be long until we, too, will have to answer the summons.

We had a splendid district conference last week at Shuqualak. All of our preachers were there. A good delegation of laymen was elected to attend the next Annual Conference. The war prospect looks threatening for us. May we live to see the nations of the earth made free from tyrannical oppression!

Doctor, we are glad you are at the head of our paper. We will do all we can to sustain you. Very cordlally,

D. W. BABB.

RENWAR RELIEVES RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says: "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanitarium treatments, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should anyone doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists, price 50c; or by mail on receipt of price from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

Killed by Poisons

All scientists agree that poisonous products in the blood are eliminated by the kidneys. The kidneys act as a kind of filter for these products. When the kidneys are changed or degenerated, by disease or old age, then these poisons are retained in the body. If we wish to prevent old age coming on too soon, or if we want to increase our chances for a long life, Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., says that you should drink plenty of water daily between meals and with your meals to flush the kidneys. Then procure at your nearest drug store Anuric. This Anuric drives the uric acid out.

If we wish to keep our kidneys in the best condition a diet of milk and vegetables, with only little meat once a day, is the most suitable. Drink plenty of pure water, take Anuric three times a day for a month. Anuric is many times more potent than lithia and dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar.

YOU'RE AN EASY PREY, with your flesh reduced below a healthy standard, for Consumption and other Scrofulous and dangerous diseases. And it's for just this condition that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is especially valuable.

If you're thinner than you ought to be, whether from wasting diseases, defective nutrition, or whatever cause, the "Discovery" will surely bring you up to the healthy standard. By restoring the normal action of the deranged organs and functions, it arouses every natural source and means of nourishment. A strength-restorer and flesh-builder. It can be had in tablet or liquid form. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original little liver pills, first put up over 40 years ago. They regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Much imitated but never equaled. Sugar-coated and easy to take as candy.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE CLOSING EXERCISES.

vantage or weakness could hinder spiritual growth and power.

Bishop McCoy's sermon was eminently appropriate to the occasion, and illuminating and inspiring to all in an unusual degree. Whitworth College was indeed fortunate in having so able and distinguished a gentleman to preach the Commencement sermon.

In the evening Bishop McCoy preached a magnificent sermon to a second large congregation for the Y. W. C. A., of which Whitworth has a flourishing organization.

Special musical numbers were a trio by Misses Louise Butterfield, Sharbrough and Woodward, a solo by Miss Hettye Taylor, and a violin solo by Miss Esther Zwirn. Miss Florence Collins played the piano accompaniments.

Whitworth's Graduating Exercises.

Whitworth's graduating exercises, which occurred Monday evening, were attended by a large and interested audience in spite of the unfortunate conflict of the Chautauqua and Commencement.

The closing exercises were impressive, and worthy in every way of the institution's fine traditions.

The first number was the March from Tannhauser, played by Misses Virgie Cooper, Lucile Cassedy, Gus and Blanche Ferguson, to which the seniors in cap and gown entered the auditorium and took their places on the stage.

After a prayer by Rev. J. L. Decell, the program was continued with a two piano selection by Misses Chadwick and Carruth, a beautiful solo by Miss Cordelia Brister, an address by Rev. R. H. Harper, a piano solo by Miss Edith Pearson, delivery of diplomas, certificates and medals, announcements and benediction.

Seated upon the stage, in addition to the graduates, were Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth; Miss Janie Drake, Dean of Whitworth; Dr. C. W. Crisler, pastor of the local Methodist Church; Rev. R. H. Harper, of New Orleans; Rev. Mr. Randolph, of Jackson; Dr. Mounger, of Port Gibson, and other prominent members of the Methodist ministry.

In introducing Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of the Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans, Dr. Cooper stated that Mr. Harper was a splendid student at Centenary College, La., when he was president there, and Mr. Crisler a professor, and Mr. Harper referred in his acknowledgment to the strong and inspiring influence of these gentlemen during his college days.

Mr. Harper's address was polished and scholarly, and in closing he made complimentary mention of Whitworth's well established reputation for high Christian character and thorough scholarship.

Dr. Cooper, assisted by Miss Drake, presented the diplomas and certificates as follows:

A. B.—Nattye Bell, Rusie King, Mabel Potter, Lucile Sauls, Myrtis Woodward; B. L.—Flora Mae Grafton, Marjo Hawkins, Nellie Magee, Evie Lee White; Diploma in Stenography and Typewriting — Frances Decell, Ciara Douglas, Winnie Greer, Hattie Hoffman, Virginia McNeil, Maud Walker, Nell Vann; Diploma in English—Flora Mae Grafton, Lucile Higdon, May MacDowell, Nell Vann, Eugenia Erwin, Maud Kittrell, Sue Beth Sullivan, Evie Lee White; Diploma in Piano—Florence Collins, Alma Sauls, Leslie Rush, May Vardaman; Diploma in Expression—Marjo Hawkins; Diploma in Domestic Science—Ruby Morgan; Certificate in Piano—Ethel Brazil, Mary MacDonald, Ruby McGehee; Certificate in Stenography and Typewriting—Fay Bailiss, Beulah Jones; Certificate in Stenography, Typewriting and Bookkeeping—Christine Doty.

Dr. Mounger awarded the scholarship medals as follows: First year preparatory, Alice Malone; second year preparatory, Ruby Powell; third year preparatory, Gladys Fly; fourth year preparatory, Virgie Cooper.

Dr. Cooper expressed his appreciation of the fine service given by the faculty this session, and praised Miss Drake, dean, and Mrs. Pond, matron, in particular, while the students applauded. He complimented the student body upon their good conduct and earnest work, and stated that the session just closed had been a very satisfactory one. Dr. Cooper stated that denominational schools could not compete much longer with institutions supported by the State unless well endowed, and that in recognition of this an endowment fund of $100,000 would be raised for Whitworth.

Dr. Cooper's administration of Whitworth has been conspicuously successful, a fact due in an unusual degree to his extraordinary executive ability, business judgment, high Christian ideals, sound scholarship and altruistic spirit. It is no flattery to state that Dr. Cooper is one of South Mississippi's greatest assets, and friends of Whitworth in particular and Christian education in general should rejoice that there is a prospect of his obtaining in the next few years the material resources needed to extend Whitworth's usefulness.

MONROE DISTRICT NOTES.

The Monroe District Conference will be held at Oak Grove, in West Carroll Parish, from June 19 to 21. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. I. T. Reames, of Rayville, at 8 p. m., June 19.

The pastor, Rev. W. T. Woodward, will have the brethren from Oak Grove to meet the trains at Delhi on June 19 at 2:23 p. m., in order to take the delegates to the conference in automobiles, which will drive you thirty miles up the Mason Ridge, giving you a view of some of the most fertile lands to be found anywhere; also passing some of the famous Indian mounds, around which cluster many sacred traditions. Much of this country has just recently been settled and in a few years will be adorned, beautified, and made to blossom as a roso.

Those who do not go by auto may reach Oak Grove through Tallulah, La., by way of Eudora, Ark. Let the pastor know how you are coming.

The various interests of the Church will be considered and special emphasis will be placed on evangelism, with thorough preparation for our campaign in July.

All pastors who have formerly served in this district, and men representing connectional interests, are cordially invited to meet with us.

The district is moving on splendidly and an advance over last year is to be noted. In many instances the salaries have been increased and are being kept up better than ever before. Some new churches will be built, and an earnest effort is being made to cover all parts of the territory with the Gospel as proclaimed by the Methodists.

This should be the time for a deep spiritual awakening in every community as a preparation for meeting the most trying times in the world's history. The voice of the prophet should call the land back unto God as in the days of old. The era of a new democracy will only come after great suffering. The revival will make the good results permanent.

"But, Lord, this ceaseless travail of my soul!
This stress! this often fruitless toil!
These souls to win!
They are not mine. I brought not forth this host
Of needy creatures, struggling tempest-tossed—
They are not mine.

He looked at them—the look of one divine;
He turned and looked at me: 'But they are mine!'" L. R. M.

SOME FACTS ABOUT AFRICA.

Nearly one-fourth of the earth's land surface is comprised within the continent of Africa. It is as far around the coast of Africa as it is around the world. Every eighth person of the world's population lives in the Dark Continent. The blacks double their numbers every forty years, and the whites every eighty years.

There are 843 languages and dialects in use among the blacks of Africa. Only a few of the languages have been reduced to writing.

The coal fields of Africa aggregate 800,000 square miles; its copper fields equal those of North America and Europe combined, and it has undeveloped iron ore amounting to five times that of North America.

Africa has 40,000 miles of river and lake navigation, and water powers aggregating ninety times those of Niagara Falls.

One area in Africa unoccupied by missionaries is three times the size of New England; a second would make four States like New York; a third would cover eight Iowas, and a fourth is eighteen times the size of Ohio. Throughout Africa there is one missionary for every 133,000 souls.

Almost the entire continent is now under European flags. France has a colony in Africa twenty times the size of France itself. The British flag flies over a territory as large as the United States.—World Outlook.

THEN AND NOW.

Twenty-six years ago there was not a man in all the region of Luebo that had heard the name of Jesus. Now there are over 15,600 believers.

Twenty-six years ago there was not a man that knew a letter in any alphabet. To-day there are 15,400 in day schools and 32,000 in Sunday schools.

Twenty-six years ago there was not a man, woman or child in all that vast region that could utter a word of intelligent prayer. When Bishop Lambuth was there a few years ago, he estimated that at six o'clock every morning 20,000 people gathered in the various villages for morning prayer.

THE NEGRO AT HOME.

Miss Sara Estelle Haskin, who for some years has been working for the uplift of the Negro, putting into practice at the Bethlehem House, in Nashville, her high ideals of Christian love and common justice for this needy race, has written a strong leaflet in which she sets forth clearly and forcibly our duty in this special field. The leaflet contains many pertinent statements which furnish food for careful as well as prayerful consideration. We give a few extracts from the leaflet:

"The so-called Negro problem is a sword with a double edge, cutting in two directions. If it were merely the problem of helping upward a race just beginning its journey on the road of civilization, it would be comparatively simple. There is, however, in addition to this the still more intricate attitude of our own people toward a diverse people living as our closest neighbors and the reflex influence of that attitude upon our own race. In this delicate question of the white man's attitude is found for the white man really the crux of the whole matter. It is the supremest test of the power of Christianity for his own redemption.

"We need first of all to cultivate an appreciation for God's creatures. We need to learn to know and to feel in the very depths of our souls that wherever we see a personality, be that personality ever so humble or obscure, there is a gift from God. A realization of the sacredness of all human life, regardless of state or condition or race, is the surest and only curb to the natural tendency to race prejudice.

"The sentiment of the best Negro people is just as strong for race integrity as is that of the white man, and in this sentiment lies an opportunity for the Christian white man. An appreciation on the part of the white race of the characteristic talents of the Negro and a faith in the possibility of his future, based on an adequate knowledge of his rapid advancement in the past, will help marvelously in solving the problem of race integrity. * * * Believe in the Negro, and it will help him believe in himself.

"Believe in your heart that there is no ignominy in being born a Negro and that God has set his seal upon him for a noble purpose, and you will help him to a legitimate racial pride. With this realization in his soul, he can no more desire to be an Anglo-Saxon than an Anglo-Saxon desires to be a Mongolian.

"There is every reason for hope that this race, which has meant large things to the nation in its material development, will not only continue to do this, but will also add its part in the growth of the higher national life. Even where there is discouragement we still face the command of Jesus Christ, and the vision is set before us of a redeemed world which must include all men, of all races and all climes."

FROM THE FAR WEST.

Some of your readers will be glad to hear that we had a very successful union meeting in Fresno, Cal., recently in which nearly 5000 people went forward to line up for Christ. Fully two-thirds of these had never before confessed Christ. All of the Protestant Churches had large additions and the town was moved religiously as never before. Rev. Charles Reign Scoville of Chicago was the evangelist and did splendid work in every way. During the meeting, we had with us one who is well known to many of your readers, Rev. J. L. Futrell, now of Navalencia, Cal. Brother Futrell was born near Paducah, Ky. He joined the Memphis Conference in 1868 and after two years went to Mississippi and became a charter member of the North Mississippi Conference, where he remained for more than twenty years. He then spent two years in the Indian Mission Conference and from there was sent by Bishop Hendrix to the Columbia Conference, where his health failed, and he came down the Coast to California seeking health and served a charge for a time in the mountains here. He has been a very useful man to the Church, having had nearly 3000 conversions, and having built 17 churches and 3 parsonages during his ministry.

Brother Futrell and his good wife are well stricken in years now and are in need of a helping hand to save their little home to shelter them in the evening of life. They have some land which will be very productive if they can only develop it. If the friends and former parishioners of these dear people will make them small loans of money to enable them to develop their little place it will be a godsend to them and they will gladly give notes bearing interest to secure the return of the money later on. What is done should be done quickly, as the case is very urgent. Let them hear from you at once in any amount, at Navalencia, Calif.

RESOLUTIOONS.

(The following resolutions were adopted in the Report on Sunday Schools at the late session of the Hattiesburg District Conference.)

Whereas, we are duly appreciative of any degree of inspiration that the State Interdenominational Association may have supplied in the past, but believing its day of usefulness is gone; and

Whereas, we believe that the Churches are abundantly able to take care of all the Sunday school work of the State; therefore, be it

Resolved, 1, That the time has come when we must line up with the Sunday school work of our own Church.

Resolved, 2, That as pastors and laymen here assembled, we appeal to our people to cease to divert their money and interest into other channels, and to maintain loyally our own Sunday school work.

Resolved, 3, That we appeal to the Conference Sunday School and Mission Boards to give some definite expression as to their attitude on this vital question.

Resolved, 4, That the Secretary of this Conference be requested to send these resolutions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Don't Cough Until Weak

Foley's Honey and Tar

HELPS COUGHS QUICKLY

FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR takes right hold of an obstinate cough and gives quick relief.

It puts a healing coating on the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages. It stops the tickling, loosens and raises phlegm easily. It is just splendid for bronchial and la grippe coughs and tight, wheezy breathing.

Mrs. W. S. Bailey, Lancaster, Ky., coughed almost continuously day and night, until she took Foley's Honey and Tar. After taking half a bottle, her cough began to slow up, and seven bottles entirely cured her cough.

WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

IN BED MOST OF TIME

Her Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Indianapolis, Indiana. — "My health was so poor and my constitution so run down that I could not work. I was thin, pale and weak, weighed but 109 pounds and was in bed most of the time. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and five months later I weighed 133 pounds. I do all the housework and washing for eleven and I can truthfully say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a godsend to me for I would have been in my grave today but for it. I would tell all women suffering as I was to try your valuable remedy."—Mrs. WM. GREEN, 332 S. Addison Street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

There is hardly a neighborhood in this country, wherein some woman has not found health by using this good old-fashioned root and herb remedy.

If there is anything about which you would like special advice, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

From the Field

Guntown and Baldwyn Charge, N. Miss. Conf.

Dear Brother Meek: We have just held a splendid meeting at Baldwyn, which greatly revived our people and added 8 names to our membership roll. Brother Dorsey, our presiding elder, preached two soul-stirring sermons in the beginning of the meeting, and two sermons were preached hy the pastor, after which Rev. J. H. Bell, one of the Conference evangelists of the North Mississippi Conference, came, with his singer, and took charge of the services. Brother Bell did us good work. His preaching is clear and Scriptural, and goes to the heart. Brother Templeton sings well and is religious. The influence of this meeting in Baldwyn promises to last.

We have just held our second quarterly conference on this charge, which was very fine. The stewards made perhaps the hest report in the history of this work. We are now pressing an "every member canvass" for missions, and we hope to be able soon to pay that assessment in full. We are now looking to God to give us a great victory during the year.—J. D. Simpson, P. C.

Logansport, La.

My Dear Doctor Meek: After several weeks of enforced absence from the field I am again hard at work, much to my satisfaction. Since May 11 we have been engaged in a revival campaign here in Logansport with Rev. H. B. Perritt. The pastor will probahly tell your readers something of the work later. Logansport is a splendid community and we have here a good, suhstantial congregation. Brother Perritt is making fine progress with his work and is most generally heloved and appreciated. He is said by his parishioners to be far above the ordinary as a preacher. He is certainly a most delightful man to he associated with in the work of the church. From Logansport I go to Plain Dealing, and later to Longstreet; then we will be in Mississippi for a number of meetings. I am back in the work with all my heart and will gladly receive such invitations as I can find time to accept. My address is Yazoo City, Mississippi. Yours sincerely,

THOS. J. NORSWORTHY.

FROM BROTHER McINTOSH.

Dear Dr. Meek: Perhaps our friends would like to know where we are. We are now in the midst of an old-time revival in Throckmorton, Texas. We are holding the meeting under a big tabernacle. Throckmorton nestles among the hills, close to the foot of the plains. It is largely made up of rich ranchmen. We have just recently closed a great meeting at Austin Avenue Church, in the city of Waco, Texas. Dr. Culver is our pastor there. He is a great preacher, and a man of wonderful leadership. While there we had the pleasure of spending much time with Rev. R. A. Burroughs. I find Brother Burroughs to be the same consecrated and loyal man to the Church that he was when in Mississippi. He is a man that has grown in the deep things of grace, and it was a great pleasure to be with him. Brother Burroughs is doing a great work for the orphans of Texas.

We will close our services here in a few days, and go to Wichita Falls for a meeting. After that meeting we expect to turn our faces back toward old Mississippi. I am ahly assisted in my work by Mr. Lloyd P. Bloodworth, who is my chorister, and my wife, who has charge of the women's and young people's work.

Success to you. I greatly enjoy the reading of the New Orleans Advocate. It grows hetter all the while.

Yours fraternally,

W. M. McINTOSH.

A GREAT DAY AT EUPORA.

Dear Dr. Meek: Sunday, May 13, was perhaps the greatest day in the history of the Methodist Church in Eupora, Miss. We were honored with the presence of Bishop James H. McCoy, of Birmingham, Ala., whose coming had been looked forward to with the greatest interest, by not only the Methodist Church, but hy the whole town.

The membership of the Methodist Church worked very faithfully to make possible this occasion. On January 1 of this year there was a debt of $1636, of almost three years' standing, hanging over this church. Early in January a committee of three (ladies) was appointed to begin collecting money with which to pay this debt. This committee, upon their own request, was met by the pastor for a short prayer service before beginning this work.

For several days the committee worked very earnestly, until it seemed as if they had done what they could," when the work was taken up by a committee of men, and carried to a successful end. When the church was free from debt, Bishop McCoy was invited to come over and dedicate it. May 13 being the only Sunday that the Bishop had open, we asked him for that time and he gave it to us.

Bishop McCoy arrived in due time and preached a really great sermon at 11 o'clock, after which he dedicated our church. Having been invited on behalf of the graduating class of the Eupora High School, the Bishop preached another great sermon at 8 p. m. before the graduating class and hundreds of others. The town was well prepared and anxious to receive the Bishop, as it had never been honored with a visit from one of our "chief pastors" before.

Bishop McCoy made many friends here, even during his brief stay, and "those who know him best, love him most."

We were glad to have with us on this occasion Rev. J. T. McCafferty, our pastor at Durant, Miss., and a former pastor of this splendid charge. Brother McCafferty is much loved hy all of the people of the town.

We were also fortunate in having with us our presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Mitchell. Brother Mitchell is in high favor with the people of this charge and throughout the entire district. He is doing a great work, and I am sure that under his leadership our district will he second to none when the Bishop calls for the reports from the Durant district.

Our second quarterly conference was held on May 12, and, despite the talk about "hard times," our good people raised the pastor's salary from $945 to $1000, and we are indeed praying for, and looking forward to, a good year.

THOS. H. MILLS. P. C.

Calomel To-Day, Sick To-Morrow

Dose of nasty calomel makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day you'll be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

THE NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE ON EDUCATION.

At its recent session at Montrose, Miss., the Newton District Conference adopted unanimously the following resolutions which were presented by the Committee on Education:

Be it resolved by this Conference:

First—That we appreciate having had with us the representatives of Millsaps College and of Emory University; and that we reaffirm our interest in these and the other educational institutions of our Church.

Second—That we heartily favor making all our Church schools intensely religious and practical training institutions that will develop a people fervent and godly in spirit and wise and skilful in action.

Third—That we think it unnecessary for the Church to maintain schools which do no more than duplicate the work of the State schools.

Fourth—That we especially commend the Mississippi Conference Training School, which is located at the seat of this Conference; that we are gratified that the President is already making some headway in the campaign for improvements, and we invite him to continue to occupy our pulpits and present this worthy cause to our charges; that we are gratified that our General Board of Education at its recent meeting at Nashville saw fit to make an appropriation to this institution for this year, and we trust that they may make a larger one next year; that we urge our Annual Conference Board to recommend an assessment at the next session of at least $500 for this school—we would strongly urge more, rather than less, than this minimum amount; that we urge the members and friends of the Church to patronize this institution, rather than secular schools of a more worldly character; that we invite those who have means to contribute, to do so without waiting to be solicited; that we pledge ourselves to do what we reasonably can to increase, in every way possible, the success and efficiency of the institution.

Fifth—That we tender our thanks to Rev. W. B. Hogg for his impressive plea for the Mississippi Conference Training School and for his voluntary donation; that we also tender thanks to Rev. J. L. Neill for his speech and donation and call for subscriptions; also that we tender thanks to those who so graciously responded with subscriptions totaling, notwithstanding other calls, $337.

The above is a true and correct copy.

ROLFE HUNT, Secretary.

WINONA DISTRICT CONFERENCE TO BE HELD AT DREW.

The District Conference for the Winona District will meet at Drew on June 12, 13, and 14. Our people will be disappointed if there is not a full attendance. They are making preparations for a great meeting and the members of the district conference will help to make it if they all come, and the Editor of the Advocate will be an actual necessity to make it go.

On Sunday, the 17th, following the district conference, Bishop W. B. Murrah will dedicate our new church at 11 o'clock a. m., and we earnestly request all the presiding elders and pastors who have served this good people to be present at the dedication. These brethren will please write me that they will be here. Our people are anxious to see these good brethren, who have helped to make them what they are, and they will be delighted to see every one of them. We desire to make a great occasion.

Now, Dr. Meek, you must come to the district conference. We want to show you what we have up here, and it may be you can arrange to come here some day.

Fraternally,

W. S. LAGRONE.

Physicians Explain Why They Prescribe Nuxated Iron So Widely

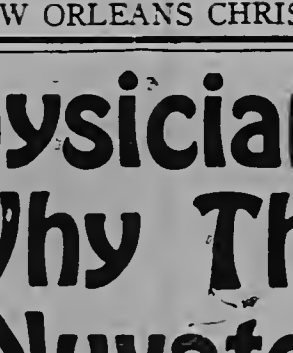
For Creating Red Blood, Building Up the Nerves, Strengthening the Muscles and Correcting Digestive Disorders—Often Increases the Strength of Delicate, Nervous, Run-down Folks 100 Per Cent. in Two Weeks' Time.

CHICAGO'S FORMER HEALTH COMMISSIONER SAYS IT SHOULD BE USED IN EVERY HOSPITAL AND PRESCRIBED BY EVERY PHYSICIAN

Opinions of Dr. Howard James, late of the Manhattan State Hospital of New York, Dr. A. J. Newman, Former Police Surgeon, City of Chicago, Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York and Other Physicians Who Have Tested Nuxated Iron in Their Own Private Practice.

NOW BEING USED BY OVER THREE MILLION PEOPLE ANNUALLY.

New York, N. Y.—It is conservativeiy estimated that over three million people annually in this country alone are taking Nuxated Iron. Such astonishing results have been reported from its use both by doctors and laymen that a number of physicians in various parts of the country have been asked to explain why they prescribe it so extensively, and why it apparently produces so much better results than were obtained from the old forms of inorganic iron. Extracts from some of the letters are given below. A special messenger was sent to interview the Former Health Commissioner of Chicago, Wm. R. Kerr, as it was known that he had personally used Nuxated Iron. Commissioner Kerr said



William R. Kerr, Former Health Commissioner, City of Chicago

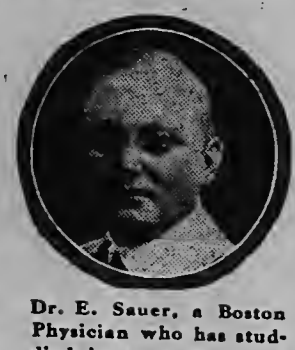
"As Health Commissioner of the City of Chicago I was importuned many times to recommend different medicines, mineral waters, etc. Never yet have I gone on record as favoring any particular remedy, but I feel that in Nuxated Iron an exception should be made to the rule. I have taken Nuxated Iron myself and experienced its health-giving, strength-building effect, and in the interests of the public welfare I feel it my duty to make known the results of its use. I am well past my three-score years and want to say that I believe my own great physical activity is due largely to-day to my personal use of Nuxated Iron, and if my endorsement shall induce anaemic, nervous, run-down men and women to take Nuxated Iron, and receive the wonderful tonic benefits which I have received, I shall feel greatly gratified that I made an exception to my life-long rule in recommending it. From my own experience with Nuxated Iron I feel that it is such a valuable remedy that it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician in this country."

Dr. A. J. Newman, Former Police Surgeon, City of Chicago, and Former House Surgeon, Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago.

In commenting on the above Dr. A. J. Newman, Former Police Surgeon of Chicago and former House Surgeon, Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, said: "I heartily endorse everything Former Health Commissioner Kerr says about this remarkably efficacious preparation. It has been my particular duty during the past six years to assist in keeping Chicago's five thousand bluecoats in good health and perfect fighting trim so that they would be physically equipped to withstand all manner of storms and the ravages of nature's elements. Recently I was prompted through an endorsement of Nuxated Iron by Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York, to give it a trial. This remedy has proven through my own tests of it to excel any preparation I have ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders."

Dr. Howard James, late of the Manhattan State Hospital of New York, and formerly Assistant Physician, Brooklyn, State Hospital.

Dr. Howard James, late of the Manhattan State Hospital of New York and formerly Assistant Physician, Brooklyn State Hospital, said: "Nuxated Iron is a most surprising remedy. A patient of mine remarked to me after having been on a six weeks' course of it: 'SAY, DOCTOR, THAT THERE STUFF IS LIKE MAGIC.' Previous to using Nuxated Iron I had been prescribing the various mineral salts of iron for years, only to meet complaints of discolored teeth, disturbed digestion, tied-up, hardened secretions, etc., when I came across Nuxated Iron, an elegant, ingenious preparation containing organic iron, which has no destructive action on the teeth—no corrosive effect on the stomach, and which is readily assimilated into the blood and quickly makes its presence felt in increased vigor, snap and staying power. It enriches the blood, brings roses to the cheeks of women, and is an unfailing source of renewed vitality, endurance and power to men who burn up too rapidly their nervous energy in the strenuous strain of the great business competition of the day."



Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston Physician who has studied both in Medical Institutions.

Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston physician who has studied both in this country and in great European Medical Institutions, says: "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old, and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of twenty and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man—in fact, a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—Nuxated Iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50, after taking Nuxated Iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth.

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good, and as a consequence you become weak, pale, and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well: you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work, or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Many an athlete and prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for lack of iron."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York.

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, visiting Surgeon, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York, said: "I have never before given out any medical information as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists

Editorial

The high liver is generally a short liver.

* * *

The teaching that the Church has always most needed is that of example.

* * *

The old way is the only way. With all their inventiveness, men can construct no new route to heaven.

* * *

There is such a thing as being broader than the truth, which is frequently very narrow. One may well beware of such a breadth.

* * *

There are some who talk about "thinking in terms of continents" who think chiefly in the thoughts of other men—sometimes forgetting to make the proper accrediting.

* * *

Not all the Jesuitism in the world is shut up in the Roman Catholic Church. Most of the other denominations have at least a few sprouts of it. Like all the other vices, it has a spreading tendency.

* * *

No one can measure this side of eternity the influence of a holy, Christian life, obscure though it may seem. From it go forth a light and power, which cannot but impress and help others. It is when it is thus bodied forth that Christianity makes its mightiest appeal. And every one, whether possessed of one or ten talents, may thus faithfully witness to the saving and keeper power of Jesus. To what extent are YOU doing this?

THE SECRET OF TRUE SUCCESS.

In the concluding words of the Gospel according to St. Mark is contained the following statement: "And they (the disciples) went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them." This was immediately after the Master's triumphant ascension.

These words, "the Lord working with them," explain the secret of the marvelous achievements of the early Christians. And herein is set forth a truth that should never be forgotten. "Without Me, ye can do nothing," declared our Lord. All the human machinery and methods that well-meaning men may bring into existence, whatever other results of a praiseworthy character they may produce, can not of themselves impart spiritual life to the souls of men and build up a truly vital and conquering Christianity. A reasonable amount of organization is necessary, but too much of it, especially if it is relied upon, may become a hindrance. Bishop Wilson's concluding speech at the last General Conference contained a warning at this point.

It may be well to note, in this connection, that the promise of our Lord's presence and co-operation is predicated upon our teaching men to observe ALL THINGS THAT HE HAS COMMANDED US. The whole Gospel of Christ is needed to save mankind. There is nothing superfluous in it.

DR. ABBOTT VS. ST. PAUL.

In The Outlook of May 30, Dr. Lyman Abbott has an article on "The Pernicious Habit of Self-Examination," in the course of which he says: "Adopt this method. Read and re-read the life of Christ. Familiarize yourself with his teachings and spirit. Do not ask yourself whether you have obeyed his teachings. Do not ask yourself whether you possess his spirit. Forget yourself."

This counsel of Dr. Abbott, whatever else may be said of it, certainly is not Pauline. In Second Corinthians, chapter xiii, and verse 5, the great Apostle exhorts as follows: "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not yourselves, how Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?" Paul also declared, "The Spirit himself beareth witness with our spirits that we are the children of God." Dr. Abbott does not seem to think it needful to listen with the ear of consciousness for this Inner Voice, or to introspect the heart to see if there be in it the fruits of the Spirit. Without this subjective knowledge, we do not believe that one can be confident of his sonship and a really happy Christian. To disregard the experiences within the soul and to make religion wholly objective would be to strip it of its highest certitude and rob it of its sweetest joys. True Christianity is both subjective and objective, manifesting itself both within the soul of man and in his outward conduct, and he needs to have regard to both of these spheres of its disclosure.

There may possibly be such a thing as overdoing the matter of self-examination, but we are inclined to think that there is little likelihood of that in this busy, bustling age, when there is so little time taken for mediation and prayer. We doubt if there has ever been a period when Dr. Abbott's warning against heart-searching was less needed than it is now. Better theology than that of the Editor of The Outlook is that set forth by Walter Malone, the most brilliant of the South's later poet's, in the following lines:

"He who is man indeed never must yield
To that which turns him from the Inner Voice;
Obeying that, he needs to fear no foe."

"WHEN A MINISTER SETTLES."

Under the above caption, the Western Christian Advocate (Cincinnati) contained a few weeks ago the following editorial:

"Bishop Henderson recently held the Philadelphia Conference at one of the churches in that city. The Philadelphia North American gave the Conference wide and sympathetic publicity. There was the finest spirit of enthusiasm manifest, and patriotism ran high, while the temperance feeling, with its optimism, became at times almost a tempest. The fact is, if one is to judge by the reports in the daily press, it was a 'big and uproarious Conference.' There were, however, frequently some very human touches reported, especially as to the appointments. The pastors in the city of Philadelphia, as in other cities, become rooted, set, and grounded. They do not want to move out of the metropolitan districts. They shift round the circuitous windings of the groove until they get deeper and deeper into the staid and unchangeable ways of a settled pastorate, differing in the fact that they are moved to another church once in a quadrennium. (We do not understand this last clause, since a Northern Methodist preacher may be appointed to the same charge indefinitely.—Ed. Ad.) The effect is narrowing and deadly upon the spirit and vision of the pastor. He fails to see the Kingdom of Christ in the large, and unless some Bishop has the moral courage to lift him into an entirely new field, the round upon round in the same territory brings him to the valley of dry bones. This was one of the situations Bishop Henderson met in making the appointments. The day of adjusting had passed and the time had arrived for some radical changes, as the daily press reports. When the difficulty was faced it presented a formidable task. The Bishop begged 'the brethren to be considerate,' adding that 'a protest against a change as a hardship, just because it is eighty miles distant, is not worthy of consideration. You must remember that portions of God's Kingdom are outside Philadelphia.' When men in the ministry come to that place in their life-work where they feel there is only one field for them, and contemplate that as their chiefest joy, and beg not to be removed, they deny themselves the opportunity to renew their ministry and to reinforce their spiritual and intellectual lives by undertaking new tasks under unfamiliar conditions. Every pastor, to avoid the dry rot of provincialism and parochialism, must keep ever before his mind the fact that large portions of the Kingdom of Christ are outside his present parish and the city in which he would willingly ground his life and spend the rest of his earthly ministry."

In view of the fact that there are those among us who are continuing to insist that the limit as to pastorates should be removed, this editorial utterance is well worth reading and pondering. For our part, it has always been our conviction that the effect of taking away the time limit would be to weaken and impair the itinerancy, and possibly ultimately to destroy it. This and other descriptions that we have seen of conditions in the Northern Methodist Church, which some years ago took this action, have, we think, been strongly confirmatory of the view that we have held.

In one of our Southern cities, at least, the unlimited pastoral term has been pretty well tested, namely, in New Orleans. For a long time the churches here were excepted from the time limit, as the old Disciplines will show (this regulation being repealed in 1871), and during that period some congregations in this city were served by the same pastors for many years. We feel sure that it cannot be shown that during that regime our Church here had a larger degree of growth and prosperity than it has since enjoyed. There was recently a gentleman in our office who lived here while the unlimited pastoral provision was in force, and he told us how very weary one of the New Orleans congregations became of a pastor who had served it for twelve or fifteen years, though he was a man of considerable ability, and what vigorous and roundabout expedients had to be brought into requisition to secure a change.

It is to be hoped that our people will have the good sense to know when they are well off. An optional itinerancy would be certain not to work effectively. If the time limt is too short, let us lengthen it. To remove it entirely would inevitably lead to such conditions as those described by our distinguished contemporary across the Ohio, and other very objectionable things not mentioned in the editorial quoted, such as calling preachers, advertising for an exchange of pastorates, etc.

A LITTLE THING

'Twas planted a seed—'twas a little thing
To sow in the fields of his farm and field—
A grain of mustard. It grew and grew
Till it sheltered the weary fowl and bird,
And in its branches green coolness knew.
Sang hymns of praise in their resting here
And he who planted the tiny seed
Forgot his shame at the humble deed.

'Twas gave his life—'twas a little thing
Twas all he had to give to the King.
The Master sent him where darkness dwelt.
Where the blind and lame to doom knelt.
'Twas a lonely land, but he loved to go
As he brought to the hopeless the message of love.
And many whose longings had been in vain
To the life of the Spirit was born again
And his life poured out to a world in need.
Was multiplied as the mustard seed.

COLERIDGE'S TRIBUTE TO THE BIBLE

On the margin of a copy of Thomas Adams "Private Thoughts," now preserved among the treasures of the British Museum, Samuel Taylor Coleridge wrote these penciled lines:

"For a great part of my life I did not know that I was poor, naked, and blind, and miserable. And even after I did know that, I did not feel it aright. But I thank God I feel it now somewhat as it ought to be felt. Stand aside, my pride, and let me see that ugly sight, myself. I have been deceived all my life by sayings of philosophers, by songs of poetry, but most of all by the pride of my own heart, into an opinion of self-power, which the Scriptures plainly tell me, and my repeated failures tell me that I possess not. It is the design of the religion of Jesus Christ to change men's views, to change their lives, and to change their very tempers. Yes. But how? By the superior excellence of its precepts? By the might of its exhortations, or by the promise of its rewards? No. But by convincing men of their wretchedness, and guilt, and blindness, and helplessness. By meekly making the necessity of the remission of sin, and the necessity of supernatural light and assistance, and by promising to the penitent sinner, and by actually conveying to him these evangelical blessings."

Well might Charles Lamb say, "Reader, lend thy books to S. T. C., for he will return them to thee with usury. He will enrich them with his annotations, and thus tripling their value." I have had experience, and I counsel thee, Shut not thy heart, nor thy library, against S. T. C."—Southern Churchman.

VENEERS.

Hark to a parable. Once upon a time there were two balls. One was made of wood, covered with very bright, new gilt. He was shining and handsome. The other was made of solid gold clear to his heart, but he hadn't been polished up much and he looked a trifle dull. They were put together in the same box. The gilt ball was placed on a soft bed of cotton in one corner, but the gold ball was left free to roll about. Pretty soon he began to explore the box, rolling from side to side and from corner to corner. The more he traveled about the brighter he grew. Soon, in his journeys about the box he began to roll across the bed of the gilt ball. "Don't do that," exclaimed the gilt ball in terror, "Don't touch me! You'll rub it off!" "Rub what off?" asked the gold ball in surprise.

It is hard for people conscious of integrity in life and purpose to understand how thinly spread are the virtues that some other people assume. They never quite learn that all is not gold that glitters. They do not realize that the bright surface that looks so beautiful will rub off under rough handling.

Whether it be true or not that beauty is but skin deep, it is true that much politeness is. Parlor tricks and rules of deportment vanish under the stress of some crucial occasion. Shipwrecks and theater fires have been hard tests of the "After you, my dear Gaston" philosophy. It is then generally each for himself. The native instinct for self-preservation surges up through all [illegible] veneer that covers it, and the glorious behavior of [illegible] men of the shining T hand.

There is at present profound depression in many minds over the [illegible] result of all our centuries of training in humanity, morals and religion. The war has brought nothing to the fore we had supposed the race had long since outgrown. Underneath the smiling surface of civilization have smoldered [illegible] of hate and cruelty that need but the appropriate occasion to burst into flame. The step from orderly and respectable citizenship at home to bloodthirsty savagery in the field has proved to be a long one. In a few short months [illegible] of thousands of men in Europe have taken [illegible] millions who a little while ago would not [illegible] of making a too inconsiderate move might [illegible] their highest civil and spiritual privilege to kill as many as possible of their fellow-men—and by any means at hand. How quickly the veneer disappears under the first test of war.

One need not cross the water to find the situation. He can find it in his own nature. Few of us realize how close we are to savagery till some unforeseen temptation or peril swoops down on us. At such times we may discover the call of the wild to be very strong. We feel that we have much in common with people whose deeds, in our better moments, we deplore and condemn. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." There is peril of casting stones at other people while we live ourselves in glass houses. Kipling touched the sore spot in his remark that

The governor's lady and Susie O'Grady
Are sisters under the skin.

The unhappy person we find at one of the great human worries—that of keeping up appearances. He has no appearances to keep up, being all the way through that which shows on the surface. He walks through life as a fact and not as a sham.

Life proceeds from the center outward and not in the other direction. Character is first of all integrity of soul. The prayer of the Psalmist is for every one who wants to be genuine: "Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord my strength and my redeemer."—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

THE CHURCH'S OWN.

"If any provideth not for his own, and specially his own household, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an unbeliever." 1st Tim. 5:8.

The above Scriptural principle applies to the Church as well as to the family, with equal or greater force.

It is the undenied and undeniable duty of the Church to provide proper support for her ministerial servants, active and retired.

These servants are the Church's own—her own employees and faithful workers, her spiritual servants, her indispensable financial agents, her successful builders, her history-makers, her beloved wards. Their care is her responsibility, her absolute and unavoidable obligation, and that, too, as long as they abide in the sacred relations of the ministry.

If the Church provide not for her, who will? And if the Church provide not for her own, is she not in grave danger of denying the faith and acting toward her beloved children as an unbeliever?

The Church's greatest danger lies in the region of forgetfulness, of mere inadvertence or oversight. And this forgetfulness applies especially to the preacher who has dropped out of the ranks, and the widow and children of the preacher who has been removed from his earthly labors. A part of the Church's obligation rests ON YOU PERSONALLY as a member of the Church.

In order to provide more adequately for her dependent servants, the Church established the Superannuate Endowment Fund. You may help the old preachers, the widows and children by paying into this permanent fund, and thus make a permanent investment in their behalf.

You may thus aid your beloved Church to treat her servants with justice and fairness. You may aid in increasing the efficiency of the ministry. You will contribute to the relief of those who are burdened with infirmities and poverty.

Old Subscriptions.

On our books are thousands of dollars in subscriptions and subscription notes given, many of them several years ago. Old subscriptions are as good as new ones if you will pay them. Every reason for your making these subscriptions at the time made, still holds good. The fund is no longer an experiment. Its steady growth is assured. Pay up your old subscriptions—do so, if you please. If impossible to do so, do us the kindness to let us know immediately.

For you to participate in this most needed and sacred work of the Church is a great privilege, of which you may avail yourself. It will be to you a joy forever.

Secretary.

BISHOP THIRKIELD AND THE NEGRO METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCHES OF LOUISIANA.

Both because of the rareness of a visit from a Methodist Bishop to this rural section of Louisiana, and because of his special mission to the Negro congregations of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was a recent visit from Bishop Thirkield, of New Orleans, to the Lafourche section of South Louisiana of more than general interest to both the white and the black Methodists. To the writer, this interest was increased by the fact of the strenuous effort that is being made by some of our Southern constituents to hinder the union of the two Episcopal Methodisms of the United States because of the relation of these Negro congregations to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the consequent propriety or impropriety of such a pastoral visit and oversight by a white Bishop. It was with special pleasure, therefore, that we accepted an invitation from the local pastor to accompany for a part of the itinerary Bishop Thirkield and Dr. Melden, President of the New Orleans University, a Negro school with an enrollment of 400 students.

In spite of the visit being on Friday in the busy season when these Negro members are employed as farm hands on the sugar plantations, full houses and an enthusiastic welcome awaited the distinguished visitors at each church. We could not help but think how this church attendance and religious enthusiasm contrasted with the "corporal's guard" of the "superior" white race that we have heard so much about in the columns of the Advocate of late), that could with no little difficulty have been mustered on this same day in this section to have met a Bishop, or any one else who represented things religious. And in this connection we thought of the fact that here in Donaldsonville, where we have had a church of white Methodists since before the division in 1844, that the Negro Northern Methodists outnumber the whites three to one, and give of their means to support the gospel in about the same proportion, and that from the standpoint of reverence for God, love for the Church, and attendance upon the means of grace, that the "superiority" shoe was in this case "on the other foot."

The pastors of all the churches visited by Bishop Thirkield bore the marks of genuine piety and of fidelity equal to the pastors of any race of Methodists, and at least one of them is a graduate of the Gammon Theological Institute, his education having been under Bishop Thirkield's twenty-five-year term as president of that institution. The members likewise, by their neat dress, good manners, and reverent bearing, conducted themselves "as becometh saints," and showed as much appreciation for the instructions of their recognized and honored leaders as would have been shown by the Christians of any race. Especially noticeable was their response to the educational collection that was being raised for the endowment of New Orleans University, not one congregation coming behind in the amount apportioned to it, and some went beyond the amount asked, we understand. In observing this enthusiastic church loyalty, and thinking of the progress for the last two generations of these ex-slaves, we mentally draw a comparison between them as Christians and that of the Mexicans, the North American Indians, the Chinese, the uncivilized Africans, and the other races for whom we are raising so many "specials" in our missionary zeal; and of how little we as Southern Methodists are doing for these needy Samaritans who "fell among robbers who left them half dead" at our own doors; and then that we should allow, as seems now possible, that some certain "relation" to them should hinder, at our hands, the uniting of American Methodism!

The primary aim of this visit of Bishop Thirkield and Dr. Melden was to inspire the colored members to a greater effort for an education for themselves and their children and to raise additional endowment funds for New Orleans University. In discussing Negro education Bishop Thirkield reminded his constituents that their first school was the institution of slavery, and that in this school they learned the lessons of law and order, the power of sustained work, the English language (the Bible being its greatest classic), and the elements of the Christian religion. And but for this providential school, these American Negroes might have been barbarians still, as are some of their kinspeople who were enslaved by other than North American white men. The American Negro's second school, said the Bishop, was "when God said to Abraham (Lincoln) 'let my people go,'" and they became free citizens of the greatest democracy of the world; and that through the M. E. Church alone Northern philanthropists have given ten million dollars for their education; but as they get farther from slavery the philanthropists are thinking that they should be doing more for themselves, and so these large gifts are harder to get, and the Negro must more and more make good of his own efforts in his educational life and Christian citizenship.

Among other things discussed by Bishop Thirkield was the question of the exodus of Negroes to the North. He reminded his congregations that nearly all of the cheap land now in America is in the South, where climatic and other conditions indicate the natural habitat of the Negro; and he believed that the better housing, better wages, better educational advantages, and justice at the hands of the courts, that the emigrants sought to correct in migrating, would more and more be guaranteed them by the justice and fairmindedness of the Christian citizens of the South. That when the Negroes could realize all of these blessings in their own Southland, as he was sure in time they would, that no power could draw them away. (Aside, to the white members of the party, the Bishop said that the exodus so far was largely from Mississippi, South Carolina, and Georgia, where the Vardaman-Tillman-Blease-Hoke Smith type of politician has inspired race hatred and injustice to the Negroes at the hands of the baser sort of white people.)

Altogether, the occasion was a happy and profitable one, and their white friends extended a most cordial hospitality to the distinguished guests of their Negro Methodist neighbors, and the writer appreciates the privilege that this opportunity gave him of studying at first hand the church relation question of the white and black races as it is in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

En route down Bayou Lafourche we passed a congregation of Negro Catholics, near Napoleonville, that had a white priest, and although the church is in the heart of the South Louisiana cane fields where there are but few whites and many blacks, and we have been preaching in the same community for upwards of two years, and off and on for the last twelve years, we never knew before that this priest was white and his congregation black; and there seems to be no more thought of a "social equality" in this than a "social equality" among the white and black laborers in the surrounding cane fields, or in the near-by saw mills. And why should there be? The physicians minister to whites and blacks alike, as do merchants, lawyers, and other public servants, and no question of race equality is thought of. Why should administering the sacrament to a colored Christian indicate social equality any more than giving a dose of medicine to a black consumptive? And why should the ministry of a white Bishop to a congregation of Negro Methodists be any more a "social equality" than the presidency over a civil court of a judge in settling the disputes of colored citizens, and especially since they not only by their suffrage elected him, but are by every guaranteed right of the constitution of their country eligible to the same high office? And more to the point, what social difference is there in Dr. Wm. Walker or Dr. J. D. Hammond of the M. E. Church, South, being president of our Paine College in Georgia, and Dr. Melden of the M. E. Church being president of their New Orleans University for Negroes in New Orleans? Or how can our brethren who almost have convulsions at the thought that uniting with the M. E. Church would bring us into social equality with the Negroes give us a difference socially between Bishop Thirkield of the M. E. Church in company with one of his colored district superintendents visiting the Negro Methodist churches in Louisiana, and Bishop Lambuth in company with Prof. John Wesley Gilbert establishing churches among the uncivilized Negroes for the M. E. Church, South, in Africa? And what do those brethren who have various types of fits at the thought of having Negro representatives in the General Conference of the united American Methodist Church propose to do with these new churches in Africa that we are with so much zeal raising so many "specials" to establish? As Americans, remembering the "Boston Tea Party," we can't under any circumstances "tax" them without "representation," and we could not think of a work so auspiciously begun being carried on without making converts and the consequent Negro members, and the resulting African Conference, M. E. Church, South, with delegates in the General Conference, and if these brethren should still maintain that they could not under any circumstances sit in Church Council with Negro Christians, by what logic could they be willing to live with them forever in heaven?

In spite of the most charitable constructions that can be put on such "social" quibbles as are being aired in this connection to defeat the uniting of the Church of God at the expense of a dependent and defenseless race, the method seems to us of near kinship to the methods of selfish scheming of the demagogic politician who seeks to ride in to public office at the expense of race hatred and social discord, after he fails by logical argument and brotherly methods to gain his point.

"Now we that are strong" in knowledge, in wealth and the methods of producing it, in health and how to preserve it, in morals, in piety -"ought to bear"- in instruction, in leadership, in fair and impartial courts of justice, in dividing wealth and influence- "the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves." Rom. 15:1.

Donaldsonville, La. P. O. LOWREY.

THE LOVE OF GOD.

Recently a gentleman remarked that he had "quit his Church" and affiliated himself with another, because the minister preached too much on the love of God. The reason for his action was so surprising that we made an inquiry for particulars. If the report of our informer is correct, the love of God was preached by his former pastor as if it were a soft sentiment merely, a sort of doting amiability which had no regard for the sinfulness of sin. It is possible to misrepresent the love of God. Rightly understood, it cannot be preached too much.

God's love is holy. It does not overlook or condone sin. It squares with justice. It is a love which went to the utmost to win the lowest for the highest. The measure of the love of God is the gift of His Son. We are told in Scripture that God spared not His only begotten Son, but freely delivered Him up for us all. There is, as it were, a suggestion of struggle in the Bible way of putting this truth. The thought is that God's holiness put upon His love this demand of the supreme sacrifice of which even the Almighty God is capable in order that it might be possible to forgive and receive sinful men.

God's love devised the plan of salvation. It is a love which cannot save man in his sins. It saves him from his sins. It is because God's love is so pure that it is so stern in its demands and so exalted in its purpose. The blood-red line of sacrifice runs through the entire Old Testament and culminates in the New, in the one final sacrifice for sin. No one who reads the Scripture with grace-washed eyes can fail to see there the high holiness of the love of God. We meet with very stern judgment on sin and almost ruthless penalties, so great and so pure is God's love.

God's love is redemptive and sacrificial. It cost God His dearest and best. The whole purpose of revelation goes to show that the wages of sin is death. It was to save men from this inevitable doom that God sent His Son to taste death for us, that we might have life through His death. Nowhere does Scripture give the impression that sin does not matter and that its guilt makes no difference to His love. The very opposite is the case. God gave up His Son to the bitter and shameful death of the Cross in order that sinful man might be justified. All light views of sin and all flippant notions of the love of God are forever condemned by the awful fact of a crucified Savior.

No one who understands what it was that God gave up His Son to, can ever make light of sin. Those who realize the glory of the person of Christ and the depth of His voluntary humiliation will never presume on the love of God. The costliness of the divine sacrifice attests the terrible nature and consequences of sin. Many who speak glibly about the love of God and about His Fatherhood owe their assurance of these facts to the very fundamentals of Christianity which they deny. It is because the Jesus of history is also the Eternal Son of God that His revelation of the love of God has authoritative value for the world. And it is because one such as He died a death of absolute and voluntary obedience to the holy and loving will of God that man has the perfect guarantee that God is love. A mere man could not give man the guarantees the soul craves. Only God Himself can do that. And this God has done by sending forth His Son for our redemption.

God loves man, but hates sin. God's love seeks the sinner's salvation and sin's destruction. God's love made an infinite sacrifice to save man from sin. God's love cannot be divorced from His righteousness and justice. Indeed God's love is the explanation and action of His wrath against sin. When we think Scripturally about the love of God, we can appreciate that our God is a consuming fire to sin and to the sinner who chooses to identify himself with it.

How can anyone preach the love of God without coming to the Cross with its darkness and horror? How can one escape the costliness of the love when we hear those words of the Divine Sufferer, so mysterious with the sense of awful desolation, 'My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" God's love passeth knowledge for this very reason that it dealt with the appalling fact of sin with a finality which makes possible for all who repent and believe a rich forgiveness and the priceless inheritance of eternal life.

The doctrine of the love of God, rightly understood, makes holy men, heroic men and Christlike men. It challenges the best in the believer. It makes him the eternal foe of sin. He has done with it forever as a willful practice. The love of God, when it becomes a personal spiritual experience, impels to all noble sacrifice, to the sublimest courage, to the most militant enthusiasms. The true sense of the love of God makes every trial sweet, every cross a joy, every duty a pleasure, and unswerving loyalty a passion. When the soul is inwardly assured that God is love with an assurance born at Calvary, life is transfigured and made dynamic with all the fulness of God. No greater prayer can be offered than that which Paul prayed for the Ephesians, that they might "be strong to apprehend with all the saints what is the breadth and length and height and depth, and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge."—Christian Intelligencer.

THE BREVITY OF LIFE.

Rev. W. S. Harrison

Like birds, gigantic, weird, on wings of fate,
The awful centuries are flying by,
And dropping human lives both soon and late,
Till scarce one centenarian lives to sigh
One sweep of wing, with reach of fifty years,
Leaves few for laughter's mirth or bitter tears.

The centuries in grand, majestic flow,
Are freighted with the precious lives of men,
Most surely borne to ends they do not know,
They trust that all is plain to Heaven's ken.
On running board of Heaven's car we stand,
From which we drop at last in earthly sand.

Two generations of the human race
Will not suffice to span the hundred years,
And yet so rapid is the running pace,
And short the time, men's truest work appears,
Each decade has its own commanding force
Ten classes rule successive through the course.

The present century, yet young and strong,
May seal the fate of all alive today,
May God be patient with the giddy throng,
They know but little of the doubtful way
They feel the surge of time's most rapid course,
And know they soon must yield to mortal force.

The passing time in centum rounds but tells
The click of second hand on dial face
Of God's eternal clock, that sadly knells
The dying millions of the human race,
And shows that human life is but a gleam,
A single stroke on time's recorded realm.

The boundless, vital, never failing source,
Controlling Wisdom, perfect and Divine,
Most surely gives, innate, the driving Force,
That keeps secure all things in proper line,
And in this Wisdom's perfect oversight,
Each human life completes its rapid flight.

A SUPREMELY IMPORTANT AND URGENT MATTER.

By Bishop W. A. Candler.

Our country has entered upon a war with one of the strongest powers in Europe. In order that it may bear well its part in this conflict for human rights and freedom, a multitude of our best and most brilliant young men will be called to the colors; and when they enter the army their school days will end, whether they do or do not survive the diseases of the camp and the dangers of the field. This is scarcely less than a calamity to the nation.

But a greater calamity will befall us if we allow the youth who are not of age for the army to be uneducated. As many as possible of these must be sent to our colleges and universities this fall, or we shall suffer disastrous consequences in the years at hand.

The leadership of mankind will come to the United States, if indeed it has not come already to our country. This leadership involves grave responsibilities in this time of war, and it will involve even more serious obligations when peace comes.

If we fail to educate the youth who are of the age just behind that of the young men who will go to war, we will not have enough educated young men in the country to meet the responsibilities of the new era which will come upon us with the coming of peace. The welfare of our own country, and the welfare of the world in so far as we affect it, will suffer if we incur any lack of educated men.

The South must bear its part in the period of great opportunity and obligation which is at hand; but the South is not now prepared to do so. Our colleges and universities must be speedily made stronger, if we are to do what we ought. Both contrihntions and patronage must be directed to our institutions of learning this year as never before.

Let no parent or guardian entertain for a moment the thought that the conditions which confront us justify the keeping out of college this fall any youth who is prepared to enter upon a collegiate course. If sacrifices are necessary in order to send to college the young men who will be left to us, then the sacrifices must be made cheerfully and willingly. It is better for us to sacrifice material interests and personal comforts than to sacrifice the higher moral and intellectual interests involved in the speedy education of as many young men as possible.

It is to be hoped that the pastors of our people will consider this supremely important matter, and bring it to the attention of parents and guardians without delay. It would be nothing less than unfaithfulness to the solemn responsibilities of the pastoral office for any man to neglect this duty at the present crisis in the history of our church and our country.

QUARTO-CENTENNIAL COMMENCEMENT AT MILLSAPS.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D. D.

Because of their very bigness some things are hard to do, and so it may be written of the recent Commencement occasion at Millsaps College. For twelve months it has been the plan of the institution to celebrate at the same time both the quarter centennial of the College and the eighty-fourth birthday of its generous founder, Major R. W. Millsaps, which event fell upon the 30th of May. Because of the plans involved, the exercises were one day longer than usual, and everything was so perfectly executed that only the one word, GREAT, can rightly express the occasion. Despite the depression produced by the hovering war-clouds, there was an atmosphere of gladness everywhere about the college, and extending even to the city of Jackson.

Beginning with the class contests for medals on Friday, May 25, to the closing exercises on Wednesday, May 30, the enthusiasm was at high tide. Both Drs. Lee and Steel were at their best on Sunday; the former preaching the Commencement sermon at 11 o'clock in the College chapel, and Dr. Steel speaking to the Y. M. C. A. in the Galloway Memorial Church at 4 p. m., as only Steel can.

Monday, the 28th, was Alumni Day. Rev. W. L. Duren, of Columbus, Miss., of the class of 1902, had been chosen as orator of the day, and right well did he vindicate the wisdom of the selection. At 6 p. m. the chief social event of the season (the Alumni banquet) was held in the large dining-hall of the Edwards House, where there sat, at the long tables prepared, more than a hundred old pupils gathered from all sections of the State, and from Louisiana and Alabama, to respond to toasts, which ran far past midnight, and were replete with reminiscences of college escapades and adventures—and many were the secrets of long-hiding that were revealed that evening.

While Tuesday was designated on the program as Quarto-Centennial Day, it might with equal suggestiveness have been known as Education day. Dr. E. M. Melvin, Superintendent of Presbyterian Schools in Mississippi; Prof. David H. Bishop, of the University of Mississippi; Dr. Stonewall Anderson, of Nashville, Tenn., and President Wm. A. Webb, of Randolph-Macon College, delivered addresses on some features of Education of such merit that there was a suggestion that they be put in pamphlet form for general distrihution. While these addresses occupied more than two hours, they were inspiring and graciously received. Eighteen colleges and universities were represented in person or by greetings, including our last great enterprise, Emory University, which sent Dr. Muckenfuss, who for a number of years was teacher of Sciences in Millsaps.

On Wednesday, Founder's Day, the exercises of the occasion were closed. After a great address by Dr. John A. Rice of St. Louis, Bishop Murrah paid just and pleasing tribute to the memory of Major R. W. Millsaps, whose generous offer twenty-five years before had made possible the College, and whose munificent gifts since have placed it among the first institutions of our Southland. The first class to graduate, in 1895, was composed of three members; that of 1917 numbered forty-seven—so greatly has grown the influence of the college during its quarter-century life, which may be likened to its days of infancy. The administration has studiously avoided the conferring of honorary titles, but in response to a unanimous conviction, it was thought well to bestow the degree of Doctor of Letters upon Prof. R. S. Ricketts, who has been connected with the teaching force of the college almost from its beginning, and who had just completed his fiftieth year as an instructor of the young in the schools of the State. The prolonged applause by the large audience confirmed the action of the Board as one which honored the College, as well as the professor, in this first digression from its established rule.

The importance of the occasion was fully appreciated by the Board of Trustees, as was attested hy presence of every member save one, and a willingness of most of the Board to remain on the grounds the three days, giving attention to the business affairs of the institution. That a Board composed of bankers, lawyers, and ministers should give this time to this interest is suggestive of their high apprecation of the College as an asset to the Methodism of Mississippi. The Committee on Improvements reported the grounds and buildings in better condition than at any former session of the Board. For neatness and attractiveness the campus is becoming a place of beauty. Several valuable gifts were made to the library during the year, and one scholarship, $1000, to be named for Marvin Galloway, a former student of the College was established.

The growth of the institution had been such as to demand a strengthening of the teaching force, and to meet this demand Professor Alfred P. Hamilton, a graduate of the Southern University at Greensboro, Ala., an A.M. of the University of Pennsylvania, and a member of the faculty of the Woman's College of Montgomery, Ala., was added to the faculty. Prof. D. J. Savage, an alumnus of the College, who has been connected with the Missouri Military Academy for several sessions, was elected to the position of Head Master of the Preparatory Department. With these additions, under the wise administration of President Watkins, the friends of the College feel sure of a greater usefulness for it among the institutions of the State. While the report of Commissioner Black was very encouraging, it was thought best on account of the unsettled condition of the country to defer for a time the erection of the new dormitory which has been projected. Through the patriotic spirit of Mr. W. M. Buie, a flagpole 70 feet high has been planted on the campus, from which "Old Glory" is to float to the breezes as occasion demands. Judged hy every token, Millsaps College is in first-class condition.

PRESIDING ELDERS AT THE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

Rev. W. W. Holmes.

The presiding elders of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences will meet together in their second quarterly meeting at the Seashore Campground, June 28 and 29. The presiding elders of the North Mississippi and Alabama Conferences may also be present. "The Efficient Presiding Elder," "Some Problems of the Presiding Elder," and like subjects will be discussed.

The Divinity School, June 26 to July 5, never offered a finer program. Bishop William A. Quayle, "one of the greatest men of American Methodism," will speak at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. daily from June 27 through Sunday, July 1. Rev. Chas. Goodell, of New York, will begin his lectures Monday, July 2. His subjects are: "The Methods of Jesus;" "Jesus at Emmans;" "The Finality of Jesus;" "The Supreme Task of The Christian Church;" "Heralds of a Passion;" "The Price of Winning Souls." Dr. Goodell is said to be the greatest pastor evangelist in the country. The opening address on Tuesday night, June 26, will be given by Dr. Henry Churchill King. Every pastor as well as every presiding elder in our four Conferences ought to be present this year at the Divinity School. The program is such that we can not afford to miss it.

"HOW TO INCREASE THE EFFICIENCY OF THE COUNTRY CHURCH."

Three prizes of $25, $15 and $10 respecitvely, are offered for the first, second and third best essays of not less than three thousand nor more than five thousand words on the above subject by the Directors of the Seashore Divinity School, June 26-July 5, Biloxi, Miss.

This contest is open to any one who pays the fee of $2.50 and sends in the essay to Rev. W. W. Holmes, Secretary, on or before the opening day of the School. With a subject of such tremendous interest and of so vital importance there should be not less than fifty men and women writing on this subject for contest.

You readily see that the prize offered is a mere bagatelle compared with the good that will come from an intelligent, suggestive and enthusiastic discussion of this question, especially so since the eyes of the whole world are now upon the farmer and his development in efficiency.

There are but a few weeks in which to write and do your bit in advancing the interests of the Country Church. On the efficiency of the Country Church rests the success of Christ's cause for the future. In fact, the proper solution of the Country Church problem will settle all other questions.

Your paper, if a prize winner, will be read before the School on the last day and published in our Church papers for the benefit of the entire Church. Please let me know whether you purpose to enter this contest. What are you going to do about it? Get busy and do it now.

SOME WORDS OF COMMENT.

By the Editor.

We are publishing this week an article from the pen of Rev. P. O. Lowrey, which we trust will be given a careful reading. His utterance is, as we see it, an impressive illustration of how purblind one may become when seized with the strange infatuation for Church union. It is not our purpose to review fully Brother Lowrey's remarkable deliverance, but there are a few things that we feel constrained to say (as briefly as possible) concerning some of the questions that he has raised.

1. How Brother Lowrey ever got the idea that Southern Methodists are opposed to white ministers preaching to Negro congregations, or administering the sacraments of the Lord's Supper and baptism to them, is quite beyond us. We do not remember ever having attended one of our Annual Conferences at which on the Sabbath our ministers did not fill the pulpits of the colored churches in the community, and we have frequently heard them exhorted to preach to the Negroes as often as possible in their charges through the year. Nor is the Southern Church opposed to Christian white teachers doing a work of instruction for the religious betterment of the colored people. On the contrary, the Northern Churches have been given this opportunity largely through the influence upon State Legislatures of Southern religious denominations, ours included. Within the past two or three years an effort was made to have a law passed in Georgia and Mississippi forbidding white teachers to engage in such work, and no voices were more outspoken against it than those of the Wesleyan and New Orleans Christian Advocates. It is quite noticeable that in his inveighing against race discrimination, Brother Lowrey, in his illustrations at least, keeps on the safe side. He tells us about white preachers and teachers in charge of colored congregations and classes, but not a word does he say about reversing the process and having colored clergymen and pedagogues for the whites. With his views, why should he object to this—especially since he has told us, that there are communities in his section in which the colored Methodists are "superior" to the white Methodists?

2. Brother Lowrey does not seem to know that the establishment of the mission in Africa to which he refers was the joint work of our Church and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. He is the first man that we have ever heard suggest that our Church has any notion of admitting delegates from this mission into the General Conference or of taxing its members. On the contrary, our Church has ever maintained that she could not afford to sustain any relation to any body of colored Methodists differing from that which she sustains to the C. M. E. Church. The problem which our brother has tried to conjure up in this connection seems to us to be wholly imaginary.

3. We are told that "through the M. E. Church alone (presumably since the Civil War) Northern philanthropists have given $10,000,000 for the education of the Negroes. We wonder if our brother knows that the Southern people are taxing themselves more than $10,000,000 A YEAR for this purpose. It is getting to be quite the fashion nowadays to try to depreciate by implication, if not otherwise, what the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has done for the Negroes. The fact is overlooked that through the Civil War and the work of the carpetbaggers and scalawags the minds of the Negroes were greatly poisoned against the white people of the South. Even after the C. M. E. Church was set up as an independent body its members were ridiculed and scoffed at because of their relation to our Church. Moreover, the war left the South prostrate and ruinously impoverished, and, following in its awful wake, came the carpetbaggers, of whom Judge Jeremiah S. Black said: "Their felonious fingers could reach even into the pockets of posterity." But notwithstanding all this, the C. M. E. Church has 240,000 members, and is in every respect a worthy and highly creditable body of Methodists; and it is our information that they are not hankering after union. The Church, South, ought to do much more for them in the future than she has done in the past, and that she will, we entertain no sort of doubt. With all her boastings, what the Northern Methodist Church has done for her Negroes, in comparison with what has been accomplished by the independent Negro bodies, shows up to a very poor advantage.

4. Brother Lowrey apparently regards Bishop Thirkield as quite a Christian hero. We are not averse to "hero worship" within reasonable limits; but in this instance, though we would not impeach the Bishop's good intentions, we cannot share our correspondent's enthusiasm. Bishop Thirkield is seeking to build up congregations among the white people of this section, in harmony with the plan which seemingly his denomination has to invade the South (alluded to elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate), and we cannot be unmindful that his work in this respect is in plain violation of solemn compacts made by his Church with ours. We were disposed for a time, however, to hope that among the colored people at least he might do a good work in these parts; but we confess that we are beginning to have misgivings even as to that. We feel sure that he will not help conditions in the South (which in some particulars need improvement, as indeed is the case everywhere) by a general indictment of her courts as to their dealings with the colored people and the attacking of her public men, faulty though many of them may be. With the latter, we are frank to say we do not by any means always agree; but Bishop Thirkield is scarcely in a position to serve as an effective reformer among us. Why he should be held up to Southerners as an oracle on the exodus question, we do not know. That the treatment of the Negroes in the South, though far from ideal, has played any considerable part in causing this migration, we do not believe. Every one who is informed knows that the abnormally high wages in the Northern States, due to the European war, and labor solicitors started this movement; and it is but natural that Georgia, Mississippi, and South Carolina should be most affected by it, since they are more thickly settled with Negroes than any other of the States.

The wrong treatment of Negroes, which we always deplore, is not by any means confined to the Southern States; even the comparative few who have gone North within recent months have been sufficient to start the fires of persecution to blazing in that section, in a way that causes one to wonder what would happen if, instead of a few thousands, the colored population there numbered millions. Note the following account of a recent outbreak in an Illinois town, in the State of "Abraham (Lincoln)," which we take from the Times-Picayune of June 4:

"Some minor incident, rumors of an insult by a Negro to a white woman, precipitated the riot, and the mob fury was let loose. As we have said, the casualties were comparatively few because there was no opposition to the mob. The Negroes fled out of town or were hustled to the jail as a protection from violence. The mob started to storm the jail, but, fortunately, was dissuaded from it. Had the attempt been made, a wholesale slaughter as at Springfield and other Illinois towns would probably have followed. Instead, the mob amused itself marching through the back districts and burning the Negro homes. The firemen were kept busy two days in checking the flames and a big conflagration was thus prevented, but a number of houses were destroyed."

One remarkable thing about this union agitation is that it is thought a consolidation should be effected by having the Church, South, to do all the surrendering, even to the extent of committing hara-kiri in its interest, if necessary. Possibly this is because she has been generous enough to offer to make practically all the concessions that have been proffered up to this time.

A few words more: We do not think that in all our writing we have ever referred to the Negroes as an "inferior race," an expression that has been considerably used in the Northern as well as the Southern Church press. In our judgment, the attitude of the white people of the South toward the Negroes is not due to contempt or hatred, but to race instinct and a desire for the maintenance of race integrity. If there were as many representatives of the Mongolian or Malay race in the Southern States as there are of the African race, the attitude of the white people toward them would, in our opinion, be the same that it is toward the colored population. For instance, some of these States have already enacted laws forbidding marriages between the Chinese and white persons. This we consider wise and wholesome legislation.

We have noted with unruffled composure Brother Lowrey's characterization as demagogues those of his Southern brethren who think that the race problem is a factor of large importance in the proposed unification of American Methodism. Even if all that he says were true, we might solace ourselves with the reflection that there are worse things in the world than demagogues.

MISS MAGGIE M. TATE.

By Rev. C. A. Northington.

Maggie M. Tate was born on March 29, 1852, and died on April 28, 1917. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when a child and was a member of it some sixty years. Miss Maggie was confined to her room for over a year, and, as her pastor, I am glad to say that I never visited her but that I came away a stronger man. She always had a word of cheer and never complained, but was always talking about the goodness of God and how he had been so mindful of her. She gave me one of her Bibles, and I had never had my hands on as well studied a Bible in my life. Miss Maggie gave her life for her fellow-beings. She was once connected with Grenada College, being there in 1887. Subsequently she taught in the Memphis Conference Female Institute at Jackson, Tenn.; in her later life she was an instructor in Blue Mountain College, rendering such service there that she made it possible for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to be represented in that noted institution. We have a nice church in the town of Blue Mountain with a membership of nearly one hundred.

I give you Miss Maggie's farewell address to her church, old Mount Olivet, which she joined when a child—this exhortation was written by her on her deathbed:

Dear Brother Northington: Please give the people this message from one who is forced to wait on the borderland. The time is coming to every one of you when you will come to this land, and some of you may have to wait as I am doing, and there may be hours of pain that nothing earthly can help you bear, and possibly long hours of wakefulness at night when all the world around you is wrapped in slumber, while you in a restless, feverish way try vainly to sleep. These hours are many, but I never feel lonely. I never feel that I want any human being awake with me, because in the quietest solitude I can hear my Savior so much more plainly than I can in the noisy, nervous crowd.

Now, what I want to beg every one of you to do in this: commit God's Word to memory while memory is active; learn all his precious promises by heart; get some old Christian's Bible where the precious thoughts are marked and mark your own Bible. Then memorize some verses every day, and repeat all you know by heart every night. Then when eyes grow dim and strength fails, when the little exertion of reading throws you into a fever, when nerves are on the rack and you cannot listen—at such times, how comforting to your soul will be the sweet promises the Holy Spirit brings you from memory's treasures.

Here are some that sustain me and make my apparently lonely hours jubilant with echoes from the better land. "As thy days so shall thy strength be." "The eternal God is thy refuge and underneath are the everlasting arms." "When thou passeth through the waters, I will be with thee and through the rivers they shall not overflow thee. When thou walkest in the fire it shall not consume thee, neither shall the flames kindle up on thee; fear not, be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee, yea, I will uphold thee by the right hand of my righteousness." "Thou will keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed upon thee, because he trusteth in thee." "Cast thy burdens upon the Lord, for he careth for you." "Like as a father piteth his children, so the Lord piteth them that fear him." "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." "In my Father's house are many mansions—I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go to prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." "As my Father loveth me, so continue ye in my love." "Lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world." "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard * * what the Lord hath prepared for them that love him." "And God shall wipe all tears from their eyes. And there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain." There are hundreds of others just as precious. Learn them.

And memorize many of the sacred hymns, such as "Jesus, lover of my soul," "Just as I am, without one plea," "How firm a foundation," "Amazing grace, how sweet the sound," "Rock of Ages;" "When I survey the wondrous Cross." (Get these by heart.)

The greatest legacy my Father left me was his teaching of the Bible, and getting me to commit it to memory. Learn the Bible; learn the Bible. Take this as a farewell exhortation from one who loves you. Signed: MAGGIE M. TATE.

The Great Battle

BEER AND WHISKEY.

The campaign of the beer interests to exempt beer from war restrictions or prohibitions and also the use of grain for the manufacture of beer ought not to deceive the well-informed. Beer is intoxicating liquor, and so is whiskey. It takes more beer than whiskey to intoxicate or make one drunk, but one gets drunk just the same. A beer drunk and a whiskey drunk are both harmful and dangerous.. Generally the beer drunk costs more.

In London, in 1916, Lord D'Abernon, Chairman of the British Board of Control, found that out of 903 cases of drunkenness, 40 per cent had become drunk on beer or stout alone.

Massachusetts tried a beer experiment in 1870-73. In 1869 the State was under prohibition. In 1870 beer was allowed. Dunkenness and crime rose at once. In New Bedford, in 1872 (the year in which beer saloons were opened), the number of crimes increased over 68 per cent; cases of drunkenness over 120 per cent.

Professor von Struempell, Germany's noted physiologist, says: "Nothing is more erroneous from the physician's point of view than to think of diminishing the destructive effects of alcohol by substituting beer for other alcoholic drinks."

Professor Moblus of Leipsic says: "I know little of whiskey or wine drinkers. With us it is beer that ruins the people. The beer drinker is living only a small part of his normal life. His beer is not a stimulant; it is degrading his powers, not increasing them. It is doing to him exactly what alcohol in any and every form is doing to man—poisoning him from the top downwards.

All of these claims that beer is harmless in the light of history is mere buncombe. The plea that the beer by-product is needed to feed cattle is ridiculous. Brewers do not make cattle food. They destroy it. They take good barley, destroy the best of it and leave the worst for the cattle and hogs. It is poor feed even for animals. The Copenhagen dairies, the best in the world, will not use it. If brewerles are necessary to furnish a market for grain and a by-product to feed hogs and cattle, why have nearly all the great stock and cattle States of the West abolished both the manufacture and sale of liquor?

Save Food—Not Liquors.

About $101,000,000 worth of grain and foodstuffs are used in making beer, and $44,000,000 worth in making whiskey. The supreme need in this emergency is to save food for our army, our supporting popuiation and our Allies. Every one is being urged to practice economy. The correct policy for the government and people is to treat both of these evils alike. The program of the brewers would encourage the drink that is most expensive to the drinker for the same amount of alcohol consumed and which wastes the larger amount of foodstuffs. On the other hand, any program that simply stops the use of grains and food material in the manufacture of distilled liquors and does not prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors or provide for the commandeering of such liquors already manufactured for redistillation to get ethyl alcohol needed in such enormous quantities for munitions and thus save new grain to that extent for food, will not conserve our food supply, but would tend to drive the drinker from beer to whiskey.

As between the two courses, Congress should do the sensible thing and choose NEITHER!

NO GOOD REASON CAN BE GIVEN: Why whiskey grain should be saved and beer grain be wasted. Why half the grain that is needed for food should be destroyed by exempting beer. Why an equivalent of 5,000,000 pound loaves of bread should be wasted to make beer. Why we should starve women and children in order to furnish beer which is considered to be an intoxicant and a harmful beverage. Why we should set aside the experience of history and make another beer blunder.

NOR, ON THE OTHER HAND: Why we should prohibit beer and allow the sale of distilled liquors out of vast quantities in bond and storehouse.

A Dangerous and Vicious Compromise.

The brewers and wine growers are putting forth tremendous efforts to save the beer and wine traffic from destruction. They are willing to desert the distillers and to sacrifice them utterly if they can save themselves, and exempt beer and wine from the proposed war prohibitory law. For prohibitionists to accept any compromise of this nature would be disastrous to the cause of temperance and saloon suppression. The States have not exempted beer and wine in their prohibition laws. For Congress to enact a prohibition law which exempts beer and wine would seriously retard the national prohibition movement.

Beer is an intoxicating liquor. The British Board of Control reported that 40 per cent of the cases of drunkenness were caused by beer or stout alone. Beer drinking decreases the efficiency of the drinker. It produces disease, brutality and drunkenness.

We also desire to emphasize the necessity for stopping the sale of all intoxicating liquors during the war or else commandeering the distilled liquors now manufactured. There is enough distilled liquor in bond or in private warehouses and stock to supply the normal trade two years. Any prohibition which does not take this into account will not prove an effective measure for grain conservation—in view of our need of alcohol in munitions—but will play directly into the pockets of the distillers. Prohibitonists can play no favorites among the different branches of the beverage traffic. We cannot see how any genuine prohibition worker can consider with favor for one moment such a dangerous and vicious compromise.

FIRST METHODIST TO PREACH IN NEW ORLEANS.

By Rev. Payton A. Sowell.

While Methodists are "not a large company" in New Orleans, and Methodism has not flourished as its friends have desired, nor as its genius would indicate, the slowness of growth has not been due to any lack of earnest and capable preachers. Neither has it been for lack of an early beginning, for the wide field of Methodism has been drawn upon for its pulpits. Southern Methodism has made levies upon nearly every Southern State, from Maryland to Mexico, for preachers to hold forth there the peculiar doctrines believed and taught by Methodists. Over a century ago, the itinerant Methodist missionary sounded in New Orleans the notes of a "full salvation and free will."

Somewhere between 1800 and 1805, when Bishop Asbury "called for volunteers" for Louisiana, one young man offered himself to the Bishop, and came on the long, lonesome, dangerous journey, through the trackless (or almost trackless) wilderness, and planted the vine of "Methodism" in Opelousas; and it is thought that he was the first Methodist preacher to "blow a blast of the gospel trumpet" in New Orleans. Rev. Elisha W. Bowman, who in his day was recognized as a prominent and valiant pioneer Methodist preacher, has the distinction of being that heroic volunteer. He was born in Virginia ,and was the son of a worthy local preacher. When the son was only a lad, his father moved to Kentucky. Here, in the morning of his life, he was converted and was licensed to preach in the Methodist Church.

In 1801, he entered the "Western" Conference. He began his ministry in the far "Northwest," and in two or three years, volunteered to come into Louisiana, and gave a year's service to the people of this State and city. Leaving here, his next work was "French Broad," in the Holston country; then in Middle Tennessee, and then in Kentucky. His health failing, he became an eminent physician in Kentucky, and died in 1815.

It means much in 1917 to do the full work of a Methodist preacher, in the midst of the peculiar environments of this State and city; but it is impossible to realize in the midst of the present physical comforts and luxuries of this great State and city, the difficulties and hardships encountered by Rev. Elisha W. Bowman, when in 1803 or 1804, he rode, possibly from Ohio, on horseback, to Opelousas and New Orleans and opened his hymn book and Bible, and preached "Free Salvation" in these places. Methodism should not forget her heroes.

UNIFICATION—ILLUMINATING THE SITUATION.

My Dear Dr. Meek: In a lengthy discussion, under the above title, the Editor of Zion's Herald makes a statement which I have not seen in any other paper. He says: "Both North and South there are those who are holding that the instructions of their respective General Conferences are the irreducible minimum of negotiations. * * * The fact is that we are facing a proposition for unification by reorganization. That means that the entire polity of the Churches is negotiable."

It is not my understanding that the polity of the Church is under consideration, or that the Joint Commission is authorized to take it under advisement.

If unification is to be brought about by the upheaval of the foundation of Methodism, then I am through with it. I am not willing to disfigure or weaken my Church. Much less am I willing to destroy it. JOHN W. BOSWELL.

FROM A NEIGHBOR.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate is the organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Louisiana and Mississippi. Dr. R. A. Meek is its able editor, and has in no way more signalized his ability than in the defense he has made of his Church against organic union with the Northern Methodist Church. His paper honored us last week by inserting in full the Journal's recent utterances on the organic union question. In the judgment of Dr. Meek, the problems in his own Church and ours involve many of the same general principles.—Presbyterian Journal (New Orleans).

OUR SOLDIER BOY.

By Mrs. Lee M. Lipscomb.

I did not raise my boy to be a soldier,
For the future I could not foresee;
But if his country needs him,
Then a brave soldier he must be.

I did not train him for a soldier;
'Tis nobler that his life be given
To save instead of kill his fellows,
And help make earth a little heaven.

But if by wicked, unjust nations,
Our peaceful country is oppressed;
Then my boy must shoulder arms
And go forward to do his best;

And, tho' I cannot stop the heartache,
Nor banish from my eyes the tears;
Yet I too must give my treasure,
In spite of anxious grief and fears.

Our flag is fluttering in the breeze,
Proclaiming to the whole wide world
Its emblem of truth and liberty,
Where'er its colors are unfurled.

So, mothers all o'er this fair land,
Let us bid our sons be true,
For Faith and Hope are gently whispering,
"God will send them back to you."

Winona, Miss.

A VALUABLE BOY.

Jim Carson came rushing into Professor Winton's room at the little mountain hotel without even the formalities of knocking.

"Do you know what's happened?" he gasped. "Get ready right away. We've got to ride up to your place as fast as we can go, and we'll be too late at that. Put on your hat, I tell you. The driver mixed up the boxes out there, and took two of my boxes of dynamite and took them along up with the stuff that was to go to your place. He'll be careful enough. He's used to handling dynamite. But suppose the folks at your camp try to open that stuff with a hatchet and chisel! Come on, quick! It makes me sick to think of what's probably happened by this time."

Professor Winton hurried, but he did not look as disturbed as Carson.

"If the driver gets in there safely I've an idea that it will be all right," he said. "The boy that helps me will take charge of those boxes. I told him a lot of specimens and supplies for laboratory work was coming, and he was not to open any of the boxes, but set them away carefully in an outside shed. I believe we'll find them there."

"Do you mean to say that the boy will do just as you told him when there's no one there to boss him? If he does he's a new breed of boys. Of course he'll thump some of those boxes down. And the chances are that he'll want to peep into them while he's there alone. And there's three other camps right close to you, and no one knows how many of the women and children will be wandering around there when the explosion takes place. Oh, come on, ride faster! I suppose we ought to take a doctor along to look after the injured, if there's any of them left."

"If I were a betting man I'd lay a wager that everything is all right," said Professor Winton.

"Professor!" said Carson, disgustedly, "you may know bugology and a lot of such things, but you don't know boys. All boys meddle."

They rode up on the trail toward the place where the Professor had his summer camp. This year his sole assistant besides the cook was a boy who was a native of the mountains. The Professor had met him one day in the spring, and had hired him after one conversation. The boy was an orphan, and brought no recommendation. But he had been very eager for the job, and, for reasons known to himself, the Professor felt sure of him. Three of the Professor's friends were camped near him, and they had their families along.

When they came in sight of the camp they saw that no catastrophe had occurred. A tall, thin boy in overalls came out to meet them. He was a very ordinary-looking boy, but there was something likable about his straightforward eyes and firm mouth.

"Where are the boxes, Dave?" said the Professor.

"In the shed, where you told me to put them, sir," said Dave, with just a hint of surprise at the question.

"You didn't open any of them?"

"Why, no, sir, you told me not to. I hope nothing's taken any harm, sir."

"Oh, no!" said the Professor, smiling.

They walked to the shed and opened it. Carson drew a long breath when he saw his two boxes standing there.

"You didn't roll them down-hill, I see," he said to the boys. He, too, could smile by this time.

"No, sir; Mr. Winton told me to handle the boxes very carefully. Besides, I would know enough not to do that when they might hold cases of butterfiles or beetles or a collection of eggs."

"Well, I wouldn't hardly have believed it, but I'm mighty glad to know there's one boy in the world who can obey orders exactly, and who doesn't meddle."

Dave looked somewhat puzzled at this.

But when Mr. Carson went on to tell him what the two boxes contained, he merely said: "Well, I couldn't have handled them gentler if I had known what was in them. You see, butterfly wings are awfully fragile. And when Mr. Winton gets a good butterfly he doesn't want to lose it."

The two boxes were removed to a safe place until Mr. Carson could arrange to have them taken away.

"If you haven't any use for that boy when you leave the camp send him down to me," said Carson to the Professor, as he was taking his leave. "I could use a boy like that. I'll pay him well and be good to him."

"A good many people could use a boy like that," said the Professor. "A boy who is absolutely faithful never goes begging long for a good job. In fact, I can use him myself. I'm going to take him home with me. He's anxious for an education, and he shows an unusually intelligent interest in my own line. I'll give him a chance to go to school, and he can help me out of school hours. If he makes as much use of his opportunities as I expect him to, you will hear of him in the future."

The boy Dave was back in the shed carefully opening the boxes that the Professor had pointed out. He did not yet dream what an important thing it was to him that he had learned to be quite trustworthy. But if he had been just a little careless when he was sure no one was looking, he would certainly have lost his great opportunity, and it might have cost him his life.—Junior World.

A RECENT SUNDAY FIGHT.

By Rolfe Hunt, D.D.

I have wondered why so many of the great battles of the world have been fought on Sunday, a day set apart to be holy and typical of peace and rest. Is it because the god of war would manifest his contempt for the sacred day while robbing, destroying and murdering?

On a recent Sunday morning, as I sat on my front porch in a Mississippi town, enjoying the breezes that blew softly, and looking out upon the sunshiny landscape, suddenly there came a whirring of wings around the corner. I glanced up and saw an angry mocking-bird in swift pursuit of a crested blue jay. The jay seemed to be flying at his best; but the mocking-bird, scolding as he pursued, gradually gained on the jay. Seeing that he would be overtaken, the jay decided he might as well rest his wings a second or two by alighting on the fence. The mocking-bird swept by him, striking angrily as he passed. Then, with a sudden and graceful curve, the mocking-bird turned and struck at him with his bill again. The assault was so vigorous that the jay descended to the ground, in which lowly position he evidently thought the adversary would be at less advantage. There he would duck his head as the mocking-bird circled about and descended upon him. There was no effort to strike back. In a short time the attacking bird was joined by two other mocking-birds, and the lonely jay had to shift his position at a lively rate, but he kept to the ground. Finally, the jay noticed that all the mocking-birds had alighted for a breathing spell a few feet away, all to the north of him. As suddenly as the discovery was made, old jay rose on his wings and struck a bee-line for a clump of trees to the southward. The mocking-birds gave a look of surprise, but seemed content merely to be rid of him.

I am sure the jay enjoyed his rest and the consciousness that the war was over, and the mocking-birds scattered out contentedly in the several directions from whence they had come.

I never discovered the cause of the hostilities; but the blue jay has a reputation for being rather careless of property rights. He not only feeds upon nuts, berries, and insects, but at times robs other birds of their eggs and even their young. So I suspect that the blue jay had been prowling around the mocking-bird's nest that Sunday morning, and thus provoked the attack. The ties of close kinship and the recognition of a common enemy led the neighboring mocking-birds to join the army.

A BEREAVED CHURCH.

Dear Brother Meek: Our church at Black Hawk, Miss., has sustained a very great loss recently in the death of one of our most loyal and most thoroughly consecrated members, Mrs. J. B. Streater, who for more than sixty years was a faithful member of our Church, and was loved and honored by all. She lived the Christlike life and could say at all times, "For me to live is Christ and to die is gain." Her body was never strong, but hers was a living faith, and when she came to the last river she found it as she had thought, not dark and boisterous, as some have described it, but light with a Savior's love and stilled by His matchless voice. For many days she knew that the end was near, but to her death brought no fear, for long since she had made ready for this journey, and she knew that all was well.

Her home was the home of the preacher, and, like one of old, she had prepared for him a room, and her going away has brought sorrow to many who have rested in that room.

May the loving Heavenly Father give comfort to the sad hearts of husband and children until they shall be united with their loved one in that land where sad parting comes no more!

Her pastor, J. G. JOHNSON.

Editorial

HOW ABOUT IT IN YOUR CHARGE?

How about the renewals in your charge, brother pastor? This is a matter of the most urgent importance. A numher of other papers in the face of present conditions have either reduced their size or considerably raised the price of subscription. The New Orleans Advocate has done neither; it has kept its usual numher of pages, and has only done away with reductions from its standard price of $1.50. It is stated that $8,904.82 was lost on the Nashville Advocate, the Methodist Review, and Epworth Era during the past fiscal year. These periodicals have the Publishing House behind them to meet these deficits. The New Orleans Advocate has no strong financial concern back of it to make good its losses—it must sink or swim, as best it can. Much depends upon the assistance of our friends within the next few weeks. The prices of printing materials are mounting higher; it seems that our advertising is to be taxed, and the increase of letter pastage will add considerably to our expenses. The situation is serious. Most of the Church papers in the South had to shut down during the Civil War, and some of those now in existence may have to do so before the present conflict is over. WE ARE COUNTING ON YOU, BRETHREN!

SOME FORGOTTEN POINTS ABOUT UNIFICATION.

We fear many of our people have forgotten some things with reference to the whole movement of unification which should by all means be remembered and kept clearly in view. We revert to some of these things and put them down in the order of their occurrence:

1. The plan of unification was agreed upon by a Joint Commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the Methodist Protestant Church, and the Methodist Euiscopal Church (North) at a meeting held in Chattanooga in the year 1911. On that Commission Bishop Earl Cranston was the leading member from his Church and warmly supported the plan which was adopted.

2. Bishop Cranston wrote the Episcopal Address which was read to the Northern Methodist General Conference held at Minneapolis in May, 1912; and in that Episcopal Address he made no allusion to the plan of unification which had been agreed upon, which he had warmly supported at Chattanooga one year before, and which the Joint Commission directed should be submitted to each General Conference. Why did Bishop Cranston thus omit to mention so important a matter? Why did he not lay the plan before the General Conference of his Church?

3. The General Conference which met at Minneapolis, followinig the lead of Bishop Cranston in the Episcopal Address, utterly ignored the action of the Joint Commission which framed the plan of unification in the year 1911 at Chattanooga.

4. This General Conference, which met in Minneapolis in 1912, did, on May 20 of that year, adopt the following preambles and resolution:

"Whereas, it is evident that many thousands of the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church emigrate from the East and North and West to the Southland, unadvised by their pastors as to where they may find our churches in the cities and country of the South; and,

"Whereas, it is an uncontrovertible fact that a very great per cent of such members, emigrating from the East, North, and West to the South, drift into other Churches to the great loss and detriment of our own beloved Church; and,

"Whereas, our Church in the Southland is able and anxious to minister unto their spiritual wants, in the English, German, and Swedish tongues; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That our pastors are most earnestly admonished to take due cognizance of the aforesald facts, and to advise and direct such members, when they reach the South, to be loyal to the Methodist Episcopal Church, to the honor of the Church and the glory of God."

This action was obviously directed toward preventing any of their members from uniting with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and probably toward calling out therefrom any Northern people who, moving to the South, had entered into our Church. And evidently this action looked to the further invasion of the territory mainly occupied by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. No other interpretation can be placed upon it. Clearly the drift Southward was alarming our Northern brethren.

5. This General Conference, which met in Minneapolis in May, 1912, did also increase the number of Bishops of the Northern Church stationed in the South. They put one in Atlanta, one in New Orleans, and one in Chattanooga. Evidently these Bishops were expected to lead the invasion of the Methodst Episcopal Church, South, which was contemplated, and they set about their work promptly and vigorously. If they have not succeeded very well, we are ready to bear witness that it has not heen for any want of effort and energy upon their part.

6. When the General Conference of our Church met in Oklahoma City in 1914 our Commissioners placed before it the formulated plan of unification, and the Conference adopted it with one amendatory suggestion.

Our Commissioners carried out the agreement of the Joint Commission that the plan of unification should be reported to the three General Conferences. They kept faith with their Northern brethren, although their Northern brethren had failed to lay the matter properly before their General Conference at Minneapolis in 1912.

7. When the Northern Methodist General Conference met in Saratoga in 1916 it was constrained hy the action of our General Conference, taken at Oklahoma City in 1914, and proceeded to take up the plan of unification, which it had ignored in 1912. With many glowing, but vague sentences, the subject was set forth by them; but the original plan of unification was utterly changed by their action at Saratoga. The resolution of their General Conference at Saratoga amounted really to the repudiation of the acts of their own Commissioners in consenting to the plan of unification adopted at Chattanooga in 1911, and they virtually suhstituted a new plan, which was entirely at variance with everything that had gone before.

When all these facts are taken together and calmly considered in the light of recent discussions in the papers of the Northern Church, it seems manifest that our Northern brethren have never been favorable to any form of unification which did not amount to "the disintegration and absorption" of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. We do not wish to write unfairly or unkindly about them; but it is clear to our mind that they have gotten ready for an invasion of the South and that they expect, when unification fails, to make an attempt to throw the blame of failure upon our Church, and thereby be able to call out of our membership any who have come to us from the North. In 1912 they evidently planned to invade the South, and in 1917 they seem to he prepared to carry forward the plans framed at Minneapolis in 1912. The words of many of them are smoother than butter, but the absorption of the Southern Church is, in our opinion, manifestly in their hearts.

Our people will he utterly unwise not to take account of the facts which we have set down in order in this article.

Is it not about time to close the irritating and divisive meetings of the Commissioners on Unification and go on with the great work of our prosperous and powerful Church without further distraction and debate? Why not?

A FINE SUGGESTION, BUT—

The Western Christian Advocate in a recent issue says:

"One of our pastors in his frequent visits to the public library discovered that a number of the denominations were placing their church papers on the tables among the daily and weekly papers for perusal by the casual reader. It occurred to him that it might be of value to have his own church paper there also. He found the Christian Science Sentinel and the New Thought paper and two or three others; but the Methodist Church, with all of its big business for the kingdom of God, was not represented there by any kind or sort of literature. He mentioned this fact to his people, and at once contributions were taken among a half-dozen and the Western Christian Advocate was ordered placed in the reading-room of the public library. Brother pastors, that was a wise move. Did you ever think of following the example? Keep your church as much before the public as you possibly can. The official paper of your denomination will be eminently worth while if you will only lead your people to give it proper consideration and have them place it in your public library."

That this suggestion of our contemporary is an excellent one, we haven't the least doubt; hut it has been our observation down this way that when a pastor makes such a discovery as the one referred to, he immediately proceeds to write the Publisher of the Advocate and request that the paper be sent free to the institution that he has in mind. But is it fair to seek to put such an expense on the struggling Church paper? We do not think so. Every paper that we send out for a year actually costs us a good deal more than $1, and if such requests were generally acceded to, the hurden of this outlay would be considerable. Would it not be a good idea for every congregation to raise a small sum to place the Church organ in public places in the community where it would do good and in the homes of poor and needy members? We believe that in most of our churches it would he easy to secure such a fund if attention were brought to the matter, and that not a little good might he accomplished in this way.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The second rouud of Rev. J. M. Morse, presiding elder of the Jackson Dstrict, appears in this issue of the Advocate. The work in his field seems to be going forward in a gratifying manner.

Rev. C. C. Miller continues to have a successful pastorate at Lake Providence, La. He is one of the true and strong men of his Conference, and may always he counted upon to take care of the interests of the Church.

Rev. A. W. Turner, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League work in Louisiana, is one of the live wires of that organization. He is alert and faithful in promoting the interests of the great cause committed to his hands.

We have regretted to note that Dr. W. J. Young, of Emory University, lost all of his household effects in the recent Atlanta fire, his residence having been burned. Dr. Young has many admirers in this portion of the Church.

Rev. L. A. McKeown, of Iuka, Miss., as is usual with him, is having a fruitful pastorate in his present field. On May 27 he received 5 members into the Church on profession of faith and baptized 5 infants. We rejoice in his success.

Rev. H. E. Carter, of Magee, Miss., is having success in his work. He recognizes the importance of having the Advocate come into the homes of his people and is seeking to make it possible for it do so. We appreciate his kindly interest in the Conference organ.

Rev. H. B. Perritt, of Logansport, La., says: "My work is moving on nicely and the prospects are for a good ending of the year's work. Brother Perritt's letter brought us 2 subscriptions, for which we are grateful to him.

In forwarding his appointments for the third round, Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the Winona District, says: "My second round is winding up with things in good order. All the preachers are hard at work and doing well."

Seminary, Miss., has recentiy been blessed with a gracious revival, in which the pastor, Rev. J. H. Joliy, was assisted by Dr. H. F. Tolie, of Biloxi, Miss. A fuller account of this meeting from the pen of Brother Jolly will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

The Commencement Sermon of the High School at Greensburg, La., was preached on Sunday, May 27, by Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District. The St. Helena Echo, the local paper, speaks of Brother Bowman's effort in enthusiastic terms.

Rev. D. W. Babb, of Crawford, Miss., is attending the Confederate Reunion in Washington, D. C., this week. He was a good soldier of the Confederacy, as he also is of the Master's Kingdom. May a kindly Providence watch over him while he is away from home and bring him safely back!

From a card from that noble veteran, Dr. John W. Boswell, we venture to take the following: "Referring to the paragraph regarding Dr. Blake in the Advocate of May 31, I am glad to say you 'ring true'—clear as a bell." We know of no one whose endorsement we had rather have than that of Dr. Boswell.

The Editor was out of his office several days last week, having gone to Jackson, Miss., to attend the meetings of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps (being a member of that body), which were held during the recent Commencement. His work and correspondence have suffered somewhat in consequence of this absence.

Dr. S. A. Steel, the brilliant pastor of our First Church at Shreveport, La., has rented a farm near that city and given it a literary name—"The Bonnie Briar Bush Farm." One of his chief objects in this venture was the improvement of his health, and he states that in the achievement of this end it has been quite a success.

We take off our hat to Rev. J. J. Baird, of Ripley, Miss., who on June 1 sent us 8 subscriptions, with a check to correspond. Brother Baird is one of the most promising young ministers in the North Mississippi Conference. He stated in his letter that he expected to attend the "Efficiency Conference" at Grenada this week.

Rev. W. L. Graves, of Montpelier, Miss., gives us some subscriptions from his charge, for which we extend to him our thanks. Brother Graves, in his letter, speaks of having recently been in a fine meeting at Artesia, Miss., and states that Rev. T. J. Halfacre, our pastor there, is doing an excellent work and is much beloved.

Rev. O. L. Savage, of Webb, Miss., who has done so much for the Advocate this year (as well as in other years), sends us an additional subscriber, and makes the following remark: "If each pastor would help now, we could soon relieve the situation." We wish that there were in our territory many such "Savages" as this one.

Among the visitors at the recent Commencement of Millsaps College was Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, the capable presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference. We have heard from many sources that Brother Lipscomb is showing himself to be a notably efficient leader of the forces of Zion in his "diocese."

Dr. U. G. Foote, pastor of the Rayne Memorial M. E. Church, South, of this city, preached the Commencement sermon of Tulane University, in the Newcomb College Chapel, last Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m. His text was: "I am come that they might have life and have it more abundantly." The attandance was reported to be large.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, our pastor at New Augusta, Miss., says: "Beaumont, one of my appointments, has just had what was pronounced the best revival ever held there. It resulted in a general uplift of the Church's life and 8 accessions. I did my own preaching, with the exception of an occasional sermon by Rev. J. S. Duke, who led the singing."

Mr. H. L. Johns, of Baton Rouge, La., has issued to the press an announcement that, because of conditions incident to the state of war now existing, the meeting of the State Epworth League of Louisiana, which was to have been held at Lake Charles, June 17-20, has been revoked. It will be remembered that we have already carried in the Advocate a statement to this effect from the State President, Mr. John D. Saint.

The following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions lately sent in: Rev. G. L. McNeece, Chunky, Miss., 5; Rev. J. H. Joliy, Seminary, Miss., 3; Rev. D. W. Babb, Crawford, Miss., 2; Rev. J. A. Biffle, Horn Lake, Miss., 2; Rev. H. J. Moore, Montrose, Miss., 2; Rev. W. C. Lester, Tutwiler, Miss., 4; Rev. J. M. Corley, Lake, Miss., 4.

Rev. J. H. Mitchell, our faithful pastor at Indianola, Miss., has our thanks for several subscriptions to the Advocate. He finds Indianola a pleasant place to live, and thinks the town has great possibilities; but the work of the church is not making as rapid progress as he would like to see. Brother Mitchell has the conviction that organic union with the Northern Church would result in great harm to Methodism in the South.

Through the courtesy of Dr. James Cannon, President, we have received an invitation to the Commencement exercises of the Blackstone College for Grls, at Blackstone, Va., June 1-3. The announced speakers for the occasion were Dr. R. C. Stearns, of Richmond; Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, of Portsmouth, Va., and President Cannon. The graduating class in the Academic Department this year numbered 42, and that in the College Department, 12.

The Commencement of Southern Methodist University will be held June 8-12. The Baccalaureate Sermon is announced to be preached by Bishop F. J. McConnell, of the Northern Methodist Church, on June 10, and the address at the Senior Vespers Service will be delivered on the same day by Dr. Hoyt M. Dobbs. We regret to note the following announcement in the program: "Monday, June 11, 5 p. m., Presentation of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" on the campus. We are sorry to see this institution beginning its career with theatricals.

The Summer Term of the Candler School of Theology, of Emory University, will begin on June 21, and continue ten weeks. The courses offered have special value for men in the pastorate, who may attend for the half-term of five weeks, if they cannot be present through the entire fall term. For students who are prepared to enter as candidates for certificates from the school, these courses have full credit value. Scholarships are available for men who are unable to attend without financial assistance. For detailed information address Rev. P. T. Durham, D. D., Dean, Emory University, Ga.

We are in receipt of an attractive brochure, giving the farewell address of Bishop A. W. Wilson to our last General Conference at Oklahoma City. This publication was brought out under the superintendence of Dr. Chas. D. Bulla, to whom we are indebted for our copy. In Bishop Wilson's address occur these words: "The Churches are getting to gether, consolidating their forces, determining the issues of all their joint work." The great Bishop was a fraternal and broad-minded Christian who believed in co-operation with other denominations: but it is well known that he regarded the Oklahoma plan for union with the Northern Methodist Church as practically "an irreducible minimum."

Rev. T. J. Halfacre, of Artesia, Miss., sends us 3 subscriptions, and in his letter appends the following note: "My charge is in good condition spiritually, and in a fairly good condition otherwise. We are serving some of the best people in the world; they know how to treat a preacher. I am delighted with my work, and am happy on the way. We have just closed at Artesia one of the best revival meetings that I have ever been in. Brother W. L. Graves did the preaching. He is a power as a preacher and revivalist. His oratory, earnestness, and sweet spirit would capture any congregation. He is one of our strongest preachers. Our people have invited him to hold their meeting again next year, and we shall look forward to his coming with great interest."

Rev. Henry T. Young, of Jena, La., Conference Evangelist of the Louisiana Conference, writes: "Brother L. E. Havens, of Ellisville, Miss., who has recently been working with me as choir director, has returned to his home, with the intention of taking up a work that I believe to be very worthy—that of training singers for our smaller or even larger churches. He will use in giving this instruction the books of our own Church. Those of us who have had experience with some singing teachers and their books know what a problem this singing business is, especially in the rural sections. Brother Havens is a consecrated, cultured man, who is thoroughly competent for the task he is undertaking, and I believe that he merits the consideration of those desiring some one to render such a service as I have mentioned."

A correspondent writes us as follows: "The Holly Springs District Conference, which convened recently at Coffeeville, Miss., was a really fine occasion. The delegates and visitors were charmingly entertained by the people of that excellent community. Rev. J. H. Felts, presiding elder of the district, brought up his part with helpfulness and great satisfaction to all in attendance. The reports were generally encouraging and contributed largely to the interest of the meeting. That devout and consecrated minister, Rev. E. R. Smoot, of Holly Springs, was the Secretary. A number of prominent visitors were present. Rev. W. L. Storment, the enterprising pastor, will soon be assisted in a meeting by Rev. J. A. Bowen. Some splendid improvements upon the house of worship were in contemplation, the money for this purpose being already largely in hand."

Rev. B. T. Crews, of Vivian, La., says: "We hope to get into our new church by the fourth Sunday in this month. It will be a beautiful structure, which will do credit to our congregation."

Rev. C. B. Powell is in the midst of a gracious spiritual awakening at Plain Dealing, La. The preaching is being ably done by Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, of Yazoo City, Miss. Brother Powell has promised us a fuller report later.

Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, of Anguilla, Miss., has our thanks for a list of 6 subscribers. He states that his work is making steady progress, and that he is serving a people whose kindness cannot be surpassed. He was recently given a fine "pounding."

Rev. C. H. Strait, of Johns, Miss., writes: "We have just closed a fine revival at the log camps near Johns, having with us in the meeting Rev. D. C. Kelly. Fifty-two members joined the different Churches. Some of the best work that I have ever witnessed was done."

The Joint Commission on Methodist Unification will meet in Traverse City, Michigan, on June 27. The carrying of this meeting to the Far North will place Southern Methodist editors at a considerable disadvantage. We should like to be there to sniff the atmosphere and report to our people; but alas, the leanness of our purse will not permit us to make the trip.

The Presbyterian Journal pithily says: "There was a little more of sarcasm than of humor in a man's answer to the question, 'Have you been studying the science of efficiency?' 'Yes,' he replied, 'but I had to quit reading about it; I got so interested in it that I found it was interfering with my regular work.' So it is with the modern fad of 'leadership.' So much is said and thought of leadership, and so many are seeking it, that 'fellowship' has sadly declined both in numbers and effectiveness."

RELATIVE TO THE COUNTRY CHURCH.

The country church has many physicians ready to prescribe for its ailments. But the old-time country doctor with his saddle-bags is not the one that most often offers his advice. We sometimes wonder how the pastor of a large city church would go about putting into operation in some small country church, situated in a thinly-settled community, the suggestions which he is sure will cure it of all its ills and will make it a strong, active, and growing church. The pastor of one of the largest city churches in this country, with a membership running up into the thousands, gives the programme for Bible study in his church and says that it can be adapted to any church, in city or country. Here are some of the features of that program: "On Sabbath morning at 8:45 Bible study begins. Throughout the day lessons are taught. The last lesson is about ten o'clock Sabbath night. Beginning Monday afternoon at two o'clock classes are taught from two until four, and from eight until ten. This is the programme every day except Saturday. In addition, from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m., every day, classes are open for public school, high school, and university pupils. The laymen and the good Bible women give their time at least one day in the week to these classes. In addition, we have organized classes to be taught just before the prayer-meeting. At six o'clock we have a workers' dinner, where one hundred or more of the workers assemble. At seven o'clock the Bible classes open. There are several classes taught in the church before the prayer-meeting hour. At eight o'clock all the people come into the prayer-meeting service." What an admirable plan! But imagine it being tried in a small country church. We hear a great deal about training teachers for the Sabbath school. It might be well to establish a training school for writers and speakers on the country church. It is a question whether the small country church is not doing as good work in proportion to its numbers and means, as many of the larger churches.—Presbyterian of the South.

Tells how to cement a new, tender corn so it lifts out without pain.

Soon here treads trouble and misery with an corn may darken threshold, the other discovered it a Hindoo man, which said o loosen any corn so it lifts out with he fingers.

Ask at any Pharmacy for a quarter ounce of freezone, which will cost very little, and a few drops to be sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply the a few drops on the tender, aching corn and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so shriveled that it lifts out without pain. It is a sticky substance which dries when applied and never inflames or even irritates the adjoining tissue.

This discovery will prevent thousands of deaths annually from lockjaw and infection heretofore resulting from the suicidal habit of cutting corns.

A STATEMENT.

Certain of the leading newspapers of the United States reported a few weeks ago that men in the guise of Bible sellers were visiting the Negroes in the Southern States and endeavoring to stir up a revolution among them in order to give assistance to Germany and the Central Powers. Telegrams were immediately sent from the Bible House in New York to the Secretaries of the American Bible Society in Richmond, Va., Cincinnati, O., Dallas, Tex., and Atlanta, Ga. All of these Secretaries have under their care colporteurs distributing the Scriptures in the Southern States. They were instructed to make investigation and report at once if these charges could be laid at the door of any one of their workers. Word has been received from every one of them, and we can report with assurance that no one in the employ of the American Bible Society has been in any way open to such a charge. The Society's work is purely missionary, and in no sense commercial, and has been conducted to meet the approval of the neighborhood in which it is carried on.

THE SECRETARIES.

A MODERN FAIRY STORY, BUT TRUE.

The following incident, in connection with the dedication of First Methodist Church, Oakland, deserves publicity which it will find in your columns. As the vast audience dispersed at the close of the service, an aged and crippled lady, prevented from giving her offering by the crowd in which she stood, handed to the usher a nickel, saying, "I don't want to go away without giving something, and this is all I can afford." The usher took it courteously with thanks and handed it to Dr. White. He, with the fine appreciation and insight which characterizes his work, said, "This appeals to me so much that I am going to give five dollars for this nickel."

In the evening he happened to relate the incident, and Mr. A. H. Trathen rose and said, "I've got to have that bit of money, and here is a twenty dollar gold piece for it." Dr. White felt obliged to part with it, under the circumstances. Mr. Trathen, however, was not allowed to call it his own for very long, for Mr. George J. W. Stark, on hearing the story, instantly offered fifty dollars for it, and he is now the possessor of the lucky piece. That humble nickel was multiplied fifteen hundred times and it might be said of the donor, "Verily, she hath given more than they all." Would that she might have the joy of knowing of these results.—Mrs. J. R. Scupham, in California Christian Advocate.

THE BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Baton Rouge District Conference convened at Amite City on Tuesday morning at 8:30 o'clock, May 15. It was opened by Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder, who followed with a stirring speech, showing the progress and needs of the district and urging the preachers to press the battle along all lines and raise the district to a standard of efficiency second to none in the Conference.

Rev. S. S. Bogan was elected Secretary, and the conference began at once to consider the work of the district.

The reports of the several charges in the district indicated progress and general advancement in the different phases of the work. There were 53 Sunday schools reported, and all were stated to be doing good and effective work, with but very few exceptions. There were 16 prayer meetings reported, and most of them were active and well attended. There were also 16 Epworth Leagues reported in the district and the League work was represented as increasing in interest and efficiency.

Our Church property—churches and parsonages—were reported to be in a good state of repair and several new churches had been or were being built. Of course, we have a few churches and parsonages that need to be replaced with new structures.

All the preachers seemed to be optimistic and hopeful, and mean to press on; and our laymen seemed tuned to the same key.

The preaching during our sitting at Amite City was done by Revs. C. B. Carter, presiding elder of the Alexandria District; J. B. Fulton, pastor at Baker; N. E. Joyner, Conference Missionary Secretary, of Lake Charles; A. J. Coburn, pastor at Clinton; and Rev. C. A. Battle, pastor First Church, Baton Rouge. It is needless to say these brethren delivered a strong and instructive gospel.

The visiting brethren were Revs. C. B. Carter, N. E. Joyner, R. W. Vaughan and C. V. Breithaupt. The conference heard all these brethren with delight and edification. Their respective fields of labor represent a very important part of our Church life and are worthy of the hearty and generous support of our preachers and people. The State President of the Woman's Missionary Society was with us and needs honorable mention. The women are doing a great work. May God speed them on to greater things!

The Baton Rouge District will lose a wise and generous leader and an untiring and efficient worker in the removal of Rev. H. W. Bowman at the next Annual Conference, as he rounds out his four years on the district. Brother Bowman is much loved and respected by the preachers and laymen of the Baton Rouge District. We shall pray God's richest blessings upon him in his new field of labor. A resolution to the same effect was adopted by the conference.

The good people of Amite City vied with each other in giving the conference the best of entertainment and good cheer and many courteous expressions of good-will and attention.

Brothers W. S. Holmes, I. D. Wall, J. R. Abels, and H. C. Murphy make up the personnel of our lay delegation to the Annual Conference, with Brothers D. H. Rody and Judge R. R. Reid as alternates.

The District Conference will go to Hammond, La., next year.

There had been a goodly number of conversions and accessions to the Church during the year. The revival season will soon be upon us and meetings will be the order of the day. The brethren are determined to press the fight, and by Divine aid will win the victory. Let every man do his best.

S. S. BOGAN.

Iron Is Greatest of All Strength Builders, Says Doctor

A Secret of the Great Endurance and Power of Athletes

Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Delicate, Nervous, Rundown People 100 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Weeks' Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or narcotic drug, said Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston Physician, who has studied widely both in this country and in Great European Medical Institutions, when, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fail to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong but they can't tell what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver, or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by the lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. E. Sauer is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents is widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach, on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 years who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

PLEASANT HILL, LA.

Dear Doctor Meek: We have had a gracious revival at Pleasant Hill. Brother R. A. Bozeman did the preaching, with the exception of three sermons. He is a strong, consecrated gospel preacher, full of the Holy Spirit. He knows how to trust God and calls mourners, and they come to the altar and pray through in the good old way. There were many bright conversions, some reclamations, and a great deal of shouting. More than 60 professed conversion in the full sense—22 united with our Church, and another bright convert has united since. Six children and five babies were baptized. Brothers Jeffery and Moll led the singing. While Brother Jeffery is not as strong as he used to be, he still sweetly sings the gospel with power. Brother Moll is splendid help. He is fully consecrated and filled with the spirit. He is a good personal worker. Some other good helpers were with us a part of the time. A great many people said this was the greatest revival in the history of this church and town.

While passing through this revival, we were reminded of what we knew and have often said: "That where the gospel is preached in the fullness of its power sinners are convicted, mourners are converted, and believers are sanctified and baptized with the Holy Ghost.

The mourners' bench should be fully revived and fearlessly defended. The devil hates the altar or mourners' bench, for he knows that it is a sure place for people to find God.

We will be in another revival at Robeline, with Brothers Bozeman and Moll to assist, before this goes to press, as we begin there June 3. These brethren are safe and fully consecrated. Much of their time is spent upon their knees—hence the secret of their success. Finally, brethren, pray for us. T. D. LIPSCOMB, P. C.

Why Take Risks?

Many cases of gangrene and blood poison result from the neglect of small sores, cuts, bruises, skin abrasions, etc. Numerous deaths occur from blood poison due to infection of slight wounds. Whether the wound is painful or not, treat it immediately with Gray's Ointment which, for ninety-six years, has been an indispensible family remedy. It allays pain, heals the wound and frees you from all danger of troublesome after-effects. It is invaluable for treating abrasions and eruptions of the skin, boils, ulcers, burns, bruises, cuts, sores, etc. Mrs. N. E. Coleman, Mt. Jackson, Va., writes: "I have used it in my family for 15 years and have not found any ointment equal to it." Only 25c a box at druggists. For FREE sample, write to W. F. HEADACHES AND OTHER ACHES AND PAINS.

Pain keeps the thoughts of the sufferer continuously on the ailment that is that causing the pain, and in this way it acts to retard recovery.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are their own best advertisers. The wonderful degree of success that they have met with for more than 25 years has been entirely due to their efficiency.

Users are willing to concede that these pills do all that is claimed for them. That is, they promptly relieve headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatic pains, monthly pains; and almost every other kind of ache or pain and do this without any bad after-effects.

And if the sufferer finds rest from the pain that weakens the mind and harrasses the nerves pending treatment for the cause of the pain he certainly should be satisfied.

Furthermore, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills do not constipate, do not derange the stomach or leave any disagreeable after-effects when taken as directed.

If you suffer from any ache or pain you will not be out any money to try these pills. Go to your druggist and purchase one box of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Use them as directed and if the results are not satisfactory return the empty package to the druggist and he will immediately return you your money. No questions will be asked. You are the judge of the merits of these pills. Could anything be fairer than this?

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

No. 666

This is a prescription prepared especially for MALARIA or CHILLS & FEVER. Five or six doses will break any case, and if taken then as a tonic the Fever will not return. It acts on the liver better than Calomel and does not gripe or sicken. 25c

Freckles

The fairer the skin the more ugly it is when marred by freckles; and they are not necessary at all. As soon as the warm sunshine or the hot winds bring them out, and with the natural embarrasment that every woman feels, get a package of Kintho; this is the easy way to remove them. If Kintho is used at the first sign of the ugly spots, they'll sometimes disappear overnight. Any druggist has or can get Kintho for you. Use Kintho soap too. It's astonishing how it helps keep the freckles away once Kintho has removed them.

Diet, Exercise or Death!

An eminent medical authority writes that most of our city folks die of a thickening of the arteries or of kidney disease. The kidneys become clogged and do not filter the poisons from the blood, and one trouble follows another, high blood pressure damages the heart, arteries and kidneys. Usually its danger signals are backache, pain here or there, swollen feet or ankles, rheumatic twinges or spots appearing before the eyes.

"The very best remedy is this: Eat meat but once a day, or not at all. Plenty of outdoor exercise, and drink pure water frequently. Before meals take a little Anuric, the great uric acid neutralizer that is easily obtained at the drug store. When you have dizziness, chills or sweating, worry, or dragging pains in back, try this wonderful enemy to uric acid, which Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., discovered and named Anuric. Anuric, more potent than lithia, dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar."

HEALTHY CHILDREN come from healthy mothers. And mothers will certainly be healthy if they'll take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Nothing can equal it in building up a woman's strength, in regulating and assisting all her natural functions, and in putting in perfect order every part of the female system. It lessens the pains and burdens, supports and strengthens weak, nursing mothers.

It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and bracing nervine.

Castor oil is good for children or adults, and especially good for aged people. A pleasant form of a vegetable laxative that is to be had at any drug store, was invented by Dr. Pierce, who put together May-apple (podophyllin), aloes, jalap. Ask at any drug store for "Pleasant Pellets," and they can be had for little money. They contain no calomel and are of vegetable constituents, therefore harmless.

TWO WILSONS.

Dear Dr. Meek: There are two Wilsons that I know of who are doing things, namely, President Woodrow Wilson, and Wilson, La. You and the readers of the Advocate have been reading about President Wilson for some time, but I am afraid there is little known about Wilson, La., especially along the lines I wish to tell about.

I am happy to report that the church here has grown, and is growing, financially, in attendance, and, last but not least, spiritually. With reference to the finances, I would like to give the reason for the growth. I told the brethren at our district conference how it was done, but I want it to go further than the Baton Rouge District. I want it to reach the ears of the laymen. Here it is: the Board of Stewards are doing their duty; they are behind the church with their prayers, money and enthusiasm. My! but it is fine to have such a bunch of men to work with. Now as to the growth in attendance and spirituality, all I can say is that the enthusiasm the stewards have is abroad in the church, and we are praying for a deeper experience spiritually. As Italy was the coveted goal of ancient Europe, so Wilson is fast becoming the coveted goal of the Louisiana Conference. Now, don't think this is a burst of youthful enthusiasm and nothing else. We realize that the world has not been turned over in these parts, and we also realize that there is lots to be done yet. Pray for us, that we by the help of the Lord may do more.

Yours for a banner Conference year,
J. L. EVANS.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA AND PEPTIRON PILLS

Conditions that are both scrofulous and anemic are very common. Many persons whose faces are "broken out," cheeks are pale, and nerves are weak, suffer from them.

There is an effective, economical remedy in the combination of Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron Pills, one taken before eating, the other after.

In these medicines taken in this way the best substances for the blood and nerves are brought together.

FASER'S PYORRHEA PREPARATION

ANTISEPTIC MOUTH WASH

For the Prevention of Pyorrhea, Chronic Uiceration, Soft, Spongy, Bleeding Gums. Prescribed by both Physicians and Dentists. For sale by Druggists at twenty-five cents a bottle, or mailed direct from my laboratory upon receipt of order with five cents extra for postage. Address

H. M. FASER, Prof. of Pharmacy,
University of Mississippi,
Oxford, Mississippi.

Recommended by Doctor Cothram

Dr. T. E. Cothram is a well known pharmacist of Alexis, Ala. And when he gets bilious or needs a purgative medicine, what do you suppose he does? Out of his whole big stock of liver medicine he selects and uses Granger Liver Regulator. He says "There is none better." That's a pretty strong endorsement, don't you think, from a man who knows all about the merits of the different medicines on the market? Granger Liver Regulator is purely vegetable, does not gripe nor irritate the delicate lining of the stomach and bowels and always gives quick and pleasant results. It is the best system purifier known. Your druggist can supply you —25c for large box. Accept no substitute.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The members of the forty-seventh District Conference of the Columbus (Miss.) District met in the Methodist Church at Shuqualak on Tuesday evening, May 15, and, after an inspiring sermon by the Rev. J. C. Park, our pastor at Starkville, proper organization was effected.

At nine o'clock on Wednesday morning, after devotions and the administration of the Lord's Supper, the Conference convened for business, and sessions were held each morning and afternoon until adjournment for the ten o'clock train Friday morning. The Conference was very helpful. Goodfellowship was everywhere in evidence, nor were there any tense moments to break the splendid harmony.

We were fortunate in having with us Brothers Selby and Black, Commissioners for Emory and Millsaps, respectively; Brother Randolph, of our Orphans' Home, Brother Ellis, representing the Methodist Hospital at Memphis, and Brother Gladney, our Sunday school Field Secretary. These brethren ably presented their work and the conference enjoyed their presence.

The good feeling and harmony of the conference was the subject of considerable comment and the several spiritual services were uplifting and helpful. The preaching was done by the Rev. J. C. Park, Rev. W. L. Duren, Rev. J. M. Guinn, Rev. I. F. Holland, and Rev. Robert Selby, while the Revs. W. W. Woollard, D. W. Babb, T. E. Gregory, J. W. Robertson, and W. V. Shearer conducted the devotional openings of the several sessions.

During the afternoon session Wednesday, Brother Wm. O. Hunt, a fine young man from the Sturgis charge, was granted license to preach.

The lay delegates elected to the Annual Conference are: Dr. S. M. Rainey, Prof. Dabney Lipscomb, Brother W. E. Stokes, and Brother W. C. Futvaye, with Brothers L. C. Anderson and G. D. Harris as alternates.

Before adjournment, attention was called to the fact of this being Brother Woollard's fourth year on the district, and, in appreciation of his efficient service and wholesome fellowship, a fitting resolution was passed by the Conference to become a part of its records and history.

Never has a Conference met with more hospitable entertainment than was accorded by the pastor and people of Shuqualak, and with hearts full of gratitude the Conference ordered spread upon its minutes a fitting resolution of thanks.

Next year the Conference will go to Starkville. Respectfully,
E. NASH BROYLES, Secty.

JUNALUSKA TRAINING SCHOOL.

The next session of the Junaluska Training School for Sunday School Leaders will begin at 9 a. m., July 24, 1917, and will continue until 10:45 a. m., Sunday, August 5. The Southeastern Passenger Association has granted a fare of three cents per mile one-way distance plus thirty-five cents for the round trip; limit of ticket seventeen days, not including date of sale; tickets to be sold on July 21, 22, 23, 24, and 25. Buy your tickets, check your baggage, and address mail and telegrams to Lake Junaluska, N. C. For the convenience of delegates to the Training School it has been arranged to have hotel reservations made through the office of the Superintendent of Teacher-Training. To insure reservation for the Sunday school period, delegates should therefore write in advance to Rev. J. W. Shackford, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

Loss of Appetite is commonly gradual; one dish after another is set aside. It is one of the first indications that the system is running down, and there is nothing else so good for it as Hood's Sarsaparilla—the best of all tonics.—Adv.

A GOAL TO BE MET.

Miss Bennett's message to the Council recommended a continuation of aggressive work in trying to interest all the women of the Church in the activities of the Woman's Missionary Society. Those of you who read the Council Daily know that this suggestion was embodied in the report of the Committee on Home Base and was adopted by the Council as its objective for the year. This report contained items urging the prolonging of the campaign and an increase of ten per cent in auxiliaries, membership and finances.

Progress in North Mississippi.

The plan as outlined by the Council in session must be carried out by the Conference organizations. In order to do this it is necessary to find what the existing conditions are and definitely determine what shall be our part in the proposed advance. Last year and the preceding year we had placed before us the ideal of a missionary society in every congregation and every woman and child a member. Great success attended our efforts; yet there is still unoccupied territory more than sufficient to make the ten per cent increase.

The district is taken as the basis of operations. The Home Base Committee recommended that each district secretary, after a careful survey, set forth for herself the nearer goal of as many adult societies as pastoral charges. As a Conference society, we have passed this goal, having on the roll twenty more adult societies than pastoral charges in the Conference.

Five months of the current year have passed. The first quarter's report gave evidence of the work of the new organizations. The corresponding secretary's report showed six new auxiliaries and 341 new members. There was a gain in finances over the first quarter of 1916 of over $500. This marked success, to my mind, is only a call for a redoubling of our efforts.

In order to meet the requirements of a ten per cent increase it will be necessary for us to gain 29 new auxiliaries, 622 new members, and $1262. Each district will be expected to meet its pro rata share. Do all in your power to help your district come up with a clean record at the end of the year.

Under normal conditions this goal would not be hard to reach. Our workers in the home and foreign fields are depending upon us. The cost of living is increasing for them also. If the cause of missions lags during these crucial times, let it not be through the failure of North Mississippi to do her part.

Mrs. J. W. CONGER,
Pres. N. Miss. Conf Society.

HOW AN INDIAN BECOMES A CITIZEN.

The annual report of the Department of the Interior relieves the dullness of its statistics by an account of the picturesque ceremonial that is followed when a native Indian is released from the paternal care of the Indian Bureau and admitted to the full responsibilities of American citizenship. The representative of the Department, calling upon him by his Indian name, hands him a bow and arrow, and instructs him to shoot the arrow. When he has shot it he is told: "You have shot your last arrow. That means that you are no longer to live the life of an Indian. You are from this day forward to live the life of a white man. But you may keep that arrow. It will be to you a symbol of your noble race and of the pride you feel that you come from the first of all Americans." The new citizen is then addressed by the white name he is henceforth to bear, and is asked to take hold of the handles of a plow. This act is interpreted to him as signifying that the white man lives by work. A purse is next given to him as a reminder that the money granted from labor must be wisely kept, and, lastly, there is put into his hands "the flag of a hundred million free men and women, of whom you are now one." He repeats a promise to be faithful to the requirements of American citizenship, and there is placed upon his breast the badge of his new status.—The Expositor.

FOREIGN WORK AT HOME.

The work among foreigners of the Woman's Missionary Council is found among Latin-Americans, Orientals, and Europeans. There have been 85 teachers, missionaries, preachers, and deaconesses engaged in this work during the past year. The cost of this work to the Board has been $45,547.76, to which we add the $29,314.85 expended by the City Mission Boards in foreign settlement work, making a total of $75,162.61 expended for immigration and institutional work among the foreign-born.

A GROWING MISSION STUDY CLASS.

"Inspiration for missions comes only from the knowledge of conditions gained in Mission Study."

As a proof of the above, we cite the mission study class of the Woman's Missionary Society of First Church, Baton Rouge, La. Under the efficient leadership of Mrs. Shelby Taylor, superintendent of study and publicity, it has grown from twelve to twenty-two members; and this splendid increase has been attained in less than a year. The class meets once a month and has just completed the study of "The King's Highway."

At the June meeting they will begin a study of that illuminating book of Dr. John M. Moore's, "The South To-Day." So enthusiastic have the members become that some few who are unable to attend the meetings have ordered the book and will pursue the study of same in their homes. Such an earnest craving for a closer and more thorough study of the conditions which retard or promote our Master's great work will not go unblessed or unfilled; and we know that a more efficient service will be rendered to Him, not only in the missionary work, but in all other avenues of Church work.

Mrs. J. E. WALTER,
Baton Rouge Dist. Secty.

ATTENTION, AUXILIARY OFFICERS!

The second quarter is drawing to a close and reports will soon have to be sent to the Conference officers. A few changes have been made in these officers since your last reports were sent in, for annual meetings have been held and some new officers elected. In the Mississippi Conference we especially call your attention to the new women filling the following offices:

Second Vice President—Miss Kate Drake, Port Gibson.

Supt. Study and Publicity—Mrs. G. H. Thompson, Meridian.

Supt. Social Service—Mrs. Byron Le Noir, Laurel.

Treasurer—Mrs. William Hemingway, Jackson.

Send your reports promptly and make them as full and explicit as possible, so that these new officers may feel greatly encouraged as they enter upon their new duties. Make them feel that every auxiliary officer is standing back of them, ready and willing to help in every way possible.

RHEUMATISM AND INDIGESTION.

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid disease, such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. All of these diseases are probably related and all are probably due in whole or in part to imperfect digestion or to imperfect assimilation of food. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

The following letters are interesting in this connection:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder troubles and in Nervous and Sick headaches and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe if used continuously for a reasonable time will produce a permanent cure. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver and Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant of Savannah writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began using Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time I was cured."

Mr. Rhodes of Virginia writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were cured of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely cured of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

If you suffer from rheumatism, or from any chronic disease, accept the guarantee offer below by signing your name. Clip and mail to the Shivar Spring,
Box 17-D, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health:—

Frankfort, Ky.—"I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever I did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish."—Mrs. JAMES CONLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential.
